Clemson Beaten, 83½-47½

Scurlock And Bishop Take Two Wins Each

Led by steady Wayne Bishop and galloping Dave Scurlock, the Carolina track team won an easy 83½-47½ duel meet over Clemson College here yesterday.

Bishop and Scurlock each captured two events, and Scurlock anchored the victorious mile relay team. Scurlock romped in with a school record in the 440, his specialty. His time of 47.9 eclipsed his own record of 48.1 set in 1957. Scurlock also captured the 880.

Bishop loped around for wins in both the mile and the 2-mile. He was virtually unchallenged in both events.

Versatile Ray Stanley came in for his share of the honors, nailing down first place in his specialty, the broad jump, and adding a second in the javelin and a third in the discus.

Clemson's big gun, John Dunkelberg, won the 220 but was beaten by Scurlock in the 440. Paul Snider grabbed off first in the javelin and the shot put.

Carolina's Ward Sims won the pole vault.

WAKE TO APPEAL

WINSTON-SALEM — (AP) — Wake Forest College President Harold Tribble said Saturday he would make a statement Monday or Tuesday concerning the outcome of an appeal made to the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The appeal was over ACC Commissioner Jim Weaver's ruling on a brawl that erupted during the final minute of the Wake Forest-North Carolina basketball game here Feb. 12.

Wake Forest appealed three points of Weaver's ruling: That next season's home game with North Carolina be played away from Winston-Salem, that student tickets not be valid for the contest, and that Wake Forest player Dave Budd be warned he would lose his eligibility if he is involved "in any future unsportsmanlike act."

Dr. Tribble said he received a report on the appeal Saturday from Dr. Mortimer Caplan of the University of Virginia, president of the conference.

Dr. Tribble said he will discuss it with athletic and administrative officials of the school and then release a statement.

Golfers Nip Davidson 15-12 Score

The undefeated golfers of Carolina made if four in a row here yesterday when they edged out stubborn Davidson 15-12.

The Tar Heels and Wildcats split the six individual matches 3-3 but Carolina ran up its winning total in the bestb all department.

Number one man Ed Justa remained undefeated by whipping Gary Heeseman 3-0, but the big honors went to number four man Bob Galloway. Galloway fired a one-under par 71 for medalist honors.

Carolina now owns wins over Indiana, Cornell, Michigan, and Davidson. Their next week meet is with Princeton here next Wednesday.

The summary:

Ed Justa (C) defeated Gary Heeseman 3-0

By JOHN JUSTICE

A freshman baseball team which promises to be interesting and unusual will open its season in Emerson Stadium Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock against Presbyterian Junior College. There will be a game Wednesday afternoon with Oak Ridge Military Academy here.

The squad, coached by Pat Earey, promises to be a hard-hitting one with plenty of sound pitching to back up the batsmen. Earey says that he has his hands full trying to decide whom to pitch and to play the other eight positions. Deciding upon the starting moundsmen is the most difficult job, for there are an even dozen outstanding flingers at the coach's disposal. All possess good control, and Earey says, "These are the most outstanding boys I've seen on any staff.'

Squad Lacks Speed

The most noticable defect on the Tar Baby squad is a lack of speed. In order to overcome this, Earey has been drilling the boys hard on defensive play and is trying to impress them with the importance of good position and getting the jump on the ball.

As for hitting, the squad is packed with big, strong boys who are capable of coming through with the long base knock.

Of the 37 candidates for the team, Earey states that the majority of them are varsity material. "Finding the right people is the biggest problem," Earey states, "and I hope the boys who have the desire to play will stay out." No one will be cut from the group, and all the boys will be moved around as the coach experiments with his abundant material, especially the pitching.

17 Game Card

There are 17 games scheduled, with contests slated with the Big Four teams, Oak Ridge Academy, Pfeiffer College, Campbell College and Wilmington Junior College. All home games start at 3 p.m.

MEET SOUTH CAROLINA TOMORROW

Netters Top Virginia, 8-1

Carolina's tennis team humbled Virginia 8-1 yesterday to pick up its second straight ACC victory. The win gives the Tar Heels a 3-3 season record to take into Monday's match with South Carolina.

For the second consecutive match, the only Carolina loss was suffered by Geoff Black in the number one singles. Friday the Tar Heel captain lost to Maryland's Chuck Abelson in three sets, and yesterday Ray York defeated him 6-4, 6-3.

The match, moved up to a 2 o'clock starting time because of windy playing conditions, was completed in quick time as none of the matches went to three and only one took more than six games to decide.

Bruce Sylvia, playing in the number two position for Carolina, whipped Bob Guggenheim 6-2, 6-2 in his singles match and then combined with Marshall Happer to defeat York and Guggenheim in the top doubles match.

In tomorrow's match with the Gamecocks at Columbia, the Tar Heels will again be favored to sweep the contest for their third straight conference win. South Carolina coach Walt Hambrick has but three lettermen back from a squad which posted a 5-9 record last year.

The Summary

Singles — 1. York (V) defeated Black 6-4, 6-3. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Guggenheim 6-2, 6-2. 3. Keys (C) defeated Felt 6-0, 6-3. 4. Happer (C) defeated Wright 6-2, 6-1. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Smith 6-0, 6-3. 6. Ricks (C) defeated Plowden-Wardlaw 6-4, 6-3.

Doubles — 1. Sylvia and Happer (C) defeated York and Guggenheim 6-4, 6-2. 2. Black and Lockett (C) defeated Felt and Plowden-Wardlaw 8-6, 6-2. 3. Keys and Causey (C) defeated Smith and Scolnick 6-2, 6-2.

Baseball Clinic Held At UNC

Approximately 30 high school coaches and members of their teams attended the first annual North Carolina high school baseball clinic here Friday.

Morning and afternoon sessions were held at the school, sponsored by the University of North Carolina Athletic Association and held in Emerson Stadium. In addition to the classes, a social hour was on the program and door prizes were awarded.

Base running, sliding, pitching, catching, hitting and bunting, infield and outfield techniques and play situations were taken up.

Dean Fred Weaver made a short talk in official greetings to the visitors.

Tar Heels Battle Unbeaten Clemson College omorrow

By RUSTY HAMMOND

The once-beaten Tar Heels of Carolina get their first major test of the young season tomorrow when they journey southward to collide with the league-leading and undefeated Clemson Tigers.

Carolina will enter the fray with a 6-1 season record. All these games were against outside competion; today's game is the first ACC contest of the season for the Heels.

Clemson, who last year defeated Carolina 4-1 in a special play-off game for the ACC pennant, is undefeated both in the ACC and in all games played. The talented Tigers have a 9-0 overall record and a 4-0 ACC mark.

Carolina's only loss was at the hands of Illinois, in Florida. The Tar Heels have whipped Dartmouth, Connecticut, Florida, Florida State, Ithaca and East Carolina.

Clemson has beaten Virginia, Maryland, Wake Forest and South Carolina in the conference. The Bengals have also defeated the Citadel, Massachusetts, Adelphi and Furman.

Clemson's biggest scare came last week when a stubborn Wake Forest team forced the Tigers to the wire before bowing 4-3 at Clemson. Carolina had a close call of its own last week, edging Ithaca 4-3.

Stowe To Pitch

The Tar Heels are sure to face the scourge of the ACC last year from the mound, lefty Harold Stowe. Stowe finished last season with an exceptional 14-4 won-lost mark and it was he who beat the Tar Heels in the regular season game at Clemson and again in the play-off game.

Carolina is expected to counter with its ace, Wayne Young. Young beat the Tigers in Chapel Hill last season. He finished the campaign with a 7-3 record and a phenomenal 0.9 earned run average. Young is 2-0 on the year, while Stowe is 4-0.

Clemson's power packed bats will be paced by outfielder Baily Hendley. Hendley was the league's eighth leading hitter last season with a .333 mark. Clemson finished last season with a 22-8 overall record. The Tigers are coached by Bill Wilhelm, a former assistant to Walter Rabb at Carolina. This is Wilhelm's second season as coach at Clemson.

Burgwyn Big Stick

Carolina's big stick in the battle will be outfielder John Burgwyn. Captain John is currently hitting well above .500. A lot of help should be forthcoming from sophomore catcher Carroll Bolick, who clouted two doubles against East Carolina.

Practically all of the Carolina ills should be mended for this big one. Tommy Saintsing was the only player out of the lineup for the East Carolina game, but there were there were three more on the bench due to sickness for the Ithaca match.

The conference pennant race may not be decided by this one, but the winner will surely have a big jump over all other contenders. Clemson was the pre-season pick of the sportswriters for the pennant winner, with Carolina judged a close second.

Campus To Vote In Spring Elections Today

Norman Smith, Charlie Gray Seek Presidential Position

Charlie Gray and Norman Smith meet today on the ballot to decide who will be the next President of the Student Body.

Gray is the standard bearer for the University Party and has been active this year as treasurer of the student body.

He has been a representative in the Student Legislature from both Dorm Men's I and Town Men's II. He is the UP floorleader, and is on the Ways and Means Committee.

He is on the Chancellor's Cabinet, President's Cabinet, Consolidated University Student Council and was a representative of this University at the National Student Association Congress last summer.

Smith is a junior from Franklin and a member of both the Order of the Old Well and the Order of the Golden Fleece.

He has been chairman of the committee on State Affairs and chairman of the Dormitory Rent Committee.

He has been a member of the Student Legislature for the past year, representing students in Dorm Men's V. In this capacity he has served as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Crowenover has been the SP floorleader, chairman of the Campus Stores Committee and a dorm manager. He is a junior.

Grigg has been on the Budget Committee, chairman of the Beat Duke Parade and the Attorney General's Staff. He is a sophomore and a PiKA.

Anne Lucas and Sue Wood are both juniors. Miss Lucas is a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, while Miss Wood is in the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

In the treasurer race, Bingham is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. This is his first election. He has been active with the Methodist Church and in intramural sports.

Fuller is the president of the professional fraternities Interfraternity Council, former treasurer of the Student Party, secretary of the Audit Board and a member of the Student Legislature's Finance Committee.

Davis Young Is Alone In DTH Editor Contest

Davis Young is running unopposed for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel.

Since the announcement of his candidacy on February 22, three other candidates have declared, but all have now dropped out, leaving Young alone on the ballot.

A write-in campaign is being run for Henry Snow, a pseudonym for 17 journalism and other interested students.

They have expressed a desire to assume the editorship as a corporate body.

Young is carrying three endorsements in this election. He has been endorsed by the Student Party, University Party and the Bi-Partisan Selections Board.

He is currently the president of the sophomore class and is a former editor of the UNC Summer School Weekly.

His other newspaper qualifications include being a reporter, columnist and feature editor for The Daily Tar Heel. He was newspaper publicity director for the 1958 Carolina Symposium.

Other candidates who have been in the race include Dave Jones, Harold O'Tuel and Ron Shumate.

Jones declared after Young, and stayed in the race for several weeks. He withdrew in favor of O'Tuel and Shumate.

Candidates O'Tuel and Shumate were running as co-editors. They had been endorsed by both the Student Party and the Bi-Partisan Selections Board.

They withdrew on April 2, citing "differences in our views which could not have been forseen before we entered the race," as the reason for pulling out, leaving only Young.

Patterson Predicts 3500 To Cas Ballots At Polls

SENIOR CLASS CANDIDATES — In today's spring elections, five officers for the senior class will be elected. The candidates for class president are (left to right) Wade Smith (UP) and George Grayson (SP). The other candidates are: vice president, Dave Evans (SP) and Dick Pattisall (UP); secretary Cynthia Grant (UP) and Martha Morgan (SP); treasurer, John Crotty (SP) and Jim Crawford (UP), and social chairman, Marion Hays (UP) and Bunky Jester (SP).

Fifty-five campus officers, one Constitutional admendment and men's dormitory officers will be voted on today in the annual UNC spring elections.

Hank Patterson, chairman of the Elections Board, has predicted that 3,500 students will turn out for the election. The polls open as early as 9 a.m. today and close as late as 7 p.m. After 7 p.m. the ballots wil be sorted and prepared for counting, but the actual count will not take place until Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The voting will be held between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. in all dormitories, except Connor, Kenan and Teague, and at all town polling stations, expect Victory Village and Glen Lennox will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For the voting today, students living in dormitories will vote in their respective dorms. Residents of Emerson Stadium will vote in Ruffin Dorm. Memorial Hall residents and students living in University owned buildings other than dorms will vote in Old East.

Town Men's I — students living in an area bounded by Columbia Street on the east, Cameron Avenue on the north and the corporate limites of Chapel Hill on the west and south will vote at the Naval Armory or at the Carolina Inn.

Town Men's II — students living in an area bounded by Cameron Avenue on the south, Columbia Street on the east, Franklin Street on the north and the city limits on the west will vote at the Scuttlebutt.

Town Men's IV — students living within an area bounded by Columbia Street on the west, Franklin Street on the north and the city limits on the east and south will vote at Gerrard Hall, at Victory Village in front of the housing office or at the Glen Lennox shopping center between Dairyland and the Junior Wardrobe Shop. Also voting at these stations will be men students living outside the city limits.

Town women will vote at Gerrard Hall.

Other Ballot Items

A constitutional amendment and five offices are among the more than 50 items for today's spring election balloting.

The Constitutional amendment, if passed by a simple majority of students voting, would provide for a single annual election of members of Legislature in the spring.

Students will also be voting between Bob Austin and Tom Overman, endorsed by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board, and Michael Smith, independent candidate, for co-editors or editor of the Yackety Yack.

The two candidates for president of the Carolina Athletic Association are Tom Cordle (SP) and Angus Duff (UP).

Running for head cheerleader are Charlie Graham(UP) and Dick Rhyne (SP). In the race for chairman of Women's Residence Council are Kay Boortz and Carrington Wilson.

The Town Of Henderson: Two Emotions Flare Out In The Evening Dark

By RON SHUMATE

(The following is the first in a series of articles on the Harriet-Henderson Mill strike. The series was compiled by reporter Ron Shumate and photographer Peter Ness.)

Guitar, a piano and a violin played a lively square dance number. The dance floor was filled with laughing, shouting people. Others were seated on benches lining three walls of the room. Small children ran merrily around the room shooting each other with water pistols.

But this was only partially true.

For outside, only a few yards from the noisy dance hall, four men sat in a car — watching. But they weren't watching the dance. They were watching for violence.

All over town the streets were bare of people. Shades and blinds were drawn. Townspeople rushed to a window each time a car's headlights flicked across the house.

The rains came.

This was Henderson — a town stricken for 21 long, painful weeks by a strike which had crippled its largest industry and put nearly 1,200 people out of work.

The strike began on November 17, 1958. Employees of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mill received their last paycheck on November 19.

The strike grew out of a new contract, proposed by the company, which included a clause that would prevent any arbitration on disputes between labor and management. The remainder of the proposed contract was identical to the one which has exised between company and union for the past 14 years.

And so it has been for 142 days.

Business in Henderson has dropped off 10-15 epr cent. Hardware, furniture and appliance stores have been hit hardest by the strike.

Before the strike began, the mill payroll was about $65,000 a week. According to Al Howell, of the Henderson Chamber of Commerce, about $24,000 of the payroll is staying in the town each week.

The reason for this is that 250-300 supervisors are still working. Their salaries, larger than those of the other mill workers, comprise nearly half of the total payroll.

But the town merchants as a whole are above last year's business — "because Easter came earlier this year," Howell said. A used car dealer said this is the best year he has ever had.

However, the small stores in the mill area "are hurting." Howell asserted that these stores have over-extended their credit to the strikers, who don't have the money to pay their bills.

Howell said he expects that such small grocers may eventually go out of business if the strike continues.

As a whole the merchants of Henderson seem sympathetic toward the strikers — toward those who really want to go back to work, but are afraid to do so because of the threats and harrassment which have already been directed against those who have gone back to work. But the merchants are strongly against any and all violence .

The business men have, as a whole, stayed neutral toward the strike. They have a fear of retaliation "in a physical sense if they say or do anything one way or the other," Howell said.

Since the strike began the town of more than 11,000 has received national — and even international "fame."

One man asserted that the strike in its early days was publicized so widely because newspapers lacked enough national news to fill up their front pages.

"We've even heard that radio stations in Germany have broadcast the goings-on here," a merchant stated.

Another said he has had telephone calls from relatives in neighboring towns asking him if he wanted them to send food, or if his children needed to leave town.

"The whole situation has been over-dramatized," Howell said. He said that newspapers had given a bigger play to the strike than it actually deserved.

The strike is a thing which cannot — and does not — go unnoticed by townspeople. Henderson's residents are aware—though sometimes unconsciously — of the threat of violence that prevails in the town.

Basically, the mill areas are a complete entity in themselves. But that does not prevent the other residents of the town from being aware of the strike — or of the effects of the strike on the town's

Strike History

The cotton mill strike at the Harriet-Henderson mill in Henderson, N. C., has waged hot and heavy for 21 weeks. Frequent negotiation talks among Gov. Luther Hodges, mill president John D. Cooper Jr., and TWUA official Boyd Payton have proved unsuccessful.

Nov. 17: The strike began.

Nov. 19: Mill workers drew their last paycheck.

Dec. and Jan.: Violence flared at intervals. Most of it was directed at these workers returning to the mill.

Feb. 15: Gov. Hodges sent 44 State Highway Patrolmen to Henderson to aid in stopping violence.

Feb. 16: The mills reopened. Workers returning to the North Henderson plant totalled, 34, while 27 returned to the Harriet mill in South Henderson.

March 9: Talks fail again. The first violence toward company property occurs: a dynamite blast was aimed at a boiler in the mill; acid was poured on 47 mill machines. This was after 17 weeks of striking.

March 25: Boyd Payton claimed he was hit with rocks thrown through his car windshield.

March 26: N. C. Attorney General Malcolm Seawell charged that the alleged attack on Payton on March 25 was a "hoax."

March 27: Payton offers to take a lie detector test to show Seawell's charges false.

Candidates Comment On Issues

Leadership

One evening last winter a group of men came into Graham Memorial. The night was cold and the gentlemen were wearing heavy overcoats.

But they came on this cold night, and they took off their overcoats and before long a room in Graham Memorial was filled with smoke and talk. Old timers around, and there are many, couldn't remember when any such group ever graced the hallowed halls of the Student Union. But there they were, and they were telling the students, spending three to four hours doing it, about the University budget.

One man brought them there — Norman Smith.

There was another time that this editor can remember when the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees was sitting in the Chancellor's office. The committee was feigning interest as Furtado told about this, Cummings told about that, and Gans told about the other, but the interest turned genuine when this same Norman Smith spoke about self- liquidating dormitory rents. They listened because he had the facts, and the results of their listening are clear. They are clearly reflected in the Visiting Committee report, and they have come clearly through in the budget. No longer have students to totally self-liquidate their dormitories, and no longer do they have to worry about rising room rents every year. The responsibility and the credit must go to Norman Smith.

There was another incident that the editor can remember, and this was in Raleigh when the editor and the same Norman Smith went to Raleigh for the winter meeting of the full Board of Trustees. At the meeting were a group of legislators, and the editor felt like a green horn, when he saw Smith talking to these people — whom he had taken the trouble to get know — about the University's budget, as well as about their local problems. These men listened and they talked with Smith on the basis of equality.

And this is the issue — the most important one in the election. The issue simply is what man is most capable of commanding the respect of the University, the state and the nation. This man is Norman Smith.

In many areas Smith is currently being nailed on the cross of deferred rush, of mixed honor councils, and of thinking that this editor might even be a good editor, although somewhat radical. But the cross is not a real one, for although Smith has many definite views on campus issues, he is always willing and eager to hear both sides of any issue. This kept him from introducing a bill into the Student Legislature this spring concerning the judicial system, for he felt after talking with Nancy Adams, Hugh Patterson, and Tucker Yates, that more discussion and study was necessary. In the same way, a president is limited by the composition of a Student Legislature, so that his ideas have to meet with the approval of the majority of the people's representatives by district. He can exert leadership, but he cannot force anything down anybody's throat.

The area in which he can make an independent and important contribution is in representing the school. In pooling his knowledge of the general University situation, to help better the University internally which thanks to his fine work on the Committee on State Affairs he has a great deal, through liason with the administration and throught contacts in the state.

The issue is simply leadership and an intelligent pervasive view on the broader aspects of the University. The only man running in any contest for any office is Norman B. Smith.

Dorm Women's I

Coeds competing for the one 1-year seat open in Dorm Women I answered the following questions:

(1) Do you think class officers have accomplished anything?

(2) How do you feel about mixed honor councils?

"From what I hear of past class officers' achievements, I am inclined to believe there is an increase of class officer activity this year. The accomplishments are still forthcoming since the projects were of the long term variety, for example the $25,000 scholarship program under the combined efforts of the sophomores, freshman and juniors. The freshman officers have organized a cabinet and have long range plans under discussion.

"If the students would like to have class officers who unite the class in accomplishment, it is the responsibility of the student voters to elect those whom they deem capable, interested, and those hav- sufficient time to apply themselves and fulfill their office duties.

"At present, I think a combination of men and women's honor council would pose more problems than it would solve. Most of the women of District I feel extra embarrassment would prevent explanations of some situations thereby hindering justice."

"Yes, I do think class officers have accomplished something this year, and have proven their worth in campus. The position of class officer can be neglected an any office can be, but this year the class officers have shown that the class officers are not only holding an important position, but rendering a needed service to their class.

"I do not think a mixed honor council would or could prove as effective as the separate councils that we now have. I believe women are considerably more capable of judging women than men would be. Women are much better fitted to the job, simply because they have lived under the women's regulations, and have certain insight into cases that men could not possibly have. Similarly it is just as hard for a women to understand a man's case. Simply from this standpoint alone I consider it almost self evident why a mixed honor council would not prove as effective as the type we now have.

Dorm Women's II

Candidates for the one-year legislature seat open in Dorm Women's II expressed their views on:

(1) How do you feel about NSA?

(2) How do you think editors of The Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack, as well as the head cheerleader, should be chosen?

Nancy Baker, UP nominee for this seat, stated:

"In my opinion, the National Student Association is an organization about which too little is known in this campus. In discussing the NSA with several students, I found that few of them actually knew asything at all about the aims and functions of this organization. In the past our student legislature has appropriated $1,270 per year to this organization . . . $1,000 to send student council representatives to the annual NSA congress and $155 a year in dues. I believe that the student body should be better informed as to the use of this much of their money.

"A majority of the NSA's aims and functions seem to me to be very worthwhile. However, a great deal of controversy has surrounded a few of the NSA's policies. I believe that these policies should be fully investigated and the results published in The Daily Tar Heel."

"As the head cheerleader," she continued, "and editors of The Daily Tar Heel and Yackety Yack represent and serve the campus as a whole, I believe that the men who hold these offices should be elected by the entire student body. I feel that the student body would thus be more willing to back these leaders. However, the candidates for these three offices should be screened by a bi-partisan board and the field narrowed to two or three candidates for office each year.

"I believe that this would help to insure highly qualified and experienced candidates.

"To help remove these offices from partisan politics I would advocate that these candidates affiliate with neither political party, but run independently."

"The Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack belong to the students and are for the students. I believe for this reason the students should have a direct voice in who runs these publications. This voice is obtained by the election of the editors. With a Bi-Partisan endorsement we are supposed to be assured of qualified candidates.

"Through voting the student assumes a responsibility to the publications and editors.

"On the UNC campus student government is advocated, therefore the editors if The Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack should be elected. In student government one of the most important things is the free election of students to positions.

"The head cheerleader is a representative of the students and therefore should be elected. He must have the support of the student body. To get this he must be elected. Support comes only when the student approves. The majority vote gives this approval and support the head cheerleader needs to do the best job possible."

Concerning NSA, Miss Baxter said," I am in favor of this organization and its purposes. Through the interaction of representatives from 300 member colleges and universities in the United States, the voice of the student is heard. The NSA is an outlet for this voice. During the year in campus and regional meetings, the opinions and ideas of the students are expressed.

"The NSA Congress held in the summer and the regional meetings provide a meeting place for campus leaders to discuss student activities and problems. In this sharing of opinions, ideas and problems a leader gains information and ideas and solutions. But many times what one learns cannot be measured or commuicated. This intangible information helps the leader and results in making better campus organizations for us.

"NSA, acting as the student representative, presents the student opinion to many organizations. For example, last summer NSA was asked for the student opinion of the Federal Student Loan Bill.

"The money appropriated NSA by the Student Legislature should go to pay delegates expenses to NSA Congress but some of the money should be used to explain NSA to the students. The work of the local committee should be publicized. The student must be aware of NSA and its work. This can be accomplished by a new emphasis on our campus for NSA.

"I favor NSA because it is a means of student communication to the world; through it our student government receives help and information; our leaders have a chance to learn and gain from other campus leaders and their experiences; it is concerned with students as students."

Town Men's II

Candidates running for the two 1-year seats in Town Men's II replied to the following:

(1) Do you feel the "liberal" cut system adopted last year has been beneficial:

(2) Should the fines for campus parking violations go to Student Government or to the Town of Chapel Hill?

Jack Lawing, UP candidate from this district, replied: concerning the "liberal" duty system, "Yes, on the whole it has been very beneficial. However, the dean's list students have been robbed of some incentive by certain instructors who refuse to allow them the former privileges of such students. Perhaps this situation could be remedied and a policy be started whereby each student is allowed a minimum number of cuts, regardless of the individual instructor's opinion.

Lawing feels that fines should not go exclusively to either. "Most should go to student government, but a certain amount should go to the town in return for services rendered as by the fire department."

Peyton Hawes, the other UP candidate in TM II, said:

"During the past year, the theme of the Student Legislature appears to have been liberalism. The University is based on this principle, but it can be carried to a dangerous point if it is not handled with care. In the case of the revised cut system, I feel that this is a sound step. Likewise I realize that there are members of the University who are not mature enough to use this freedom wisely. These people are evidently not interested in an education and cutting without discretion will quickly eliminate these people.

Hawes continued, "The parking problem in Chapel Hill is indeed one of the most serious problems confronting the University, but I personally do not believe the power to alleviate this problem lies with Student Government; therefore, I believe that the campus parking fines should be turned over to the University and put into a fund for constructing parking areas. A student committee should have a voice in working out this problem. I fail to see the justification of the Town of Chapel Hill receiving the fines, since the University polices and enforces the majority of the campus parking areas."

"Under the 'liberal' cut system, professors may regulate cut rules to their own teaching styles. I don't believe they have ever been ecstatic over lecturing to snores, coughs, hangovers, and those said 'wish-I-were-at-the-beach' Saturday morning faces.

"Physical presence is not mental presence. Quizzes include lecture material. Excessive cutting shows up on marks. As students, most of us know our capabilities and should be out of the supervision stage. This is an 'institution of learning,' not an 'institution of attendance.'

"Under this system, we all gain. And a little more slack in the reins won't cause the horse to bolt."

Park feels that of the 2 choices, fines should go to Student Government. "Through it, the fines could be properly used to further student organization and opportunity.

"But if it doesn't reach back to all the students in some way, there is a third option—the University. Fines should then be used for wage payments, improvements, expansion and, logically, more accessible parking spaces."

Town Men's III

The questions posed candidates for the seats open in Town Men's III were:

(1) If in the last extremeity, students were unable to get a student union would you be in favor of a full student self-liquidation plan for a student union?

(2) Do you think class officers have accomplished anything?

Frank Eagles, UP candidate for one of the three 1-year Legislature seats in this district replied: concerning a student union, "No! I feel that a student union is needed here at the University but I do not feel that the advantages of this student union would outweigh the disadvantages of the financial burden that would be placed on the individual student.

About class officers, Eagles stated, "I think that the accomplishments of the class officers speak for themselves?"

"There is a very definite need for a new and larger student union here on the UNC campus. We need more space in which student organizations may carry on their activities. This need is seen in that groups have had to hold their meetings in the TV Room and the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial. Even greater is the need for more recreational facilites on campus for the students. In comparison to other schools we are far behind here. If in the next few years, after all other possible means have been thoroughly explored, there is no other way, then I feel that we should resort to a self-liquidating plan. I realize that this will work a hardship on the University and the students, but I feel that the need will warrant such a move.

"In the past year the question of whether or not to have class officers has come to the foreground several times. The principle argument against them is that they have done nothing to justify the existence of such positions. This argument has been proven untrue this year. The Freshmen Class officers have done fine work in cooperation with the Freshman Forum and the Orientation Committee; the Sophomore and Junior Class officers have set up a plan for an excellent scholarship; and the Senior Class officers have, as always, their job of arranging for the gift from the graduating class to the University and planning the Senior Party. Class officers have always been a part of college life, and they are very definitely a part of our "Carolina tradition." I feel there is room for improvement in the activities of class officers at UNC, and I believe that this improvement will certainly be made. Yes, I think class officers should be on this campus, and I think they have done a great deal of good this year and will continue to go so in the future."

"I think a new student union is a most needed facility for the student body. However, I feel that every effort ought to be made so that the students do not pay for the building themselves. Self-liquidation in itself means little, as there are many kinds. I would be in favor of some types, but certainly not all. The most important thing is seeing that a new student union is built as soon as possible.

"Class officers, up until the very recent past, have accomplished little. The scholarship program recently initiated by the present class officers is a worthy venture, and if original-minded class officers are continually elected in the future, these will prove to be offices of accomplishment."

Neal Boden, candidate for the six-months seat in Town Men's III, answered the above questions by saying,

"Certainly if there is one urgent problem which faces the Carolina campus it is the need for a larger and more adequate student union. However, I don't feel that the adoption of a full student self-liquidation plan is the answer to the problem. The financial burden on the average student would be too great to be practicable. The answer might lie in a partial self-liquidating plan. It is hard to say.

"I feel that the class officers in the lower grades serve no essential function and are relatively uncesssary. However, I feel that Senior Class officers are important and serve a useful purpose and therefore I am for their continuation."

Town Men's IV

Questions for the candidates in Town Men's IV were:

(1) How do you feel about mixed honor councils?

(2) How do you feel about NSA?

"I believe that the University is a place where a person should be preparing realistically for life in our society. Separate courts or councils are definitely not realistic preparations. It has been argued that men and women live by separate standards in the University and should, therefore, be tried by separate councils. This is a false analogy. Granted men and women live by separate standards in the University. In fact, they live by separate standards outside the University as well. The fallacy is that, both within the University and outside of it, the standards, however separate they may be, are the standards of society as a whole—men and women. An individual of either sex is responsible to society as a whole. A violation of the Honor Code or the Campus Code is not merely an offense against the persons of the same sex as the offender, but an act answerable to the whole student community.

"It has been said that the present system encourages confessions and enhances the rehabilitative ability of the councils. What this seems to amount to in most cases is placing the burden of proof on the accused—a flagrant violation of justice. As for the 'rehabilitative' ability of these councils—I haves seen little evidence of any.

The methods presently used in our councils more closely resemble those used by court martial than anything else—regardless of the honesty and good intentions of those who support the present system so fervently.

"I am unable to comment fully on the National Student Association. However good, bad, beneficial or detrimental it may be is yet to be be demonstrated. Thus far I have seen very little smoke and no fire."

Platforms

UP

I. STUDENT UNION — We pledge to the student body that we will work toward the immediate acquisition of new student union on this campus. If alle fforts fail, we promise to promote interest in a partial self-liquidation plan.

II. WOMEN'S DORM REGULATIONS — We advocate a more flexible policy toward women's dormitory regulations. Modification of some regulations which do not involve the Honor Code or Campus Code are necessary. We will earnestly promote a system of collective late minutes thereby eliminating unnecessary campuses for one or two minute violations in dormitory and sorority houses. We will also promote a lowering of dormitory fines.

III. LEGISLATURE REDISTRICTING — The views of all students on this campus must be fairly represented in the Student Legislature. For this reason, the redistricting of Legislature seats is essential to present an accurate picture of the interest of the campus in that governing body. We specifically have reference to the few number of students who elected ten delegates from Town Men's IV.

IV. DORMITORIES — Through increased supports to the IDC, we would strongly advocate and work toward an enlargement of the dormitory social program, expansion of the dorm visiting agreement program, the addition of social and physical facilities in dormitories, and increased dormitory services, such as janitorial services and more and better vending machines.

V. DAILY TAR HEEL — We pledge to investigate a means of removing the election of The Daily Tar Heel editor from partisan politics.

VI. FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES — We firmly believe in self autonomy for UNC fraternities and sororities. If these private organizations through their governing bodies, the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council, wish to change the system of rush; this should be left to their own prerogative.

VIII. NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION — We are not convinced that the National Student Association on this campus is representative of the students here. If this is the case, then we favor an investigation of the USNSA, its activities on this campus, and the method of selection of representatives from UNC to National congresses and conferences.

VIII. JUDICIAL SYSTEM — The philosophy of seperate judicial bodies is not essentially wrong, but can be improved throught the clarification and codification of its functions, preceedings and jurisdiction. We firmly oppose the combination of the UNC judicial bodies into a single court to hear all men's and women's cases. We are also opposed to the abolishment of the Interdormitory and Inter fraternity courts.

IX DATE TICKETS — We advocate and will positively work toward the availibility of reasonable priced tickets for all atheletic contests.

SP

The Student Party, ever cognizant of the unique role of Student Goevrnment at UNC, and re-affirming the goals and ideals for which it has fought throught 21 years: namely progressive, clean, beneficial government for all students of our university, pledges to the electorate the following campaign planks:

1. The party reaffirms a strong and earnest support for full and complete co-operation by student government with the IFC and fraternities in working out a feasible and constructive plan for alleviating the problems involved in a system of deferred formal rush.

2. A vigorous campaign to publicize to a much greater degree the transactions, organization, and functions of USNSA as an open-forum for student opinion and training for student government leaders.

3. Action to establish long- term commissions — judiciary, executive, legislative — to study and recommend governmental structural changes leading to more consistent and efficient student government.

4. Procurement of two ten-minute parking spaces in each academic building parking lot for the use of students holding consultations with instructors.

5. Continued and ceaseless action for the procurement of a new student union, adequate to the needs of a growing university.

6. Action modernizing the Co-ed Social Rules by clearly removing the stigma of a morals offense from Social Rules violations.

7. Action to make dormitories more livable and individualized:

a. Expansion of social facilities, particularly in the Upper Quad where a basement storage room can be converted into a party room for residents of near-by dorms.

b. Strengthening the Dormitory Council Courts to prevent destruction of property and unreasonable noise.

c. More vending machines and "hear-here" booths in dorms.

d. Thorough investigation and steps toward improvement of counseling and custodial services.

8. A thorough examination of dormitories, sororities, fraternities, and Victory Village for possible fire hazards, and the elimination of such hazards where they occur.

9. Action toward securing a minimum of at least one cut per class hour in our liberal cut system.

10. Action to improve relations with the town of Chapel Hill:

a. Continued co-operation with the Merchants Association concerning bad cheques, fair prices, and development of student employment opportunities.

b. Work with local planning authorities on traffic control, parking facilities, and establishment of fraternity and sorority courts apart from residential sections.

c. Extension of service projects to town people patterned after the successful IFC Greek Week activities.

11. The Student Party shall endeavor to create a university atmosphere conductive to the colonization of new fraternities and sororities.

Delta Sigma Pi, Business Fraternity, Honors Ervin

Charles C. Ervin of Charlotte was named "Outstanding Young Businessman of North Carolina for 1958" by Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity here Monday.

Ervin started several years ago as a brick mason and now is owner and president of seven different corporations.

President of Ervin Construction Company of Charlotte and of six other affiliated companies, Ervin was cited for his "contributions to business ethics and practices in North Carolina."

"The fraternity selected Ervin for the award on the basis of his accomplishments made on his own initiative. The Charlotte businessman's annual sales of new homes in Charlotte is over seven million dollars.

The Henderson radio station has a mobile unit at both the north and south Henderson plants each day. This mobile unit makes periodic broadcasts on the happenings on the picket lines.

The station also broadcasts speeches by Boyd Payton and other union leaders. These announcements are paid for by the union and do not "necessarily reflect the views of the station."

Radio station workers said they constantly receive telephone calls from people complaining about Payton's speeches.

The station also has received calls from both union and company officials when ever some act of violence occurs.

"For instance, when a rock-throwing incident occurs," said one radio state employe, "we generally get two calls. One will be from company officials saying, 'Report that two rocks were thrown.' The other will be from union officials saying, 'Report that only one rock was thrown.' So no matter what we report we'll get still more calls from one side or the other complaining about what was reported—whether it was right or wrong."

He further stated that the station also receives calls when Payton is speaking, asking the station to "take him off the air."

Several townspeople, who refused to be named, voiced the opinion that the local redio station "is a mouthpiece of the union."

Henry Dennis, editor of the Henderson Daily Dispatch, said he tried to keep his paper in "the middle of the road." He said he tries to get around to various places in the mill areas each day, but the matter has "become so routine" that he doesn't always manage to do so.

Contest Deadline Thursday

The deadline on Thursday for submitting entries in Alpha Phi Omega's "Ugliest Man on Campus" contest has been called to the attention of campus groups who wish to sponsor a contestant.

"Time is getting short and this is a chance for some group to win a rare recognition," said APO president Randel Etheridge.

Applications should be turned in or mailed to the APO office, basement of Smith Dorm.

"Any form of lighting, photographic effect or make up may be used," Etheridge said.

CHI PSI FIRE

A small fire caused by a short circuit in a ceiling light fixture brought two Chapel Hill fire trucks to Chi Psi Lodge at 321 Cameron Ave. Monday afternoon at 12:30 .

According to the Chapel Hill Fire Department, sparks caused by faulty wiring set a wooden joist afire. Damage was slight, the department said.

Tar Heels End Clemson's Nine-Game Streak With 6-3 Win

Hammett Wins In Relief; First ACC Game For Heels

CLEMSON, S. C. — (AP) — Carolina's Ben Hemmett relieved a wild Wayne Young with two out in the second inning and hung a 6-3 defeat on Clemson in an Atlantic Coast Conference baseball game Monday.

It was the first loss for the Tigers after nine straight victories. About 3,000 fans saw the game.

Hammett came on with two runs in and a runner on base. He retired the next seven men to face him. Young walked five men in the inning and two-thirds he worked, and gave up a home run to Zack Burnette.

The Tar Heels pushed over two unearned runs in the first on three Clemson errors. They added another in the second on a walk and 2 singles. A triple and a squeeze play gave the Tar Heels their fourth run in the fourth.

Clemson scored twice in the second on a walk and Burnette's inside the park clout. Ferg Norton banged a triple in the eighth for the Tar Heels, his second, and was safe at home when relief pitcher Bailey Hendley dropped the ball on an attempted squeeze.

The Tar Heels' final run came in the ninth on a deep drive to center by Gerald Griffin.

Harold Stowe, who started for the Tigers and worked six and two-thirds innings, was charged with his first loss after three victories.

STARTER IN WIN — Wayne Young started Carolina's 6-3 win over Clemson yesterday, but Ben Hammett picked up the victory in relief. Hammett relieved Young in the second inning.

Netmen Whip SC By 8-1 Score

COLUMBIA, S. C.—For the third straight match the Carolina tennis team came out on top of its opponent by an 8-1 count. This time the victim was South Carolina.

The win gives the Tar Heel netters a 3-0 conference mark and an overall 4-3 record for the season.

Prior to yesterday's victory over the Gamecocks, Carolina had rolled over Maryland and Virginia, both by 8-1 counts, in ACC play.

Tar Heel captain Geoff Black snapped back from two successive losses to shut out Tom Adams 6-0, 6-0 in the number one singles match.

Carolina courtmen won all six of the singles matches as only one of the losers, Bob Dodson, could get as much as four games off his opponent. In this match Phil Causey whipped Dodson 6-2, 6-4.

The lone Carolina loss of the day came in the number three doubles match where Chip Durham and Neil Dickman lost in three sets, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

The Summary

Singles — 1. Black (C) defeated Adams 6-0, 6-0. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Gregory 6-2, 6-1. 3. Keys (C) defeated Burnett 6-4, 6-3. 4. Happer (C) defeated Smoak 6-1, 6-0. 5. Causey (C) defeated Dobson 6-2, 6-4. 6. Ricks (C) defeated Logan 6-3, 6-0.

Doubles — 1. Happer and Sylvia (C) defeated Adams and Burnett 6-1, 6-2. 2. Keys and Causey (C) defeated Gregory and Smoak 6-0, 6-1. 3. Logan and Dobson (SC) defeated Durham and Dickman 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Erickson Discusses Moe Case

Outlines Steps For Reinstatement

(AP)—Carolina athletic director C. P. Erickson Monday outlined the necessary steps that could lead to the reinstatement of basketball star Doug Moe, dismissed from school last week because of excessive class cuts.

Erickson said the dean of the general college and the readmissions board must decide whether Moe will be permitted to re-enter for the fall semester.

Erickson said that in some similar cases students have been re-admitted after making up work in summer school, though correspondence courses or other means. The general attitude of the student is an important factor in each case, said the athletic director.

Moe, a sturdy sophomore from Brooklyn, N. Y., said he had no immediate plans.

Carolina coach Frank McGuire, on a Morgantown, W. Va., trip, said he did not have the details of the case.

Frosh Open With Presbyterian

By JOHN JUSTICE

Tar Heel baseball fans will get their first look at the 1959 freshman team this afternoon as the Carolina squad takes on Presbyterian Junior College at 3 o'clock at Emerson Stadium.

From preseason reports, the Tar Babies are a potent ball club, and should turn in a good account of themselves. Coach Pat Earey says that his team has so much class that his big problem is finding out which boys to play and where they play best.

Declining to name a certain boy for each position, Earey gave a few hints as to some of the boys who will see action. At first base, either Jerry Evans, Sam Newshaw, or Rick Moser will take charge. Paul Swing, Theodore Garrison, or Zollie Anderson willt handle the second sack. At the hot corner, third base, Larry Neal, Roger Fiushee, or Robert Proctor will hold down the bag. At shortstop will be Leonard Dellolio, Harcid Byrd, or George Knox.

Moving to the outfield, in left field Don Miller or Walter Spainhour will hold that position. James Helton, Robert Noblin, or Robert Sherrod will be roaming in center field. And in right Ed Farrior and E. C. Haithcock will be playing.

As for the catching, which Earey says needs working on, Eugene Wade, Richard Tarlow, and Jerry Kroe, along with several others may handle the receiving chores. The pitching is a wide-open affair with several of Earey's 12 good hurlers expected to toe the rubber.

Fencers Defeat Citadel 10-8

The Tar Heel fencers journeyed to Charleston over the weekend to hand the Citadel fencers a 10-8 defeat in overall bout score. The two teams fenced a dual meet Saturday afternoon at The Citadel in foil and sabre only since the Citadel has no team in epee.

UNC's fencers were decisive in defeating the foilsmen of Citadel with a 6-3 victory in that weapon while the sabre team was edged 5-4 by Citadel's sabreurs.

In the foil each of the Carolina men won two of their three bouts with the three losses being accounted for by the number one Citadel man, Stewart Jacobs, who won all three of his bouts at Carolina's expense. He was pushed to a 5-4 decision over Luchs, Carolina's No. 1 foilsman, but found easier going defeating Ellis(no. 2) by a 5-3 score and Simpson (no. 3) 5-1. Ellis of Carolina in his other bouts polished off Wolfe and Croft by the same score of 5-1. Simpson defeated the same two men by an even greater margin of 5-0 against each of them.

In the sabre bouts the Carolina team was without the services of their first three regulars—Collins, Mirman and Aldridge. The four out of nine that they did win were at the expense of Leach (who lost two) and one each from White and Gall of Citadel. Matthews of UNC fencing in the number one slot was unable to break into the win column but did push both Gall and Leach to 5-4 bouts and was defeated very decisively by the number one Citadel sabreman, White, 5-1. Williams of Carolina also lost to White (5-2) but defeated his Citadel counterpart, Gall, by 5-3 and handily beat the number 3 man, Leach, 5-1. Luchs of Carolina, who doubled in sabre as Carolina's no. 3 man, did what his two teammates could not do and defeated the no. 1 sabreman of Citadel, White, by a 5-4 score. He defeated their no. 3 man, Leach, by a 5-2 score, losing only to Gall, the number 2 man and in that pushed him to a 5-4 bout.

The next team meet for UNC will be a three-way meet at Baltimore on April 18th with Johns Hopkins and Haverford College in all weapons.

Erickson Outlines Steps For Reinstatement

(AP)—Carolina athletic director C. P. Erickson Monday outlined the necessary steps that could lead to the reinstatement of basketball star Doug Moe, dismissed from school last week because of excessive class cuts.

Erickson said the dean of the general college and the readmissions board must decide whether Moe will be permitted to re-enter for the fall semester.

Erickson said that in some similar cases students have been re-admitted after making up work in summer school, though correspondence courses or other means. The general attitude of the student is an important factor in each case, said the athletic director.

Carolina coach Frank McGuire, on a Morgantown, W. Va., trip, said he did not have the details of the case.

To The Students of The University of North Carolina:

In the past several weeks, many articles have appeared in the Daily Tar Heel concerning deferred rush. Almost all of these articles have consisted primarily of one person's opinions and prejudices. There has, however, been one notible exception: the discussion of deferred rush presented in two articles by the Interfraternity Council.

This discussion contained not personnal opinions or prejudices, but the collected views of the overwhelming majority of fraternity men who are very much opposed to deferred rush. In a recent vote conducted in each fraternity and reported back to the I. F. C., only one out of the twenty-four social fraternities had a majority of members in favor of deferred rush, and over 90% of all fraternity men were opposed to deferred rush.

The article by the I. F. C. has presented the views of this majority clearly, concisely, and logically, without resort to emotionalism or distortion. Anyone who believes that fraternities have a valuable position in a university should be convinced by the article that deferred rush is not the best solution for the problems, academic and otherwise, which allegedly arise because of early rush.

It is only the people who, as one outstanding exponent of deferred rush and opponent of fraternities has said, believe that "personally I don't see any value in fraternities, but because a lot of people seem to like them, I won't try to abolish them but will work only for the possible" ie. deferred rush; and that "I can see how they may be some use for some people"; and that "in an ideal university, there would be no place for fraternities"; I repeat, it is only people who, like this boy, see no more value in fraternities than this who would not be convinced that there are better solutions to the existing problems than deferred rush.

This candidate for the presidency of the student body, Norman B. Smith, has later, in his political statements for the public, modified his stand on fraternities somewhat. This "courageous critic" and "responsible reformer" reminds me of the abolitionists before the Civil War who, having predicted its inevitability, worked diligently through concentrated agitation to insure its outbreak. Smith, likewise, has predicted the inevitablity of deferred rush and has exerted all his personal influence to insure its becoming a reality.

I do not think fraternities are perfect. Fraternities, as do all institutions, have their peculiar defects and problems. I do, however, believe that fraternities are and can be made into even more of a positive good for students with a definite place on the University's campus. Deferred rush might solve some of the problems alleged to arise from early rush; however, it would create new problems which would definitely weaken fraternities and the fraternity system here at the University.

The best solution for the current problems, therefore, is not deferred rush, which weakens fraternities; but on the contrary, the best solution is for the fraternities collectively through the I. F. C. and individually to take measures to correct the existing faults and at the same time to strengthen the fraternities and the I. F. C. in order that they can more effectivly deal with the problem.

A strong fraternity system with a strong Interfraternity Council can and should be a positive good influence for the freshmen, the fraternities, and the University. There should be no need to "protect" freshmen from fraternity influence during their first semester; on the contrary, freshmen should definitely profit from the opportunity to enter a fraternity early in their first semester and receive the benefits of fraternity life. By full coopration from fraternities, student government, and the administration, the fraternity system should be strengthened and made into a permanent, ever improving, good influence on freshmen, fraternity men, and the University.

Chapin Awarded Prize

Charles S. Chapin, a UNC graduate student, won first place awards in two divisions of the Presbyterian Student Center sponsored Student Arts Festival.

He won the first place awards in the oil painting and black and white divisions. He also won third place in the black and white division.

Other winners in the Arts Festival were announced Tuesday night. First place winners in the divisions of sculpture and photography were Ronald B. Belk and Margaret Bardwell, respectively.

Second and third place winners were as follows: Richard O. Jackson and John Haymaker in the oils division, John R. Stockard and Jackson in the sculpture division; Rufus Russell and Miss Bardwell in the photography division, and Haymaker and Chapin in the black and white division.

The announcement of winners was made after a buffet supper and talk by Gregory Ivy, head of the Art Department at Woman's College. Ivy served as a judge for the exhibit, as were Joe Cox of the State College School of Design and Robert Howard of the UNC Art Department.

The exhibit, which is being held in the Presbyterian Student Center, off Rosemary street, will be open for the last time today between 1 and 9 p.m. Artists may pick up their works at the center between 1 and 6 p.m. Thursday.

"MRS. McTHING" — Myra Lauterer will play the role of Mrs. Larue and Clyde Milner will be Howay Larue in the Carolina Playmakers' production of "Mrs. McThing" tonight through Sunday night at 8:30 in The Playmakers Theatre.

'Mrs. McThing' Opens Tonite Tickets Still Available

The Carolina Playmakers open tonight at 8:30 in The Playmakers Theatre with their fourth production of the current season, "Mrs. McThing" by Mary Chase.

Performances of the comedy will be held through Sunday night.

Directed by Fred Sitton, a student in dramatic art from Charlotte, the comedy features Myra Lauterer of Chapel Hill in the leading role of Mrs. Howard V. Larue, III.

Mrs. Lauterer has appeared with the Playmakers in "The Crucible" and "Goodbye, My Fancy." A veteran of college, community and summer stock theatres, she has studied with Francis Ferguson, Arch Lauterer and Martha Graham.

She has appeared with the Chase Barn Players, New Hampshire; The South Shore Players, Cohasset, Mass., and The Cleveland Playhouse. Mrs. Lauterer is employed by UNC as librarian in the acquisitions department of the Wilson Library.

Also in the cast of "Mrs. McThing" are Barbara Hicks as Carrie, Lore Schuller as Sybil, Cathy Orne as Eva Lewis, Sally Greene as Maude Lewis, Carolyn Quinn as Grace Lewis, Pete Flahive as Nelson, Clyde Milner as Howay, Maris Uoans as Ellsworth.

Bill Hopkins as Virgil, Craven Mackie as Dirty Joe, Frank McDonald as Stinker, Webb Caye as Poison Eddie Schellenbach, Patricia Koch as Mimi, Bill Bailey and Gene Lanier as policemen, and Louise Lamont as the witch, Mrs. McThing.

Tickets for "Mrs. McThing" are on sale at Ledbetter-Pickard and 214 Abernethy Hall. They will be available at The Playmakers Theatre at 7 o'clock on performance evenings only. All seats are reserved at $1.50.

Regional Meeting Slated

The Carolinas-Virginia region of the National Student Association will hold its annual spring regional assembly at Sweet Briar College Friday and Saturday, April 17 and 18.

Ed Levy, NSA coordinator for UNC, said Tuesday any Carolina student interested in attending the assembly should apply in the student government office in Graham Memorial by Monday.

The annual conference will emphasize the work of the association on all levels; international, national, regional and the individual campus, Levy said.

Speakers will discuss the NSA work in these areas.

Discussion groups will be held for NSA coordinators, members of the student government and possibly for orientation leaders and student editors. In addition, there will be discussion of campus programs which could be used by different types of colleges and a 12th National Congress Orientation meeting.

New regional officers will be nominated April 17 and will be elected April 18.

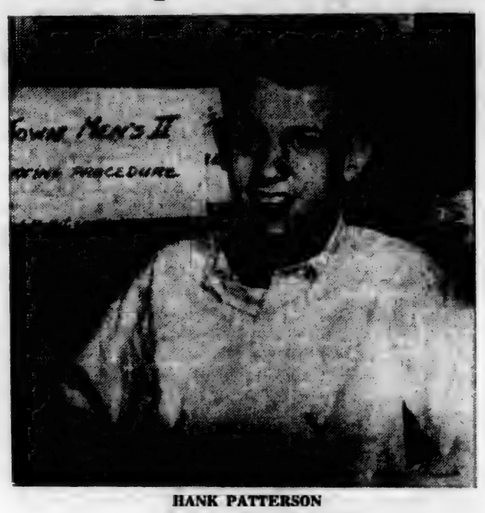
Business Managers

Candidates for business manager of three UNC publications will be interviewed Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Grail Room.

The Selections Board of the Publications Board will be interviewing all students interested in the business management of The Daily Tar Heel, Carolina Handbook and Yackety Yack.

Other information may be obtained from Harold O'Tuel.

Voting Is Heavy; May Top Last Year



HANK PATTERSON
. . . Elections Board Chairman

Voting in Tuesday's campus-wide elections was heavy, according to Elections Board chairman Hank Patterson.

Patterson said the total number of votes cast would probably exceed last year's total of about 2,900. "Most of the districts are running ahead of last year, but I can make no estimate at this time," he said at midnight last night.

The ballots cast will be counted this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Patterson urged all students interested to assist this board with the counting. The election results will be posted in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The number of registered voters in town men's and town women's districts is as follows: TM I (Naval Armory), 97 TM I (Carolina Inn), 75; TM II (Scuttlebutt), 359; TM II (Gerrard Hall), 71; TM III (Western Union), 29; TM III (Graham Memorial); TM IV (Victory Village), 60; TM IV (Glen Lennox), 10; and Town Women's (all districts), 123.

The total number of votes who registered in the 9 town districts, according to Patterson, is 989.

No dormitory districts had been reported last night.

The election of men's dormitory presidents (listed first) and of representatives to the Interdormitory Council (listed second are as follows:

Run-offs will be held next Thursday for the following offices: In Cobb, a run-off for dorm president between Nelson Lowe and Tom Cordle; in Stacy, a runoff for IDC representative between Joe Davenport and Rusty Hammond; in Lewis, a run-off for president between Robert Bowman and Pete Williams, and a run-off for IDC representative between Larry Stack and J. Stultz; in Parker, a run-off between Bob Covington and Ron Britt for dorm president.

Dorms for which no results had come in at the paper deadline last night were Ruffin, Winston, Mangum and Manly.

At midnight last night counters were still sorting the ballots. Patterson told several of them "We'll be here all night sorting these things."

USIA Head To Speak At Mock U. N. Meet

Main speaker for the United Nations Model Assembly here this weekend will be George V. Allen, director of the U. S. Information Agency.

In addition to Allen, other speakers and over 120 representatives from 20 colleges and universities in North Carolina and Virginia will be here for the Model Assembly, April 9-11.

The schools will be representing the member nations of the United Nations and will discuss probems pertinent to the changing conditions of the world.

The local U. N. Education Committee will be host to the visiting students. Sponsoring the Model Assembly is the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

GEORGE V. ALLEN
. . . Assembly Speaker

The issues to be discussed include U. N. recognition and addition of Red China, disarmament and the banning of nuclear testing, the question of Kashmir, world police force and the establishment of permanent military forces and intervention in the Middle East.

Nations and university and college representatives are as follows: Australia, Mary Baldwin College; China, UNC; Cuba, Meredith College; France, Catawba College; India, St. Augustine's College; Indonesia, Pembroke College; Iran, Sacred Heart College; Japan, Charlotte College; Lebanon, Warren Wilson College.

Liberia, North Carolina College; Pakistan, Carver College; Russia, Appalachian; United Kingdom, Wake Forest; United States, UNC; United Arab Republic, Duke University; Yugoslavia, Duke University; Hungary, UNC; Greece, Davidson; Mexico, Sweet Briar and Turkey, East Carolina College.

Allen, who is originally from Durham, was appointed by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to the position of director of the U. S. Information Agency in 1957. During his career he has served as U. S. ambassador to Greece, Yugoslavia, India and Iran. His speech will be given at 8 p.m. Friday in Memorial Hall.

Another invited speaker will be McNeil Smith, UNC graduate who is now an attorney in Greensboro. He will participate in the plenary session Thursday at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Smith graduated from Columbia Law School.

Eighth and ninth grade boys will act as pages during the Model Assembly. They will be chosen to represent their schools on the basis of scholarship, leadership and character by their respective faculties and principals.

The outstanding page will be given an expense paid trip to New York to see the United Nations in action. The boys will come from the schools in the following cities: Durham, Greensboro, Chapel Hill, Wilmington, Lexington and Fayetteville.

Strikers Won't Return Without Contract

By DON SHUMATE

The strikers at Henderson will not go back to work without a contract.

This is the general opinion of those who are—and have been for 21 weeks—on strike at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills.

The above statements are verified by such comments as "We'll go back to work when Hell freezes over. And since it's supposed to be pretty hot down there, that ain't likely to happen;" and "Not a damn one of us will go back to work. Why should we? We've got everything to lose and nothin' to gain."

One striker, 43 years old, has a wife and four children, and has worked in the mill the past 25 years.

"I've already had to take one of my four children out of school," he said, "but I'll take the rest of them out, gather my whole family on our front porch on the coldest day of winter and sit there and starve and freeze to death—before I'll go back in that damn mill without a contract."

He meant it.

But the strikers don't seem to be suffering unduly from the effects of being out of work for four months. They are being supplied with food by the union. The union is also paying their hospital and doctor bills, as well as other necessary bills—such as light, heat and power.

They emphasized repeatedly that they "haven't wanted for anything" since the strike began. "We're eating just as well—and maybe better than before, one striker asserted.

But all is not as rosy as the picture they painted—or tried to paint. For instance, one striker said, rather dejectedly: "Everyday has been Sunday for so long, I just don't know what to do anymore.

The unionists are not just a group of individuals. They are a body of people who are standing for what they believe is right. And the harmony that exists between them is certainly indicative of their strength.

Unions all over the state have joined to support the strikers at Henderson. One or two locals in Durham have sent money, others have sent cigarettes—reportedly 200 cartons to one local last week.

The strikers spend their days playing checkers in one of the union halls, fishing, hunting or standing around talking any and everything.

They also talked of their arrests and near-arrests. They did this with a haughty air—but at the same time there was a twinge of hostility. Once in a while some of them get odd jobs to earn some spending money.

One striker asserted that when the strike began, he "had 11c in his pocket. And I've got more than that now—even some bills." But they denied that the union is paying them any cash.

Each Friday night, at local 578 in South Henderson, a dance is held. Everyone seems to know everyone else, and the affair is one of good-natured kidding and joking.

The men at the union halls seemed more anxious to talk about their situation than did the women. The women stood or sat around in the background, talking among themselves. As a whole the women seemed less cheerful than the men.

And then there were the children. As in almost any situation, the children were carefree and gay—unaware of the tension and trouble that surrounded them. They ran around the union hall, laughing, screaming, shooting each other—and reporters — with water pistols and just generally getting in the thick of things. And, again, as in almost any situation, parents were constantly giving forth with shouts of "keep quiet for a while." They did—for a while.

The youngsters, 14-16 years old, seemed concerned about the situation, but, here again, there was a cheerful feeling. They didn't seem bitter about the matter—merely saddened to some degree. They were also very humble — and curious. Much of what the youngsters said was mere repetition of the things their elders had said—and were still saying. One youngster pointed out that he has a new shirt . . And as he did so, he looked up as if to get a look of approval. He seemed to be saying, "See, things aren't really so bad." He just didn't know how to say it.

The strikers' feelings toward Gov. Hodges and mill president John D. Cooper Jr., are very strong. As one put it, "you don't want to hear our opinions of Hodges."

They feel that "Hodges could've settled the strike in 15 minutes if he'd wanted to." They also think the "strike would have been over in a week" if Hodges had not sent the State Highway Patrolmen to the scene.

One said he thinks the strike would end in two weeks if the troopers were pulled out now. He further stated that he thinks Hodges is "prolonging the strike. He's scared of his own plans, because he said he could protect those on the evening shift while they were in the plant, but not while they were out

Confusion

There appears to have been some confusion about the letter written by Tom Rand which appeared as an advertisement in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel.

Rand's letter was not refused for publication, nor has any letter during the entire year been refused for publication because of viewpoint or method of presentation. Indeed, Rand could have had his letter printed today, tomorrow, or any other time but yesterday.

The Daily Tar Hel operates under a contract with The News, Inc., of Carrboro, N. C. This contract stipulates that all editorial page material with the exception of the editor's editorial must be at the print shop a day and a half before publication. Admitted that this contract is not always lived up to by either side to the letter, both sides try to live up to the spirit of the contract. Hence when Rand came late Sunday, the editor could do no more than say he would be unable to have it published in the Tuesday edition.

Rand was one of many. A letter in support of one senior class officer failed to appear—not so much because this letter failed to meet the deadline, but because the material for the rest of the page had been submitted prior to the letter's arrival. The letter writer of this letter can also get his letter printed in a later edition.

The editor this year has refused exactly two letters for publication. The first was an obvious political appeal for votes for junior class officers of the University Party in the fall, a letter which was not based on issues but was based on personal appeal. This can be handled in an advertisement. Similarly, a letter in support of Norman Smith and Jim Crownover was refused publication for approximately the same reasons.

The only reason that there have not been more letters in favor of the position taken by Rand in opposition to deferred rush is because no one has written any. The editor refuses to play Devil's Advocate for this particular devil.

Elections Board

No doubt the Elections Board is going to forget something, and no doubt there will be one or more mistakes in the handling of the spring election. No doubt there will be complaints and charges.

But as one observer who has watched Hank Patterson work night and day for the past three weeks, and who has seen many others ready, willing, and able to do an election right on this campus, the editor offers his thanks.

This Elections Board has every right to be congratulated for a fine job. Hank Patterson in particular deserves a great amount of credit for his energy and initiative.

IDC President

One small item escaped comment of the editor during the past couple of weeks. This was the election of IDC officers.

The commentary that is necessary is a word of praise for the job that Rudy Edwards has done as IDC president. Otto Funderburk will have large shoes to fill.

Harper's Bizarre

We recall — sometimes with pain, but more often with pleasure — the little incidents which marked our iniation into the Carolina Way of Life.

We made the usual mistakes during our first week here. We were to meet the orientation councellor first at Memorial Hall, then at Graham Memorial, or vice versa. We were always late, having invariably gone to the wrong "memorial" first.

Later in our freshman Fall, rush commenced, and we were right in there, knowing no more of "fraternity" than a broad, semi-dictionary definition. The major reason for our never pledging one of the Greek organizations arose because of that gentle, misty freshman haze which enshrouded us. Early in rush week we set our heart on one, the one, fraternity. It was that one on the corner, diagonally across from the "Scuttlebutt". We were never invited to rush there. So, deciding to settle for none less, we retired from the field, unpledged.

And there was one incident during orientation that we'll always remember. One morning in all innocence we asked the orientation counsellor, "Where is the Y.M.C.A?"

"The what!" he cried.

"The Y.M.C.A?"

He looked as if he'd just recalled twenty years' accumulation of stomach gas. Minutes later he rallied: "You mean Y-Court!"

"Maybe," we allowed. "Anywhere, where is it?"

"Right there," he pointed. "That's Y-Court." He stiffened a bit, and his eyes shone.

"There with the benches, or inside with the cokes and crackers?"

We cringed from the fury mounting within him. Then something snapped. His eyes filled with tears, his shoulders slumped. In a voice pleading for understanding he spoke: "Y-Court," his breath caught, "Y-Court is not a geographical position." He braced for supreme effort. "Y-Court is a way of life."

He stood slowly, shrugged off all thoughts of further counselling, and stumbled off in the direction of the last booth in "Harry's".

An old, almost completely bald gentleman smoking a pipe stepped up and encircled our shoulders with an arm. "Someday," he said, "you'll understand."

"Hear! Hear!"

A Letter On The U. N. Mock Assembly

Edior:

The Collegiate Council of the American Association for the United Nations and the students of the University of North Carolina are to be congratulated on the holding on the campus at Chapel Hill of a model United Nations Assembly. In preparation for playing the parts of delegates of the member nations, students develop more informed and authentic understanding of the history, customs, interests and policies of the member nations. They get an insight into the principles and provisions of the Charter and the policies, procedures, limitations and needs of the United Nations.

Their own experiences in student self-government equip them for their participation in their Model Assembly of the United Nations. I was a happy witness of the leading role played by student leaders from the University of North Carolina at the last annual meeting of the dynamically valuable National Student Association in winning the hotly contested struggle over the freedom of the student newspapers to discuss vital controversial issues. Needless to say, the student delegates from our threefold University, in co-operation with student leaders from the University of Texas, decisively won the battle for responsible freedom of the student newspapers against the arguments for administrative censorship, political expediency and financial security.

I trust that this Assembly in Chapel Hill will grapple with such issues as the need of the United Nations for such developments as:

1. Long-range economic development programs in addition to more adequate support of the specialized agencies of the United Nations in what William James called the moral equivalent of war - the great campaigns against poverty, hunger, illiteracy, disease, discrimination, colonialism, armaments and the war system itself.

2. A stand-by arrangement for a United Nations peace force, not only to salvage but to help prevent disaster.

3. Promotion of progressive steps in effective disarmament so as to supplant the old vicious circle of fear, armaments, war and annihilation with a new circle of faith, disarmament, economic development and international co-operation in productive and humane programs.

4. Other procedures failing, resort to and emphasis on the moral power of a two-thirds vote of the General Assembly in regard to membership, disarmament and the settlement of international disputes which keep hanging on year after year with the world itself in jeopardy.

5. Promotion of the consideration for adoption of the covenants and conventions on human rights.

6 Promotion of self-development and the responsible self-determination of colonial peoples and non-self-governing territories.

7. United Nations jurisdiction over the international problems of the polar regions and outer space.

THE NEW LITERATURE. By Claude Mauriac. 251 pp. New York: George Braziller. $4.

M. Mauriac's concern in this new book is something known as "aliterature" — known as such, that is, to M. Mauriac, who seems to be somewhat confused as to the exact meaning of his brain-child. M. Mauriac feels that the term "literature" has taken on a pejorative coloring from exposure to "hackneyed conventions," and that the simple (and incorrect) prefixing of the alpha privative will restore the word to its former potency. It becomes obvious even before the body of the work is begun that "aliterature" is nothing more than what has heretofore been quite adequately covered by the term "aventegarde literature"; and plain old ordinary literature, in M. Mauriac's heretical canon, is the same stuff that most critics have been content to call simply "bad literature" ever since criticism began.

In short, the unifying thesis of this book is so obvious that only a pseudo-academic classification like "aliterature" could make it palatable; and even the author himself, writing as though he'd come to the end and found that he had nothing to say after all finally declares his own word ill-coined, and returns us unspoiled to the old usages: "aliterature" exists only in this book, and hopefully it will never again be recoined to compete with "avant-garde" and "contemporary" as convenient terms for what is simply new.

Between M .Mauriac's Introduction and his Conclusion there are seventeen short chapters, each devoted to a major European contemporary ("aliterate"?). It is no criticism of M. Mauriac to note in passing that only half a dozen or so of his subjects are well-known in the United States, and of those only four or five (Kafka, Miller, Beckett, Camus, and perhaps Simenon) are prominent enough here to make brief criticisms such as M. Mauriac's very meaningful.

There are, however, serious faults in this book, and they have nothing to do with phony heuristics or obscurity. A passage from M. Mauriac's treatment of Albert Camus — best known in America of all of the subjects — should illustrate the difficulty.

In the middle of his discussion of Camus' work, Mauriac writes of the sudden awareness on the part of the hero of La Chute (The Fall) of his own guilt, "a secret evil . . . known by him alone, a momentary act of cowardice for which he will never forgive himself and with which he remains obsessed: one day, a young woman had drowned herself not very far from him without his coming to her aid. In the absence of a point of reference, the critic must remain discreet here and not try to imagine what personal matter Albert Camus wished to express by this allusion to a fault which, from the evidence at hand ,he did not commit and which one ought to attribute to his protagonist alone. No doubt this invented trait is there in place of a real one . . ." And so on.

It is only fair to say that M. Mauriac does, in fact, conclude this particular statement with the admission that the guilt which Camus invests in his hero is nothing so simple and artistically useless as some particular fault of his own; but it is impossible to avoid the uncomfortable feeling that this admission is hard-won, and that the author would like nothing better than to find in the course of his researches that Camus has some previous sin for which he has not atoned, and in expiation of which he writes autobiographical novels. Even if Camus' guilt complex were located and explored, and it turned out that he had murdered his father and married his mother, criticism based on such clinical data would be interesting but useless.

This biographical approach to criticism does, of course, have its limited place, and M. Mauriac uses it effectively in writing about Kafka and Miller. Both write autobiography and so certain insights into life history are quite illuminating. Still, they cannot take the place of sound criticism, which best charts its course by something more fixed and common than the dark secrets of an author's personal life.

THE PICARESQUE SAINT: Representative Figures in Contemporary Fiction. By R. W. B. Lewis. 317 pp. Philadelphia and New York: J. B. Lippincott Company. $6.

In this treatment of six modern authors (Moravia, Silone, Camus, Faulkner, Graham Greene and Malraux) Professor Lewis is involved in the same questionable practice that fascinated M. Mauriac THE NEW LITERATURE: both are in search of some catch phrase which will serve as a descriptive device for the analysis of modern fiction. M. Mauriac adopts a patently artificial device — "aliterature" — to characterize the writing of a diverse crowd of twentieth century writers: Professor Lewis, on the other hand, is seeking within the works themselves of a smaller group of authors a thematic device which is central both to the work and the world from which they immediately spring and to which they immediately relate.

In his Prefatory Note, Professor Lewis writes: ". . . the word 'figures' in the subtitle refers to figures of speech, to the characteristic metaphors of the generation; as well as to the human figures within the novels and to the figures of the writers themselves. To detect those figures and to describe the world they serve to compose is, as I understand it, a major function of criticism in the present time." Such a statement as this, which accurately describes the critical attitude of the whole book, starts the book off with an air of worthwhile and deep seriousness which persists right through to the excellent notes and index at the end.

If Professor Lewis has joined M. Mauriac in a dubious enterprise, then, he at least carries it off with more success. By going into the works themselves and isolating a common theme, rather than trying to superimpose on a mass of material an artificial descriptive device, Lewis ends up with something more than the seventeen critical essays and one leftover heuristic device which remain at the end of the other book.

What Professor Lewis is seeking in this book, using the recurring character of "the picaresque saint" as his mannequin, is the new image with which man has clothed his nakedness after the force of twentieth century disillusionment deprived him of traditional images, traditional guises (or, better, disguises).

Obviously, the figure of "the picaresque saint" is limited in its application. There are a number of contemporary writers who derive from and contribute to the same "existentialist" mood which holds sway over Professor Lewis' six, and many of them lack a "picaresque saint" in their repetoire of characters.

Still, the figure of the hero who is at once a rogue and a charmer, a character who demands admiration in the same breath with condemnation, is a servicable device for revealing at least one prominent strain in contemporary literature. Picaresque saints do abound, both in contemporary literature and contemporary life, characters whose morality is always questionable, and who are heroes in art because the whole idea of morality is for them always in question.

At the beginning of the book, Professor Lewis takes great pains to exclude from his study the works of Joyce, Proust and Mann, on the trumped-up technicality that the fictional worlds of their heroes are "artistic.' 'Such an arbitrary — and often false, as in the case of Mann's Felix Crull — exclusion of heroes from the club of "picaresque saints" seems unnecessary; particularly as these three authors, along with Gide, have provided some of the most paradigm exemplars of the theme.

As it is, Professor Lewis is forced to stretch his title phrase at times in order to include such doubtful saints as Camus' Caligula, to use the most obvious example. (Nor is the play Caligula an example of "epic theatre," as Professor Lewis would have use believe.)

All in all, however, this book speaks of pertinent matters with seriousness and authority, and the illumination which it provides of modern authors, their work, and their times is most revealing and valuable.

While this book will be reviewed at greater length in a future column, it is worthy of at least brief mention here because it is devoted to a study of the one author, Camus, who is treated in both of the books reviewed above. Camus' career is still relatively young, despite a considerable number of novels, essays, plays, editorials and short stories already to his credit; He is also a Nobel Prize winner, and the subject of at least three critical works.

This latest book in the library of Camus criticism, excellent though it is, cannot pretend to make any definitive assessment of Camus' work. What it can and does do is to bring us up to date, and yet allow for the probability that many of the critical judgments will have to be revised in the future, as M. Camus continues to produce and each individual work takes on a new coloring and a new importance relative to the whole of the author's work.

Variations

Gail Godwin

It never fails. No matter how bleak and dry-cold and rainy and depressing the winter has been in Chapel Hill, all remembrances of the bad days are shed like defective chrysalises once spring makes it debut.

Spring and Chapel Hill are, in a sense, synonyms. Each enhances the other. Chapel Hill gives to this particular season an abundance of raw material and potential beauty. Spring takes it into her skillful hands as an expert hairdresser gathers together a rich sheath of thick, colorful but unkept hair and fashions it into a spectacle which will warm the blood of the coldest, sourest human being.

Windows are flung open and the janitor wipes soot from their frames in the late afternoon after the students have gone. Two solid and stiff professors decide to get reckless and take a Coke break in Y court. A dedicated photographer equipped with all necessary supplies of his craft and a few extra ones cranes his neck behind his lens which is focused on a shocking white burst of cherry blossoms on a tree. The Chapel Hill League of Independent Dogs begin holding their meetings out of doors, on the mall between the Library and South Building, under the dogwood trees in the Arboretum, in front of Silent Sam's quiet and serious vigil. A host of youthful legs adorn the sunny streets — thin, scrawny legs, legs rippling with muscles and gleaming with tan, legs which are better or worse off from the extra exposure provided by Madras Bermudas, khaki Jamaicas. Convertible tops come groaning down into the seat covers. An empty tennis court is as rare as a unicorn in the Admissions Office.

People start feeling sentimental and descriptive about Chapel Hill. Those of us who think we can write are compelled to list the poetic evidences of a Chapel Hill spring, quite as magnificent as April in Paris, or springtime in Capistrano. This urge to describe has been going on since there was such a place to see and enjoy.

Here is one of the more successful efforts, written by one of Chapel Hill's remembered alumni, who left these same cherry blossoms and "Neo-Greeky" architecture and statues and grass and went on to make his way in the world, sending wisps of his fame back to this scene which inspired some of his writing:

"In this pastoral setting, a young man was enabled to loaf comfortably and delightfully through four luxurious and indolent years. There was, God knows, seclusion enough for monastic scholarship, but the rare romantic quality of the atmosphere, the prodigal opulence of Springtime, thick with flowers and drenched in a fragrant warmth of green shimmering light, quenched pretty thoroughly any incipient rash of bookishness. Instead, they loafed and invited their souls or, with great energy and enthusiasm, promoted the affairs of glee clubs, athletic teams, class politics, fraternities, debating societies, and dramatic clubs. And they talked — always they talked, under the trees, against the ivied walls, assembled in their rooms, they talked — in limp sprawls — incessant, charmimng, empty Southern talk; they talked with a large, easy fluency about God, the Devil, and philosophy, the girls, politics, athletics, fraternities and the girls — my God! How they talked."

And, it hasn't changed very much, Tom.

A Letter

Editor:

It has come to our attention that a certain edition of the DTH, of Sunday, April 5, was not allowed to go to press, but that a substitute issue was printed. It has also come to our attention that certain members of the DTH staff have resigned due to your actions and possibly other minor reasons. As staunch supporter of the status quo, why have you insisted upon continually aleinating factions of the university? We realize that the editor of a paper must occasionally take stands that will arouse certain groups, but by the same token we also realize that the editor of a paper must have a sense of responsibility to govern his actions. We do not feel that you show a sense of responsibility by your partisanism and ideas. We hope that in the last days of your editorship you will show the responsibility that is essential for an editor.

(The editor is gladly willing to admit that the paper that was at the shop on Saturday night at 8:55 p.m. and the paper that finally hit the press were not exactly the same paper. The editor would also like to enumerate the changes he made on that paper.

The editor changed an eight column one inch high headline announcing the candidacy of Henry Snow to a two column headline because no other candidate in any race has ever received more than a five column announcement headline. Furthermore there was Saturday, as there is today, a great amount of doubt as to the candidate's legitimacy. So, on the basis of the fact that the editor did not want to mislead the voters nor mobilize a campaign for anybody through the use of the news pages, he cut the headline down.

The editor further rearranged the paragraphs in the story announcing Snow's candidacy so that 1) those who comorised Henry Snow were clearly known at the top of the story, and 2) so that the Election Board's opinion that Snow was not a legal candidate would get prominent mention. Both of these moves were undertaken with the intention of clearly showing to the voters and the reading public who comprised Henry Snow and the risk they might be taking if they voted for Snow and their ballots were thrown out.

To my knowledge only one person resigned because of my decision. This person is ex-managing editor Stan Fisher, who curiously enough happens to be one of the seventeen students who comprise Henry Snow.

In closing the editor would like to add that he hopes he will always exercise the responsibility he has as wisely as he did Saturday night.)

Covering The Campus

SEMINAR ON NEW COMPUTER

Dr. John W. Carr III, director of the UNC Research Computation Center, will present a seminar Thursday at 3 p.m. in Room 208 Caldwell Hall.

The seminar will be given at an elementary level to explain the capabilities of the Univac 1105, a 2½ million-dollar electronic computer to be available here soon.

Dr. Carr will also explain the nature of several different short courses which will enable faculty members and graduate students to program individual research programs for processing through the computer.

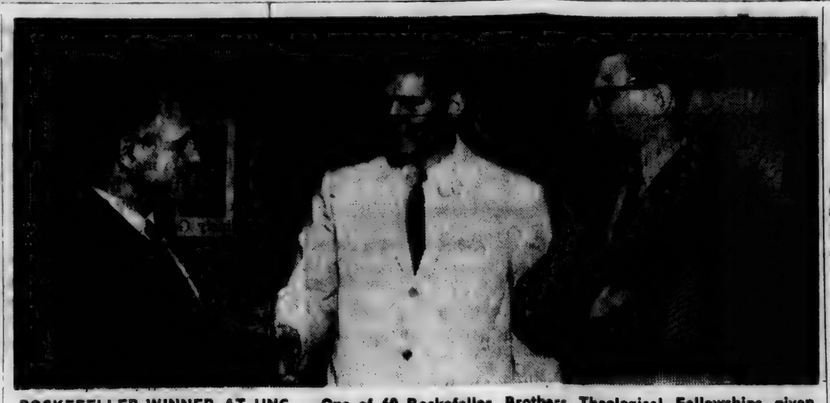
ASTRONOMY CLUB

The Chapel Hill Astronomy Club will meet Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Building.

Weather permitting, a viewing session through the Planetarinm's 15 inch telescope will be held after the program which will be conducted by President Bill Baylis.

MOSLEM STUDENTS

Moslem students will meet Thursday at the University Methodist Church at 11 a.m. This will be for the occasion of Id-ul-Fitre, one of the greatest festivals in the Moslem world. The festival is observed after one month's fasting in the month of Ramaden.



ROCKEFELLER WINNER AT UNC — One of 60 Rockefeller Brothers Theological Fellowships given throughout the U. S. and Canada has been awarded to Rinaldo A. L. Walker, a graduate student at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Now working toward an M. A. degree in English, Walker will study during 1959-60 at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He is shown (center) receiving congratulations from Prof. Arnold S. Nash, UNC professor of the history of religion, while looking on is the Rev. Samuel H. Magill, assistant dean of student affairs at UNC. Walker is the son of Dr. Franklin T. Walker of Clinton, Miss. and is a graduate of Mississippi College.

Walsh Discusses Evolution

The Catholic Church's attitude toward the theory of evolution was explained here last weekend by the Very Rev. Michael P. Walsh, S. J., president of Boston College.

At the close of the convention, these new Piedmont Province officers were elected: Paul Myatt of Virginia Military Institute, chairman; Jerry Euband of VMI, Pete Marchette of N. C. State College and Diana Dunford of the University of Virginia, vice chairmen.

Other officers are Ellen Dunne of Mary Washington, secretary and Cruz Sigala of Virginia Tech., treasurer

Father Walsh, a noted teacher and scholar in the fields of biology, cytology and genetics, pointed to the renewed interest and favor received by the theory of evolution in the last decade and agreed that it is now held in one form or another by virtually all scientists.

The confusion and misunderstanding about the church's stand on evolution, said Father Walsh, has its origin in the failing to properly distinguish between the theory of organic evolution and the theory with the added philosophic implication of men like Huxley and Haeckel.

He pointed out that acceptance of a theory of organic evolution does not prelude believing that the soul of man is created by God, and that God directed the evolutionary creation of man's body.

Warner Wells To Speak To Pre-Meds In Hanes

The inhabitants of Hiroshima quaked in fear at the roar of an approaching American B-29 and relaxed when they saw it was alone and apparently in trouble.

The Japanese assumed the plane had been hit by anti-aircraft fire and cheered as two parachutes dropped—and then the bang.

A blast followed that demolished a large city, killed 500,000 people and sent out vibrations that are still shaking the world today.

This information was drawn from the Hiroshima Diary whose editor translator, Dr. Warner Wells, will speak to all interested pre-medical and pre-dental students Thursday night at 7:30 in Room 106 Hanes Hall sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Delta.

A world in which nations are like little boys holding sticks of dynamite in their right hands and pinching at each other with their left hands provides a setting for Dr. Well's talk entitled "Implications of Nuclear Warfare."

Dr. Wells, assistant professor of surgery at the School of Medicine, will draw for his discussion from his three years of experience in Hiroshima and Nagasaki as surgery consultant on the U. S. Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission.

He will discuss the physiological and sociological effects of a nuclear attack. Colored slides showing scenes from the demolished Japanese cities will illustrate the discussion.

Pre-medical and pre-dental students interested in future AED membership will be invited to an informal rush meeting after the program.

Henderson's Workers: A Resisting Effort of the plant." Mill head Cooper has said he will start an evening shift "in the near future." The mill is currently operating only one shift. It formerly ran three.

The unionists think the acts of violence, particularly the dynamitings, are being perpetrated by non-union members. One striker said he thinks that whoever poured acid on 47 machines (March 9) did so to keep the troopers in the town.

"If someone had climbed that fence," the striker said, "he'd have left tracks where he hit the ground when he jumped from the fence. But the SBI has said nothing about any tracks. So it must've been an inside job."

Strikers also said they feel that an explosion at the South Henderson plant was done by pro-management people. The part of the mill that was dynamited was, according to a union member, constructed of tin. "If it had been a union member, he'd have thrown it through the end that had glass in it," he said.

The strikers also feel very strongly toward the "vigilante' group. This is a group of 200-300 citizens who have pledged to maintain a "night watch" for violence.

One woman striker said she had been walking home from a relative's house the previous night, and she saw a man walking up the street. Later, she was going back up the street and saw the same man.

"That was the first time I'd been out on the street after dark," she said. "But I just figgered he was one of them night-watchers. If I'd met him again I was sure gonna find out. And I'd have sure popped him one good. It just made me so mad I didn't know what to do."

VIVE LE POPCORN!

The other day as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (Marlboro, incidentally, has the best tinfoil, which is not surprising when you consider that they have the best cigarettes, which is not surprising when you consider that they take the best filters and put them together with the best tobaccos and rush them to your tobacco counter, fresh and firm and loaded with smoking pleasure). The other day, I say, as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (I have, incidentally, the second largest ball of tinfoil in our family. My brother Eleanor's is bigger—more than four miles in diameter—but, of course, he is taller than I). The other day, as I was saying, while walking down the street picking up tinfoil, I passed a campus and right beside it, a movie theatre which specialized in showing foreign films. Most campuses have foreign movie theatres close by, because foreign movies are full of culture, art, and esoterica, and where is culture more rife, art more rampant, and esoterica more endemic than on a campus?

Nowhere; that's where.

I hope you have all been taking advantage of your local foreign film theatre. Here you will find no simple-minded Hollywood products, marked by treacly sentimentality and machine-made bravura. Here you will find life itself—in all its grimness, its poverty, its naked, raw passion!

Have you, for instance, seen the recent French import, Le Crayon de Mon Oncle ("The Kneecap"), a savage and uncompromising story of a man named Claude, whose consuming ambition is to get a job as a meter reader with the Paris water department? But he is unable, alas, to afford the flashlight one needs for this position. His wife, Bon-Bon, sells her hair to a wigmaker and buys him a flashlight. Then, alas, Claude discovers that one also requires a leatherette bow tie. This time his two young daughters, Caramel and Nougat, sell their hair to a wigmaker. So now Claude has his leatherette bow tie, but now, alas, his flashlight battery is burned out and the whole family, alas, is bald.

Or have you seen the latest Italian masterpiece, La Donna E Mobile (I Ache All Over), a heart-shattering tale of a boy and his dog? Malvolio, a Venetian lad of nine, loves his little dog with every fibre of his being. He has one great dream: to enter the dog in the annual Venetian dog show. But this, alas, requires an entrance fee, and Malvolio, alas, is penniless. However, he saves and scrimps and steals and finally gets enough together to enter the dog in the show. The dog, alas, comes in twenty-third. Malvolio sells him to a vivisectionist,

Or have you seen the new Japanese triumph, Kibutri-San (The Radish), a pulse-stirring historical romance about Yamoto, a poor farmer, and his daughter Ethel who are accosted by a warlord one morning on their way to market? The warlord cuts Yamoto in half with his samurai sword and runs off with Ethel. When Yamoto recovers, he seeks out Ethel's fiancé, Red Buttons, and together they find the warlord and kill him. But, alas, the warlord was also a sorcerer and he whimsically turned Ethel into a whooping crane. Loyal Red Buttons takes Ethel home where he feeds her fish heads for twenty years and keeps hoping she'll turn back into a woman. She never does. Alas.

Gamecocks Stop Carolina, 8-3

Heels Strand Eight; Commit Five Errors

COLUMBIA —(AP)— Hard hitting first baseman Ken Rosefield led South Carolina's Gamecocks to an 8-3 Atlantic Coast Conefrence baseball victory over North Carolina Tuesday.

Rosefield, a senior from Sumter, drove in three runs on three singles, furnishing the key power in South Carolina's third conference win against four defeats. The performance raised his average to .469.

The loss was North Carolina's first in conference play and gives the Tar Heels an overall record of 7-2. Loose fielding by North Carolina contributed to the setback.

Freshmen Suffer 9-4 Loss To Presbyterian In Opener

By JOHN B. JUSTICE

An unexpectedly strong Presbyterian Junior College baseball team gave the Tar Baby nine a rude start for the season yesterday afternoon when the visitors pounded out a 9-4 win.

Ken Harris, center fielder for Presbyterian, led his mates with three hits, a single, double, and home run, and five runs batted in. Harris' home run was the big blow of the rugged fourth inning, when PJC scored five runs off Carolina pitcher Dick Tarlow. Tarlow began the inning by walking the first four men he faced. Then Jimmy Leviner, an ex-Carolina student now playing the third sack for PJC, hit into a force play, driving in one run. Harris, who had knocked in one run in the first inning, promptly smashed a long drive to right center field, scoring three runs.

The biggest inning for the Tar Heel frosh was the third, when they tallied three. Larry Neal, the third baseman for Coach Pat Earey's squad, started things by getting a single and advancing to second on a pass ball. Shortstop Leonard Dellolio then dropped in a Texas leaguer to score Neal. After a man had been retired, E. C. Haithcock singled in Dellolio to end the scoring. The Tar Babies scored one more in the fourth when Paul Swing knocked in Neal from second after he had singled and gone to second on another passed ball.

For the winners Bill Merritt went all the way for the victory. Although Carolina outhit their opponents 8-7, Merritt checked all serious rally attempts. Merritt struck out seven and walked three, and allowed no extra base blows.

Dick Tarlow was charged with the loss. Starter Nick Warren was pinch hit for, after having held PJC to one run. Then Tarlow came in and pitched one third of the disasterous fourth. Wacker was followed by Jerry Carpenter in the seventh. Carpenter allowed two runs in the three innings he pitched.

The Tar Babies will be looking for their first win here tomorrow at 3 o'clock, when they meet Oak Ridge Military Academy.

TREATMENT FOR WITT

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Just how quickly the lame pitching arm of George Witt responds to treatment may be the difference in a fast or slow start for the pennant-hungry Pittsburgh Pirates.

While the Pirates flew from their Florida training camp to Cincinnati Tuesday for a league opener Thursday, Witt was ordered to go to Pittsburgh and have his right elbow examined by Dr. Joseph Finegold, Pirate physician.

State Tops Clemson, 8-7

CLEMSON, S. C. — (AP) — N. C. State poured across four runs in the ninth inning Tuesday to hand Clemson's Tigers their second Atlantic Coast Conference baseball loss in two days, 8-7.

Clemson starter Ty Cline was rocking along with a two-run lead when the Wolfpack exploded. After one out, pinch-hitter Glenn Sparrow and Jim Story singled. Jimmy Roller relieved Cline and walked Jimmy Hill to load the bases. O'Neal Easom slashed a two-run single and that was all for Roller.

Tiger Ace Harold Stowe relieved Roller. He got Don Hafer on a grounder, but Bennie Latusick pounded a double to right to score the last two State runs.

The Tigers almost pulled it out in their half of the ninth, scoring a run on two walks and a sacrifice fly.

Cline, who was after his third win, was touched for 11 hits and six wins. He struck out eight and walked two.

Besides the run in the ninth, Clemson picked up single runs in the first, fifth and sixth and added three in the second.

Unbeaten Golfers Meet Princeton Here Today

The undefeated Carolina golf team will be out to make it five straight here today when it goes against Princeton of the Ivy League at 1:30 on Finely Golf Course.

The surprising Tar Heels have bowled over Indiana, Michigan, Cornell and Davidson for the four wins. They had their closest call against Davidson last week, winning 15-12.

The versatile linksmen have placed three different men as medalists. Number one man Ed Justa, number two man Don McMillan, and number four man Bob Galloway have all reached the medalist goal. Justa has the best score, a three-under par 69.

Princeton is reputed to have a very strong golf team. The Tar Heels have been the whiz kids of the area so far, as only one of five lettermen returned from last year's starting crew. John McKee, the number six man, is the lone returner.

Thus far the powerful Tar Heels have piled up 80 points against the opposition's 31. Today is the last match before Carolina begins its defense of the ACC championship.

Managers Meeting

At the last Intramural Managers meeting, the chief topic of discussion was the rules for softball. After much debating they finally decided that a team would be permitted to start a game with a minimum of seven players. The old rule stated that a team had to have nine players present.

Also at the meeting the All Campus Basketball team was announced. They are: Jim Kelly, SAE; Jack Cummings, Kap Sig; Mike Greenday, Kap Sig; Gerald Griffin, Mangum, and Jippy Carter, Law Sch.

Future events were discussed for the rest of the year in both the Intramural activities and the Outing Club. It was point out that the officers for the Outing Club would be elected at their May 11 meeting.

CHARLIE GRAY IS NEW STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

Young Is Victor In DTH Contest

Davis Young, doubly endorsed and unopposed Daily Tar Heel editor candidate, swept into office last night after a last-ditch write-in campaign failed.

Young will take over management of the Daily Tar Heel beginning with the issue published Tuesday, April 14.

"In the immortal words of Joe Louis,' Young said, " 'It was a tough fight, mom, but I won.' The many write-in votes, for everybody from Fidel Castro to the late Henry Snow, is indicative not only of an opposition that had no effective choice left, but is also a mandate for a decent, honest and respectable newspaper. That is the kind of newspaper I will run."

Young garnered a total of 2,181 votes from 12 of 13 districts reporting by deadline last night. This total also includes absentee votes.

Young was unopposed in the election because all other candidates withdrew.

Dave Jones was the first candidate to oppose Young, who was the first to announce. Later, Harold O'Tuel and Ron Shumate entered the race as co-editor candidates. Jones withdrew from the race in favor of O'Tuel and Shumate.

Young has had previous experience on the Daily Tar Heel as Summer School Weekly editor, feature editor and reporter.

RED CROSS INTERVIEW

Hazel Breland, personnel assistant for the Southeastern area of the American Red Cross, Atlanta, Ga., will be at the Placement Service today and Friday to interview graduating students interested in various positions in the field of welfare and recreation.

Careers in the Red Cross are open to both men and women with the following general requirements: U. S. citizenship, good health and worldwide mobility. Preference is given to college graduates.

Student Body Votes Single Spring Ballot

In other early results, Angus Duff appeared to have beaten Tom Cordle for the presidency of the Carolina Athletic Association, while Charlie Graham held a narrower margin over Dick Rhyne for head cheerleader.

Kay Boortz won a landslide 430-278 victory over Carrington Wilson for Women's Residence Council Chairman, while Catherine Bolton won 365-351 over Martha Custis for Women's Athletic Association President. There will probably be a revote on this election because Martha Custis' name was not on the absentee ballots.

Student Party Legislature Victor

The Student Legislature will meet tonight at 7:30 in New East to discuss the $123,000 student government budget. This is the last meeting of the 26th Student Legislature.

The new legislature will be different.

It will be different because for the first time in the last three years the Student Party has achieved a majority of the Student Legislature, and they did it in a year when they lost practically every other office on campus.

The SP balance of power in the Student Legislature currently stands at 30-20 with one independent, Phil Edwards. This is on the basis of unofficial returns from all legislative districts.

In Dorm Men's I Swag Grimsley (SP) won over David Rubinstein (UP) for the one year seat, and Taylor McMillan (SP) defeated William Louis Craig Jr. (UP) for the six-month seat.

The Student Party took two of the four seats open in Dorm Men's III. For the two 1-year seats Dan Brown (SP) and Ray Goodman (SP) defeated Phil Edwards (Ind) and Ronnie Millican and Vincent Mulleri, both of the University Party.

Edwin Cox and Bill Lamm under the Student Party banner took the two 1-year seats in Dorm Men's IV over Bill Bates and Ward Purrington of the University Party.

Student Party also took the two 2-year seats in Dorm Men's VI with Sherman Kennedy and Bob Thompson winning over Allen Cronenburg Jr. and Darden Eure of University Party.

Town Men's I went University Party because the one Fred Lavery and Richard Overstreet, running for a year seat and a six-month seat respectively, were the only candidates.

Peyton Hawes (UP) and Jack Lawing (UP) defeated Roy Park Jr. (Ind.) for the two 2-year seats from Town Men's II.

The University Party went all the way in Town Men's III with its candidates Frank Eagles, Gordon Street, Al Walters and Neal Boden defeating Stan Black, Frank Elkins, Barry Zaslav and Bob Ney, all of the Student Party. Boden filled the six-month seat while the others took the three 1-year seats.

In Town Men's IV the Student Party took five of the six seat open with Jim Blue, Don Dotson Bill Mallory, Bob Pierce winning. Bill Young (UP) also won; John Lyon was the losing candidate.

Linda Biser took the Student Party to victory in Dorm Women's I by defeating Anne Terry (UP) while Nancy Baker (UP) won in Dorm Women's II over Betty Jean Baxter (SP).

Maxine Greenfield and Dixie Jackson, both University Party candidates, were the only candidates for the two 2-year seats in Town Women's district.

Requests for additions to the Carolina Quarterly budget are expected to be heard at tonight's legislature session.

Other bills expected to be discussed include Ann Harvey's (UP) bill to do away with interviews for Honor Council jurors, Norman B. Smith's bill to authorize the Women's Residence Council to collect social fees, and Jim Crownover's drinking policy bill.

Smith Senior Prexy

The new senior class vice-president is Dick Pattisall (UP). He won by the narrow margin of 32 votes. Pattisall's opponent was David Evans (SP). The total vote was 492-461.

Cynthia Grant (UP) won the post of senior class secretary over Martha Morgan (SP). The margin was 57 votes, 507-450.

Another UP candidate, Jim Crawford, won in the voting for treasurer of the senior class. Crawford's margin of victory was 145 votes, 546-401.

The only Student Party candidate for a senior class office to win was Bunky Jester. She defeated Marion Hays (UP) for social chairman. The vote was 492-447, a margin of 45.

STUDENT ART SHOW WINNER

Dorms Vote Today

Run-off elections for men's dormitory offices and for Interdormitory Council representatives will be held today from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The offices to be run-off are as follows:

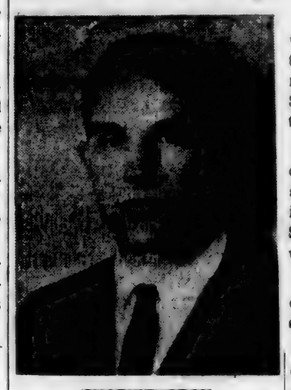
University Party Sweeps Offices



CHARLIE GRAY
. . . Student Body President

The University Party smashed its way into total power in the executive department of Student Government, as Charlie Gray, David Grigg, Sue Wood, and Bob Bingham all won their bids for election.

Gray led the ticket, pulling way early in the balloting to win a decisive victory over Student Party presidential nominee Norman B. Smith. Smith was losing by over 700 votes with one district to be reported.

In one of the closer races of the evening, Sue Wood topped Ann Lucas for secretary, in a race that was decided by the votes of Town Men's II district.

Gray, currently treasurer of the student body, thanked the students who placed their confidence in him. He cited in particular his campaign staff including Al Goldsmith, Tom Efird, Sandy Trotman, Joe Herndon, Katie Stewart, Hamp Lefler and Bill King.

Smith, chairman of the committee on state affairs, thanked those who helped him in his unsuccessful campaign and offered his "sincere" congratulations to Charlie Gray for his victory.

This was the first time in three years that the University Party won more than one of the four top offices, and it marked the first time in five years that the University Party succeeded in electing a president.

Nine Elected To Judicial Positions

Nine new members of the three major campus judicial bodies were elected in the annual spring elections Tuesday.

From a field of 14 candidates, these three coeds were chosen for the Women's Honor Council: Sophie Martin (343 votes), LuRuth Sutton (299) and Diana Harmon (232). Runnerups were Tina Baensch with 196 votes and Julie Redhead with 190.

Elected to three senior seats on the Student Council were Neal Boden, John Ray and Wayne Venters. They had no opposition.

With three districts not reported, the following were leading in the race for three seats on the Men's Honor Council: Bill Crutchfield with 934, George Campbell with 741 votes, Jim Thompson with 680. David Harper had 642; Jimmy Smalley 581; Joe Friedberg 495 and Lloyd Horton 475. Dorm Men's II, III and V had not been tabulated when these results were taken.

U.N. Assembly First Session Starts Today

McNeil Smith, Greensboro attorney, will open the United Nations Model Assembly here today with a keynote address at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Preceding this first session of the Model Assembly tonight, the Cosmopolitan Club will entertain the delegates at a tea at Graham Memorial from 3 to 6 this afternoon. Foreign students will be present to greet and talk with the visiting delegates.

Main speaker for Friday night's session will be George V. Allen, director of the U. S. Information Agency.

Over 130 representatives from 20 colleges and universities in North Carolina and Virginia are here for the Model Assembly, which continues through Saturday.

Today's schedule also includes economic, political, disarmament committee meetings from 9 to 10 p.m. A reception for delegates, advisers, and speakers in Graham Memorial will end the day's events.

Warner Wells To Address Med Students

Dr. Warner Wells, translator-editor of the "Hiroshima Diary," will speak tonight at 7:30 in 100 Hanes Hall on "Implications of Nuclear Warfare."

Present assistant professor of surgery in the UNC Medical School, Dr. Wells received most of his formal education at Duke University. He served in the Army Medical Corps and later became surgery consultant for the U. S. Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission in Japan.

Dr. Wells' talk tonight will be drawn from his experience in Hiroshima and Nagasaki and will include both physiological and sociological aspects. He is being sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Delta, honorary pre-medical and pre-dental fraternity.

Kappa Delta Elects

Miss Roberts and the following officers were recently elected: Melissa Osborne, vice president; Ann Walston, secretary; Peggy Bradford, treasurer; Mary Sue Hannah, assistant treasurer.

Barbara Meitzler, editor; Jane Durham, rush chairman; Doddie Waldman, assistant rush chairman; Judy Scott, recommendations; Barbara Pletsch, house manager; Jean Whiting, social chairman, and Mary Lou Barreras, Panhellenic Council representative.

Henderson: A Wedding In An Ocean Of Turmoil

By RON SHUMATE

(This is a third in a series about the Harriet Henderson strike. The series was compiled by reporter Ron Shumate and photographer Peter Ness)

The date was Friday, April 2, 1959. The time was 3:30 p.m. The place was TWUA local 584, Henderson, N. C. The sky was clear, the sun was shinning and a breeze was blowing.

A large crowd was gathered outside the dingy white union hall. Cars filled the lot near the building and lined the streets.

Inside, people were jammed into every available space. People sat on the long counter used for distributing food to hungry strikers. Others sat on boxes of the food. Feet scuffled on the dirty concrete floor. The pungent odor of sweat drifted through the already humid room.

But this was not a rally for frantic, tired strikers. This was a wedding.

And across the street, some 50 yards distant, stood a neat, clean brick building. This was a church.

The two newly-weds came out of the dimly-lit concrete building into the bright sunlight. They blinked, stared blankly at the crowd surrounding them and tried to get through.

A State Highway Patrolman was taking pictures with a movie camera. Other people were snapping shots with all sorts of cameras.

The crowd finally let the new couple through. Then, as the pair walked dazedly toward their car, the crowd followed them — much like they would have followed a movie star.

With the stunned expressions still on their faces, the couple managed to get into the back seat of a green Chevrolet. The trooper took one last shot at them—with his camera.

"They'd postponed their wedding for 21 weeks," the Highway Patralman said. "They wanted to get married after the strike was over, but when the negotiations broke down yesterday (Thursday) they decided to go ahead with it today."

A few hours later, another Highway Patrolman said he wondered what it was going to be like for the two to tell their children they were married in a union hall—by a justice of the peace.

The couple, according to a trooper and several srikers, had wanted to get married on the picket line, but State Highway Patrolmen had stopped them from doing so, as the large crowd would have blocked traffic.

Immediately after the wedding was over a car-load of women stopped and chatted with the trooper who had the movie camera. Another car-load of teen-age girls raced by shouting "Give us a ticket." The strikers taunted the patrolmen, but at the same time seemed cautious and aloof.

The union halls, one in North and one in South Henderson, are built of concrete blocks. Both are painted white, with "TWUA" emblazoned in large red letters on the front—in addition to the num- of the local.

South Henderson's union building is a two-story affair nestled in a little valley in the heart of the mill area. It is only a short distance from he mill. Two large plate glass "picture" windows are on each side of the door.

Upon entering the front of the building, one sees a long counter used each Tuesday to distribute about $2,100 worth of food. Stacked in front of the counter are about 260 boxes. These boxes contain eggs, coffee, beans, peaches, macaroni, corn beef stew, syrup, canned milk, lard, soap powder and other things. The opposite wall is lined with hundreds of bags of potatoes. The union is also furnishing the strikers with meat, flour and other staples..

To the right, as one enters the room, is an old, dirty, broken-down blue couch. Farther along the right side of the room is a large table. On this table are scattered various papers, bulletins and a box of union songs, mimeographed on pink, green and yellow sheets of paper.

A telephone is also on the table. Over the telephone on a bulletin board, is a handwritten note: "No threats over the telephone, please."

The "boss" of 578 is a grizzled old man, about 50. Part of his teeth are gone, he wears a dark blue cap, his shirt sleeves are rolled up, showing his stocky wrists. He needs a shave.

He is known to young and old alike as "Johnny."

He is in charge of the distribution of food to the strikers. Each striker has a card that is stamped each time he received food. If someone should need additional food during the week, he may obtain it from his union hall.

He talked rather softly of following some strike-breakers, who from Virginia, and warning them not to come back to work in Henderson. But, he said, they came back anyway.

Some of the strike-breakers drive from Virginia to Henderson and back Monday through Friday —a total of about 1,000 miles a week. Other strike-breakers come to work at Henderson from within North Carolina.

Prior to a union meeting, which was closed to the public, the people sang songs in the upstairs room, where the meeting was held.

The head of local 578, Charles Ranes, said he had no objections to anyone taking pictures after the meeting——if the strikers consented. Near the end of the meeting, as the sergeant-at-arms said later, Ranes asked the group if they would agree to having their pictures taken. The did. Later, a photographer from the Dave Garroway Show made some movies of the group and of the union building itself.

About 125 unionists attended the meeting. Among them were two or three Negroes. The Negroes stood, along with about 25 or 30 white men, near the back of the room. They smiled and joked with the other strikers around them.

After the meeting, the strikers sang more songs—union songs.

And even as they sang together in harmony, they knew their voices would never blend with those on the ther side of the fence — the fence surrounding the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mill.

Election

By the time this is read, the ballots will have been counted and the campus will know the identity of the new president and other student officers.

There will be another answer supplied by the vote. It will be the answer to the question of whether the perceptual horizons of the student body are somewhat larger than the relatively small issues of deferred rush and mixed honor councils. It is a question of whether the students have a realization of a world larger than that of their immediate surroundings, and whether they are cognizant that this world can directly affect their immediate being.

The answer is known, and the student body will have to live with the result.

Literature

Every year there are promises of a clean campaign, and every year these promises are violated. One such violation occurred earlier in the campaign when the University Party sent out letters to various groups on campus.

The second and most flagrant case of dirty campaign literature was the letter which was circulated in certain areas of the campus concerning the number of Pi Kappa Alpha's in prominent places in student government.

Whether a person lives in a dormitory, a fraternity, or a group of people live in the same fraternity has no bearing on any individual's competence. Each individual should be jduged according to his own merits. If the PIKA's have all these competent people, and if they are as competent as is possible, then both the PIKA's and the campus are lucky.

Letters of this sort serve only to alienate people who believe in honest campaigns, and will harm the person who the letter writer's might want to support. One of these years, perhaps, the campus will get wise to itself, and realize that this type of campaign material does no good.

A Regret

The editor will be sorry when he leaves Sunday that he will not be able to welcome the next lovely Chi Omega on the G. M. Calendar personally.

Desegregation

The New Republic

We took exception (NR, March 30) to the implication of neutrality in Sen Lyndon Johnson's proposal that the facilities of a federal mediation service be extended to communities where peaceful relations are endangered by disagreements about the Constitution of the United States. As our support of the Douglas-Celler bill, expressed at the same time, alone sufficiently demonstrates, this does not mean that we believe the Supreme Court's deseggregation order presents just a problem in law enforcement. On the contrary, we have repeatedly said that in this instance the law is not simply "the law," to be enforced by command and coercion like a traffic regulation. We have expressed the opinion that ultimately the validity of the Court's integration decision "is a function of its rightness, not merely of its pronouncement." Hence, as Mr. Thorson rightly said in our correspondence columns last week, "the techniques of ethics and politic . . . reasoned persuasion" are not only admissible; they are indispensable.

But — and this is of the first importance — conciliation and persuasion can come into play only before the issuance, or within the terms, of a court decree. There can be no negotiation about obeying a specific decree that says admit these named children to this school, or produce a plan by a certain date, or the like. To a command of this sort, resistanee is insupportable. For such, as Lincoln saw in opposing the Dred Scott case, "are the uses of decisions of courts." The Johnson proposal is ambiguous on this point.

Secondly, no effort at persuasion and conciliation can be fruitful unless is begins by expressing the firm support of the other branches of the federal government for the basic moral principle of the Court's integration decision; unless, that is (and Lincoln also saw this distinction clearly), Congress and the President support that decision not merely as, for the time being, "the law," but as a wise and just and permanent "political rule." Of this there is no hint in the Johnson proposal.

Opera

Joel Chadabe

This is the first in a series of two articles dealing with the opera, "Whatever Passes By The Paths Of The Sea," written by Tom Rice, a music graduate student, and Russell Link, a drama graduate student. The opera will be produced in the Playmakers' Theatre on the nights of April 18 and 19 at 8 p.m., and is financed by the Music and Drama Committees of Graham Memorial.

The opera was brone in the form of a one-act play, written by Russell Link last spring for Mr. Patterson's playwriting course. Deciding to turn it into a libretto, he asked Tom Rice to read it in September and by October the music was begun. As Tom comments on the partnership, "Russ mentioned he had a script and suggested that I might be interested in setting it to music, I wasn't. He then mentioned it would be produced. I was."

The plot deals with the Andromeda-Perseus-Medusa legend from Greek mythology, but the chronology of events as they occur in the original legend is changed. In the legend Perseus rescues Andromeda after he has slaughtered the Medusa, who was a mythical snake-monster, whereas in the opera Andromeda is cast under a spell by the Medusa and Perseus kills the Medusa to rescue her. This was changed, according to Russ, because "it seemed a shame to me not to use the exciting character potential of the Medusa, and since the play was in one act, I had to distort legend to incorporate her."

Opera is the combining of all arts into one artistic medium and, as such, it involves music as the chief vehicle for the drama, combined with the visual effects of the graphic arts in costumes, scenery, and lighting. "Whatever Passes By The Paths Of The Sea" deals primarily with situations that are not dependent upon a specific place or time, but there is a large element of spectacle in it. It is replete with such things as Medusa's head being cut off, stars bursting, the murder of Cassiopeia, Andromeda's mother, and the action moves from Ethiopia to a rock in the middle of the sea and back to Ethiopia. The music is dynamic and affecting, sensual and melodic. The costumes are bright, and the sets (miniatures of which will be on exhibit in the library next week) are dazzling. But the opera breaks from the tradition of grand opera, whereas grand opera may take from three to four hours for a performance, utilize a full symphony orchestra, chorus, ballet, an intricate plot and 4 to 8 major and minor singing roles, this production was concieved as a chamber opera. It is about an hour in lenght, uses an instrumental ensemble of 11 performers, has no chorus, has five singing roles and a fairly simple plot.

The relationship of the work to the legend grew clear only after the music was begun. As Russ recently described it to me, "They are all contemporary characters with Greek legendary names, operating within an atmosphere of emotional disorder. The problems are those of vanity, greed, desire. The use of legend then is to detach these people from reality and to create an artifical atmosphere of surrealism. Bob LaVine, who designed the sets and costumes, and Tom both helped in putting the play in its proper perspective. The main point of the story is Cassiopeia's destruction. She is vanity incarnate, and Andromeda, Perseus and the Medusa, which in the opera is an unreal vision of Andromeda's, all contribute to her tragedy. The paradox is that this action is set in an elegent environment, yet permeated with the evil of lustful, sensual people. The sensuality has become degenerate."

Tom put the story into more human terms. As he worked on the music, its meaning became more and more clear. "The script suggested to me certain oriental qualities. I attempted to get certain of these qualities across by using florid, melismatic passages frequently throughout the opera. But the main points of the musical structure are realized through its formal aspects. As a script, the story suggested to me a study of a group of people in a state of dissipation, a culminating incident and their final destruction. From the point of view of the music, as the action progresses the forms become tighter and reach a climax at the ballet scene on the Medusa rock where the form is a fugue over a ground bass. Destruction follows immediately afterwards."

The opera was finished on New Year's Day. It was written with the singers in mind, and aside from minor changes that had to be made in casting, it has been rehearsing for over a month. Dancing plays an important role in the production, setting the mood rather than telling the story.

The cast consists of Ethel Casey singing Cassiopeia, Rebecca Carnes singing Andromeda, James Gibbs singing Cepheus (Andromeda's father), Marilyn Zachau singing the Medusa, and Hunter Tillman singing Perseus. Tom is conducting, and Russ is staging. Bob LaVine did the sets and costumes.

Letters From Two Tar Heel Readers

Editor:

Bob Noble's satiric letter from Germany (Tar Heel, April 2) has once again pointed out the degenerate nature of our so-called university. It is difficult to imagine that when the universities were first beginning the students seem to have had some conception of why they had come to the university. Student did indeed control the school, only they did not spend there authority establishing campus codes honorary societies, social clubs, and similar superfluous mess. They used their authority to control the professors. They fined them if they came to class late or delivered ill-prepared lectures; they fined them if the lectures were read to rapidly. Conditions have changed, but the one essential element should not have changed, viz. The passionate desire of the students to learn. It is obvious to anyone who thinks (and there are precious few of those) that the great majority of students on this campus have no real desire to learn anything. One need only observe what is supposedly the center of this campus, or any campus, the library. It seems that half the people who go to Wilson Library, go simply to socialize; to try to impress someone of the opposite sex. Their endless noise not only predominates the lobby, but also the reserve room and the "group study room." It is an all too common sight to see five or six fraternity "men" flocked around the table of one of our typical Carolina Co-eds; each one trying frantically to be "cuter" than the other. The plain fact is that the days of getting any serious studying done in the library are gone; the dormitories long ago succumbed to the noisy mass, and conditions will be even worse next year with thein creased enrollment. One more little asset of our "center of learning" has washed away, a place to study....

Equally disgusting is the fact that our administration is doing absolutely nothing to alleviate the problem; in fact, they are making it worse. God only knows how many locked classrooms are on this campus that should be filled at night with serious students. I should certainly like to know WHY these rooms are kept locked when in ninety percent of them there is nothing that anyone could steal, unless we include the pieces of broken chalk. If the administration thinks that the few classrooms that they do begrudgingly allow to remain open are eliminating the problem, they are not thinking much better than our socialites in the library. Several of the janitors have informed me that the reason they lock the rooms is that students "mess-up" the rooms by altering the arrangement of the chairs and throwing cigarettes on the floor. I really hate for these janitors to have "their" rooms messed-up, but it does seem to me that if the purpose of this place is to study, the administration might see to it that the rooms are made available even if they have to hire a thousand new janitors or simply leave the rooms messy. No student is going to be too disturbed by coming into an untidy class room, but there are many students who are desparate for a quiet place to study; the same students who refuse to be swallowed by this passive machine which our university has become; students who can and will find a place to study even if it means finding another university. Providing this space should be the responsibility of the administration, but perhaps some of our present politicians could inspire a little more enthusiasm if they would talk less about "securing Hear-Hear phone booths for the dorms" and more about assuring students of places to study.

HENRY SIDES

Editor:

Tuesday morning it appears that the Student Party, after having pledged a "clean campaign," has published a circular concerning the candidates for student office from among the membership of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity. The Student Party has by this act further demonstrated that it is truly an honorable organization dedicated to honesty, integrity and fair dealing by making this release which is, no doubt, meant to appeal to all "intelligent" students. Why should we allow a group of University Party candidates who cherish and pledge to uphold the traditions and high achievements of our great University to administer student affairs when we han have radical, revolutionary, and unpremeditated leadership which so well exemplifies the clique in control of the Student Party? We are not so naive as to bring government to the campus which is truly representative of the feelings and desires of the overall student body. Of course, we want our student government to be controlled by the group that has such a heterogeneous attitude that it attempts to take a stand on everything and promotes but little effective, far-sighted policy on anything. Indeed, if we the citizens of U. N. C. want to be engulfed in the wake of the great scow Student Party, we should have gone to the polls and voted for the type of short-sighted, primitive leadership that we will get if the "Student" Party is elected to the important offices.

By the time this letter is published, the results will be known. This letter can have little effect on the outcome. However, if we want a student administration which will gain the respect and integrity in the eyes of all intelligent people who are governed by it and all those who come in contact with it, then we will voted in favor of the University Party Candidates who are progressive enough to effect change where it is truly needed and realistic enough not to undermine those facets of student life which are already functioning to the students' best advantage.

A new issue of THE CAROLINA QUARTERLY has been published: a fact which may be counted upon to arouse very little excitement in the breasts of Carolina students everywhere. Despite the general apathy, however, the QUARTERLY deserves a review on this page, not only because it is the TAR HEEL's respectable sister publication, nor because it is partially —though unwittingly — sponsored in part by the student body, but because in any serious assessment of student activities on the campus of a university, such a venture as the QUARTERLY is of prominent importance.

So a review is in order, and, to be sure, a review wil be forthcoming: for the time being, however, it will have to wait. The QUARTERLY now faces a problem which far transcends the problem of the current issue, of the particular faults and merits of its articles, stories and poems, and which threatens the very existence of the magazine. In short, the Budget Committee, chaired by Charlie Gray (who may well be President of the Student Body by the time this article is published) has recommended a $700 cut in the QUARTERLY budget for the coming year. In effect, this means that the magazine will be able to appear only twice in any reasonable format, instead of the four times implied by its title or the three times to which it has been traditionally limited by the exigencies of time and money.

The Budget Committee's recommendation means that the QUARTERLY will never have a chance to achieve a status in American literary circles comparable to that of more established "little magazines," almost all of which are traditionally quarterlies. But this is not the most important implication of the recommended cut: to become concerned with the fortunes of this magazine itself and its contents is, unfortunately, the happy priviledge of the few. The majority, involved elsewhere, may well be justified in their apatly for the issue-by-issue vicissitudes to which such magazines are necessarily subject.

The Budget Committee recommendation should be a matter for general concern only because THE CAROLINA QUARTERLY represents the University in which we are all in some sense involved. This is not to say simply that the QUARTERLY makes an impression on the outside world, that it "represents" us in that sense, although it does to some extent. Nor is it to say that the QUARTERLY "represents" the University by publishing campus writing, for this it has never been intended to do, nor could it do this without becoming a qualitatively different magazine.

Rather, THE CAROLINA QUARTERLY represents this University as an exemplification of the sort of human activity which we, who comprise this university, consider worthwhile. As a magazine devoted to publishing the best literature available to it, and to encouraging new literature by giving it a voice, the Quarterly exists as one element in our total image of ourselves. Every activity sponsored by students here "represents" us: the sum of our activities here is the sum of what we take a university to be, and our conception of our university reflects our image of ourselves.

Is it possible, then, that we cannot — each and every one of us — find among our own particular interests enough essential sympathy with the sort of human activity which the QUARTERLY represents to warrant its sponsorship?

If not, we might well wonder what we are doing at a university, which is traditionally dedicated to the examination of the whole range of existence by whatever illumination human genius can devise. Certainly the literary arts are among the most revealing sources of such illumination, especially for those examinations which look inward rather than outward from man.

We might well wonder, too, what right we have to petition the legislature for funds for our university, when we — who are far less accountable for our spending than the legislature — will not spend about thirty cents each (one beer) in the same effort. There is no reason under the sun why public support should be given to a university which is at the same time being undermined by its students.

Any legislature — as well as any faculty members or students who are interested — cannot be blamed for losing interest in a university that does not have even the full support of its Student Government. A university whose students are willing to sell themselves short is in a poor position to refuse the short end of the stick from the legislature.

If we do not think enough of ourselves to support such educational institutions as THE CAROLINA QUARTERLY and The Carolina Forum (also the object of a major cut by Mr. Grey's committee) then why should anyone else be concerned?

The budget is scheduled for debate in the student legislature this evening at 7:30. Those who are interested in these and other budget cuts might well attend; or contact Mr. Gray, Rudy Edwards, and the other members of the Budget Committee ,to voice their protests.

Frosh Beat Oak Ridge 7-5

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

The Carolina Freshmen had to choke off a brief two-run rally in the ninth inning to preserve a 7-5 victory over Oak Ridge Military Academy here Wednesday afternoon. Two hits and a long fly ball plus two walks and a hit batsman brought Oak Ridge to within two runs of the young Tar Heels before Nick Warren came in and forced Boyles to ground out, ending the game.

The Frosh solved starting pitcher Joel Kiger's fast ball early for a quick four run lead, chiefly on the strength of Bob Sherrod's bases-loaded triple down the left field line. Sherrod himself scored on a wild pitch before the inning was over.

The second inning saw Carolina chalk up two more on Larry Neal's single, Cronin Byrd's double, and a fly ball by Jerry Evans. In the top half of the inning, the Frenchman had lost the services of second-baseman Neal Anderson when he broke his ankle sliding into second.

Red-headed Dave Murr was the Frosh starter and he pitched superlative ball during his four-inning stint, giving up four singles while striking out seven. He received credit for the win. Louis Holcomb giving up the first Academy run and Crotts the next two on Kiger's two-run triple in the seventh. Krow and Warren worked the almost disastrous ninth.

For the game, the Heels garnered thirteen hits with Sherrod and Byrd the leaders with three each. Sherrod brought in four big Carolina runs with his timely hits. Kiger and David Deal led Oak Ridge at the plate, also with three apiece.

The Freshmen's next appearance will be in Wake Forest on Saturday afternoon in the initial conference scrap of the year. They return next Tuesday with another conference battle, this time against the Duke Freshmen.

Majors Open Season Today

The big leagues open the baseball season earlier than ever this year with two special previews Thursday at Washington and Cincinnati. The bulk of the teams start Friday with a seven-game schedule. The two-day program is expected to draw about 267,000 fans.

With the early start the owners can cram an extra Sunday into the schedule and cash in on an extra weekend of network Game-Of-The-Week telecasts.

The Baltimore Orioles, pace setters in the exhibition game season, play at Washington where 25,000 are expected to see the presidential opener. They won't see President Eisenhower, however, for he is on a golfing vacation. Vice President Nixon will throw out the first ball.

Golfers Beat Princeton 32-4 For Fifth Straight

Medalists were Ed Justa and John McKee with even par 72's. Number five man Hugh Goodman halved with Gil Johnson for the only non-win by a Carolina player.

It was an unusual 8-man match, which accounted for the high score.

Don McMillan (C) defeated Chick Reeder 3-0
Best ball - Carolina 3-0
Bob Galloway (C) defeated Paul Earl 3-0

UNC-USC Track Meet May Produce New Mile Record

The ACC mile record of 4:06 may be seriously threatened here Saturday when the track teams of North and South Carolina clash at 3:00 p.m.

The Gamecock's Billy Latham, defending ACC mile champion, and the Tar Heels' Wayne Bishop, conference 2-mile winner last year, are slated to compete in both long runs. The two seniors, who have faced each other on numerous occasions in the past, are likely to be in top condition. One could, by "opening up" early, either force or be forced to cover the distance in near-record time.

Latham's best time thus far has been 4:12.7 while Bishop's top mark was 4:13.8. But both boys have tended to hold back until the final lap for their all-out effort. Should either decide to begin his finishing "kick' premature to his usual pattern, the standard posted by Maryland's Burr Grim in 1956 may fall. Both speedsters have run the mile distance in fine time, and yet finished with stamina to spare.

Both squads will display numerous other outstanding tracksters. Dave Scurlock, who set a new UNC record in the 440 last week, will carry the Tar Heel colors in that event and also the 880. His 47.9 time against Clemson was only .2 off the existing ACC record.

Big 4 Rod & Gun Meet Set

The third annual Big Four Rod and Gun is scheduled to be held on April 14. The met will be held at the Durham Wildlife Club, and is sponsored by the UNC Intramural Office and the Outing Club along with the Durham Wildlife Club.

Last year the meet was won by N. C. State College, but only two schools were entered in the event. This year both Duke and Wake Forest have indicated that they will participate in the meet.

The four events in this year's event will be bait casting, target rifle, archery trap shooting. The captains from UNC for these events are: Tommy Wellons in the bait casting, John Crawford in target rifle, Howard Lewis in archery and Gay Cowan in the trap event. These boys are also the chief competitors from UNC.

Practice for archery and bait casting will be held on Thursday April 9 at 7:00 in the Tin Can. Those who wish to practice for trap and target rifle should contact the captains of these events.

All events in the meet will begin at 2:00 p.m. and should be over by 5:00. Those who wish rides should contact the Intramural Office.

Because of the time limit, a student may enter only one event; however, each school may have as many contestants in one event as they wish. The team scoring will be 7, 5, 3, 1 for the top four places in each event.

In the target rifle, the guns will be furnished by the ROTC, and only those on the ROTC rifle teams are enligible for the events.

In case of rain on the day of the event, it will be rescheduled for the next day, April 15.

GERMANS WITH KENTON AT UNC—Spring's arrival in Chapel Hill will be celebrated by the German Club this weekend.

The Saturday afternoon concert in Memorial Hall will have Kenton as well as the Four Freshmen, vocal group.

The UMOC deadline has been extended until noon Saturday by Alpha Phi Omega President Randal Etheridge.

"We feel that many dormitories and fraternities could arrange with the Photo Lab for the three prints necessary to enter if we gave them another day, "Etheridge said.

Beginning Monday students will be able to vote for the "Ugliest Man on the Campus" in a contest sponsored by Carolina's service fraternity.

Polls will be maintained at the Scuttlebutt, Y-court and the Pine Room each afternoon. Students will vote for their choice after studying the 5 by 7 inch photographs displayed by depositing a penny for every vote they wish to register.

"Several fraternities already have turned in the three photographs of their most hidious examples of the human race," affirmed Etheridge on Tuesday. He went on to explain that any interested group could obtain the necessary photographs of their contestant from the Photo Lab for "about $2.50."

Entries should be brought to the APO office located in the basement of Smith Dorm by Friday afternoon. The winner will be presented a destinctive mahogany plaque bearing his name and honor together with a caricature of the Ugly Man as seen on posters on the campus.

3611 Cast Ballots To Place University Party In Power

Legislature Passes 59-60 Budget In Record Time

By STAN BLACK

The last session of the Twenty-sixth Student Legislature passed the 1959-60 student government budget in record time last night.

Only five changes of any importance were made in the recommendations of the Budget Committee, of which Charlie Gray was the chairman. As the budget stands now, there is $123,000 estimated income and $119,931.42 estimated expenses, leaving an unappropriated balance of $3,068.58 for leeway operations by the Student Legislature next year.

Items entirely eliminated from the budget in committee include the University Club, the Exchange Scholarship Program, and the Ram and Ewe. The Carolina Quarterly was cut to two issues a year, and the Graduate Club speaker program, which closely paralleled the work of the Carolina Forum, was completely cut.

The Interdormitory Council's appropriation for social activities was increased by $1100 over last year up to $2300, on the basis of good handling this year. The Graham Memorial and Yack amounts were also raised $1,000 over last year in committee, due to increased operations. Most other recommendations were substantially in line with the prior year's budget.

Acting last night, the Student Legislature did revise the appropriations of several organizations as recommended by Gray's committee. The number of delegates sent to the National Students Association convention was reduced in the interests of economy and efficiency of service.

About $500 in travel money was taken from the Debate Squad and given to the Carolina Forum for an increased program of guest speakers. In order to maintain a respectable unappropriated balance Jim Crownover suggested that the Carolina Symposium figure be reduced by $250, with the understanding that if more was needed, it could be asked for.

The budget was finally passed with the comment that the unappropriated balance this coming year is the smallest in recent years. Student government leaders have noted

Common Government Necessary--Smith

"People can't live in close contact without fighting, unless they live under a common government," MacNeill Smith of Greensboro, a leader in the world government organization in North Carolina, said here Thursday.

Smith was the keynote speaker at the first plenary session in Memorial Hall Thursday night for the United Nations Model Assembly.

In his address he said a way to prevent wars is to live under a system of single government on an international scale, some what the same way that people have similar governments in towns, states and nations.

"The people of the world are now in daily contact with one another," said the Greensboro attorney, "a result of trade and scientific improvements in transportation and communication. Whether we like it or not, it's so . . . .

"The people of the world, living in close daily contact can't get along without fighting, sooner or later, unless they live under a common government. It is naive to think otherwise. But in spite of two World Wars, many people haven't seen it yet."

Smith advocated to the assembly a revision of the United Nations to lead towards stronger world government in endeavors to reduce armaments and taxation, as well as to find peace, prosperity and freedom.

The model assembly's economic, political and disarmament committees will meet today from 9 a.m. to 12 noon with an hour coffee break at 10 a.m.

The committees will resume after lunch from 2 until 5:30 p.m. The second plenary session will be in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

George V. Allen will be the main speaker. There will be a reception for him afterwards in Graham Memorial.

Saturday's schedule calls for the third plenary session in Gerrard Hall from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

The election of CCUN officers will be at 2 p.m. in Gerrard. An United Nations movie will be shown in Carroll Hall following the elections.

Dormitory Officers Elected

In the run-off elections Thursday for men's dormitory presidents and Interdormitory Council representatives, the following were selected:

Nelson Lowe, president of Cobb; Peter Williams, president, and Larry Stacy, IDC representative, for Lewis; Ron Britt, president of Parker, and Joe Davenport, IDC representative for Stacy.

Another run-off election will be held Tuesday between Al Haines and Bill Williams for IDC representative in Grimes.

IDC President Otto Funderburk announced that he was satisfied with the turnouts at the polls Tuesday and Thursday.

The University Party managed to sweep almost everything in sight as they whipped the Student Party for all offices, save the Student Legislature and one senior class office.

The University Party also took the vice president, secretary and treasurer positions in the executive department of student government.

The closest race of the big four was for secretary. Final tabulations gave Sue Wood 1,809 votes to Ann Luca's 1,666, a margin of 243.

Bob Bingham won the office of treasurer over Erwin Fuller 1,878 to 1,522.

Unopposed for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, Davis Young received 2350. There were over 600 votes cast for write-ins with Henry S. Snow taking 54 of them.

Bob Austin and Tom Overman took a lead of 1629 over Mike Smith as co-editors oft he Yackety-Yack. Austin and Overman had 2451 votes to Smith's 822.

Bill Crutchfield led for Men's Honor Council with 201 votes and was followed closely by David Harper with 162 and George Campbell with 146 for the two other Honor Council seats.

BULLETIN

Erwin Fuller was elected Student Council Chairman last night, as the 1958-59 council performed its last official act.

The council also selected Joe Warner as clerk for the next year.

Glee Club Plans Concert

A choral concert by the Woman's College Choir from Greensboro and the UNC Glee Club will be given Sunday at 3 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Under the direction of Robert Morris from Woman's College and Joel Carter of UNC, the program will feature Villa-Lobos "Mass in Honor of Saint Sebastian," which will be sung by the the combined choirs of more than 100 voices.

This rarely performed work will be accompanied by violinists Midgie Earnhardt, James Holmes and Theodore Quast; violist Hans-Karl Filtz, and bassoonists Martha Jane Gilreath and Frank Starbuck.

The Woman's College group, conducted by Dr. Morirs and accompanied by pianist Joyce Boone, will open the program with choral works by Bach, Brahms, Donovan and Bartok.

The UNC Glee Club, with Dr. Carter conducting and R. V. Fulk accompanying, will sing a group of spirituals, folk songs and other choruses for male voices by Benjamin Britten, Robert Kurka, Charles Talmadge and R. Vaughan Williams.

Vocal soloists will include sopranos Jo Anne Weber and Jo Ann Curlee; altos Janet Stauffer and Jean W. Penland from Woman's College; tenor, Anthony Lampron; baritones, Kenneth James and Richard Gerrish; and bass, Sidney Huggins from UNC.

Henderson: Not A Mill Community

By RON SHUMATE

(This is the fourth of a series on the town of Henderson in the wake of a four month strike. The series was compiled by Ron Shumate and Peter Ness.)

Henderson is not a mill town.

Henderson is a middle-size town composed a middle-class people—as a whole. The town's population, about 11,000, is composed largely of non-mill workers.

The strike which has been waging for 21 weeks at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mill, the town's largest industry, has put about 1,200 people out of work—just over one tenth of the total population.

But the mill payroll prior to the strike was $64,000 per week. It was dwindled to about $24,000 per week. And the town's economy has suffered.

But apparently no one has gone out of business—unless some of the very small grocers in the heart of the mill area have done so.

Henderson is a quiet town. It has one central street, on which are the large part of the town's businesses. The city hall, police and fire stations, the sheriff's office and other city and county offices are located on this main artery.

But in the northern end of the town are located, in addition to the mill village, several motels, restaurants, the highway patrol headquarters and another mill.

A railroad line runs through the town, a block to the left of the main street, going north. One might even say the railroad serves to split the town into two separate factions, as both the North and South Henderson mill villages lie beyond the railroad.

And, to a great degree, the town is divided into two classes—the mill workers and the remainder of the town.

One Henderson resident put it like this: "Suppose you live in one of the better residential districts of town and date a girl, from South Henderson, for instance. Well, people will say, 'He goes with a girl from South Henderson; but they won't say, 'He goes with Betty' or Susie or whoever it may be. This just gives you one example of the way the town is split up."

The majority of the mill houses are nothing more than simple frame houses—many of them are in need of repair. But some of them have new paint, and have been patched up to look much better than others. In fact, some of them look as nice as some of the homes in the "better" residential sections of town.

The 10 p.m. curfew that was called for Monday by Mayor Carroll Singleton is certainly something that is needed. Though the sidewalks are virtually deserted after sundown, quite a few teen-agers were out in cars. A local drive-in restaurant was crowded with cars about 10:00 last Friday night, but virtually deserted 30 minutes later.

One car-load of teen-agers sped past shouting, "Let's race." Other cars containing teen-agers were seen all over town, but primarily on the main streets—the ones with the most lighting. Very few cars, with the exception of State Highway Patrol cars and the "night watchers," were on the more dimly-lit streets.

Late at night nearly all the motels near the Highway Patrol headquarters in North Henderson were filled with the troopers' silver and black cars.

As we rode around through the mill area, our headlights flicked on a house situated at an intersection where two streets formed a "T." (The house was at the end of the street that formed the base of the "T").

Only a fraction of a minute had passed after our headlights had hit the house, when two large floodlights came on and a man and woman ran out into the yard. As we turned the corner and drove on by, they walked around to the back of the house to watch us. The man held something long and slender in his hands.

Saturday, we stopped at a house that was dynamited several weeks ago. As Pete took some pictures of the house, I waited in the car. Two husky young men, each about 25, strolled over to the car.

"Where you from?" one of them asked.

I told him.

"You don't work over in the mill, do you?" he asked. He emphasized the word "work."

I assured him that I did not work in the mill.

"Well, we just wanted to make sure," he said. "We don't allow none of them workers to take any pictures over here."

Later in the day, as we rode by the North Henderson union hall, we stopped to take a picture of the hall. As we sat there—only for a minute or so—several strikers looked at us, looked at each other and several of them started to walk toward us. That was one time I was thankful for a good right foot and four wheels.

The Election

Once again the pendulum has swung. Perhaps it has swung this time with more of a vengeance than ever before, but it will swing again.

In the final analysis the University Party won a great victory in the election, for although the University Party suffered defeats in the Student Legislature, the Student Party delegation in that body reflects more traditional University Party views rather than Student Party views.

And the people have spoken, as is their way in these affairs. They have told of their present dissatisfaction with change. They have said that they want the campus about as it is now, perhaps with the addition of a washing machine or two, but without significant change.

In the back wash of the University Party's smashing victory, a dynasty has gone down the drain, and in two or three years another will arise to take the place of the present newly-elected, newly formed dynasty. In the meantime, the tenor of the student community will be quiet. To be sure there will be a few panty raids, and an occasional clear loud voice wil be heard in the murky silence, but that will be all. One day will not be like the next, for there is a built-in variety on the campus. It is reflected in the changing seasons and temperatures. It is heard in the melodic interplay of voices, as it is sounded in the drunken, squalid, loud din that permeates the local taverns and the local social societies on Saturday nights. Its beauty and horror will not be much changed by the ballots cast this Tuesday.

Indeed, life will go on much as usual, and although the policies of the student government in power are likely to be vastly different from the previous three administrations, the effect on the guy in the lower quad or the gal in the sorority will not be great. And it is a sad fact of life that this editor must admit, no matter how much he considers student action vital to a college community, that student initiative is not of prime concern to the student. Would that it were so, but since is isn't, one must live with it.

No matter what this editor's feelings towards the University Party is, one thing is clear. The campus will survive the next two or three years. And for those on the other side, the campus will survive the three years after that.

And so the story goes, and perhaps there will never be an end.

Fall-Out

The New Republic

Soviet nuclear tests last fall have doubled the amount of radioactive debris in the earth's stratosphere, Dr. Willard Libby of the Atomic Energy Commission revealed last week, and scientific belief, her eports, is that because they were polar shots most of the "tremendous" amount of radioactive material thus released will fall on the northern hemisphere in 1959. "Care and caution" should be taken about increasing contamination, Dr. Libby warned, because of "uncertainty" over the biological effects of radiation. But he did not tell us how much of a hazard to human life this new fall-out would be—perhaps because neither he nor anyone else is sure.

In all the years of its stewardship the AEC has established no official machinery for setting or enforcing standards as to the total amount of radiation the human body can absorb without danger. Instead, it relies on the National Committee for Radiation Protection, an independent group of scientists in and outside the government, to recommend "maximum permissible concentrations" or MPS's for the various atomic end-products, and uses their MPC scale to weigh the "safety" level of radioactivity in milk, wheat and other foods. Casual critics have pointed out the "variability" of MPC levels. (The MPC for workers in atomic plants has been lowered from 100 rems per year to 60, to 15, and finally to five.) But now the total system is in question. On March 10 the respected chairman of the Public Health Service Advisory Committee on Radiation, Dr. Russell Morgan of Johns Hopkins, told an Atomic Energy Subcommittee that the MPC basis of computing radioactivity is "based on something other than scientific fact . . . . Nowhere is there a concerted effort at providing sound scientific data specifically aimed at the radiation problem.' It is "unfortunate," Dr. Morgan says, that from the days of the Manhattan Project we have chosen "to place both the developmental and safety aspects together in one organization." Perhaps the best way to solve this conflict of interests in the AEC is to transfer the policing power to the Public Health Service, where, by the nature of the problem, it belongs.

Mrs. McThing: 'Ought To Have Stayed In Bed'

Anthony Wolff

For the benefit of those who would like to discount automatically whatever follows, the reviewer obligingly confesses that he missed most of the first scene of Wednesday night's opening of "Mrs. McThing" at the Playmakers Theatre. He overslept. After having seen the play, he only wishes that he had stayed in bed.

Unfortunately, however, the call of duty was louder than the alarm clock, and the reviewer joined the horde of children who made up the first-night audience (evidently the other adults knew better), feeling more like an intruder in the Howdy Doody gallery than anything else.

It is hard to see how "Mrs. McThing" could possibly appeal to any adult intelligence. It seems to be a play written for children by children (how old is Mary Chase, anyway) only to demonstrate the proposition that parents should raise their children the way the children see it, despite the fact that the children are vile little monsters, emergent psychotics and God knows what else .

The play itself is such a dismal affair that it bears little comment. Any attempt to unravel the plot would make it seem more than it is, and it is sufficient to note simply that it has to be seen to be believed, but isn't really worth the trouble. Miss Chase discovered that lunacy paid handsomely with Harvey many years ago. What she failed to understand, evidently, is the difference between lunacy as a device to expose the foibles of human "sanity," and pure childishness.

Even childlike innocence can be used effectively to reveal the artificiality of sophistication, but unadulterated childishness as it appears (a in children, and b in Miss Chase's play), is appealing only in the eyes of the parents of the monster concerned.

Dramatically, the major difficulty with childishness as a theme - aside from the fact that it is a bore - is that it involves putting children on the stage. This is always a risky business, even for so excellent a director as Elia Kazan, who was unable to cope with the problem in "The Dark At The Top Of The Stairs." Only rarely is there a child actor who can give the appearance of anything more human than a good puppet with the director pulling the strings. As an art, acting requires at least some maturity and self-awareness which children by definition lack, and it is an unkind playwright who builds a play around them as Miss Chase does.

A reviewer who feels this way is obviously in difficulty, for he cannot in good conscience review the performances of the minor persons in question, except to affirm that they are in possession of all their members and faculties, that their artistry must remain problematical, and that their poise is of that quality which only child performers possess. The children in this particular production have all of the enumerated qualities.

The adult cast features, most notably, broad comic performances by Craven Mackie, Frank McDonald and Webb Caye, as Dirty Joe, Stinker and Poison Eddie, respectively. Morris Ubans is also excellent as Ellsworth, the cook, repeating his success in "The Would-Be Gentleman." In view of these fine performances, it must be either the dead weight of the rest of the production or poor timing which keeps the gangster scenes from really coming off. Or maybe it is those little kids again, wandering in and out and keeping things generally off balance.

At any rate, very little of the liveliness of the low-life scenes is generally evident. For one thing, much of the rest of the play is smothered in the particularly sticky sentimentality of mother-love at flood tide. (Kazan again provides a handy reference: faced with the same problem in "Dark At The Top Of The Stairs," he simply adds a Freudian non sequiter to relieve the situation.) Through most of it the audience can only squirm, particularly when the people on the stage seem pretty embarrassed by the whole business. As the mother, Myra Lauterer is at her weakest in trying to convey the genuine love of the mother for her son which is supposed to redeem her character. Otherwise, she is competent enough, if somewhat flat and unspontaneous.

Most of the other minor roles are well played, particularly the two maids, played by Barbara Hicks and Lore Schuller; and the Lewis sisters, played by Cathy Orne, Sally Greene and Carolyn Quinn.

Technically, the production showed the usual Playmaker quality: if there was nothing particularly inspired, there was also nothing strikingly off-key.

It only remains to say that, despite a perfectly good production, "Mrs. McThing" is hardly worth doing here. It's embarrassing to have it around: we have better things to do.

A Letter

Editor:

I find myself called upon to answer the totally unfounded remarks by a Bob Foxworth and a John Ford which were published in the April 9th edition of The Daily Tar Heel. I know for a fact that neither of these two boys have made any effort in verifying their charges. Such conduct reminds one of a previous era.

These gentlemen charge the Student Party, which at the outset of their campaign pledged a clean campaign and which from beginning to end maintained a clean campaign, with publishing a certain "PIKA" letter. No one has ever been so in error for I know for a absolute fact that no official of the Student Party had any hand or knowledge in any such conduct.

The Student Party placed its publicity in all parts of the campus. Copies of every piece of literature were placed where all students could see and read it. I know of only one political party which placed items of literature appealing to specialized groups where only that particular group could read it. I have reason to believe that the mentioned piece of literature may have been distributed for the sole purpose of making the Student Party appear to be involving itself in dirty politics.

I, personally, shall speak of this matter no more for I believe that such unorthodox vicious accusations such as the Tar Heel letter of yesterday do nothing to increase student regard and appreciation for our student government.

Likewise, I believe that such comments as that of one University Party official who said "We shall pin this thing on the Student Party and make it stick," as well as the distribution of special literature, and the publication of such letters as that by a Tom Rand who was given a paid advertisement by the Tar Heel business manager for the purpose of viciously attacking the stand of candidate Norman Smith on deferred rush in the April 7th edition of the Daily Tar Heel in which he flagrantly misquoted and stated unsaid comments by Mr. Smith are all forms of unneeded belligerency which only create unrest and discord between student groups and which are accountable for a large portion of the student apathy toward dent government and student responsibility.

The elections are over and all of us are required to accept the results and to rally around the new student administration in seeking to further advance the here-to-fore successful attempts of student government in solving student problems and in representing student ideas.

Because the "PIKA" letter which stimulated my writing may have been the product of a non-party student, I should like to request the students of this university to renew their faith in our student government and to consider the when they are tempted to engage meaning of "responsible speech" in such political practices for whatever motivation.

The political parties need your participation. If your thirst has been whetted by this campaign, join the party of your choice this spring and participate in the ground work that can result in more responsible politics next year.

A New Opera

Joel Chadabe

This is the second article dealing with the opera "Whatever Passes By The Paths Of The Sea," written by Tom Rice, a music graduate student, and Russell Link, a drama graduate student. The opera will be produced in the Playmakers' Theatre on the nights of April 18 and 19 at 8 p.m.

Russell Link, after the music was mostly written, set about organizing the production. Tom decided to conduct the score himself and, as he commented, It is "damn hard. No job for beginners. Back to the drafting board for revision into straight 4/4 time." Russ decided to stage the opera and commented, "Interesting. There are many problems involved, such as heads being cut off and scenery changes. Someone with a leser concern for the play, in the sense that it is a product of my own imagination, would approach the directing problems more objectively."

An opera is the most complicated and intricate type of theatre entertainment, dependent for its impact upon several different but equally important things. There is dance, the orchestra, the singers, the acting, and the stage design. The designing of the set and costumes proved to be especially important to Russ, because of the original concept of the work. It was a story of greed and lust, which in splendor and glamour, had become degenerate and self-destructive. Freed from concrete circumstance by the use of the Greek legend as a vehicle for the plot, perhaps the opera is more real for its surrealistic atmosphere. In any case, every element in the opera was directed towards making this point and slamming it home. The music was scored mainly for high voices, and is intricate in texture. The main problem that remained was a designer for the sets and costumes. Russ asked Robert LaVine, of New York City, to work out a design plan and, after many long discussions, they decided to use the "art nouveau" style. As Russ said, "He became so interested in art nouveau that he decided to use the opera as a means for doing research with some practical results in mind. Actually, we had patterned our ideas after those of Aubrey Beardsley, who designed the set for Wilde's play 'Salome.' "

The art nouveau movement started in Belgium in the 1880's with the guidance of Henry van de Velde. The exponents of this style produced in their designs the forceful line, in striking contrast to the rigid forms of conventional architecture of the time. In England, the new style influenced Whistler, Breadsley and Wilde. Critics were outraged and veiled women blushed. But by the end of the century the movement had degenerated into fantasy. It forgot about the logic of structure and, without any root to support it, died of its own dissipation. It was art for art's sake, but the limitations of art had been overlooked.

Exactly in what way this style will be employed had best be explained by Mr. LaVine himself. "The opera libretto made me concious of the deadly but delicate perfume the scene must release. No century of time is indicated, the designer is given no period in which to set the stage. The characters are those of classical mythology, but they speak the mysteries of an unknown, decadent race, rather than the stark words of the white columnar classicists. The figures on stage are not those of the usual King, Queen, Princess and Hero. The royal family is all too close to each of us and what we know ourselves to be. There is no real nobility, except in the last moments of the opera, and the real tragedy of the piece is that here, after all, was merely a group of pathetic, foolish people—victims of vanity, desire and greed. They are of tomorrow and today and yesterday. They owe nothing to the future, nothing to the present, nothing to the past."

Miniatures an pictures of the sets and costumes will be on exhibit in the Wilson Library. The cast includes Ethel Casey as Cassiopeia, Rebecca Carnes as Andromeda, James Gibbs as Cepheus, Marilyn Zschau as Medusa, and Hunter Tillman as Perseus. The production is sponsored by Graham Memorial.

A COMMODITY OF DREAMS And Other stories. By Howard Nemerov. 245 pp. New York: Simon & Schuster. $3.75

Continuing with reviews of recent short story publications, we encounter the artistry of Howard Nemerov in A Commodity of Dreams, recently published by Simon & Schuster.

As the title indicates, these stories have about them a dream like quality which is almost removed from reality—but not quite. A lesser writer could never pull these stories off, but Mr. Nemerov demonstrates that he is a shrewd teller of tales who is able to move from one near-fantasy to another, almost defiantly. In the opening story, "Yore," there seems to be a dream within a dream, with allusion to the impending disaster of atomic war, two very different marriages and the obvious inability of the characters to discern "reality." I have read his story three times and am convinced that one must not fall into the trap of seeking out pure symbolism to interpret story substance. Though some of these yarns resemble hallucinations, visual images and somatic disturbances, and though the language of dreams is symbol, they are not merely symbolic recherches a l'interieur des reves. There is a compulsion which lurks just below the surface of consciousness and dreams themselves lie in this territory, filled with thoughts and impulses which so often are denied our conscious life.

If I have not strayed too far from "reality" myself, I may be able to demonstrate this by using examples from one particular story, "A Secret Society." Judson Paley, the protagonist, is a well-known and respected citizen of his town who moves in this dream-conscious world. His "view of the world consisted of utter extremes of closeness and remoteness . . ." While in a dentists chair, he felt that "the novacain had the odd effect on him of removing pain without removing his anticipation of it . . ." (As in a dream.) After leaving the dentist, he thinks of grabbing a policeman's gun and what the sequence of following events would be "more as images than as thoughts. There was an odd fascination in them, and in a few seconds he saw the whole affair taking place not once but several times." (As in a dream.) Later, he had "a sad, desperate vision in which this day became the image of all his days'" and yet "in all this he could find nothing human, nothing of interest, nothing that embodied any recognition of himself as a person." He was unable to understand what it meant, what it amounted to and realized only that "one's own infernal machine continued to tick." A final desperate act on his part, wherein he tries to commit suicide but fails miserably, brings him to a semblance of, again, "reality."

Naturally, all of the stories are not parallels of the one mentioned above. Mr. Nemerov is obviously interested in the similarity of dreams to history, personal or collective, as seen in the title story, "A Commodity of Dreams," and in comic-curious tale, "Tradition," about Adam Birch who dynamited 2,102 crows to collect a twenty-five cent bounty on each carcass. Though the latter story concerns itself with tradition and the vagary of legend, there was one point in its reading where I couldn't help thinking of the aphorism ,"You can't beat City Hall."

This reviewer's preference was for the narrative, "Visiting the Sick," an excerpt of which is printed on the back of the jacket. I almost fell out of bed when I turned from page 231 to 232 to find that the story had not ended. And as the story progressed for another three pages, I began to prepare myself for something altogether different from what Mr. Nemerov gives us. It is a beautiful change of pace on the author's part, showing, in contrast to many of the other yarns, that all the things we conjure up in our minds are not necessarily applicable to our given world of everyday existence. Certain events which occur, or which we think have occurred, do not always lead in the pat conclusions we so often expect—in these stories as in life itself.

It is at this point that I, too, will deviate from a pat conclusion to criticize Siegfried Mandel, who reviewed Mr. Nemerov's book for The New York Times Book Review section.

Mr. Mandel failed to give more than a peripheral, cursory interpretation of the stories which was partially unfair to the author. He refers to one story as having "meaning, drama and a touch of poetry." Yet, but isn't is a reviewer's obligation to convey what meaning and drama it has for him? And in another case, Mandel missed completely the content of the story called "The Ocean to Cynthia." He implies that "once the (seagoing Don Juan) has tasted the impulse (of committing suicide with his lover who originally suggested it), however, it begins to work on him—so that, later he does wind up in the ocean with the widow." It was not the impulse at all that worked on him; contrarily, it was the fact that he realized this widow was his own daughter whom he had abandon with her mother years ago at the beginning of his career as "a seducer of women."

Mr. Mandel also said in a letter to the Times (replying to a similar letter from Mr. Nemerov) that "Mr. Nemerov's short story endings do not seem to grow plausibly out of the body of the story." He talks like a psychologist or a logician, seeking cause and effect in the first case and trying to infer that "if A then B." Certain causes do not always produce predictable effects; if A then B, but not every time—actually, only if you make your own rules. As each of us eventually discovers in life, endings do not seem to grow plausibly out of the body of our own stories.

Education Conference Is Today

The Annual Reading Conference, sponsored by the School of Education, will be held on April 10 and 11. The Conference theme is "Testing and Appraisal in the Reading Program."

Dr. Paul C. Berg, Director of the Reading Clinic of the University of South Carolina, will begin the Conference with an address at 8:00 Friday evening using the topic, "Testing and Appraisal of Achievement in Reading." On Saturday morning from 9:30 to 11:00, discussion groups will consider the use of achievement tests, mental tests, diagnostic tests, and informal appraisal techniques in a reading program.

Discussion leaders will be Dr. David Shepherd, Charlotte Reading Clinic, and Dr. Roy Sommerfeld, Dr. Annie Lee Jones, and Dr. Thelma Gwynn Thurstone, University of North Carolina School of Education. Dr. Berg will close the conference with an address scheduled at 11:15 on Saturday, using the topic, "Diagnostic Testing and Appraisal in the Reading Program."

Several hundred public school administrators, supervisors, and teachers are expected in attendance at the Conference.

BA Executive Program Awards Certificates

Forty Southern businessmen will be awarded certificates for completion of the UNC School of Business Administration's Executive Program, Friday at 2:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

William J. Graham, director of the Executive Program, will preside at the commencement exercises for these men. George Leland Bach, professor and head of the Department of Economics at Carnegie Institute of Technology, will speak on "Inflation and The Businessman" during the program.

This is the sixth group to complete the Executive Program which is aimed at giving advanced management training and a new prospective on government and business, economics, accounting and similar fields of management. The program spans nine alternate weekends of training.

Most of those taking the course are college graduates who have been in business for some years.

In other business the Legislature passed Ann Harvey's bill to change the method of selecting jurors for Honor Council cases. Under the new procedure applicants will submit a written application only, rather than having an oral interview. According to Rep. Harvey, this will expedite the selection of jurors and increase the participation of the student body.

Rep. Don Dotson attempted unsuccessfully to amend the bill so as to provide only for the registration of prospective jurors, instead of application. He sought to make jury duty open to anyone who professed an interest.

Sport 4-3 Record

Carolina Courtmen Oppose Davidson

By ELLIOTT COOPER

For the Carolina tennis team this afternoon's home engagement with Davidson College marks the mid-point of the season. After today's encounter the Tar Heel courtmen will have seven matches remaining before the ACC meet in Raleigh which begins on May 6.

Coach Don Skakle's netters are currently riding on a three match winning streak, all against conference competition. Overal, the Carolina record is 4-3 with early season losses to Illinois and Rollins as the sore spots.

CAPT. GEOFF BLACK
. . . tennis captain

Start Of Series

The match against the Wildcats, first of a home and home series started this year, marks the initial time in better than two years that the two teams have met on the courts.

After the unimpressive start, the Tar Heels have finally found a solid lineup and have played excellent tennis in their last three matches, winning each time by a 8-1 score.

The Tar Heel individual record shows that Bruce Sylvia is still undefeated in singles competition. The sophomore from Richmond is currently playing in the number two position after opening the year at number four.

Keys Is 6-1

Right behind Sylvia with only one defeat against them are Ben Keys and Walker Lockett. After losing his first match of the season to George Gilmore of Illinois in three sets, Keys has won six straight. Lockett, although he did not make the Rollins trip, sports a 4-1 mark.

This afternoon Skakle will go with captain Geoff Black in the number one position followed by Sylvia, Keys, Marshall Happer, Lockett, and Tommy Ricks. In the doubles play the only major change finds Phil Causey teaming with Keys to form the third combination.

Monday Carolina takes on Clemson in what figures to be the toughest conference match of the season for either team. Last year the Tar Heels beat the Tigers handily by 8-1, but Clemson's two top men, Sonny Sumner and Mohammad Nasim, along with Lenaire Bryant are back again this season.

Senators Win Opener

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Pedro Ramos pitched in mid-season style on opening day and hurled the Washington Senators to a 9-2 victory Thursday over the Baltimore Orioles.

It was a sparkling performance before Vice President Nixon and a crowd of 26,850 who also saw Baltimore pull a triple play—the first on an opening day in major league history. The triple play came in the fifth inning.

Ramos, a 23-year-old rubber-armed right-hander, pitched in his Cuban homeland all winter. Thursday, he was deprived of a shut-out on the only really bad ball he threw. Gus Triandos hammered that one into the left center bleachers in the last inning, scoring Bob Boyd ahead.

Harmon Killebrew, the third baseman who has had his ups and downs in Washington's system, and Reno Bertoia, acquired from Detroit last winer, homered for the Senators.

Their drives which brought Nixon cheering to his feet accounted for four runs in a fourth-inning outbreak that wrapped up the game.

SEMINARS ABROAD

The chance to tour seven European countries and to meet their students and professors is still open for those who wish to join the 16 students signed up for this summer's Seminars Abroad program.

Leaving on June 5 from Idlewild Airport, the tour will continue until Aug. 1, ending in London with the return trip available by either boat or plane.

The final cost of $1160 includes all expenses for transportation, lodging, and food.

The membership for the Russian tour has been completed at seven students: Boots Baker, Sue Ward, Carolyn Vaught, Mary Bonson, Spencer Everett, Cliff Pannell, and Pat Browder. They will leave the European tour July 18 in Copenhagen, boat to Stockholm and Helsinki, and go from there to Leningrad by car. The rest of the tour will include visits to Moscow, Kiev, Minsk, Warsaw, Prague, and Vienna, ending in London on Aug. 23.

The European tour will visit France, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Denmark, Holland, and England. The trip home can be scheduled any time after Aug. 1, allowing for free time to cover places not visited by the tour.

Application can be made at the Y offices. The tentative deadline for all applications is April 15.

ROTC Group At Cherry Festival

From the Drill Team, 19 members will attend the Festival, and 23 members of the AFROTC Band will be going. In addition, two members of the Angel Flight will attend.

Friday morning, the Drill Team will compete for the annual National Drill Award. In preparation for this event, the Drill Team has been involved in an extensive period of drill practice for the past two weeks.

The AFROTC Band will join the Drill Squadron on Saturday for the National Cherry Blossom parade. In addition to the military regality, the AFROTC cadets will be entertained at banquets, dances and cocktail parties.

Golfers Risk Unbeaten Mark Against UVA

GOLFERS RISK Unbeaten Mark..

The unbeaten golfers of Carolina, winners of five straight, gun for their first conference victory of the year and their sixth overall win when they travel to Virginia.

The amazing Tar Heels, who returned only one letterman off last year's ACC champs, have rolled over Indiana, Cornell, Michigan, Davidson and Princeton. In their last clash they slaughtered Princeton's Tigers 32-4, winning every match.

The versatile Carolinians have had four different medalists. Number one man Ed Justa, number two Don McMillan, number four Bob Galloway and number six John McKee have all had the honor. Chuck Erickson's crew will go with David Sloan and Hugh Goodman in the other two starting positions.

Justa has the best score of the season, a three-under par 69 and is undefeated in competition this year.

The Tar Heels face Maryland the next day in completing their northern swing. The Virginians may be trouble, as they finished in a tie for second in the ACC last season, winning 11 while losing only 3. They have four lettermen back and one is basketball player Bill Metzger.

Tar Heels To Battle Wake Forest Saturday

Carolina Has 7-2 Record

The Wake Forest Demon Deacons invade Emerson Stadium Saturday at 3 p.m. to clash with Carolina in the Tar Heels' initial Big Four engagement of the season.

From early season performances, no decided difference in the ability of the two squads has been determined. While Carolina has run up a 7-2 record against the mediocre 4-3 mark of the Deacs, the latter have a wide satistical margin.

The Wake Forest team has chalked up a fine .304 batting mark against the Tar Heel's .248. The Deacon hurlers have allowed three runs per contest while Carolina pitchers have given up four each time out Wake Forest thus far has also displayed superior defensive capabilities.

The recent trips of each team into South Carolina further confuse any comparison which can be drawn on the two squads. Wake Forest defeated South Carolina while the Tar Heels were soundly upended by the Gamecocks. On the other hand, the Tar Heels turned back Clemson whereas the Deacs fell before the Tigers.

The starting moundsmen for Saturday's clash are not definite, but Carolina coach Walter Rabb is expected to open with lefthander Ben Harding, who is 1-1 on the season with a 5.0 ERA. Wake Forest mentor Gene Hooks probably will use Bobby Lawrence, another southpaw with an 0-1 mark but a good 2.7 ERA.

Along with Harding, the other Tar Heel starters should be Dave Dale (.300) at first, Larry Craver (.235) at second, Ferg Norton (.294) at third, Harold Workman (.250) at short, Johnny Burgwyn (.409), Russ Hollers (.316) and Gerald Griffin (.189) in the outfield, and Carroll Bolick (.304) catching.

BIG 4 TROPHY
. . . for Rod & Gun Meet

Lotz And Salz Are Given Roberson And Smith Awards

The Chapel Hill Athletic Club held its annual basketball dinner last night to present the Carrington Smith Award and the Foy Roberson Trophy. Danny Lotz, captain of the 1958-59 Tar Heel team, was voted the winner of the Roberson Trophy while junior guard Harvey Salz received the Smith Award.

Football Coach Jim Tatum presented the Smith Award in place of the doner who was out of town. The Roberson Trophy, which was established by Dr. Foy Roberson in memory of his son who was killed in World War II, was made last night by Dr. O. K. Cornwell.

In addition to the two major awards, club president Joe Page presented seniors Gehrmann Holland and Lotz with plaques as graduating members of the basketball team. The club also gave certificates to each member of the varsity and freshman squads.

The evening was highlighted by the short talks of Ray P. Kaighn and Frank McGuire. Kaighn, an original member of the Springfield, Mass. YMCA basketball teams which James Naismith formed, recollected for the audience his memories of the conception of the game.

Coach McGuire made the longest talk of the evening as he thanked the club members for making the night possible and expressed his hopes for next year's team. The coach, just back from West Virginia "by way of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey," slipped several amusing tales into his talk concerning the night of the Navy game in New York City. The genial Irishman told his players that they had been number one once this year and he hoped they would be number one all this coming season.

Kappa Alpha Fraternity Old South Ball Held In Charlotte This Week

Around 50 UNC KA's and their dates are among the 600 fraternity boys and dates for the traditional parade and secession ceremony, reception, dinner and Old South Ball.

For the parade and secession ceremony at noon today, KA's will don Confederate uniforms or other ante bellum attire and the girls will be clothed in Old South dresses and hats.

At the secession ceremony in front of Mecklenburg County Court House, the document of secession will be read and then signed.

The highlight of the Old South Weekend will come tonight with the Old South Ball and the crowning of a regional KA Rose to represent the five chapters of this area in the national finals.

The local KA's Rose is coed Mary Britton, who was selected earlier this year. Her escort in the presentation of roses at the dance will be Larry Carter of UNC.

The other two UNC Kappa Alpha sponsors are Judy King, who will be escorted by Henry Manning, and Jean Esval, whose escort is Jasper Reynolds. The two girls will be presented during the figure at the Old South Ball.

Another feature of Old South Weekend is a Beard Contest, with KA roses judging which chapter in the province has the best bearded member.

Other activities later this afternoon include a reception and dinner at Park Center in Charlotte.

Music for the Old South Weekend is being furnished by the Bill Knauff Orchestra and Combo. Several other bands will also be used.

In addition to the UNC chapter, KA's in Charlotte today will be representing chapters at Wake Forest, N. C. State College, East Carolina College and Duke.

UNC String Quartet Will Present Haydn Quartet On Tuesday Evening

The UNC String Quartet will be featured in the fifth concert of the Tuesday Evening Series in Hill Hall April 14 at 8 p.m.

Quartet members Edgar and Dorothy Alden, Jean Heard and Mary Gray Clarke will perform Haydn's Quartet in D Major, Op. 64, No. 5; Bartok's Quartet No. 6; and Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2 by Brahms.

Dr. Alden, first violinist and assistant conductor of the UNC Symphony, teaches violin, theory and graduate courses in musicology in the UNC Music Department. Former concert master of the N. C Symphony and of the Mozart Festival Orchestra in Asheville, he has appeared as soloist with both of these groups and other orchestras.

Mrs. Alden, violist and teacher of Strings in Chapel Hill, has held first chair position in the N. C. Symphony and the University Symphony. With Dr .Alden she has performed through North Carolina as soloist and in various chamber groups.

The second violinist, Mrs. Heard, studied with Ottakar Cadek of the University of Alabama and with Mischa Mischakoff at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

YDC Elects Futrelle President

The two vice-presidents are Henry Smith and Paul Pulley. James Caldwell is secretary and John Barnhardt is treasurer.

Meetings of the Young Democratic Club will be held every first and third Monday night in the month, starting April 20 in the Courtroom on the second floor of the Law School.

Striker-Police Incident Clarified

By RON SHUMATE

(The following is the fifth in a series on the Henderson strike compiled by Ron Shumate, Mary Alice Rowlette, and Peter Ness)

"Officers said there was no disturbance at the (police) station."

This is an excerpt from a state newspaper. The statement concerns an incident that occurred Thursday in Henderson after two "lady" strikers were arrested following an alleged rock-throwing incident.

The strikers appeared at the Henderson police station shortly after the arrests were made. Apparently the word spread quickly through the mill area.

Six women—and one little girl—were the first to arrive at the station, a red brick building that houses, in addition to the police station, various municipal offices of the city and county.

Male strikers arrived later, but still left most of the harrassment of the officers to the "ladies." The men asked the women which trooper had arrested the two women.

They pointed the trooper out to the men strikers. One man commented that he had "gotten the license number of the patrol car."

Soon, someone accused the trooper of "grabbing her by her breast." Others soon took up the cry, and the hall-way was filled with vile, vulgar language.

The women were, to use an old expression, "mad as wet hens." They cursed, harrassed law enforcement officers and just generally created a disturbance.

A Henderson policeman, after several minutes of the noisy show, told the women they could stay in the station "as long as they were respectable."

"We're respectable," one said.

"I ain't spoke," another said.

"We're ladies," another reported.

But they went outside.

The darkened hall-way of the police station was filled with raucous voices uttering such statements as:

"Some gentlemen," (Speaking of the troopers who had made the arrests).

The little girl, who was about eight years old, shook her fist in the face of one of the policemen and said, "Manhandler."

The policeman turned around and said, "Isn't it a shame for a little girl this young to be here in the midst of all this."

The women asked each other, "Which one did it?"

"That one right there," another said. "He's scared to death."

A rather large-size woman was walking around showing everyone who would look, a large tear in the side of her dress. She claimed a trooper had grabbed her and torn her dress.

"He's going to buy me a new dress," she declared. "In fact, Gov. Hodges is going to buy me a new dress."

She needed a new dress.

After the confusion and commotion died down, the strikers gathered en masse in front of the station. The crowd of about 75 created quite a disturbance while there, though only through verbal means.

They yelled at a photographer from the Daily Tar Heel. He was across the street from the station, when several strikers began to yell at him: "Put that camera down," "You won't have it much longer if you don't put it in your pocket," "Don't take any pictures around here,' and "Go home!"

The photographer went home. The scene on the picket line was much the same as in the past. The strikers heckled the 289 workers who came out of the South Henderson

Glee Club To Present Concert

By BEN TAYLOR

The Men's Glee Club will join the Woman's College Chorus of WCUNC in presenting Villa Lobos' Mass In Honor of Saint Sebastian on two occasions Sunday, April 12, in another of their annual joint concerts.

The combined chorus of some 120 voices will perform at Aycock Auditorium on the campus of WCUNC in Greensboro at 4:00 Sunday afternoon. Following the evening meal both clubs will return to Chapel Hill and perform an identical program in Hill Hall at 8:00 p.m.

Each club will also present a number of folk and semi-classical selections as part of both programs.

At least one joint concert by the two Consolidated University glee clubs is held each year and the performances are usually of well-known classical or oratio compositions. This year's selection, Mass In Honor of Saint Sebastian, was set to music by Heitor Villa-Lobos and is sung a capella in three-part harmony. It is written in Latin and is divided into six parts: "Kyrie," "Gloria," "Credo," "Sanctus," and "Agnus Dei."

The singing of Mass In Honor of Saint Sebastian by the Men's Glee Club follows on the heels of their weekend journey to Wilmington's Azalea Festival where they provided the basic choral background for the two-day pageant shows held on Friday and Saturday nights, April 3 and 4.

There will be no admission for either of the two Sunday concerts.

STAFF MEETING

There will be a meeting of the staff of The Daily Tar Heel at 4 p.m. Monday, according to newly elected Editor Davis B. Young. Young will take over as editor Monday.

The meeting will include columnists, reporters, feature writers, business, and sports. Young has encouraged any students interested in writing for the paper to be present at this time.

Eisenhower Names Morton GOP National Chairman

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(AP)—Sen. Thurston Morton of Kentucky was officially tapped by President Eisenhower today to be the new Republican national chairman. Tradition assures Morton the job.

The President's choice—no surprise—was announced by the chief of a 10-member delegation of GOP leaders after they had met for about two hours with the vacationing Eisenhower at the Augusta National Golf Club.

The delegation then flew back to Washington to report to the full Republican National Committee. That unit will vote there tomorrow on a successor to retiring Meade Alcorn, and there is no doubt Morton will be installed.

After today's session at the golf club, Ray C. Bliss, Ohio's GOP chairman, told a sidewalk news conference that Eisenhower had "indicated he would be pleased if the (Republican National) Committee elected Sen. Thurston Morton as our new national chairman."

The fact that Morton, 51-year-old first termer in the Senate, was Eisenhower's preference has been widely known since shortly after Alcorn announced his resignation to return to his Connecticut law practice.

But custom is for the national committee to go through the formality of sending a delegation to get the President's views on record.

Morton, who served in the House for three terms starting in 1947, has announced he would not give up his Senate seat as chairman. That declaration brought objections from some GOP quarters that the chairmanship ought to go to a man who could devote full time to the job of rebuilding the party.

But Eisenhower stood fast and insisted on Morton.

Asked whether there was any talk at today's' conference on strengthening the party in the wake of defeat of many Republicans at the polls last November, Bliss "I can't believe there would pressed pleasure over the work of rebuilding" already started by Alcorn.

And after the meeting newsmen overheard the President telling Bliss "I can't believe there would be anything better than rebuilding all around."

Alcorn several weeks ago named a committee to reassess party objectives and to draft a new statement of GOP principles. That happened shortly after some Republicans in Congress had proposed that Eisenhower take a more active role in GOP politics—and state the party's objectives.

Student Party Majority In Legislature Is 30-20

The Student Legislature will meet next Thursday night to begin its 27th session with 30 Student Party representatives and 20 from the University Party.

David Grigg, vice-president of the student body, will assume his new duties as the Speaker of the Legislature.

In the campus elections held last Tuesday, SP won 17 of the Legislature seats open, while UP copped 15. All six months seats have become year seats due to the referendum for a single annual spring Legislature election approved by the student body Tuesday.

Taylor McMillan (SP) is the other new representative from DM I. His UP opponent, Bill Craig, was disqualified. McMillan received 154 votes, while Craig came through with 66.

Victors for the year seats in DM III were Dan Brown (SP) 155, and Roy Goodman (SP) 175. They won over Phil Edwards (Ind.) 153; Ron Millican (UP) 99, and Vincent Mulieri (UP) 140.

Pope Shuford (UP) and Bob Smith (SP) copped the two six-months seats, which are now one year, in that district with 202 and 283 votes, respectively. Gary Arzt (SP) received 184.

Ed Cox (SP), 217, and Bill Lamm (SP), 157, won the two-year seats in DM IV. Also running were Bill Bates (UP), 115, and Ward Purrington (UP), 96.

UP dominated the Town Men's districts by gaining 10 of the 11 seats open in those districts.

Fred Lavery and Rick Overstreet, both UP, ran uncontested in TM I. Lavery had 155 votes and Overstreet 143.

In TM II, Peyton Hawes, 398, and Jack Lawing, 406, also both UP won over Roy H. Park, Jr., (Ind.) 67, for the two seats open in that district.

Gordon Street, Frank Eagles and Al Walters, all UP, are the three representatives from TM III, receiving 108, 107 and 93 votes, respectively. SP candidates were Barry Zaslav, 73, Stan Black, 65, and Frank Elkins, 53.

For the six months seat, now one year, in this district Neal Bodey (UP) beat Bob Ney (SP) by 107 to 83.

The eight seats in TM EV, for which there were only eight candidates, went to Jim Blue (SP), 99; Don Dotson (SP), 81; John Lyon (UP), 73; Bill Mallory (SP), 86; Bob Pierce (SP), 86; Billy Woodard (SP), 90; Bill Young (UP), 82, and Hugh Ragsdale (UP), 87.

The University Party carried three of the four seats open in the women's districts.

Maxine Greenfield and Dixie Jackson, both UP, were uncontested in Town Women with 113 and 119 votes, respectively.

CORRECTION

The results of the election for Men's Honor Council were incorrectly reported in Friday's Daily Tar Heel.

The three new members of the Council are George Campbell, who received 1,193 votes, Bill Crutchfield, 1,418 votes, and Jim Thompson, 1,100 votes.

The number of write-in votes which Henry Snow received for editor of The Daily Tar Heel was 540. Davis Young, the new editor, received 2,350 votes. The total number of write-in votes was over 600.

U. N. Model Assembly Will Elect Officers

The third plenary session, election of CCUN officers and a United Nations movie will be included today as the final day of the U. N. Model Assembly.

The plenary session will be in Gerrard Hall from 9 a.m. through 1 p.m. There will be a 15-minute coffee break at 10:45 a.m.

Lunch is scheduled at 1 p.m. and it will be followed by election of CCUN officers in Gerrard Hall. The U. N. movie will be in Carroll Hall after the elections.

Molly Wiley, Jayne Gardner, Margaret Ray, Kathy Ross, Ann Holswade, Ed Levy, Joe Oppenheimer, Vince Mulieri, Jack Carter, Edith Dalton, Melissa Osborne and Sipra Bose.

Bob Silliman, Rudy Paquette, John Brooks, Gary Greer and Rosemary Roberts.

(The end of this editor's career has come, and at the late twilight of this particular editorship, the editor deems it wise to do a little summing up - first of things pertaining to the University and the student body, second of those things pertinent to The Daily Tar Heel, and thirdly of those things pertinent to the editor himself.

This summing up is likely to be long, but it is a constant source of amazement that there is even this little to sum up. The summary will start today and continue tomorrow. The editor begs the student body's indulgence for this overly long discourse generated by the ideas of only one person. The editor, being a prejudiced individual, considers these ideas important.)

THE UNIVERSITY

The University today stands at the crossroads. More appropriately put, it stands in the middle of an intersection. It knows surely that the surge of traffic will push it on, but it is reluctant to make the decision of which way to go of its own accord.

In short it is a time of decision before the traffic moves on pushing it forward, and flattening it, while the cars speed on into the night.

The questions that are most major before the University today are ones of adequacy versus excellence decision versus hesitancy, growth versus purpose, fragmentation versus communal organization, number versus individuality, and consolidation versus planning.

And all these affect the state as well as the nation, for education, as has been said before and as reiterated now, is the keystone to democracy's strength. Without education, there is no leadership, no thought, no inspiration. Without education, America is not.

There are many who feel that the time of decision has passed and are content to let this University slide down the hill to mediocrity by sheer weight of numbers. They are content to let the General Assembly call the turn, and to fight the battles for the University on the sheer strength of arguments based on the growth of the University. On this basis, the University will die, and the city college will take its place. The University of North Carolina will no longer be the school of this year, which is considerably less than the school of last year and the school of a decade ago.

So the initial problem is growth. It stems from the false hypothesis that this is a state university and therefore must take the requisite percentage of students that knock on its doors. It stems from the erroneous notion that excellence in any true sense can survive with a growing University population. It comes from the false belief that the various technical schools housed under the name university - a community of individuals committed to the pursuit of truth - will brng additional revenue and hence further the University in its purpose. It is a product of society's misconception that the import of a degree is so and so many more thousand dollars of lifetime earnings. And it follows upon the University's tacit acceptance of this principle.

This leads into the second problem facing the University; namely consolidation, for the only way the University is going to separate itself in purpose, in identity, and in planning from the other universities in the state is to rid itself of consolidation. If this cannot be accomplished, the General Assembly will continue to mandate that the University assume its responsibility for its share of the growing population.

Consolidation is a holdover from another era, an era of depression when dollars were scarcer that gold filled hens' teeth, when it was necessary to lump all causes of education under one head to get the maximum amount of mileage out of each appropriation. The need is here no longer, for the University here in Chapel Hill would be likely to get money more readily for its cause, when that cause is clearly delineated. Moreover, at present consolidation is costing the state money in setting up a hierarchy of authority in which each position is duplicated in at least two levels. This duplication is unnecessary.

Indeed, what is necessary is a statewide system of education where the University stands at the apex of quality and at the nadir of quantity. It is a system where one University can exist with its purpose throughout to be a community of individuals committed to the pursuit of truth.

This brings up the third problem - admissions. Two years ago when admissions tests were first put into operation, many on campus who were concerned for the future of the University looked to this as a hopeful sign, and although their hope has not been lost, it has been diminished in strength. For the admisions test is not used here to bring a true standard of quality to the University, but rather to set up a somewhat arbitrary demarcation point so that the University can make, as near as possible, maximum use of its facilities and yet, not take in any more students than it can provide adequate facilities for. Indeed, the University's admissions standards are so low that they would preclude only the bottom five or six per cent in the United States from entering.

Yet, admissions can be a force in bringing about the type of university that this state deserves, but does not have. With the use of tests and interviews in a way that certain Ivy League colleges have done and are doing, the University can obtain a maximum of the brightest students in the state and can build a climate conducive to learning.

The fourth problem is one of fragmentation. It is related to growth in direct proportion, for as the University grows larger the greater the fragmentation that will exist.

This fragmentation takes two forms, both horizontal. The most obvious fragmentation is fragmentation by living units. At present this fragmentation is confined to a fraternity-dormitory dichotomy, but as the University grows and the problem of individual contact and communication grows larger, fragmentation will take effect on the individual by virtue of the dormitory in which he resides. Here clearly growth will act as a hindrance to the communal feeling of individuals each pursuing the task of truth seeking in that manner to which they are best adapted.

The second type of fragmentation is with us today and will increase as the years pass. This fragmentation is by school and/or division. It is a problem of how does one square the existence of a business school in a community of individuals committed to the pursuit of truth. The answer is simple. The two do not square, and as long as the business school and other schools of its ilk remain on the University campus, the situation will get worse and not better. Dean Norval Neil Luxon of the journalism school is trying to maintain a balance between a school whose primary purpose is that of teaching a trade and its environment - an educational institution in its best sense, but the question remains as to whether he will be able to do that in this single school which is making a brave attempt, if the growth of the University continues at its predicted rate.

The University is trying to meet this problem in its typical manner - avoiding the issue and dealing with the periphery wisely. It has in its charted future decided that the professional school emphasis should be placed at the graduate level. This is kicking the problem to a higher level, but nevertheless passing the buck. These professional schools which have little or nothing in common with the central purpose of the University ought not to be at the University, and there are many other colleges in the state ready, willing, eager, and able to take up the slack.

What then is the University to do in the way of curriculum, faculty deployment, testing, and guidance to make it a first class school. Assuming that the University can limit enrollment at a certain level, assuming that it does use admissions tests wisely, assuming that it does deconsolidate, leaving a measure of freedom for the local administration, assuming that it curtails or eliminates fragmentation on the basis of liberal arts and professional schools, and assuming that it gets the consent of the state for its purpose, there is a great deal it can do, although there are many limitations.

There is one basic weakness that the University must contend with. This is the absolutely abominable condition of the majority of North Carolina's high schools. The situation is so bad that the majority of entering students have not the foggiest notion of study habits, and have not emerged from a neanderthal cathechism of right and wrong that they have learned throughout their natural lives. They have not once questioned their environment nor doubted their basic precepts.

This student is, of course, thrown immediately into a class with his peers with a graduate student, only slightly advanced in thought from them, in the position of teacher. They are kept in class by rigid attendance regulations, and are tested in such a way as to put a premium on memory and mental regurgitation rather than thought.

The student will have the best chance of actively seeking truth and of actually coming to grips with ideas if he is incubated in an environment of freedom and stimulation. This is only possible if his initial contact with the type of education a true University tries to give is one of experiencing the best possible faculty guidance with the least amount of administrative restrictions. If the student wants an education, the best ought to be offered at the beginning, and he should be able to make of it what he will. As such, testing should be infrequent. It should not care whether the student has memorized the assignment of the night before, but it should test whether he is thinking - whether he is using the knowledge that he has obtained through his course work as a tool for increased understanding.

If faculty guidance is one way of making the student aware of a new and startlingly different world of ideas, then residence counselling is another method of bringing home some of the purpose of the University. First, if the student's purpose in the University is the pursuit of truth, then he ought to have the quiet to pursue it. Secondly, if he needs help, as all people emerging from bright sunlight may need help to accustom their eyes to the indoor light, then that help must be available. If in the examination of his precepts, he finds some of them shaken, then he may need help to climb or fall to the next ephemeral truth that he may cling to temporarily. Thus, guidance is essential.

Yet, more still than this must be done. The student's program in the University should be broad enough and yet narrow enough to fill the bill of making of the inert, an inquiring mind. The General College system tries to do this but fails miserably. If the University must make up for an inadequate high school education, and it really need not if the General Assembly and the high school educators wake up, then it can try to give both the factual data essential for increased knowledge, as well as the challenge to the mind essential in bringing about thought. It must do this with fewer electives, but with broader focus in each of the courses. And there should at some point along the student's way, preferably at the end of his undergraduate career, be some course requirement which will be a summation of a four-year effort—a course which will tie in what he has learned in his four years, showing how it relates to the whole sphere of knowledge and how it relates to the present day world. This is difficult to do, but not impossible.

Finally, facilities must be available so that the student has the maximum opportunity to assimilate what an ideal University has to offer. Perhaps central to this is an adequate library. The present structure is both inadequate in amount of volumes and inadequate in the possibilities for constructive study to be accomplished. And the addition of a small undergraduate library will be at best a temporary solution. The case for an adequate library is well known. It is usually based on the idea that first rate faculty will come to this university if it has the research facilities available. But an equally adequate case can be made for offering the serious student the maximum amount of opportunity to learn. This cannot be accomplished in a library that is third or fourth in the south or even first in the south. Indeed the perceptual perimeters of the budget designers' eyes need to be widened to include the nation and the world. The point being made here is that the University can compete with Harvard if it so desires, but it cannot do so if it is content to sit on its haunches as one of the best in the collegiate desert.

This means, of course, that the alumni have to be recruited to the cause of education rather than the cause of athletics. They must be made aware of the importance of the individual book rather than the seat on the fifty-yard line of the stadium they helped build. And all too little has been done in this vital area of alumni organization for the heart of the University, although there are many contributions to the University's periphery.

of any University must be academic, too often the faculty and administration tend to conceive of this emphasis in terms of grades. This is why there were some reservations in the minds of a few as to the completeness of the wisdom of a letter which was sent out to faculty members last year noting a great increase in A and B grades over a certain years' span. True, this increase in high grades is indicative of lower standards, but the true measure of the University graduate with the system of mental regurgitation testing that is the primary type in the University is not necessarily the grade .

There has been a trend during the past few years to erect certain restrictions on student action, to worry about morality questions, to think in terms of attendance regulations, and be concerned about drop-out rates of students. This concern has been directed in this manner under the flag, the noble banner, of preserving the reputation of the University. It is a singular fact in most societies that once the concern shifts from the central purpose of that society to preserving the name and reputation of that society for pursuing that central purpose, then that reputation has already been lost. The central purpose must come first.

There are a few in the administration of this University and many in the faculty who share this view of the University. The faculty members are by and large, for one reason or another, unwilling to speak up on these issues, and those administrators who believe in these things feel that their hands are tied by decisions from above. The above, however, is the consolidated offices, the Board of Higher Education, the General Assembly, and ultimately the people, and if all the other lines of authority are unwilling to budge, those in positions of leadership should take their case to the people. This was one of the things that Dr. Frank P. Graham did so effectively when he was President of this university. It can be done now with just as much hope if favorable result.

But it must be done now. If another two or three years go by, it will be too late, the light will have changed, and the pedestrian in the middle of the intersection will be in no position or shape to decide which way to go.

Student Body

The present is a time of crisis for the student body. The crisis is directly related to the growth problem that confronts the University. In simple terms it is a problem of the impossibility of a meaningful student government when all cohesiveness is lost by a growing and fragmenting student body.

There are also critical areas within student government, for it is entirely within the realm of possibility that the student government of the University of North Carolina will collapse of its own weight, for over the years structure after superstructure, constitution after constitution, by-law after by-law have been erected so that the resulting mess is a mass of confusion in which nothing is unified and of which no single person knows the whole story. It thus becomes increasingly difficult for the President of the Student Body to administer the realm, when the realm is so large that he cannot see the end.

There is a paradox in this also, for whereas the government is large in number of committees and sub-committees, courts and sub-courts, it is small in the amount of scope its most popular activities possess.

There needs to be a conscious re-evaluation of the purpose of student government and student activities. There needs to be a redirection away from the self-government idea in the narrow context in which it is applied currently and toward a student leadership that is responsible for making the student body in general aware of the issues that face the state, nation, and world.

In short, student government cannot limit itself to one position or another toward deferred rush or judicial systems. It must expand its perimeters to segregation, individuality, human rights, totalitarianism, and other forces and ideas that are so present in modern society. Student government, possibly, can perform both functions. It can provide a self-governing system as well as make the student body aware of the overriding issues throughout the world. But the trend has been to sacrifice the latter for the former, and if one of the two are necessary it is only the latter.

It would be surprising for most of the student body to find out but the campus could get along well without the honor code, the campus code, social regulations or drinking rules. To some this is like attacking the sanctity of the home, the name of mother, or the hallowed halls of God, but it is these that read a false meaning in the Carolina way of life. They read Honor Code, Campus Code student morality code - all, to be sure, administrated by the students -as the keystone of Carolina, and they fail to realize that the keystone of Carolina is the very freedom which these codes infringe. The right to privacy, the right to evaluate one's own code of morality, to select his beliefs, and to pursue his life as he may are part of the Carolina way of life, and it is this part that is meaningful.

Yet, this freedom needs the fuel of knowledge and the ignition of stimulation. This is why a union with its varied programming facilities is so vital. Part of the whole learning process is doing, and the fundamental concept of a student union is two-fold.

First, it incorporates the idea that the best way a student can put his knowledge to good use, is to apply it to everyday activity - to take a certain amount if responsibility for the teaching as well as the learning process. Secondly, the union concept has the firm realization that not all day can be spent in work, and that there is a certain obligation on the part of the University to provide facilities for a healthy outlet of the recreational energies a student might have. In other words, a union is not antithetical to the teaching enterprise, but is in its very conception a real aid to the process of learning.

Moreover, with the University growing or even with the University remaining at its present population, a union can serve as the unifying factor in the student community, just as dormitory government will soon serve the only unifying function, outside of The Daily Tar Heel, in the University.

The case for a union cannot be made strongly enough, but it also must be heard, and it has not been heard in recent years. If it will not be heard, then it will be up to the student body as a whole to take responsibility for the creation of a union—for it is the student body that directly stands to benefit.

The initial problems are simple—how does one meet with the problems of growth on the campus which are destined to cause fragmentation of the student body, and what is the nature and function of student government. The answers are not as easy, but as outlined above—the need for a strong student union and the function of acquainting the students of the world outside the campus are two important answerss to the questions that have been raised.

WHO SAID IT FIRST?

"TO HAVE AND HAVE NOT"

The privileged and the underprivileged, the rich and the poor—most of us have a tendency to divide mankind into two classes. The man who showed us how to do it was Cervantes. In "Don Quixote", he wrote:

"There are only two families in the world, the Haves and the Have Nots."

"WHEN IN ROME..."

...do as the Romans do, we say, thus misquoting a line from Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy". In this monumental book, the celebrated vicar stated it thusly:

"When they are in Rome, they do there as they see done."

"JACK SPRAT"

No, "Anon" didn't coin the famous quatrain concerning the thin man and his peculiar eating habits. Instead, it was a certain John Clark in something called, "Paraemiologia", written in 1639:

"Jack Sprat will eat no fat,
And Jill doth love no lean,
Yet betwixt them both
They lick the dishes clean."

Illinois Workshop In August

Carolina students have an opportunity to apply for attending the National Intercollegiate Human Relations Workshop this summer. Interested students have been asked to contact the student government office.

The workshop will be held for two weeks at the University of Illinois.

Fifteen students from different college campuses are to discuss human relations problems facing the nations, the reasons for various attitudes and the probably solutions to the problems.

Five of the 15 students will be selected from segregated colleges, five from integrated colleges and five from predominantly Negro colleges.

Travel, room and board expenses will be financed by a grant of the Ford Foundation.

Last year, when the first workshop was held, UNC student Frank Elkins was selected to attend.

The three were reappointed by the Selections Board of the Publications Board this week to serve as business managers of the publications again next year.

WAA Revote Called

A revote for Woman's Athletic Association president will be held Tuesday between Catherine Bolton (SP endorsed) and Martha Custis (independent).

Hank Patterson, chairman of the Elections Board, said the revote is being held because absentee ballots had been sent out without the name of Miss Custis. Miss Custis' name had been omitted when the ballots were printed because her petition of candidacy had been misplaced.

The polls will be open in all women's dormiories and at Gerrard Hall for town women from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., except for Kenan Dormitory. In Kenan, the polls will be open rfom 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

plant in 76 cars. The first car came out of the mill gate at 2:55 and for nearly 10 minutes the others followed, interrupted only twice when patrolmen stopped them to let others get farther up the road so as to cut down on the traffic congestion.

As the workers streamed out of the mill, the strikers shouted at them vehemently. Most of the tumult and the shouting was by the women. The air was filled with such taunts as: "Come on cry-baby." "Chicken;" "You're a scab too;" "You're gonna get it. It might be tomorrow night; you never know."

Once, when a car-load of Negroes came out of the mill, the strikers yelled, "Hello Africa."

When the last striker had gone out, the gate-keeper closed the gate locked it and walked slowly back toward the mill. The strikers turned their wrath toward him, but he seemed unaware of the cries being directed at him.

Twenty-one State Highway Patrol cars lined the street in front of the mill, in addition to several local police cars. Many of the Highway Patrol cars contained as many as four troopers, though the majority of them had only two.

The superintendent of the Henderson schools said Thursday that attendance in Henderson's schools has not been affected to any great degree by the strike. In most of the schools, attendance has only dropped two or three per cent since the strike began last November 17. The two elementary schools in the mill areas had no more change in attendance than the other schools in the town.

Henderson has one white high school and six white elementary schools. The North Henderson Elementary School had an average monthly attendance of 92.8 per cent in December, one month after the strike began. The average attendance for March, 1959, was 92.95 per cent. The current enrollment in the North Henderson school is 198. The South Henderson school is about the same size, although it has two less grades than the North Henderson school.

Supt. W. D. Payne said his department is "not unduly concerned" over the slight drop in attendance at most of the schools, as it is a "normal" decline for this time of year.

However, Payne said the number of students eating lunch in the school cafeteria has declined greatly. He attributed this decline to the lack of money that the strikers have had since their paychecks have stopped coming across the counter.

Henderson's total chool enrollment is 4,746, and the population of the whole town is 11,447.

A local minister, who asked not to be quoted, said the attendance at most of Henderson's churches has declined somewhat since the strike began.

He stated that some of the churches "have split right down the middle." The animosity between the strikers and those who have gone back to work is strong, the minister said, and has caused many of the "scabs" to transfer to other churches or quit attending altogether.

YMCA Needs Students

Next week, Tuesday through Friday, the YMCA Executive Committee will have interviews for students interested in positions on the 1959-60 cabinet.

Interviews will continue 2-4 p.m. each afternoon, and interested students may designate an interview time by signing the schedule available in Y-court.

According to Jack Raper, president, the cabinet is the decision-making body of the YMCA. It is also the organization through which the membership is vocally represented.

Raper said the cabinet will in the future be called upon to take a stand on issues vital to the campus.

Each member of the YMCA cabinet works in cooperation with a member of the YWCA cabinet.

There are 14 areas in which positions are open. These are the following: Freshman Program, Conference Committee, Community Work, International Relations Committee, Human Relations, Public Affairs Committee, U. N. Educations Council, Television Program, Y-night, Worship and Vespers Committee, Publications Board, Finance Committee, Publicity Committee and work with students from abroad.

Victory Village Elects Nine

Nine new members were elected to the Victory Village Board of Directors in Tuesday's election.

Mrs. Margaret Tuggle, chairman of the board, listed the new members as follows: Bill Ball, Dick Barnette, Gerald Bass, Hilary Daughtery, Mrs. Lorraine Hollowell, Ed Hollowell, Noah Wilson and Barry Winston.

In a meeting Monday night the board will determine which members will serve two-year terms and which one-year terms.

Carolina And Wake Forest Fight It Out In ACC Game Here This Afternoon At 3

By RUSTY HAMMOND

A pair of possible ACC pennant contenders, Carolina and Wake Forest, lock horns here this afternoon in Emerson Stadium at 3 as the Tar Heels open their Big Four season.

These two hopefuls have so far in the season succeeded in completely scrambling the ACC pennant race. The Tar Heels knocked off top-dog Clemson in their first conference game, then played dead while South Carolina had a field day, winning 8-3.

face, whipping South Carolina easily, 8-3.

The Deacs did an exact about but bowing to Clemson. To further complicate matters, N.C. State went down south and blasted the Tigers once more.

Wake Forest smashed Duke 4-1 Thursday with soph Roger Plemmons chalking up the win in going the route. The Deacons have a 5-3 overall record, the Tar Heels are 7-2.

But the records do not tell the story at all, for Wake has a big edge in the statistics department. Before the Duke contest, the Deac team batting average was .304 compared to Carolina's meager .248. The Wake pitchers allowed only three runs per game while Tar Heel moundsmen were giving up four per try.

The expected starting pitchers today are a couple of sleepers with mediocre records who could blossom into two of the league's best. Captain Ben Harding, a lefthander, is expected to get the call for Carolina. Harding has as 1-1 record. For Wake it should be Bobby Lawrence, another southpaw, who has a poor 0-1 record but a fine 2.7 earned run average.

Other starters for the Heels, with batting averages in parentheses are: Dave Dale (.300) at first, Larry Craver (.235) at second, Ferg Norton (.294) at third, Harold Workman (.250) at shortstop, John Burgwyn (.409), Russ Hollers (.316) and Gerald Griffin (.189) in the outfield and Carroll Bolick (.304) behind the plate.

Wake Forest will probably go with Ron Guthrie (.500) at first, Bobby Brown (.265) at second, Charlie Forte (.296) at third, Bill Barr (.286) at short, Jay Franklin (.478), Byron Bullard (.300) and Buster Ledford (.259) in the outfield, and John Tyner (.308) catching.

Last year the Deacs finished fourth in the ACC with a 7-6 league record and a 12-9 overall mark.

Carolina will be gunning for its 18th consecutive win at home. The Tar Heels haven't lost in Emerson Stadium in over two years.

Tar Babies Journey To Meet Wake Forest

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Carolina's freshman Tar Heels journey to Wake Forest today for their first conference battle of the young campaign. The 3 o'clock contest will pit two rather evenly-matched squads against each other, according to Tar Baby Coach Pat Earey. His only knowledge of the Wake frosh is that they possess a "terrific left-handed pitcher and a hot shortstop."

Due to a shortage of uniforms, Coach Earey will carry a squad of 21 players on the trip in this effort to raise the frosh record above the .500 mark. The freshmen split their two previous games, losing to a strong Presbyterian Junior College outfit 9-4, and defeating Oak Ridge Military Academy by the score of 7-5. Probable starting lineup for Carolina will be Larry Neal at third base, Paul Swing at second, Leonard Delloiio at shortstop, Pete Farrior on first, and Pug Hall or Whitey Wade catching to round out the infield. Ronnie Miller, James Helton and E. C. Haithcock are expected to hold down the outfield positions. As in the previous two games, several pitchers probably will be used, with right-hander Nick Warren the starter.

Commenting on his team after seeing them play two games, Coach Eary says that his boys have "good size and physical potential," and that "several of them whip that bat very well." He added, however, that the club lacks the "experience and savvy" of last year's freshmen and doesn't have "nearly the speed" of that team.

Fetchick Holds GGO Golf Lead

By KEN ALYTA

GREENSBORO — (AP) — Mike Fetchick, who says he's getting too old for the pressures of tournament golf, added a second round of 67 Friday to his opening 66 for a 133 total and a three-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the $15,000 Greater Greensboro Open Tournament.

The 36-year-old Yonkers, N. Y., professional, birdied three of the last five holes to add two strokes to the lead he carried into the round.

Sharing second place at 136, three shots away, were Art Wall, the still-sharp Masters champion from Pocono Manor, Pa.; Stan Leonard of Vancouver, and PGA champion Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla.

In fifth place, five shots down at 138, were Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., and Tony Lema of San Leandro, Calif. Maxwell, in second place one shot back of Fetchick to start the round, shot a par 71. Lema had a 70.

Muscling into the picture with 139 totals for a seventh place tie were Dick Knight of San Diego, Calif.; Thorne Wood of nearby Asheboro; and Dave Thomas, young husky from London. Wood, Carolinas PGA champion and a southpaw swinger, and Knight each shot 68, the day's best score. Thomas closed with a five-under par 31 for a 70.

Braves Blank Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitching and power, the twin keys to a pennant last year, got the Milwaukee Braves off to a running start Friday with a 3-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in their National League opener.

Left-hander Warren Spahn choked off two early Pittsburgh threats and breezed to the finish with his 44th major league shutout. In the second, the Pirates loaded the bases but Spahn got Bob Friend on a fly to short center and then fanned Bill Virdon. In the third, Bob Clemente led off with a double, but was unable to score when Ed Mathews made a great stop on a single by Don Hoak and Spahn struck out Bill Mazeroski.

Big Eddie Mathews was the power man, booming a solid homer into the upper right field stands for two runs that broke a scoreless deadlock in the sixth. From that point the Braves won handily, adding two more runs in the seventh, four in a long eighth inning rally.

Indians Nick A's

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Fireman Dick Brodowski came to the ninth inning rescue of young Gary Bell and veteran Herb Score Friday and Cleveland defeated Kansas City 6-4 in an American League opener before 22,630 top-coated fans.

Bell, who had suffered only 1 bad inning, went into the 9th with a 4-run lead. With one out he gave up three straight singles and one run before being relieved by Score.

The left-hander, on whose comback this season the Indians are pinning their hopes, walked the first man he faced on four straight balls, allowed a run on a wild pitch, walked his second batter and was removed in favor of Brodowski after the first two pitches to the third man Score faced also were called balls.

Brodowski forced Bill Tuttle to pop up and Roger Maris to line out to short to end the game.

Tennis Team Whitewashes Wildcats, 9-0

For the Tar Heel netters the 9-0 victory marks their fourth straight win and their fifth of the season against three defeats. The loss left the Wildcats with a 5-3 mark for the year.

Don Skakle's courtmen were in complete charge of the match as the visitors could take but one set off the winners. The only match to go the three set limit was the number three doubles which Phil Causey and Ben Keys won 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The best individual performance of the day was turned in by Carolina's Geoff Black who whipped Semi Mintz 6-0, 6-1. Black turned his big service to his own advantage as he repeatedly followed it to the net and put away Mintz's return on the volley.

In the longest match of the afternoon Marshall Happer and Dick Hodez played 26 games in the opening set before the Carolina junior pulled it out 14-12. Once this was over, however, Happer made quick work of his opponent in the second set as he won 6-1.

Monday afternoon the Carolina courtmen take on Clemson in what figures to be the Tar Heels' toughest conference battle. Coach Leslie Longshore's Tigers will be led by returning veterans Sunny Sumner and Mohammad Nasim. A year ago when the Tar Heels beat Clemson 8-1 Nasim defeated Steve Bank in the only match which a Carolina player lost in conference competition.

THE SUMMARY

Singles — 1. Black (C) defeated Mintz 6-0, 6-1. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Poindexter 6-2, 6-3. 3. Keys (C) defeated McCutchen 6-2, 6-4. 4. Happer (C) defeated Hodez 14-12, 6-1. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Orr 6-4, 6-0. 6. Ricks (C) defeated Broome 6-3, 6-3.

Doubles — 1. Sylvia and Happer (C) defeated Mintz and Poindexter 6-4, 6-1. 2. Black and Lockett (C) defeated Broome and McCutchen 6-1, 6-0. 3. Keys and Causey (C) defeated Hodez and Orr 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Tracksters Face Gamecocks

A blond and boyish miler named Billy Latham and a hulking shot putter named Dave Coates lead the Gamecocks of South Carolina in a dual track meet against Carolina this afternoon at Fetzer Field with the field events beginning at 2:00 p.m. and the running events getting under way at 3. The Tar Heels will be after their third straight win, having previously defeated N. C. State and Clemson.

Latham, winner of the ACC Indoor Mile and the Florida Relays two mile, will be set to continue his distance feud with Tar Heel ace Wayne Bishop, who at present holds a 6-3 advantage over him. Both runners are expected to go both the mile and the two mile.

Coates, who has heaved the 16 pound weight over 54 feet on occasion, is the ACC indoor champion and should completely dominate that event this year.

Others on the South Carolina squad bearing mention are sprinters King Dixon and Jim Cathcart (edged Dave Sime in a 220 last year) and quarter-miler Buddy Mayfield.

Tar Heels to watch other than Bishop are, of course, that big, gangling half miler named Scurlock who likes to fool around with the 440 and who last week chalked up a new school record in that event with a rather rapid 47.9; Ray Stancy, who will try anything, but really shines in the broad jump and the javelin; and workhorse Fraser Smith, who is throwing the discus just a little further every day and may just become the best in the conference.

Five others to keep tab on are Cowles Liipfert in the mile, John Sylvester in the quarter, Bob Sherrill in the high jump, Ward Sims in the pole vault, and Lyndon DeBorde in the hurdles.

Running along simultaneously with the varsity meet will be a freshman triangular encounter between Carolina, South Carolina, and N. C. State.

This year's Tar Babies are one of the strongest, deepest freshmen squads that UNC has ever had. They have previously slaughtered State 102-29 at Raleigh and their sprint medley and mile relay teams took gold medals at the Florida Relays at Gainesville two weeks ago.

They will be led by pole vaulter Barry Tiedemann, who has already broken the 13 foot freshman record; quarter-miler Dennis Rash and half-miler Dave Peltz, both of whom should break the standards in those events; and high jumper J. Whicker, who has surpassed the existing frosh record in practice, but is yet to do it in a meet.

Sprinters Ward Purrington and Tam Leffler, hurdler Wilfred Turner, half-miler Scott Brent, two-miler Rett Everett, and shot putter Harvey Henry are but six of over a dozen more who should place high in their events.

America Has Responsibility, Allen Tells United Nations Model Meeting

This is what George V. Allen, director of the United States Information Agency, said of America's position in the United Nations. He said the United States' position in the UN is "a responsibility that we have. It results in our being involved in a great many questions around the world that we would not have to deal with if we were not in the UN."

Allen said he was not "going to attack the UN, when I am just as enthusiastic about is as you people are." He stated that some of the people who have been the most enthusiastic about the United Nations "have almost turned against it."

In speaking to the Model United Nations Assembly Friday night in Memorial Hall, Allen cited one of Woodrow Wilson's Fourteen Points as being the "beginning of a new era" in the field of diplomacy. The point he gave was the one providing for "open covenants openly arrived at."

He said the question of "open covenants openly arrived at" has gone so far that some people have said "Maybe we'd better go back to diplomacy."

Allen, a former assistant secretary of state, asserted that people have tended to turn against the United Nations because they "think that if every problem is thrown into the public arena of the UN, the problem will be torn to pieces and relations between nations will be worse than before."

The expert on Near East and African affairs told the crowd of about 70 delegates and about the same number of spectators that by use of the policy of "open diplomacy" nations can arrive at agreements. "But if you want to succeed, you've got to be tough about it."

Allen asserted that the diplomacy of the United States deals with "radio, newspapers, pamphlets, books, printing and other similar aspects." He stated that the Voice of America "puts on 300,000 words a day in 37 languages."

In speaking of summit meetings, Allen said " a summit meeting is made up of a half dozen individuals at the most. And, at present, it would boil down to only two individuals — President Eisenhower and Russia's Khrushchev."

He stated that Khrushchev is "dealing in two extremes. He is making statements on the radio of letters he has sent to President Eisenhower — before Ike even receives the letters. But on the other hand, Khrushchev is insisting on a summit meeting."

Allen explained these two extremes as being "propaganda and an appeal to the old world type of diplomacy, which should be 'passe' in my opinion."

He said the "old school relationships between nations have regularly ended in wars.

"So why haven't these efforts succeeded better than they have?" he asked.

In answering his own question, Allen said that "people in all countries want peace. But if people everywhere want peace, why don't their governments give it to them?

"There is not enough international understanding at the 'grass roots' level of the people to enable governments to take action to build a more orderly world though the United Nations."

He said the way to achieve this understanding is through study, and exchanges of students — a "people to people movement."

Allen explained this movement as one in which people in the United States "who are interested in a certain field should get in touch with people in the same field in foreign countries."

This would apply a great deal, Allen asserted, to scientists, who "are the most international-minded people in the world."

Allen said that one of the major psychological factors dealing with diplomacy is a phobia which concerns the hatred of foreigners.

"People fear the unknown," he said. "And what you fear you begin to hate."

String Quartet Featured At Tuesday Evening Series

String quartets by Haydn, Bartok and Brahms will be heard Tuesday April 14, when the University String Quartet plays its spring concert on the University of North Carolina campus.

This will be fifth concert of the Tuesday Evening Series presented by the UNC Music Department for the spring semester. The program to be given in Hill Hall at 8 p.m. is open to the public without admission charge.

Quartet members Edgar and Dorothy Alden, Jean Heard and Mary Gray Clarke will be making their second appearance on the series for the current season.

Both Dr. Alden, first violinist and associate conductor of the UNC Symphony, and Miss Clarke, first cellist, teach in the Music Department. Mrs. Alden, violist, and Mrs. Heard, second violinist, are members of the UNC Symphony.

The program will begin with Haydn's Quartet, Op. 64, No. 5, one of the most frequently performed of more than 80 string quartets left by the composer. Published in 1790 the work is often called "The Lark" quartet and is famous for the "perpetuum mobile" finale.

Bartok's last string quartet, No. 6, was written in 1939, six years before the composer's death. A single theme stated at the beginning of each movement is used in various guises throughout the work.

Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2, is the second of three string quartets by Brahms and was written in 1873. The principal theme in the first movement is based on the motto F, A. E, the initial letters of a threeword German phrase, "Frei aber einsam," meaning solitary but free.

ELISHA MITCHELL SOCIETY

Three UNC faculty members will be guest speakers at the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in 206 Phillips Hall.

Mathematics professors J. W. Lasley and A. T. Brauer will discuss the late E. T. Browne as a person and a mathematician.

J. L. Godfrey, dean of the faculty, will speak on "Some Observations on Science and the University of North Carolina.

Joint Glee Club Sing Scheduled For Tonight

A joint concert by the UNC Men's Glee Club and the Woman's College Choir will be presented today at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

The featured work of the evening will be Villa-Lobos' "Mass in Honor of Saint Sebastian." Dr. Robert Morris of WC and Joel Carter of UNC will direct the more than 100 voices in this rarely performed work.

Accompanists for the Villa-Lobos composition will be violinists Midgie Earnhardt, James Holmes and Theodore Quast; violist Hans-Karl Pilts and bassoonists Martha Jane Gilreath and Frank Starbuck.

The WC Choir will also present choral works by Bach, Brahms, Donovan and Bartok. Accompanying the group will be pianist Joyce Boone.

Spirituals, folk songs and other choruses for male voices by Benjamin Britten, Robert Kurka, Charles Talmadge and R. Vaughn Williams will be sung by the UNC Glee Club with Dr. Carter directing and R. V. Fulk accompanying.

Vocal soloists will include sopranos Jo Anne Weber and Jo Ann Curlee, altos Janet Stauffer and Jean W. Penland, tenor Anthony Lampron, baritones Kenneth James and Richard Gerrish and bass Sidney Huggins.

STAFF MEETING

Attention!

All staff members and any students interested in working for The Daily Tar Heel are requested to attend a meeting Monday at 4 p.m. in the newspaper's office in Graham Memorial.

Davis Young, who will take office as editor Monday, said that the meeting was for columnists, reporters, feature writers, business and sports.

THE END

He would like to express his thanks to the student body for having let him assume this office last spring.

Gym Fire Extinguished By Chapel Hill Firemen

A short-circuit in a refrigerator in a basement storage room of the spacious gymnasium caused a fire which subsequently filled the lower halls with smoke and brought the Chapel Hill Fire Department rushing to the scene.

The damage to the room was slight, as only some paint burned off the wall, some fencing sabers were scorched and, of course, the water on the floor.

The refrigerator was carted out of the room after the fire had been extinguished. It was taken outside by way of the gym elevator.

Firemen then completely squelched the remaining fire in the refrigerator, which only contained a few quarts of milk.

Some night workers happened to smell the smoke, or, as one of them put it, "The whole place might've burned."

The workers called the fire department, who arrived shortly to save the gym.

Student Party To Hear Gray, David Grigg

Charlie Gray, student body president, and David Grigg, student body vice-president, will speak at the Student Party meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 in Roland Parker I and II.

John Brooks, SP chairman, has announced that the new chairman will not be elected until the meeting after this one.

Republicans Pick Chairman, Convention Site, And Issue

They are, in that order:

Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky.

Chicago.

Budget balancing.

The GOP National Committee was unanimous in selecting Chicago for the party's 1960 presidential nominating convention site. It set July 25 as the starting date, two weeks after the Democrats are scheduled to begin their convention in Los Angeles.

Morton succeeded Meade Alcorn of Connecticut, who retired. He told the National Committee in accepting its unanimous designation as chairman: "When the fight comes on the budget, I'm in President Eisenhower's corner foursquare and he knows it."

The budget-balancing theme, sounded by Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon yesterday, was echoed by nearly every speaker today.

He told a news conference he had said in Charleston, W. Va., some time ago he was inclined to support Nixon for the 1960 nomination. He added that he had come to know Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York well when the latter served as under secretary of health, education and welfare early in the Eisenhower administration.

As between the two potential rivals for the 1960 nomination, Morton said he will be" absolutely neutral."

"In making the arrangements for the 1960 convention I will be absolutely fair to these two men and to any other aspirants who might come along," he said.

Morton added that he had been assured by friends of both men he was acceptable to them after he had been asked by Eisenhower late in March to take the job Alcorn vacated to return to private law practice.

Saying he had supported Eisenhower's program as much as any member of Congress, Morton told the committee members he is confident the party is making a comeback from its low point in last November's elections.

"The people are getting behind the policies of the president," he said. "They are approving them. And we know we are going to have a proven champion carrying our banner in 1960. There'll be no selling platers in our barn."

The latter was a reference to cheap race horses.

Pleading for party unity, Morton said the Republican candidates in 1960 are going to have to "run on the philosophy of the administration."

Erwin Fuller Outlines Program For 1959-60 Judicial Council

"To maintain responsible conduct among students in all places in all times is one responsibility of the Student Council," Erwin Fuller, new Student Council chairman, said Saturday.

Joe Warner, a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, is the new clerk of the council. He is a member of the attorney general's staff, Student Legislature and Honor System Commission. Vice president of the sophomore class, Warner has served also as an orientation counselor.

Fuller, a member of Delta Sigma Pi, is Audit Board secretary, Professional Interfraternity Council chairman and a member of the Consolidated University Student Council, the Budget Committee, Student Legislature, Order of the Old Well and Phi Eta Sigma.

The new Chairman listed two other responsibilities, equally important, as hearing all cases involving the constitutionality of any legislative or executive action and appeals concerning the election laws.

Fuller emphasized that all of these were important and that the council heard cases involving all three this year.

He added that the council also has the power to review the constitutions and by-laws of any student organization.

In assuming his office, Fuller commended Jim Long, out-going chairman. "Jim Long commanded the respect of all, guided the council's deliberations with skill and impartiality."

He also commended the retiring members — Garrett Folger, Walt Poole, John Owens, Eric Roper, Bob Borden, Don Miller, Mary Todd Baker, Katie Stewart and Toy Johnson — for their work.

"Student Council is an integral part of the student judicial system, and it has a big responsibility. I am very honored to serve in this capacity," he said.

Fuller hopes Student Council will have a chance to provide greater general understanding of "our functions and procedures," and he would like to work with the Orientation Committee to inform new students of the council and the students' responsibility as Carolina students to conduct themselves in a gentlemanly manner at all times.

He gave high praise to the present members and said, "The new members — Neal Boden, John Ray, Wayne Venters — are capable, qualified young men, and I am anticipating that they will realize the seriousness of their responsibility, that they will show interest and dedication in their service."

Feature Editor

Miss Rowlette is a junior from Shelbyville, Ky. She transferred here from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., where she was editorial editor of the student newspaper.

"I am pleased that Miss Rowlette has accepted this position," remarked Gans. "Her fine feature work throughout the year will no doubt be of great help in organizing a feature staff for the future."

Henderson Strike: When Will It End

By MARY ALICE ROWLETTE

The following is the sixth in a series on the Henderson strike compiled by Ron Shumate, Mary Alice Rowlette, and Peter Ness.)

"When will it end?"

That's what people all over the state are asking as the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mill strike goes into its 23rd week with no hope of settlement in sight.

However, it can be safely assumed that it will end—sometime.

This may take many more weeks —no one knows—but regardless of how long it takes for mill and union officials to come to a decision, the effects of the strike will go on for years.

There will be more by-products of this strike than a settlement.

One of the more obvious will be unemployment. If the mills should shut down approximately 10 per cent of the city's population will be without jobs.

These people know no other kind of work and it is certain that no other cotton mill in the state will be willing to employ them.

If the mill returns to normal production some of the strikers will have had their jobs filled by strike breakers.

The mill officials have aleady announced that they will not take back any striker who has been convicted of violence.

Those who may be lucky enough to get their jobs back will lose their seniority and possibly will have to work for lower salaries.

All this will greatly multiply the burden of debt the strikers have been collecting for the past 22 weeks.

Although the union is paying for the necessities of life it is not going to help workers make payments on furniture and appliances bought "on the easy payment plan."

Ordinarily, the downtown stores would repossess unpaid-for merchandise, but, because of the mob spirit that blankets the city, they are afraid to do this.

Likely as not, the strikers would destroy the furniture that a store threatened to repossess.

The merchants just aren't willing to risk it right now—but they will when the strike is over.

All of these things, however, will be solved, although it is nearly impossible to see how and it is obvious that it will take a long time for the strikers to get "back to normalcy" financially.

However, there are other, less tangible, by-products of the strike that will probably live as long as this generation lives.

It is highly probable that the rate of juvenile delinqency in Henderson will rise appreciably in the next few years.

Young children stand on the sidewalk and jeer at police officers, shake their fist at them and call them names that the children don't even know the meaning of.

It stands to reason that these children aren't going to lose that disrespect for law enforcement officers just because their parents, whom they are parroting, have gone back to work.

This writer saw a little girl of eight call a patrolman "manhandler," and tell another one that she would like to give him a haircut "down to here," pointing at her throat.

Disillusionment will accompany the bitterness the strikers carry in their hearts. The union has seen to it that the strike has taken on a religious flavor. One local minister partially attributed the reduced church attendance to this.

Some of the signs on the picket lines have carried such slogans as "Jsus leads us, The Union Feeds us, and John D. Needs us" What sort of let down will it be for these people when the union packs its collective bags and leaves them to struggle out of the mud of hate and bitterness and financial strife?

Social standing and respect of the community is another value the mill workers will lose. Approximately 30 years ago the workers were known as "lint heads" to the rest of the population.

Gradually, however, the mill workers began making more money, their children started going to high school "up town" and they began to lose the stigma of "lint heads."

But now they have lost most of the respect of the rest of the city and are regressing to where they were 30 years ago.

A pretty little high school girl seemed to accurately sum up the feeling of the rest of the city toward the strikers as she watched a mob in front of the police station. "Oh, they disgust me," she said.

Is it going to take another 30 years for the strikers to regain the status they had 22 weeks ago?

The strike will end. In a relatively short time there will be no more picket lines, no more rock throwing riots, no more dynamite blasts.

But a strike produces more, much more, than pickets, riots and blasts.

Whenwill it end?

Retrospect After A Long Year

Yes, I'm A Radical

(Despite the wise counsel of Peter Young and John Minter, the editor decided not to use the work of the same name by Peter Maurin in an issue of The Catholic Worker of last year. Instead, he decided to try his hand at the subject.)

The cry was out early. It began in the editorial campaign last year, and continued without respite throughout the entirety of this year. The cry "Gans is a radical," was heard campuswide.

Well, the answer to that cry is in too. I am a radical.

I bear that tag with pride, if it means that I would like to see the world changed in such a way that the individual is free to develop to the best of his ability.

I am happy to be a radical if this means that I cannot tolerate the complacency, the anti-intellectualism, the staidness, and the prudery of American society vintage 1959.

I am unashamed to feel that the campus needs many speedy changes in order to keep up with the demands of a world which is changing more rapidly than man is making his adaptation toward it.

I am satisfied with the term radical if it means that such a person has a great faith in man's ability to mold his own destiny, to create his world, to chart his course, and to better his condition.

Radical, I'll gladly be, if it means that I am willing to face the cold hard facts of the cold hard world without shying away from them into diversions and pleasures for the sake of diversions.

Indeed, if radical is what I am, then radical I want to be, for I want to be me — a person who believes in man, who believes that man can carve his heaven or his hell in this world, who believes that man has the potential for greatness and who is both the source and the instrument of inspiration.

I firmly believe in punching holes into the bubble of illusion, in trying to show society, even the microcosm that is the campus, what false precepts exist and what must be done to achieve reality.

Moreover, no small item should escape the range of my concern for those who would believe that every tale that good and right always win, are likely to be shocked into the reality that it takes considerable work, and that their privacy can be shattered by the determined forces of what they believe to be wrong.

If then being a radical is believing in man, being aware of change, wanting change to meet that change, fighting passionately for the freedom of the individual, and seeking to acquaint the people of this campus with some of the harder realities of this world, then thank heaven I'm a radical.

A charge has been leveled at me that I am partisan, and I am partisan. I am partisan to any person, group or organization which gives promise of bringing some of the ideas that I cherish into reality. I will continue to be partisan toward these people, ideas, and groups, and if one would think about it again they would not think it so objectionable.

Yes, I am a radical and I am partisan, but perhaps with more radicalism and more partisanship, man may some day be truly free.

Student Body

The student body currently dwells in a fog. To be sure, it is not necessarily of its own making totally, but the fog is there, it is dense, and penetration is quite difficult.

The fog is one of unawareness. The basic unawareness is of the world outside the dormitory room, the fraternity bar, or the home town, but there are others.

There is the ignorance of ideas, the firm belief that the economic necessities in life are the most singularly important entity, the preservation of icons of the past, and the pursuit of pleasure.

And the sun will not penetrate the fog, unless something is done. In yesterday's paper, some suggestions were made as to how the University could meet some of its responsibilities in this area.

The student, however, can meet some of the responsibilities also, and it is high time that he did.

The first important step is the creation of an atmosphere conducive to learning. The second is leaving open the possibility of wider perceptual horizons before they are shut finally.

The first involves the individual student learning to have a healthy respect for the rights of other students. This means simply creating the type of quiet necessary in the residence halls for contemplation of academic material. If the students cannot be responsible for this then it is the prerogative of the administration to take over government in this vital area.

The second involves such things as deferred rush. A system must be devised so that the student is able to adjust to his environment, to realize the scope of the world in which he lives, to be able to make a wise choice before his thinking is channelled down one small direction.

But there are many other things that can be done. Student government can actively program events that will bring home issues and happenings of major importance to students, they can stage symposiums and forums that will bring to light some of the time immemorial problems that humanity has faced through the ages, they can hold discussion groups so that students are encouraged to speak out in their feelings and learn through interaction with others, and they can use the legislature as a body whereby the student's will or views are projected into action not only on the washing machine level, but on the state and national level. In all other countries of the world, the student community is a dominant force in bringing about change and in supplying leadership. Only in America do the students lack the initiative, drive, and sense of responsibility necessary to supply leadership, and now more than ever before this leadership is vital.

The DTH

Every summary should have its proper end, and the end of the year ought to include a summary of The Daily Tar Heel of the past year.

The purpose of this year's Tar Heel has been in N.S.A. jargon "to improve the campus climate toward learning." It has set out flatly to stimulate thought, to bring to the fore ideas of different people who have different view points.

In another sense, it was an attempt to build a paper out of the shambles of the year before. It was an attempt to get expanded coverage, improve the financial side, and utilize some of the resources of the University. To a certain extent all these goals were reached, but there are many goals still to be reached.

It would be best to begin by dissecting the paper into its essential entrails. The first job was to recruit a staff and to improve the financial aspect from deficit to profit.

In the fall, perhaps the largest staff in The Daily Tar Heel's history turned up for work, and by December the paper still possessed enough of these to make it the largest staff in the recent period. Yet, by February many had dropped out and by March even fewer were remaining.

This is the most necessary aspect of the paper. Without a staff one cannot hope to cover the campus adequately and although one can get considerable mileage in the fall, it will not make up for the dearth during the next several months. In other word some method must be obtained for retaining staff members, and perhaps the best way would be a small monetary compensation on a quantity of published material basis. The Daily Tar Heel did a fairly good job in covering the campus this year, but there is so much more to do.

The newspaper tried to establish a stringer system to implement getting the entire campus covered. The stringer system would have meant that there was a person in each dormitory, fraternity, sorority, organization, and department whom the Tar Heel could call weekly to find out what was going on, and the person would be in a position to call the newspaper if anything occurred of note. The fact that this was not completed this year should be no bar to the speedy completion of the stringer system which will prove in the long run to be a vital asset to the paper.

One idea last year was to have a news tip system where the Tar Heel would pay so much for the best news tip phoned in a given period of time. This did not work, and the attempt along this line should be abandoned.

There is a definite need for more feature material in the Tar Heel. The features that were written this year were by and large good, but if a staff turns up next fall, as they usually do in the fall, more work should be obtained from them in the way of features. There are several interesting personalities on the campus and many things of historical interest. They went largely untouched this year due to the size of the staff at the time when touching would have been possible.

Last year, the Tar Heel pledged itself to undertake several studies and investigations into various facets of campus and university life. Some were done, and on the whole they were interesting and informative, but more can and ought to be done. Again the maximum amount of staff members is essential to the efficient operation of the paper.

Finally, as far as news coverage is concerned, too little has been done in the way of interpretive reporting. Again a certain amount of new ground was broken when faculty members were asked to give what they viewed as the significance of some of the major events that ocurred, but more ought to be done in this area. The resources of information in the University are great. They ought to be utilized.

The second most important facet of any newpaper operation is the business aspect. Here again, a great deal was done, and a great deal is still necessary.

The Daily Tar Heel set up a new system of advertising this year in which commissioned salesmen were put on routes and would get a certain proportion of what advertising they brought in this year. Needless to say there was more advertising this year, and The Daily Tar Heel is curently showing a healthy profit. This means, of course, that the paper will cost less to the student at the present time, and more money can be put into other areas. However, with more advertising several things are possible. The first is a larger paper, the second is purchase of the newspaper's own printing facilities, and the third is improving the present office facilities. This can only be accomplished if all areas of the potential advertising market are thoroughly staffed daily, which has not always been the case this year but can be the case in years to come. A brief passing mention should be made to the need for a deadline system on advertising so that the customer can get proofs in advance and the Tar Heel can in no way be liable for errors. It will enable the paper to plan ahead on its layout, so that items of news are not excluded.

The Daily Tar Heel realized more revenue from subscriptions this year than it did last, but more can be done in this area. The alumni as a source of revenue ought to be tapped, and a median rate for subscriptions between last year's low and this year's high should be instituted so that maximum return can be expected from a selling campaign.

One of the aims of The Daily Tar Heel should be for a larger paper, and this is most noticeable in respect to sports coverage. One cannot do enough in this area in respect to coverage in the form of features for minor sports, intra-murals, and women's sports until space is provided. Again, here advertising is the key.

The editorial page has been, to say the least, the subject of some commentary this year. It is certain that the page stimulated many ideas and made some people, who had not heretofore, think. It also created certain resentment, so that its efficiency rating might be lower than might be expected with the type of free editorial page run ths year. Yet, opinions from all sides ought to be solicited and no subject ought to be sacrosanct from the scrutiny of the pen.

Significant strides were made this year in the field of reviewing. Book reviews, play reviews, and music reviews on a semi-regular basis were started in earnest and should be continued. There should also be added, movie reviews and television items of note.

The faculty was used to a certain extent on the editorial page to give significance to recent and ageless issues, but more should be done to get faculty contributions, and perhaps a thorough faculty series on areas of knowledge or on methodology would be one way of getting some insight into the breadth of education.

There was a lack of humor this year, regretfully. Whit Whitfield supplied some last spring, but he graduated, leaving for the rest of the year a void which has not been replaced and ought to be.

Finally, real strides were made in bringing present day issues into focus. The news of the week in review and other editorial commentary did a great deal to present the important present day happenings and issues to the students. Whether they sunk in or not will remain a question.

Staff training is another important aspect, for the paper is faced with the respinsibility of perpetuating itself. This responsibility was discharged this year to a great extent, but again more can be done. The campus now possesses six people who could serve as managing editors of the Tar Heel, four potential sports editors, and even more news and associate editors. Moreover, several Tar Heel staff members have a fairly thorough knowledge of the campus. More can be done next year to teach staff members what is necessary technically and about the campus.

If there was one most important weakness this year on The Daily Tar Heel, it was organization. This is a flaw that the editor must admit with a certain regret. The editor conceived of himself as a one man gang and he delegated much less authority than perhaps was wise. It is to be hoped that the new editor and subsequent editors do not fall into this delusion.

This then is the essence of this year's Tar Heel. It has been an interesting year, as even the most violent opponents of the present editor will attest to. It was a building year, and perhaps in the near future the mansion will be built.

This is for the more narrow minded among us.

Swan Song

Approximately two days after I took over the reigns of office last year, I went into the Chuckwagon for a late coffee after putting my second "baby" to bed. I was seated at the counter when I heard a raucous, drunken voice yell, "Recall!" I looked toward the direction from which the sound came, and a finger was pointed my way, and a voice said, "Yes, you're gonna be recalled."

Well, I wasn't recalled. This does not seem much to say since 64 other editors were not recalled, but in the context of last year's recall, in the climate of opinion on this campus which is opposed to outspokeness, and with the granted outspokeness of myself, the fact that I was not recalled represents a singular achievement. There were probably other achievements, some of them listed elsewhere on this page, but this is not written to discuss achievements. It is simpley written to describe a job, a job which goes on, but which I will no longer execute by virtue of the rules of the game.

No one who has not been editor of The Daily Tar Heel knows what being editor of The Daily Tar Heel is like. No one knows its joys nor its heartaches. No one knows the deep personal attatchment one can develop for something as impersonal as a newspaper, and yet that feeling is somewhat like that of a mother to a child. Only there is a birth once a day for over 180 days, and sometimes the pains of childbirth are extreme.

In a speech to the Student Party three or four weeks ago, I described some of the things that an editor must put up with, and since it was well expressed then, I think it would be wise to relate it to the student body now with certain corrections and additions.

"You must put up with everybody in the world wanting space on the front page, with candidates and party chairmen worrying about whether their announcement was placed a half inch higher or lower than the announcement of the opposition, of teaching each new staff member that you set your typewriter at 66 spaces and that you write a lead a certain way, only to find that half of them are gone by first semester final exams, with getting complaints about yesterday's editorial before you have had a chance to see what a proofreading mess was made out of today's and before you have had time to think about the one for tomorrow.

"You have to worry about complaints about the comics not being in the paper or being a day behind or being a day ahead or being in the paper at all. You are forced to look at a page which says all too clearly that soccer Coach Marv Allen's name has been changed to Mary Allen or that Al Goldsmith, University Party politician was named athlete of the week, or that the blond comet John Schroeder has been changed to the blind comet, or a discussion question on the campus code has been changed to "The Campus Coed: Does It Work?" or that the Baptist Church is no longer caring for children during the service, it is now carving them or that the political science professor's talk has suddenly degenerated into something that looks like and is a society column in the Chapel Hill News Leader."

There are many more things one can remember. One can remember the late nights of vigil while one lovingly watched the paper go to press. One can count the innumerable shirts that are beyond cleaning due to printers ink deposits that somehow were put there while the editor tried playing compositor. One cannot count the classes missed, nor the frequent trips to instructors with the hope that maybe they would have mercy in their heart and let you remain in school long enough so that you could cram for your final examination and pass it.

There are the times when you are not proud of your work, when the baby has a defect, when your editorial is the epitome of mediocrity or when your news staff has made an egregious error. There are times when you go to sleep tired, wake up tired, and spend the day tired and there is no respite in the tomorrow. And there are many times you wonder whether the job is worth it, whether to lose the thread of academic endeavours is worth your placing so much time and effort into something else.

But there are other times. There are times when there is a certain static electricity between your brain and your hand, and your hand and the typewriter which says that what you are writing is good and that you have managed to corner one end of the whole truth which you are so vainly seeking. And this electricity permeates your body driving you onward through lack of sleep, through the hundred and one little decisions that have to be made daily, through the sordid detail that you come to have respect for, through the technicality that you begin to realize is important, and sometimes, only sometimes, the end product is worthwhile.

You meet people in the editorship. You meet some who say one thing to your face and another behind your back. You meet some who are reflecting an interest and are solely concerned for that interest. You meet some who show you the potential of goodness or even greatness, and then disappoint you at every turn. And for all these you meet some whom you will remember for the rest of your life—some who will be the type of firm friend that distance and time cannot change. You meet some who will show the goodness and greatness, and you can predict it accurately. And for all the unhappy experiences with people you know that it was worth meeting them, and that you profited immeasurably more from these interactions than you would have, had you been closeted in some cubby hole.

You are forced to face calumny and slander, are forced to see your ideas trampled by the multitude, and in spite of this you go on in the hope that some will accept them and that others at a later date will give a glimmer of recognition that the popular then was the unpopular now.

And fervently you hope you have done a good job — that you have brought respect to the office you hold, that you have done some of the many things that need to be done, with the full realization that there are many, many, that are still left undone and need doing.

And this is the story, or at least a small part of it. It is a story filled with humor, with grief, with comedy, with tragedy, with respect, with degradation, with success and with failure. It is a story of a beginning that may reach culmination on the campus in several years and in my life in many more.

And now the job is over and with it the headaches, the heartaches, the humor, and the tears. I shall be sorry to see it go.

Representative

For all of you who felt that your opinion was not represented in any form in The Daily Tar Heel during the past year, the following space is reserved for your opinions:

Credits

At this, the end of one year, the editor feels that it is important that those who made contributions to putting out The Daily Tar Heel during the past year get the credit they deserve. Some have appeared in the mast head on the bottom of page two but most have gone unrecognized through this year, except for the occasional by-line.

The editor at this time would like to thank Managing Editors Charlie Sloan, Stan Fisher, Chuck Flinner, and Clarke Jones for their competent work, News Editor Ann Frye for her devoted endeavours, Sports Editor Rusty Hammond for his fine sports work, Advertising Manager Fred Katzin for both his work and for being the type of person he is, Business Manager Walker Blanton for his competent discharging of the fiscal responsibilities, Associate Editors Ed Rowland and Anthony Wolff for their work and particularly Wolff for his ability to stir up a little interest on the campus, Avery Thomas for his work in the subscription department, and Bob Walker for delivering the papers regularly and well during most of the year.

The editor would like to make mention of Jack, Shank, Wentz, Howard, Obie, and Clarence out at the shop who helped so much in seeing to it that the paper was published every day during the past year.

The editor would like to make special mention of Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver whose aid and counsel was so helpful in gaining insight into some of the more important things in this University.

The editor could not have done without these people, and the real credit for the day to day work must go to them.

Delta Sigma Pi Holds Membership Initiation

They are: Bill Stephenson, president; Ed McCormick, secretary, John Boles, Gene Autry, Walt Poole, Bob Gibbons, James Berry, Stephen Hamlet, Herman Ray and Jim McMillian.

They are: Charles C. Ervin, president of the Ervin Construction Co., Inc.; George R. Herbert, president of the North Carolina Research Triangle Institute; Richard I. Leven, Instructor in Industrial Management, UNC Business School and Hugh Chatham, president of Chatham Mills.

Mr. Ervin is the recipient of the 1958 North Carolina Young Businessman Award given annually by Alpha Lambda of Delta Sigma Pi.

Social activities honoring the new members included dinner at the Ranch House last night and an informal party tonight.

Sound And Fury

The 1959 Sound and Fury production still needs students to work on sets, posters, costumes and props.

Al Salley, producer of Sound and Fury, said the work would not entail extended periods of time. Students interested have been asked to come by Caldwell Z.

The Sound and Fury production of "Oh, Hellas" will be presented in May.

Jackson Scholarship Victor

Robert W. Madry Jr. of Chapel Hill High School was announced Friday as winner of the $2,400 Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship.

It is awarded on a basis of merit and leadership for four years of study at Carolina.

He is the son of Mrs. Robert W. Madry and the late Mr. Madry who was director of the University News Bureau for more than 30 years.

At Chapel Hill High School, Bobby Madry has made A's and B's, has starred in football and basketball, has served as a class officer and ranks high in Scouting, sports writing, in the Young People's Service League, in dramatics and the high school band. He has been a camp counselor.

He is undecided about his course of study, but is considering medicine, mathematics and journalism.

The Herbert Worth Jackson Scholarship is one of the most valuable awarded to a student by the University. Need is not a criteria. The qualifications of applicants are high scholastic rank, character, qualities of leadership, achievements, physical health and vigor, and promise of future distinction.

The Jackson Scholarship memorializes the late Herbert Worth Jackson, graduate of the University in the class of 1886. It was established by his widow, Mrs. Annie H. Jackson of Richmond, Va. Awards of $600 annually are made available to the scholarship recipients.

The selection committee was composed of Herbert Worth Jackson Jr. and Herbert Worth Jackson III, Prof. James R. Caldwell Jr. of the University History Department and Edward French of the University Admissions Office.

Keller To Deliver Humanities Lecture

Prof. John Esten Keller of the Department of Romance Languages will deliver the Humanities Division Faculty Lecture at the University of North Carolina this spring. Set for 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 14, in Carroll Hall, the lecture will be on the subject, "The Spanish Chaucer."

A professor of Spanish, Keller has been on the UNC faculty since 1950, having taught at the University of Tennessee for three years after receiving his Ph. D. degree at Chapel Hill in 1946.

Last month his "Libro de los gatos," one of medieval Spain's great collections of short stories was published by the Spanish Superior Council of Scientific Investigations. Professor Keller is an authority on the Canticles of King Alfonso and is currently working on another book entitled "The Life and Times of Alfonso the Wise."

Keller's lecture is the concluding one of the 1958-59 series of faculty lectures sponsored by the Division on Humanities in the College of Arts and Sciences.

"Inherit The Wind" Tryouts

The Carolina Playmakers will hold tryouts for "Inherit the Wind" Monday, April 13 at 4:00 and 7:30 p.m. in The Forest Theatre. The show is directed by Thomas M. Patterson, of the Department of Dramatic Art.

The cast includes speaking roles for six women and 24 men, plus a number of non-speaking members of the town.

"Inherit the Wind" is dramatized from the famous Clarence Darrow-William Jennings Bryan "monkey trial" which took place in Dayton, Tenn., during July of 1925. The final offering of The Carolina Playmakers' season, "Inherit the Wind," will be presented in The Forest Theatre May 9-12.

Copies of the script have been placed in the Reserve Reading Room of the University Library for those who wish to read the play before trying-out. Tryouts are open to all students and residents of the Chapel Hill area.

Honors Program

Students interested in the interdepartmental honors course in writing have been asked to contact either John Ehle of the Radio-Television-Motion Pictures Department, Miss Jessie Rehder of the English Department or Tom Patterson of the Dramatic Art Department.

Candidates for the fall course are being chosen and will be requested to attend special meetings next month.

Covering The Campus

ARCHAEOLOGICAL LECTURE

Prof. George E. Mylonas, president of the Archaeological Institute of America, will speak here Monday at 8 p.m. in Gardner Hall, Room 105. The topic of his speech is "Mycenae: The Capital City of Agamemnon."

Prof. Mylonas' lecture is being sponsored by the N. C. Society of the Archaelogical Institute of America.

The lecture is open to the public.

BINKLEY BAPTIST CHURCH

"Let Us Worship" will be the subject of the Rev. Robert E. Seymour's sermon Sunday at the 11 a.m. worship service of the Olin T. Binkley Memorial Baptist Church in Gerrard Hall.

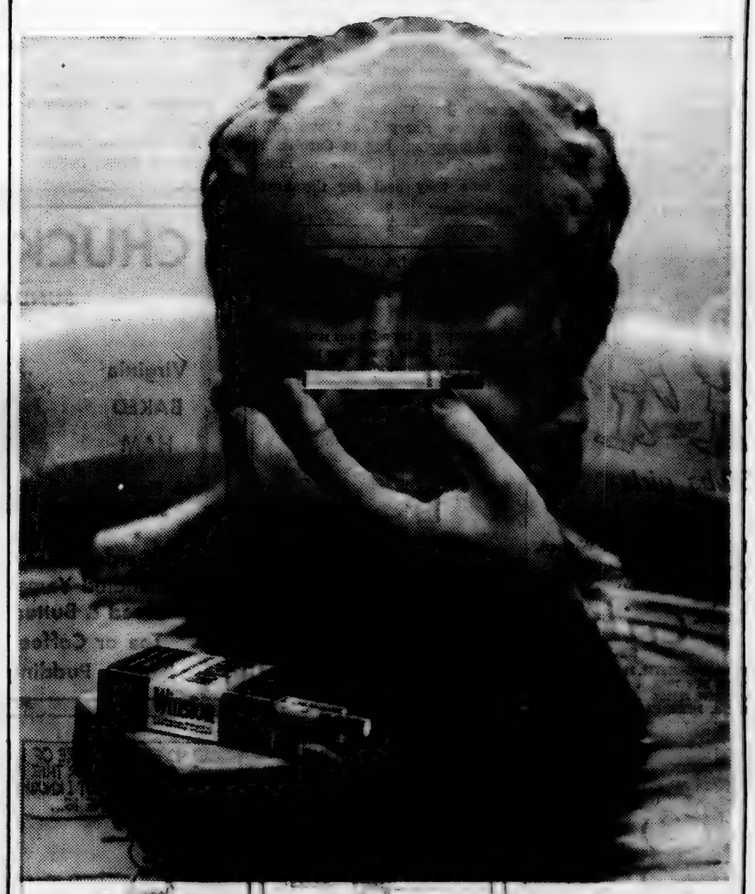
ARCHIMEDES
makes another great discovery...
It's what's up front that counts



You can reproduce the experiment. It's easy as π. (Yes, you can do it in the bathtub.) Assuming that you have first visited your friendly tobacconist, simply light your first Winston and smoke it. Reasoning backwards, the discovery proceeds as follows: first, you will notice a delightful flavor, in the class of fresh coffee or of bread baking. Obviously, such flavor cannot come from the filter. Therefore, it's what's up front that counts: Winston's Filter-Blend. The tobaccos are selected for flavor and mildness, then specially processed for filter smoking. This extra step is the real difference between Winston and all other filter cigarettes. Besides, it's why Winston is America's best-selling filter cigarette.

Trackmen Whip Gamecocks; Two Wins For Scurlock

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's unbeaten track team raced to their third consecutive win of the season here yesterday by overpowering South Carolina 75-56.

Though the Tar Heels won the team score, the individual honors went to the Gamecocks' Billy Latham, who romped in with firsts in both the mile and 2-mile events. Latham bested his old enemy, Wayne Bishop, in the mile.

Galloping Dave Scurlock also copped two blue ribbons, one in the 220 and one in the 440. He did not run in the 880, but Cowles Liipfert of Carolina did and brought home the bacon.

Hurdler Lyndon DeBorde had his best day of the season in taking both the high and low hurdles. Versatile Ray Stanley won the broad jump and javelin, and finished second in the discus.

The Tar Heels' next meet is the big one-Maryland. Next Saturday Carolina will journey to College Park to try and upend a squad they haven't whipped since the ACC was formed.

The Carolina frosh completely ran away from the State yearlings, winning 98 2/3 - 31 1/3. The Tar Babies are also unbeaten so far this season. The frosh picked up first places in every event but one, the javelin.

The Varsity Summary:

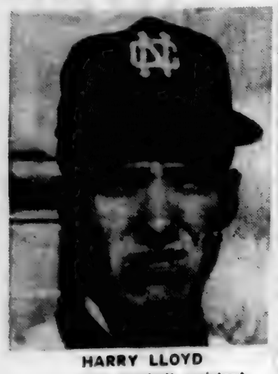
New Diamond Coach Harry Lloyd No Stranger To Fans

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

A young man assisting Head Baseball Coach Walter Rabb this year needs no introduction to Carolina fans for some four or five years ago. He's Harry Lee Lloyd, a former outstanding second-baseman with the Tar Heels in 1952-55. Though never playing with a conference champion here, he was one of the leaders on the 1953 club that battled Duke all the way to the final game of the season before losing out for the Southern Conference title.



HARRY LLOYD
. . . new baseball assistant

Lloyd was born 27 years ago in Durham and chose Carolina as his alma mater, graduating in 1955. He promptly assumed a coaching position in Bertie County, then moved on to Corinth-Holder High School where he has coached baseball and basketball for the past two years. Harry has never given up playing altogether, spending the last four years playing winter ball in Nova Scotia. A change of scenery is in his plans for this summer as he has signed to play semi-pro ball in Pierre, South Dakota.

Married and having a two-year old son, Harry settled down early after a couple of unfortunate injuries prevented him from taking a stab at professional baseball. He is now working on a Master's Degree in Physical Education.

As for the present Carolina baseballers, Lloyd feels that "if we get the breaks, we stand a good chance" for the conference crown. He thinks "a 9-5 or 10-4 record should be good enough to win" and that Clemson and Wake Forest will offer the strongest opposition. When asked about the team's chances in national competition should they emerge victorious within the conference, Harry indicated that the relative inexperience of the squad shouldn't present a drawback.

In speaking of the Tar Heel's only loss to South Carolina, Lloyd came forth with an interesting note "You know, Coach Rabb said that was the first time a South Carolina team had beaten him in twelve years!" Carolina fans can be sure that, with his keen baseball sense, Harry Lee Lloyd will be an important cog in Carolina's wheel of baseball fortune, no matter who they beat for the next twelve years.

Carnevale Heads Coaching Clinic

GREENSBORO (AP) — A former coach at North Carolina, Ben Carnevale, comes back to the Tar Heel state this summer to lecture on basketball at the North Carolina Coaching Clinic here the first week in August.

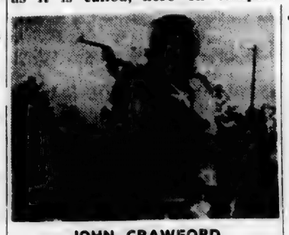
Big Four Rod & Gun Set Tuesday

By TOMMY JOHNSON
DTH Intramurals Bureau

Competition is expected to be keen in the Third Annual Big Four Rod and Gun Meet Tuesday at the Durham Wildlife Club. UNC outdoorsmen will be led by two veterans in their field; Gay Cowan in the trap shooting and John Crawford in target rifle. These two sharpshooters have already established themselves as the best on the Carolina campus in their respective events. Crawford has carried away three trophies in the annual fall UNC meets. Cowan has walked away with the winners trophy for the last two years. However, neither of these two have been able to come out ahead in previous Big Four Meets. They are expected to be in top running this year.

Bob Cofod, Howard Lewis and Rusty Sharp are expected to lead the UNC archers against a strong State College delegation. Most of their archers are members of an archery club which has been active on the campus for several years. The newly formed UNC Outing Club is sponsoring the formation of such a club, or interest group as it is called, here on campus.



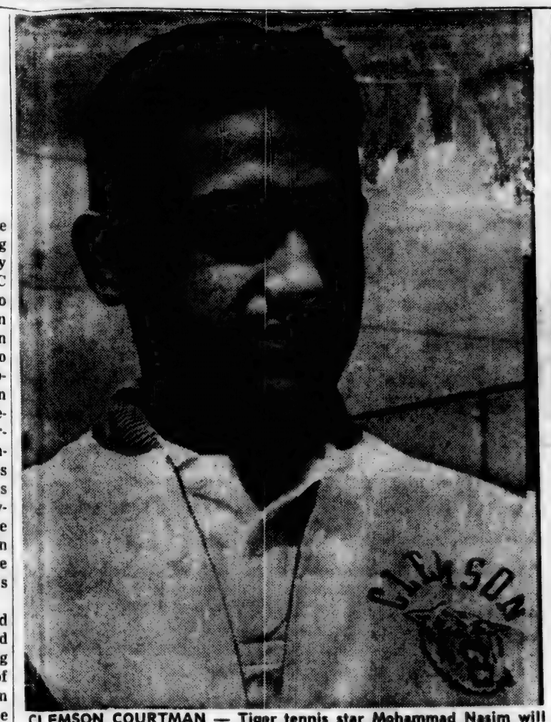
JOHN CRAWFORD
. . . Rod & Gun Champ

The future looks brighter in this event.

In bait casting, Tommy Wellons will be the mainstay for the home team with Dick Rocco close behind. Wellons was the winner last fall in the UNC Meet. Wake Forest is expected to have several good bait casters on hand with State bowing out in this event. Carolina came home with the winner in this event last year as Clete Oakley made the top score.

Entries will still be excepted until 3:30 on the day of the event. Persons interested in participating may contact the Intramural Department in Woollen Gym for additional information. UNC entries will not be limited. Co-Eds are eligible.

Programs for this, the Third Annual Rod and Gun Meet, are now available in 315 Woollen. A map will appear in the Tar Heel on Tuesday morning with directions on how to find the Durham Wildlife Club Area. Persons who would like to get a ride to the area should contact the Intramural Office.



CLEMSON COURTMAN — Tiger tennis star Mohammad Nasim will play here Monday afternoon when his team meets Carolina in an important ACC match. When the two teams met last year Nasim defeated Steve Bank for the only Carolina loss against conference competition.

Golfers Lose To UVA 15-12

Carolina's previously undefeated golfers tasted defeat for the first time this season Friday when Virginia downed the Tar Heels 15-12.

DECANTIS SIGNS

CHICAGO (AP) — Halfback Emil DeCantis of North Carolina, the Chicago Cardinals' 10th draft choice this year, has been signed by the club, it was announced Saturday.

The Rains Came

The varsity baseball game between Carolina and Wake Forest, scheduled for Emerson Stadium yesterday at 3, was called off due to wet grounds. The game is postponed and will be played later in the season.

New Government Heads Address Student Party

By STAN BLACK

With the close of the campus elections there comes a call for unity behind the newly elected officers of the student body.

It was with coopeartion and unity in mind that Charlie Gray and David Grigg, the new UP president and vice president, addressed the Student Party last night.

Gray outlined some of his administration's aims and the general direction in which student government will move in the coming year. Immediate action will be taken in the areas of fraternities and dormitories, he stressed. Specific problems needing work are fraternity scholarship and faculty relations. In the dorms living conditions, social activities, and safety measures will get attention.

Concerning finances, Gray noted that as treasurer this past year he has seen much loose handling of funds by student government supported organizations. A year-round budget committee will be set up to deal with this problem and others arising in the field.

Other campus problems that will be looking into soon include high laundry charges, the high cost of books and the handling of student traffic violations. Also some action must be taken to liberalize or clarify the drinking and gambling rules, according to Gray.

Concerning the Student Party control of the Student Legislature, Gray said that " I only hope that we can approach these problems with a united and cooperative viewpoint." He emphasized that he will disregard party lines in making key campus appointments in the coming weeks.

David Grigg, newly elected vice president of the student body and speaker of the Student Legislature, added his request for bipartisan action toward the solution of campus problems. Noting that voting in the Legislature has traditionally cut across party lines, Grigg said that "if we work together, this can be a truly productive year for student government."

Jim Crownover, former SP floorleader, concurred with the UP leaders' remarks, saying that "our 30-20 majority in Student Legislature can help to make it an effective instrument of Student Government."

In the meeting's only business an amendment to the Student Party constitution was passed to provide for a single annual election of all party officers, including treasurer, after the spring elections.

Y Committee Will Interview For Cabinet

The Executive Committee of the YMCA will be holding interviews during the next two weeks for applacants for the 14 positions open on the YMCA Cabinet for 1959-1960. The membership of the Council will consist of the different areas of Y work.

The 14 positions open for next year included the Worship and Vespers, the Y-Night and the Television Program committees.

The Worship and Vespers Committee is responsible for planning the worship programs for Y meetings. This committee of the YWCA has been conducting vesper services in the girls' dorms and sororities. The YMCA hopes to find a boy who has interest in a similar program within the boys' dorms and fraternities to fill this position.

The Y-Night area brings all segments of the student body together in two different types of programs. There is the Y-Night Picnic held each spring under the big trees around Davie Poplar. During the evening, students mingle together and are entertained by a noted speaker or a combo.

In the fall the Cavalcade of Talent is presented. Because of the extent of student talent and the interest shown by the audiences, two talent shows may be presented during the coming year.

The Y will also sponsor in the fall a new series of the TV program, "Dimensions." The cabinet position for planning these programs requires a person who has some experience in this type of programming plus some knowledge of the religious significance of the arts and willingness to work with the Cabinet in planning the TV series.

Mother Of Year To Be Chosen

A campus Mother of the Year will be honored at a special banquet May 4 by the Chapel Hill Merchants Association.

The Merchants Association will accept nominations until April 25 for the campus Mother of the Year. The nominees may include house mothers, wives of professors or wives of students. Last year Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, house mother in Spencer, was named Mother of the Year.

Nominations, with the name and address of the candidate and reasons why she should be Mother of the Year, are to be mailed to the Merchants Association, 117 N. Columbia St.

A committee of three unidentified Chapel Hill citizens will select the campus Mother of the year and a Mother of the Year for both Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

At the banquet May honoring the three mothers, gifts and engraved silver trays will be presented.

Four Named By Duff To GMAB Committees

Angus Duff, president of Graham Memorial Activities Board, announced Monday the new co-chairmen of the Social Committee and the members of the Productions Board.

Ann Lucas was appointed to serve with Hal Miller as co-chairman of the Social Committee.

According to Duff, the members of the GMAB Productions Board are Hugh Ragsdale and Frank Craighill, members at large; Sally Pullen, drama chairman; Russ Link and Rudy Waldorf, co-chairmen of the Star Series Committee, and R. V. Fulk, music chairman.

New UP Office Holders Will Speak To Party

The University Party's four new student government office holders will speak at tonight's party meeting at 7:15 in Roland Parker I and II.

The four who recently made a sweep of the top student government offices are Charlie Gray, new president; David Grigg, vice president; Sue Wood, secretary, and Bob Bingham, treasurer.

The UP will also discuss the possibility of adopting by-laws for the party. These by-laws will provide for procedure at meetings and of nominations and elections..

Phi Society To Debate N. C. Sterilization Bill

The controversial measure would provide for the sterilization of all women bearing more than two illegitimate children. At present the State Welfare Department pays a subsidy to these women for the support of each child.

Payments of this sort have drawn increasingly unfavorable comment from legislators in these times of tight budget requirements, particularly as often the payments are not used for their intended purpose. The support payments have come to be regarded as "pay" for having illegitimate children.

Jolly and Davis propose to cut down on birth out of wedlock by making it dangerous to have them. In this way, they argue, the state could save money and at the same time partially eliminate one of the biggest sources of juvenile delinquents.

Opponents of the bill argue that it is an inhuman and impractical means to curb what is basically a social question.

All of these points and others will be brought out in tonight's debate.

All interested persons have been invited to attend and participate. The Society will meet at 8 p.m. in Phi Hall on the fourth floor of New East.

YOUTH ACTIVITIES WEEK — Chapel Hill junior high and high school students will be participating the annual Youth Activities Week April 19-24 at the University Methodist Church. Events for the week have been planned and will be coordinated by several UNC students. Student Council Gets Elections Case Soon

A test case to determine the meaning of a clause in the General Election Law will be brought before the Student Council tonight or later this week.

Hank Patterson, chairman of the Elections Board, said Monday that Roy B. Goodman would appear before the council for violation of the Election Law, Article IV, Section 4. This article states: "No candidate for office shall be a poll tender in the district in which he is a candidate."

Patterson said Goodman, a candidate for Legislature from Dorm Men's III, tended the poll in Alexander Dorm between 2 and 4 p.m. April 7. Goodman signed his name to the roster of poll tenders.

Because of this violation, Goodman has been summoned to appear before Student Council. Patterson said the council, in acting on Goodman's case, will interpret the meaning of another Election Law clause in question.

This clause is in Article IV, Section 5, which states: "The Elections Board and/or poll tender, while operating a poll, shall report all violators of Sections 3 and/or 4 to the appropriate council, after having given said violators due warning."

Patterson said the council must rule as to what the meaning of "due warning" is. The Elections Board sent Goodman's case to Student Council on the assumption that "due warning" meant warning between the time he attended the poll and the Student Council hearing.

Other interpretations of "due warning," Patterson said, could be: a warning before the act was committed by informing candidates or a warning made while the candidate was tending the poll.

Patterson said Goodman did not receive the warning before the act was committeed because he was not present at the compulsory candidate's meeting where the voting procedure was explained. And the reason Goodman did not attend that meeting, Patterson said, was because he had been declared ineligible to run for office, then later reinstated — after the meeting.

U. N. Model Assembly Elects UNC Students

Two UNC students were elected to offices during the U.N. Model Assembly held here last weekend. Election of officers climaxed a three-day program of speakers and discussion centered around such problems as the admission of Red China to the United Nations.

Roger Foushee of UNC was elected president of the state Collegiate Council for the United Nations (CCUN). The CCUN was the sponsoring organization for the Model Assembly.

Bob Silliman, also a student here, was named chairman of the Continuations Committee by Foushee. Elected as vice president of the North Carolina CCUN was Charles Jones of John C. Smith University.

Besides the election of new officers, the Model Assembly sessions Saturday were concerned with various resolution presented by "committees."

Debate waxed warm Saturday morning between the Indian and Pakistan delegations over the matter of holding a plebisite in Kashmir. The measure, proposed by Pakistan in committee, was opposed by India because Kashmir is presently under control of India.

Despite opposition, this measure was approved by the Assembly.

The delegates also passed a disarmament plan which was proposed by Pakistann. An amendment to the plan, which called for the banning of nuclear weapons, was proposed by Bob Silliman of UNC. The amendment was added before the bill passed.

A proposal to admit Red China to the United Nations was thrown out by the Assembly because the issue was considered a matter for the Credentials Committee and not the body. The issue involves giving credit to one Chinese government, not of recognizing Red China.

The Assembly tabled a motion by Vince Mulerie of UNC to establish a U.N. world police force.

WAA Revote Set Today

A re-vote is being held today for president of the Women's Athletic Association. The two candidates are Catherine Bolton (SP) and Martha Custis (independent).

The re-vote is being held because Miss Custis' name was ommitted from the absentee ballots. Her name had not been printed on the ballots because her petition of candidacy was misplaced until after the printing.

Polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today in all coed dorms, except Kenan, and in front of Gerrard Hall (or inside the Y in case of rain). The poll at Kenan will be open from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Kenton's Boys Rock Antonio's

By EDWARD NEAL RINER

Antonio's was rocking Monday night.

Some of Stan Kenton's boys dropped in for supper and then pulled out their instruments and let go with jazz.

Saturday night after the German's Concert here in Memorial Hall, six of the players went to the pizza house for supper. They then said they would return Monday night at 7:30 with other musicians to play.

Sports Editor Resigns Post; Cooper Named

In a statement to Young, he said, "I wish to make it lcear first of all that I am resigning for purely personal reasons. My academic load and my other campus activities have been neglected at the expense of the job.

"The changing of editors has absolutely nothing to do with my resignation; the decision to quit was made many week ago. I have enjoyed being sports editor of The Daily Tar Heel, but I feel that I can no longer do a proper job with all things considered."

He added, "The two main reasons for my resignation are that I must take six courses both semesters of next year in order to enter Law school, and that I feel that whoever takes my place should have the extra experience gained from having the job this spring.

"I am sure that the man chosen to replace me will do a good job and I am ready to offer him any assistance he may need."

Hammond concluded, "Since the first consideration of school is academics, I feel that I must devote more time to them."

Editor Young expressed regret over Hammond's resignation commenting, "Rusty is one of the finest young sports writers this school has had in a long time. He will certainly be missed in this capacity."

Young immediately named Elliott Cooper to replace Hammond, saying, "I am sure that Cooper can come colser to filling Hammond's shoes than anyone else."

Spain's Chaucer Is Lecture Topic Tonight

"The Spanish Chaucer" is the topic of the Humanities Division Faculty Lecture today in Carroll Hall at 8 p.m.

Prof. John Esten Keller of the Department of Romance Languages will give the address.

A professor of Spanish, Keller has been on the factuly since 1950, having taught at the University of Tennessee for three years after receiving his Ph.D. degree here in 1946.

Last month his "Libro de ols Gatos," one of medieval Spain's great collections of short stories was published by the Spanish Superior Council of Scientific Investigations.

Prof. Keller is an authority on the Canticles of King Alfonso and is currently working on another book entitled "The Life and Times of Alfonso the Wise."

Keller's lecture will conclude the 1958-59 series of faculty lectures sponsored by the Division of Humanities in the College of Arts and Sciences.

President Delays Decision On Future Of Secretary

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON, April 13—(AP)—President Eisenhower today delayed a decision on John Foster Dulles' future as Secretary of State.

Doctors meanwhile will make an effort to check Dulles' cancer by new medical treatment.

Most administration leaders were gloomy about the prospects Dulles could win his fight. They expected he would resign shortly, perhaps within a comparatively few days.

Dulles' condition aroused immediate concern in Congress about who will represent the United States at the foreign ministers meeting in Geneva May 11.

Sen. George Aiken (R.-Vt.) said that unless Dulles is able to resume fulltime work by that date, "I would expect he would resign."

"I don't think the country can go on and on without an active head of the State Department,," Aiken said.

Aiken was saying in effect that an acting secretary could not stand on an equal footing at Geneva with the ministers of the Soviet Union and the Western allies of the United States.

Eisenhower Worried

Eisenhower, who is reported very worried about Dulles' illness, gave no clue to the future after a 45-minute visit with Dulles at Walter Reed Army Hospital today.

The 71-year-old secretary, worn and haggard, returned to the hospital yesterday after cutting short a rest stay in Florida.

During his Florida visit, Dulles apparently failed to regain the strength he had when he was a fulltime architect and champion of administration foreign policy, a post he has filled for six years.

The White House announced after Eisenhower's visit to the hospital that Dulles would remain there for some days for additional medical observation and new treatment.

In yesterday's sudden announcement about Dulles' return, nothing was said about his need to undergo new treatment. He underwent four weeks of intensive radiation and also received a radioactive gold injection before leaving for Florida.

Eisenhower went directly to the hospital after he interrupted his Augusta, Ga., golfing vacation for a quick visit to the capital. The break in the vacation had been planned previously.

The White House said the two men talked alone most of the time about Dulles' health as well as "matters relating to world affairs."

On leaving, Eisenhower told newsmen his ailing secretary looked "fine."

No Resignation

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, emphasized to a news conference that Dulles has not resigned, despite some recurring rumors that he has decided to quit.

"I can say there has been no resignation submitted," Hagerty said.

"Pending additional medical evaluation there will be no further statement from the president."

Associates who know about Dulles' condition reported he was feeling somewhat weak and uncomfortable. They said his spirits were high, however, and that the secretary was even joking about the speculation over his future.

Dressed in a maroon bathrobe, Dulles walked down the hall from his hospital suite with the President. The two shook hands at the end of the corridor and said goodby.

His doctors were reported ready to begin a new series of treatments in a few days. Hagerty said, however, he did not know whether the treatment would be more radiation, or surgery.

After physicians discovered his cancer Feb. 13, doctors said no further surgery was contemplated. He had undergone surgery for cancer in 1956.

UNC String Quartet To Play In Hill Hall

The University String Quartet will perform Haydn, and Bartok and Brahms tonight for the fifth concert of the Tuesday evening Series.

Quartet members Edgar and Dorothy Alden, Jean Heard and Mary Gray Clarke will play Haydn's Quartet in D. Major, Op. 64, No. 5; Bartok's Quartet No. 6; and Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2 by Brahms at 8 o'clock tonight in Hill Hall.

Bartok's last string quartet, No. 6, was composed in 1939, six years before the composer's death. A single theme, stated at the beginning of each movement, is used in various guises throughout the work.

Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2 is the second of three string quartets composed by Brahms.

Quartet members Edgar and Dorothy Alden, Jean Heard and Mary Gray Clarke will make their second appearance on the Tuesday evening Series for the 1958-59 season.

Both Dr. Alden, first violinist and associate conductor of the UNC Symphony, and Miss Clarke, first 'cellist, teach in the Music Department.

Mrs. Alden, violist and teacher of strings in Chapel Hill, has also had first chair position in the N. C. Symphony and the University Symphony.

Mrs. Heard, second violinist, has studied with Ottakar Cedek of the University of Alabama and with Mischa Mischakoff at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

Student-Written Opera To Be Presented Here

An original one act opera written by two UNC students will be presented here April 18 and 19.

The musical production which is being sponsored by the music and drama committees of Graham Memorial Activities Board will begin at 8 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre. No admission will be charged.

The opera, "Whatever Passes Along the Paths of the Sea," was written by Thomas Rice, graduate student in the UNC Music Department and by Russell Link, graduate student in the Drama Department.

A short chamber cantata entitled "Fully Clothed in Armor, With Her Shield and Spear, Athena Emerges From the Forehead of Zeus," also by the two students, will precede the opera.

The opera is based upon the Medusa-Perseus legend with variations on the actual legend. Ethel Casey, soprano, will sing the role of Cassiopeia; Rebecca Carnes will sing Andromeda.

James Gibbs, tenor, will sing Cepheus; Marilyn Zschau, mezzo-soprano, will sing Medusa; and Hunter Tillman, baritone, will play the part of Perseus.

Martha Preston, Darwin Solomon, Chanault Spence, Carolyn Myers, Margaret Starnes and James Tedder will also be included in the cast.

The opera is scored for an instrumental ensemble and will be conducted by the composer. In the ensemble will be Martha Halliday, flute; Bill Evans, flute; Eddie Bass, trumpet; Fred Rieser, trumpet; Jim Lambeth, trombone; Bill Kellam, tuba; Joanne Goulson, percussion; Nancy Walker, piano-celeste; Daniel Gore, guitar; Ted Quast, violin, and Don Fouse, violoncello.

Pope Decrees Against Communists

VATICAN CITY, April 13 —(AP)— Pope John XXIII has signed a decree declaring that Roman Catholics, warned 10 years ago against supporting the Communist Party, may not vote for fellow travelers of Communism.

The decree, made public today, has world-wide effect.

It says Catholics cannot vote "for parties or for candidates who, even if they do not profess principles in contrast to Catholic doctrines, or the attributes of Christianity, may unite with Communism or aid the Communists."

A 1949 decree, excommunicating militant members of the Communist Party, explicity warned Catholics not to join Communist Parties. It said Communism is materialist and anti-Christian.

The new decree — approved by the congregation of the Holy Office March 25 and signed by the Pope April 2 — broadened that warning.

Vatican sources said the measure was prompted at this time by the political situation in Sicily, an Italian island in the Mediterranean.

On that island Silvio Milazzo, wealthy landowner and longtime leader in the dominant Christian Democratic Party, last year formed a junta with the help of Communists and neo-Fascists. The junta governs the island, which has internal autonomy.

Sicily is now in the midst of a campaign to elect June 7 a new regional assembly, which will pick a new junta.

Tonight Ernesto Cardinal Ruffini, Archbishop of Palermo, called attention of all Roman Catholic Bishops and archishops on the island to the Vatican decree.

He said they and the clergy had "the task of bringing the decree to the attention of the faithful."

Italy's Communist Party is the largest west of the Iron Curtain and the party newspaper, L'Unita, denounced the decree as "a new open intervention by the Church in Italian political life."

Young Names Staff; Makes Few Changes

With today's issue of The Daily Tar Heel, Editor Davis Young and his staff have "taken over."

For the most part, there have been few staff changes. Six new staff members or new positions for old members were announced Monday by Young.

Serving as associate editors are Frank Crowther and Harold O'Tuel. The new managing editors are Ron Shumate and Ed Riner. Elliott Cooper has been named sports editor.

Anthony Wolff is now serving as review editor. The new feature editor is Mary Alice Rowlette, who was appointed by former Editor Curtis Gans last week.

Other staff members who have been working this year are the following: Walker Blanton, business manager; Anne Frye, news editor; Fred Katzin, advertising manager; Lee Arbogast, assistant advertising manager; Bob Walker, circulation manager; Avery Thomas, subscription manager, and Bill Brinkhous and Peter Ness, photographers.

The New Look- Different DTH

Elections are over and a new editor of this paper has been chosen. And with each new editor, there are bound to be changes.

Some of the differences will be obvious, while there are many of you who will never know of others. There will be a change in the layout of the editorial page. The new editor is an advocate of a more splashy and colorful page, as opposed to a conservative one.

The comics will be moved back on the editorial page. Considerably more attention will be given to faculty research programs. It is hoped that more coverage can be given to minor sports. There will be many others added to this list as the editor and the staff strive during the next year to produce a paper that is worthy of the student body which supports it.

The new editor will, however, work hardest towards achieving one goal — OBJECTIVITY. He will belong to no political party or partisan faction, hoping instead that The Daily Tar Heel can be above partisan political infighting. During the next year, this paper will be an unbiased sounding board for ideas and commentary from both the Student and the University Parties.

Naturally, there will be many occasions when the editor will comment on crucial political issues. This is his duty. Yet, we envision having those who oppose our ideas stepping forward onto our editorial page to present their own thoughts.

The new editor has been given a chance to prove that these ideas can become realities. A priceless tradition of outstanding college journalism has been placed in his hands. He has been given the responsibility to produce, with the aid of his staff, a respectable newspaper.

This is a trust which will not be violated.

Unbounded Joy

The new editor is most happy that he will just be starting his term of office when the "next lovely Chi Omega" will appear on the G.M. Calender. He issues a standing invitation for her to drop by the paper's headquarters for a chat.

Erwin Fuller- A Better S. C.

The Student Council has made a wise choice in selecting Erwin Fuller as its next chairman.

His many contributions to the University cannot go unnoticed by this student body. Although he came out on the short end of the count during last week's election, he knows that there is still much to be done.

There are few, if any student leaders, who pay more attention to minute details than does Fuller. This has made his previous service highly important.

Through his leadership, the Student Council should jump with leaps and bounds towards the fulfillment of its potentialities. We look forward to his tenure with enthusiasm.

Minimum Wage

North Carolina is still following the road of progress. The state furnished the south with the first workable integration program and now the state is going to pass the minimum wage law.

North Carolina has long been trying to set the examples of progress for the south. There are members of the legislature who are opposed to the minimum wage law. However, they are of the old, conservative school. Their number is fast disappearing in this state.

The people are becoming aware of the importance of caring about their own needs.

Too long have our lower income classes been forgotten and now, our legislature is trying to rectify this mistake. The minimum wage law is the first real step forward since the people of North Carolina realized that they are citizens of the United States, and that they are bound by their laws and have to obey them.

The minimum wage law is for only seventy-five cents per hour, but the next legislature should have the foresight to raise it at least one dollar per hour.

The legislature excluded theatre ushers and students doing part time work from receiving the benefits of the bill. This is not in keeping with our progress.

The students doing part time work should receive at least seventy-five cents per hour fo the following reasons: (1) Most of the students who are doing this part time work are not doing it for the fun of it; (2) The student who works is trying to stay in school and pay his way, and (3) It is very hard for a student to go to school, make less than seventy-five cents per hour, and exist.

Our theatre ushers are certainly entitled to seventy-five cents an hour. It takes a lot of time, and with the present high price of theatre admissions the theatres can well afford to pay their ushers this small wage.

We hope that the legislature will include these people in the minimum wage law. The legislature should not pat itself on the back however, until the minimum wage is at least one dollar per hour.

"Do You Have To Bring Up Technicalities?"

Henry S. Snow First Letter

Editor:

Congratulations on your recent success in the field of politics. Your opponents have had their hour of token opposition to indicate their personal dislike of you and/or their lack of faith in your maturity and technical skill as well as the ability to give competent thought to a subject prior to discussing it in your editorial columns.

These attributes, however, can still be proved to the satisfaction of even those who profess to hate your guts. If you do succeed in proving their error, they will be among the first to acknowledge it. For the sake of The Daily Tar Heel, make liars of all of them.

You probably have a slate of editorial subjects. In the interest of campus affairs, you may wish to add the following if you do not already havethe m. (1) It is foolish to elect the editor of The Daily Tar Heel. (2) Oppose deferred rush, for freedom's sake (3) How effective has the Bad Checks Committee been? From both the points of view of the merchants and of the committee members.

Do good work. Good work is worthy of recognition. Immaturity and technical incompetence cannot escape recognition. Or, to express another platitude—you cannot hope to make everybody happy, but you can accomplish nothing if you make everybody mad.

Introducing New Tar Heel

SALLY PULLEN . . . is the charming coed pictured above giving you the new look for the 1959-60 Daily Tar Heel. She is a junior from Parkton, N. C. Miss Pullen is active on campus as chairman of the GMAB Petite Dramatique and a member of the Pi Phi sorority. She will be working with the paper as a member of the editorial board.

Rand Letter

Editor:

In reference to a letter by John Brooks appearing in the April 10 issue of the DTH in which he fallaciously accused me of "flagrantly misquoting" ex-Student Party candidate North Smith on his views of fraternities and deferred rush, I would like to state several facts.

First, it is interesting that it was John Brooks, not Norman Smith, who accused me of misquoting Smith. Secondly, I would like to state that the statements quoted by me were statements made by Smith to me, and another student in personal conversations. If Brooks does not believe Smith made the statements, I refer him to S. P. leader Ralph Cummings who was present at one of the conversations.

I firmly believe, furthermore, that the statements made in the letter I wrote to the DTH, present a much more realistic and honest representation of Smith's views on fraternities and deferred rush than did his political statements for the public. In a campaign in which issues as vital to one segment of the campus as deferred rush is to fraternities are involved, I feel that the voters are entitled to know the exact views of the candidates on the issues involved.

If it is wrong for a student assuming the rights of expression as the editor of the DTH to print a letter to the editor making public some information of which the public some information of which the public was unaware, then I stand condemned.

Post — Race Heroes

An unexploded 2,000 pound German bomb has been discovered in the heart of London, where it had lain under mud for 19 years. It has been dug up and carted 40 miles away to be exploded harmlessly. The engineer chief who, "bowler hatted," greeted the monster with a poke of his umbrella and the bomb-disposal team which went after the fuse assembly with hammers and chisels exemplified, of course, a stolidity, and unconcern that is particularly British. But it was also the nonchalence quite characteristic of men who are used to facing dangers of especial intensity—those that call a quality best described by the homely term "nerve."

Soldiers in the excitement and heat of battle, "submariners" who with comrades go down into ocean depths, aviators who leave the earth behind to climb to exhilarating heights—all display the bravery consistent with their callings. But the bomb-disposal expert must approach danger "cold," usually after the "tumult and the shouting dies" usually alone, knowing that in everything he does he must be right the first time.

There is a saga to be written about these men in every bombed city of Britain and Europe. Americans, too, have had their knights of the screwdriver and wrench. Witness the still-unnamed college boy who went down beside the magazine of a half-sunken battleship to "disarm" a big Japanese bomb. Witness the Polish onion farmer from Massachusetts and the cowpoke from Arizona who "cleaned up" a big ammunition dump that had "gone up" while shells and mines exploded to the right and left of them.

Such men know they dare not expend "nerve" on heroics either before or after a job. That may be one reason why they are heroes—if not unhonored, often unsung.

Letters

He will print all letters which are signed by the writer. He will withhold the names of any students who request this.

All letters will be printed, except when controversy is so intense, as to allow only a limited amount of space.

At this time, a proportional amount of pro and con letters will be printed.

Since his first book of poems, The Weary Blues, was published in 1926, Langston Hughes has maintained a prominence among Negro artists. In this volume he collects from the body of his work those poems which he feels are worth reprinting. As is their usual practice (and one worth noting today, when less and less care is devoted to the book which bears the words) the Knopf people have paid Mr. Hughes the tribute of a handsome volume, which reflects a commendable attitude toward its contents.

The poems themselves are, unfortunately, expressions of a limited consciousness. Perhaps "unfortunately" is too strong a term: Mr. Hughes, like many other American Negro artists, stands at a difficult crossroads: behind him is the road he has travelled, out of the heritage of slavery and oppression, with the rich folk art which was their expressive accompaniment; before him, to the left (a questionable political analogy), is the road of Negro protest, along which he can struggle with his race toward equality; and to the right, transcending the other alternatives, is the road of human art, free from the limiting context of Negro history and progressive emergence.

This latter road is the one which leads to a profound consciousness, one which embraces the diversity of humanity and penetrates to its universal essences. This is not to say, of course, that a Negro artist (or a white one, for that matter) cannot or should not concern himself with his race for the material forms of his art; but that his special task is to transcend his personal involvement in the search for a greater theme, a deeper vision.

Generally speaking, few Negro artists have been able to escape entirely from their particular status and the problems which typify it. Martha Graham comes to mind immedintely as one who has transcended her identity as a Negro by refusing to give it special attention in her art. James Baldwin, Countee Cullen, and Richard Wright at his best have achieved something of the same result by locating the human themes through Negro subjects.

Others, Hughes among them, have constantly affirmed their special identity as Negroes, and have turned their university-sophisticated minds back into the spontaneous Negro folk expression. There have been extraordinary successes along this road: James Weldon Johnson's God's Trombones and the blues lyrics of W. C. Handy are outstanding examples.

Hughes' poetry is of this sort, although it includes no verse comparable to Handy's "That man's got a heart like a rock cast in the sea," and probably no poem equal to the first sermon in God's Trombones. Moreover (not to destory completely an obviously inadequate critical device), Hughes is given to adapting the blues form, as well as the highly idiosyncratic Negro "bop" speech, to poetry of social protest, as in "Freedom Train." Happily, this sort of thing seems largely concentrated in the latter sections of the collection.

The outstanding virtue of the rest is the sensitive ear and wry wit which characterize Hughes' portraits of the Negro world. If the consciousness revealed in these poems is limited, it is fully revealed in the best of them, such as "50-50," and it has all the vividness of folk language.

And, curiously concentrated toward the front of the book, among the earlier poems, are a number of lyrics — love lyrics, many of them — which are delightful, however simple and limited (perhaps because they are simple and limited). Unfortunately, the simplicity is just as often carried to the extreme of "Little Lyric (Of Great Importance)," which reads in full: "I wish the rent / Was heaven sent."

As a collection, this one contains an initial promise, followed by a falling-off. Perhaps it is not unfair to say that the closer these poems get to explicit protest, the worse they get; and this seems to be the difficult problem which thwarts many Negro artists who are "hurt . . . into poetry" (Auden's phrase) most directly by a problem which then twists their art out of the mainstream.

The promise is there, however, and it is revealed in enough instances to make the collection extremely pleasant. E. McKnight Kauffer's drawings, which originally accompanied Hughes' Shakespeare in Harlem, are of the same simple, honest understatement which characterizes the best of the poems.

COMPLETE POEMS — A. E. HOUSEMAN: Centennial Edition. With an Introduction by Basil Davenport and a History of the Text by Tom Burns Haber, Ohio State University. 268 pp. New York: Henry Holt and Co. $4.

During his lifetime, A. E. Houseman published two slim volumes of poetry, A Shropshire Lad (1896) and Last Poems (1922). At the time of his death, in 1936, his wish was that his unpublished poems be destroyed. Some of them, however, were published posthumously as More Poems, and still others were included in Laurence Houseman's memoir, A.E.H.

Born one hundred years ago, Houseman turned to poetry once during his maturity, when he was thirty-seven, and again, finally, toward the end of his life. What turned him to poetry, and particularly to such cynical, morbid stuff, is still a mystery, as perhaps it should be. For the rest, he was a professor and a classicist, whose chosen life-work was the establishment of a correct edition of a minor Latin poet named Manilius. He authorized the publication of only one hundred and four poems. Seventy-four more were published posthumously.

Houseman remains popular, not only because his poetry is easy to understand in its simple sense; but because, for one thing, he had the almost unique ability to reval the pain of human existence through extreme understatement and with simple words (a classicist, his poetry is notable among other things for its sparing use of Latinate words and the absence of classical allusion.)

This centennial edition brings together all of Houseman's extant poems, including three little known translations of Greek chorouses. All the texts have been established by reference to the original manuscripts — a considerable task, for Houseman's manuscripts are none too clear — and the innacuracies of previous editions have been corrected.

In addition, there is an excellent but too brief Introduction by Basil Davenport, and a History of the Text, by Tom Burns Haber, which is primarily of interest to scholars.

Covering The Campus

FACULTY CLUB

Basketball—past results and future prospects — will be discussed by Coach Frank McGuire at a meeting of the Faculty Club today at 1 p.m. in the Carolina Inn.

PHARMACY MEETING

The Student Branches of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association and the American Pharmaceutical Association will meet in the pharmacy school auditorium at 8 p.m. today. The address will be given by J. Wayne Luther, president of the Druggists Service Company, which represents 180 wholesale drug companies with more than 2,400 employees.

Luther will be introduced by W. P. Brewer, vice president in charge of sales for the Justice Drug Company of Greensboro.

NEA

The Frank Porter Graham chapter of the Student NEA will hold its final meeting of the year Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the curriculum lab in Peabody Hall.

The program will feature a talk by Miss Lois Ettinger on the adventures of teaching through television.

UNIVERSITY CLUB

The University Club will meet tonight at 7 o'clock in Di Hall. Recommendations of the By-laws Revision Committee will be discussed and considered.

PHYSICS COLLOQUIUM

Keui-Ling Li Goedertier, research associate, will speak to the Physics Colloquium on "Micro-waves Spectra of Isotopes of Vinyl Bromide" at 4 p.m. Wednesday in 206 Phillips Hall.

FRENCH FLICKS

"French Life in the 16th Century" and "Richelieu" will be the free French films shown today at 4 p.m. in 215 Murphey Hall.

ANGEL FLIGHT

Coeds interested in becoming members of Angel Flight, the official hostess group for the Air Force ROTC here, may get more information about the organization by attending a meeting Wednesday at 5 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

The function of Angel Flight and how coeds may become members will be discussed at the meeting. Current members will also be introduced.

Coeds who are interested but cannot attend the meeting have been asked to contact Mary Cabell Carlan.

Satellite Model In Planetarium

An accurate model of earth satellite Explorer I is on exhibit in the science galleries of the Morehead Building. The model was created by four General Electric Co. men at Asheboro.

The creators were engineers John Rentz of Asheboro and Bill Williams of Greensboro and machinists Bill Dwiggins of Advance and Bill Faircloth of Walnut Cove. A standard globe and three electric clocks were used in making the exhibit.

In the original design and use, relative accuracy of motion between components was maintained for a period of almost two days. It was demonstrated in a number of North Carolina schools.

For exhibit purposes Morehead Planetarium technicians have supplemented faster driving motors which produce more rapid occurrence of each cycle. The relationship between the motions of the earth and the satellite thereby become more easily apparent in preference to the accuracy achieved in the original design.

Big Business Ethics Is Program, Film Topic

Big business ethics will be the theme of a film and discussion tonight in a program sponsored by the Campus Life Committee in conjunction with the Presbyterian Church.

The film, "Patterns," starring Van Heflin and Ed Begley, will be shown at 8 o'clock tonight in 108 Hanes Hall. Afterward, a discussion of ethical problems brought out in the film will be led by Dr. Claude George, associate professor of industrial management, and the Rev. Bob Hyatt, student chaplain at Duke University.

The Rev. Mr. Hyatt has made a study of Rod Serling's plays, on one of which the movie was based.

Tonight's program is the second in a series of Film Forums this semester. In charge of the Film Forum are Bob Borden, Howard Holderness and Melissa Osborne.

CONFEDERATE SURGEON HONORED — A $10,000 scholarship fund has been established at the UNC School of Medicine in honor of the late Dr. William Hunt Hall, UNC graduate, Class of 1855, and a surgeon with the Confederate Army. The money will be used for the "medical education of worthy students." The fund was established by Dr. Hall's son, the late William Hunt Hall Jr.

Scholarships Honor Confederate Veteran

By ROBERT H. BARTHOLOMEW

A $10,000 scholarship fund has been established at the UNC School of Medicine in memory of the late Dr. William Hunt Hall, a UNC graduate in the Class of 1855, a Confederate veteran and a practicing physician of New York City.

The fund, known as the Dr. William Hunt Hall Memorial Fund, was established by the will of the late W. Hunt Hall Jr., son of Dr. Hall.

A part of the will of Dr. Hall's son read: "I give, devise and bequeath to the Trustees of the University of North Carolina, located at Chapel Hill, Orange County, North Carolina, the sum of Ten Thousand ($10,000) Dollars for a Memorial to my Father, and to be known as 'The Doctor William Hunt Hall Memorial Fund' perpetuating his name.

The Trustees are directed to allocate the income from the principal to be used by the said Trustees of the University of North Carolina for the medical education of worthy students who, in their judgement, are in need of financial assistance.

"It is my request that the Trustees arrange to place an appropriate plaque upon the door of one of the classrooms of the Medical School in memory of my Father, Dr. William Hunt Hall, signifying thereon the year of his graduation and my name as the Donor."

Dr. Hall was born in Wilmington on April 9, 1 833, the son of Eliza Jane Ward and Edward Pearsall Hall. He attended private school in Wilmington and graduated with an A. B. degree here in 1855 with the highest honors.

Hall then attended the University of New York, where his M. D. degree was awarded in 1858. After graduation in New York, he studied in Edinburgh, Scotland and in Europe.

Dr. Hall was married in Wilmington on Nov. 15, 1860 to Susan Bradley Wright. They were the parents of three children, Lossie Hall, 1861; William Hunt Hall Jr., 1867 and Edward Simmons Hall, 1870.

Dr. Hall, a friend of Robert E. Lee and a native of the South, offered his services to the Confederacy with the coming of the Civil War. He became a member of the Medical Department of the Confederate States Army. He was first stationed at Petersburg, Va., and then transferred to the Confederate Hospital at Fayetteville. He remained in Fayetteville until the end of the war. After the war, he took the oath of amnesty and was pardoned by President Andrew Johnson.

Dr. Hall then went back to New York when the war ended and began the practice of medicine. He was honored by UNC in 1880 with an honorary master's degree.

He died in New York on July 8, 1918, at the age of 85 years, 50 of these being spent in the practice of medicine in New York.

The check for the $10,000 memorial fund was recently received by Dr. W. Reece Berryhill, dean of the UNC School of Medicine, from Peter W. Quinn, New York attorney who is the executor and attorney for the estate of William Hunt Hall Jr.

Two Professors To Be Honored

Two veteran UNC professors of economics and business law will be honored Friday by Alpha Kappa Psi business administration fraternity at the first "Silver Awards" banquet since 1954.

During a special luncheon at the Carolina Inn Friday, silver awards will be presented to Profs. R. J. M. Hobbs and Rex S. Winslow, who have taught here for more than 25 years.

Seven other University professors are previous winners of the silver award given by the Alpha Tau chapter of the national fraternity, and will be recognized as honor guests at the event.

Dean Maurice Lee of the School of Business Administration will present the awards. All of the economics and business administration faculty have been invited.

Hobbs is professor of business law and former dean of the School of Business Administration. A member of the UNC faculty for 30 years, he is a graduate of Guilford College, Haverford College and Columbia University Law School.

Winslow is professor of economics and director of the Bureau of Business Services and Research, which conducts adult education programs for businessmen. He came to Chapel Hill in 1929, after completing degrees at Simpson College and the University of Illinois, and received his Ph.D. here in 1936.

Students Will Choose Ugliest Man On Campus

Photographs of the contestants are being exhibited at polls maintained at Y Court, the Scuttlebutt and the Pine Room each afternoon through Friday. Voting is unlimited and is based on penny contributions.

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity is sponsoring the contest. Similar "UMOC" contests are held annually at most universities.

"We hope the UMOC contest will come to be an annual event at Carolina too," said APO President Randal Etheridge.

The winner will be named Saturday and will be presented with an engraved plaque in recognition of the honor.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

FOR THOSE OF YOU that turn to page four before going to page one it should be understood that this new column is not the result of a coup d'etat or assassination. It does, however, represent a change in the administration of the sports department. Former Sports Editor Rusty Hammond leaves by resignation; he also leaves a big hole to fill for he was dedicated to giving the Tar Heel good sports coverage.

We are happy to be able to say that despite his resignation from active duty, his byline will appear in the paper on feature stories. Next year, through sports features, his work will be a defnite addition to this page.

WITH THE COMING IN of a new editor there are bound to be some changes made in the style of the paper. The most noticable one today is that this column is being run in 11 point type. This is just one of a number of coming experiments some of which will be used while others will be discarded. With this thought in mind we ask you to bear with us in this transition period until the page style is set in some definite way.

By way of personal preference this column may be dedicated to a more national point-of-view than has been the case in the past. We hope that sports issues of nationwide interest can be commented upon here, especially where they coincide with something of local interest. This policy of extended national coverage will certainly not take the place of any sports story that involves a campus team.

Through the Intramural Department all stories pertaining to that phase of athletics will be handled by their own reporter so that our staff is "out to lunch" as far as pressing for coverage. So far this year the above plan has worked out very satisfactorialy since the sports department now spends most of its time worrying about varsity and freshman activities than it does about Intramurals. The policy of printing all the Intramural news brought to this desk will not be changed.

BY WAY OF an invitation we urge you that have never seen the game of lacrosse to treat yourselves to some fun this afternoon by taking a look at the Duke-Carolina free-for-all. Since the game will be played in Durham a goodly number of students will miss the show but other exhibitions will be scheduled here. Lacrosse is like no other game we know of, but it is one of the most exciting we have ever seen if played right.

Those students working with the sticks this year are, for the most part, aware of what they are getting into since they know a little something about the game. To have to learn the game from scratch at this point is asking quite a lot because the chances of getting creamed by someone "in the know" are real good. If you don't believe us ask Dave Wible how his collarbone is or ask Al Walters if he has ever gotten a shiner by being hit in the eye with a ball.

In closing this attempt to explain the change in editorship on this page we would like to add any vocal or written comments about the way issues are being handled by the sports department will help us give you what you want on this page. Personally I am looking forward to being Sports Editor of the paper and I think that page four can continue to be good reading.

Carolina Frosh Take 1-1 Mark Against Duke

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Providing Ol' Man Weather assumes a more compatible nature, the Carolina freshmen will take on Duke's Blue Imps in Durham today.

Little is known concerning the prowness of the Duke team except that they dropped a close 6 to 4 decision to a strong Wake Forest nine in their only game to date. In that one the Baby Deacons had to score two runs in the eighth to come out on top. The Tar Babies were supposed to have tried their luck with Wake's frosh here last Saturday, but were rained out.

Righthander Nick Warren, whose home town is the playing site, will probably get the nod as the starting pitcher for Carolina while Jack Mullen is expected to toe the rubber for the Dukes. Lefty Dave Murr, winning moundsman in the yearling's conquest of Oak Ridge Military Academy, and Jerry Carpenter will also see action if Warren isn't up to the task.

Freshman mentor Pat Earey should go with the same starting lineup he intended to use against Wake Forest, including Larry Neal, Leonard Dellolio, Paul Swing, and Pete Farrior in the infield with Whitey Wade the catcher.

BIG FOUR ROD AND GUN FIELD MEET — Here is a map to help you find your way to the Third Annual Big Four Rod and Gun Field Meet today. The meet is sponsored by the UNC Intramural Department and Outing Club for students of the Big Four Schools.

Third Annual Rod And Gun Field Meet This Afternoon

Big Four Schools will compete today in the Third Annual Big Four Rod and Gun Field Meet. The event will be held at the Durham Wildlife Club Area from 2:00 until 5:00.

Competition is in four events: archery, bait casting, target rifle and trap shooting. Duke, State, Wake Forest and Carolina are expected to have all their outdoorsmen participating. Trophies will be awarded to the individual winners in each event with a plaque going to the winning school. Team scoring will be 7, 5, 3, 1 for the top four places in each event. There is on limit to the number of entrants from each school.

Sponsored by UNC

The UNC Intramural Department and newly formed Outing Club are sponsoring the event to encourage rod and gun activities among all the Big Four Schools. Durham Wildlife Club Members have also been very cooperative in giving any assistance needed.

All students except those on the R.O.T.C. rifle teams are eligible to participate. Because of limited time, contestants will be permitted to enter only one event. If time permits, they may enter other events on a recreational basis only. However, the contestant must indicate to the official on duty which event should be scored.

Due to the hazardous nature of the activities, all safety precautions must be exercised. Particular caution should betaken by those using firearms. No personal rifles may be used. They will be furnished by the Naval ROTC. Shot guns will be available for those who do not have their own. The Durham Wildlife Club and UNC Intramural Department are not responsible for accidents. However, special safety rules have been publisized and will be enforced.

Plans For Rain

Officials will be available at the site of each event to take entries and assign each entrant a firing time. Contestants may practice beginning around 1:00. Scoring rounds will begin at 2:00. No entries will be accepted after 3:30. In the event of rain, the meet will be held on Wednesday, April 15th.

Students who wish to get a ride to the meet should call the Intramural Office or meet in front of the Gym at 1:00.

Netters Win Sixth

Coach Don Skakle's netmen defeated Clemson yesterday by the score of 7-2 to rack up their fourth conference victory of the season.

THE SUMMARY

Singles — 1. Black (UNC) defeated Summer 6-4, 7-5. 2. Nasim (C) defeated Sylvia 6-4, 6-2. 3. Keys (UNC) defeated Burns 6-2, 6-1. 4. Happer (UNC) defeated Cooper 6-3, 6-2. 5. Lockett (UNC) defeated Bryant 6-3, 6-2. 6. Ricks (UNC) defeated Weir 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles — 1. Sylvia and Happer (UNC) defeated Nasim and Summer 6-2, 6-4. 2. Burns and Cooper (C) defeated Black and Lockett 3-6, 6-3, 6-1. 3. Keys and Causey (UNC) defeated Bryant and Nutt 6-0, 6-0.

Tar Heels Oppose Blue Devils Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina goes after its second conference victory of the season this afternoon in Emerson Stadium when it takes on Duke in the first meeting between the two rivals this year.

The Tar Heels, rained out of their last start against Wake Forest Saturday, will pin the pitching duties on lefthander Ben Harding. So far this season Harding has a 1-1 overall record to go with his 5.0 earned run average.

In their two conference games to date Coach Walter Rabb's crew has defeated Clemson and lost to South Carolina 8-3. Outside of the ACC the Tar Heels are 6-1 with only a loss to Illinois spotting the record.

Chance To Platoon

Rabb has not yet settled on the starting lineup which will oppose the Blue Devils since he has a chance to platoon at three positions depending on whether Duke uses a right-handed or left-handed pitcher.

Should Duke Coach Ace Parker send sophomore Ron Kalish to the mound, Carolina will counter with right-hand hitting Russ Hollers in rightfield, David Dale at first base, and Carroll Bolick behind the plate. If Parker opens with a righthander the Tar Heels will start Bruce Crump, Vaughn Bryson, and Al Baldwin.

With either Dale or Bryson on first, the rest of the Carolina infield will probably lineup with Larry Craver (.235) on second, Harold Workman (.250) at shortshop, and Freg Norton (.294) at third. Rabb's leading hitter, Johnny Burgwyn, who is belting the ball at a .409 clip, starts in the outfield along with Gerald Griffin whose batting mark has dipped below the .200 mark to .189.

Duke Lacks Veterans

Last year the Blue Devils finished the season with a 9-11 record including a pair of losses at the hands of Carolina. Returning from this squad are six lettermen which form the nucleus of this year's team.

The Duke infield will probably be composed of three veterans, Charlie Dunlevy at first, Johnny Klein at second, and Butch Allie at third with sophomore John Frye as the shortstop. Parker's outfield of Pete Maynard, Bill Taylor, and Charles Fye is a seasoned bunch since all played ball for the Blue Devils last year.

After this afternoon's contest the Tar Heels get one day off before traveling to Winston-Salem to meet Wake Forest in another league game Thursday. The contest with the Deacons which was rained out here Saturday has been rescheduled and will be played in May 12.

Lacrosse Starts Today

Lacrosse, that rock'em, sock'em, slam-bang sport of the Indians, has returned to Carolina.

The Tar Heels will unveil a spanking new team this afternoon when they meet the well established Duke Blue Devils at 4 p.m. in Durham.

The game will be more or less a formal scrimmage since the Carolina squad has not been organized long enough to get on anybody's schedule.

Football line coach Ed Kensler has undertaken the task of putting together a team from interested boys who playedi n high school and football players who want an off-season sport to stay in shape.

A task it is, for half of the boys playing have never seen lacrosse played before they signed out a stick two weeks ago. With as little practice and experience as the Tar Heels have even Duke, who finished with a 2-7 record last year, looks like Mickey Mantle in the little leagues.

The Tar Heels won't be any push-over despite the odds. They will be able to field a starting team that has a great deal of experience but experience stops right there.

Thirteen Initiated Into Grail During Pre-Dawn Ceremony

Thirteen students were initiated into the Order of the Grail, highest undergraduate men's honorary, in pre-dawn ceremonies this morning. The number of new members is traditionally set at 13.

The new initiated include the following: Lawrence Byron Austin III, James Edward Crownover Jr., Walter Erwin Fuller Jr., Charles Dowd Gray III, George Wallace Grayson Jr., David Lee Grigg, Prentis Harold O'Tuel Jr., Hugh Lester Patterson, Julius Rowan Raper III, James Martin Scott, Norman Barrett Smith, Wade Marvin Smith and Jack Holland Spain Jr.

A special banquet will be held for the new members Friday at 6:30 p.m. in the Pine Room of the Carolina Inn.

Rep Charles Raper Jonas, Republican from North Carolina's 10th Congressional District, will be guest speaker at the banquet. Jonas, who was elected last November to his fourth term in the U. S. House of Representatives, was president of the student body and a member of Golden Fleece when he was a student here.

In the selection of the 13 new Grail members, Grail Delegate Herman Godwin said, "The Grail looks for students who bear the evidence of leadership and unselfish service in their various areas of campus endeavor.

"To be a Knight of the Grail is indicative not only of high recognition for achievement and unselfish devotion to altruistic endeavors, but this selection signfies that the person has also demonstrated his willingness to utilize these qualities in the best interests of the student body."

The Grail was established in 1930 to bring student leaders together in an organization that would serve the entire campus in promoting fellowship and understanding throughout the campus community as well as among the members of the Order.

The basic tenet of the Grail is that its membership should be equally divided between the dormitory and fraternity men on campus.

Women's Counselors Hold Meeting Tonight

The second meeting of the Women's Orientation Counselors will be held tonight, Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in 106 Hanes. Mr. Raymond Strong will speak on the Registration and Drop-Add procedure; Dewey Dance will speak on the new social rules which have been revised for women, and various other topics will be covered by Coordinator Belinda Foy and Counselor Trainer, Mary Gregory. All counselors are reminded to bring notebooks to jot down essential information.

Three Chairmanship Posts Open, Says YMCA Prexy

To fill the chairmanships of these committees, the YMCA will have interviews each afternoon this week from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Y.

Raper said, "In addition to heading up a major program area of the Y, each member selected attends regular cabinet meetings at which programs and problems are ironed out."

He said that the Publicity Committee requires a person with a combination of novel and interest-capturing ideas and a willingness to put in concentrated work. "Here's the place for future Madison Avenue boys," Raper remarked.

The Conference Committee organizes several weekend sessions off campus each year. These conference are open to the entire student body and center around a major personality who speaks and conducts discussions on interesting and vital topics.

Through speakers, panels, discussions, contact between individuals and actual surveys, the Human Relations Committee works to gain a deeper understanding of the rights, minds and emotions of other individuals, groups and nations.

Campus Has "Angles"

For coeds interested in becoming members and learning what membership will involve have been asked to attend a meeting today at 5 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

Mary Caball Carlan of the Angel Flight said a meeting is being held (the first one) to give information of the functions of the organization. Beforehand, few coeds really understood the activities and work attached with membership, she said.

Joyner Dorm Rates Highest In Averages

Ray efferies, assistant to the dean of student affairs, released the averages of the men's dorms Tuesday. He said the coed dorm averages would not be released until next week when the Women's Residence Council will present an award to the dorm with the highest average.

On a quality point basis with three points for an A, two for a B and one for a C, Joyner's average was 1.364. The other dorm averages were:

Mangum, 1.301; Old East, 1.292; Old West, 1.270; Ruffin, 1.270; B-V-P, 1.268; Parker, 1.222; Alexander, 1.191; Stacy, 1.182; Winston, 1.144; Cobb, 1.120; Aycock, 1.106; Avery, 1.089; Manly, 1.089; Lewis, 1.057; Everett, 1.046, and Graham, .976.

Averages were not complied for Grimes, Connor and Teague. Residents of these dorms are, for the most part, graduate students who are not graded according to the same system as undergraduates.

New Atlas ICBM Explodes Seconds After Its Launching

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., April 14 (AP) — A streamlined new model of the Atlas Intercontinental Range Ballistic Missile blew apart with a flash of orange fire today seconds after launching.

The 80-foot rocket, first of the operational "D" series, bucked a strong headwind as it climbed aloft at 4:47 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. Some 15 seconds later it was destroyed by the range safety officer when a malfunction occurred.

This was a prototype of the big ICBM that the Air Force hopes to have ready for troop use early this summer.

The missile appeared to sway to the right shortly after blastoff. As it climbed unsteadily, a long trail of fire, much brighter than usual, flashed in its wake.

The big war rocket, reportedly lighter and more powerful than its 22 predecessors, veered left and right as it climbed. Suddenly it became engulfed in a huge ball of orange flame.

The shattered rocket crashed back to the edge of the cape trailing billows of black smoke. Debris rained back ont he launching area for more than 10 seconds after the range safety officer made his move.

The Air Force said in a brief statement that the Atlas "developed a malfunction and had to be destroyed by the range safety officer."

Fifteen minutes after the spectacular explosion, the eighth in the Atlas test series, a pall of black smoke was whipped by the brisk wind over the cape.

Air Force officials said preliminary indications were that no one was injured.

The Convair-developed Atlas, which is expected to provide a booster for a spectacular space shot to Venus this June, was aimed at a target area 5,000 miles down the Atlantic range.

For the third straight time in three months the big ICBM failed to do its job. The missile last blew up Feb. 20 three minutes after liftoff. On March 18 it fell far short of its 4,500-mile target.

IDC To Give Awards For Best Dormitories

Six trophies will be awarded during the annual Interdormitory Council Awards Banquet tonight at 7 o'clock at Watts Restaurant.

First, second and third place awards will be given for outstanding dormitories. These awards are based on the number of points the dorms have accumulated in the Outstanding Dorm Contest.

Another dorm award will be a trophy for the dorm which has shown the most interest in intramural sports. This award will not necessarily go to the dorm which has the greatest number of points in intramurals. The Intramural Committee has selected the award winner.

Individual trophies will be given to the outstanding dorm president and outstanding IDC representative. The executive officers of the IDC have chosen the two persons who will receive these awards.

Rudy Edwards, outgoing president of the IDC, will act as master of ceremonies at the banquet. The trophies will be presented by Dave Alexander, chairman of the IDC Contest Committee.

Both old and new members of the IDC will be present at the banquet for the awards and for the installation of new members and officers. Representatives of the UNC administration will be guests at the banquet.

Dulles' Cancer Spreading; Treatment On Neck Begins

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP) — Doctors reported today that recent neck pains developed by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles may be due to a new outbreak of cancer.

Some medical authorities said this virtually ruled out the chance that he would ever return to full time direction of the nation's foreign policy.

Acting Secretary of State Christian Herter has already been named as a substitute for Dulles at diplomatic talks with the British, French and German foreign ministers opening in Paris April 29.

Dulles has been clinging to hop that he might fight back from the cancer which was found in February in his abdominal region. He hoped to attend the follow-up big four meeting in Geneva a month hence.

A top team of specialists gave him another examination at Walter Reed Army Hospital today and the State Department reported afterward:

"During the last several days Secretary Dulles has experienced increasing discomfort in the lower neck.

"X-ray studies suggest the possibility that his discomfort may be attributable to the presence of a malignant tumor in the lower cervical vertebrae. External radiation treatment to the lower neck began today.

"The condition of the secretary's abdomen remains unchanged and further treatment to the abdomen is not now indicated."

The carefully guarded language of the state department bulletin did not say flatly that Dulles had a new malignant tumor.

Press officer Lincoln White was asked to be specific: Does the announcement mean that Dulles definitely has such a tumor, or just that he may have one?

White left the inquiring reporters for a time, presumably to telephone doctors at Walter Reed. He came back and said he could not make any comment beyond the wording in the announcement.

Cancer at the base of the neck is particularly dangerous because it is near the spinal column and nervous system, surgery is ruled out.

Radio Club Hears Founder Tell Of Pre-Tube History

The early history of radio at UNC, dating from the pre-tube days of 1919, was related at a recent meeting of the Radio Club by the founder of amateur radio here, Thomas B. Smiley.

Smiley told first how he originally got on the air with a spark-gap transmitter in 1919, using call letters that he made up: 4SM. By 1923, the station here got a real license with the call letters, 4XE.

Later the "X" in the call letters was changed to "W" because the Commerece Department (in days before the Federal Communications Commission) reserved the "X" for experimental stations.

The radio station at UNC saw such historical developments in radio as the use of the prefix "U" and later "W" for United States stations to distinguish from radio stations in other countries.

Smiley recalled the days in 1925 when the UNC station began using tubes. With the power of 15 watts and one tube and a one-tube receiver, he said, the UNC station began to talk with West Coast "hams." After putting up a better antenna, UNC radio operators were heard over the world.

A thrilling experience for radio operators here in 1925 was in being one of few stations to maintain regular contact with Macmillen's and Byrd's first Antarctic trips.

Smiley, who was both a UNC student and teacher, was here when Phillips Hall was first opened.

Spring Frolic Coming Soon

There'll be dancin' and Jimmy Capps too for the IDC-sponsored Spring Frolic on Friday, April 24.

The dance will come first, from 7:30 to 10:15 p.m., in the parking lot area at Hanes Hall. Music for the dance will be provided by a combo.

Dress for the dance will be "casual."

The "party" will move to Davie Poplar at 10:15 p.m. for the UNC-originated "Our Best To You" program over Raleigh Station WPTF. Jimmy Capps, master of ceremonies for the record program, will use requests from UNC for some of the music selections.

Free refreshments will be served.

Young Democrats Hold Annual Social Monday

The UNC Young Democratic Club will hold its annual social at the Patio at 3 p.m. Monday, April 20.

Music, entertainment and free refreshments will be served to the members of the club. Several prominent young Democrats will be present.

All members have been urged to attend the affair, which will last until 6 p.m. A short business session will be conducted.

New members may join the club by contacting John Barnhardt at the Law School.

Three Powers Agree To Revisions Veto

GENEVA, April 14 — (AP) — The United States, Britain and the Soviet Union agreed today to give themselves a veto over any revisions to a treaty for the suspension of nuclear weapons tests.

The three powers approved a draft article on amendment procedures in a 55-minute meeting.

Any decisive movement in the conference, however, now awaits the Soviet Unions reaction to an American-British proposal for the suspension of testing on a step-by-step basis. This Western plan was not discussed at the brief session today. Soviet delegate Semyon Tsarapkin obviously was awaiting instructions from Moscow.

U.N. MODEL ASSEMBLY
. . . students represent nations of world

Campus Internationally Flavored

The Carolina campus took on an international flavor last weekend as the delegates to the United Nations Model Assembly met, discussed, debated, argued and voted.

Gerrard and Memorial halls were hung with flags from the 81 United Nations member countries and signs reading, "France," "Japan," "Turkey," and other member countries proclaimed the seating arrangement of the delegations.

Roger Foushee, new president of the state Collegiate Council for the United Nations, noted the "seriousness with which the American students fell into the typical attitudes of the countries they were representing."

"This was really the purpose of the Assembly," said Foushee. "In this way the students could get some idea of the way other countries feel about world problems and how to solve them."

the USSR delegation. When the motion to admit Red China to the

One example of this spirit was in United Nations was tabled on a motion from the United States the USSR delegation staged a walk out in protest.

Ed Levy, a UNC delegate, pointed out that on the West Coast, Wisconsin and Texas the U.N. Model assemblies are big events with several hundred delegate.

"This is the sort of thing UNC is striving for," said Levy, "and now that we know what it takes to have one we will do a better job next year.

"We hope evenutally to have the assemblies all over the country," he said, "with regional, district, and, finally, a national assembly."

Plans are already underway for next year's assembly, according to Cynthia Grant, secretary general of the Model Assembly.

Campus Chest Drive Nets Over $2,000

Results of the annual Campus Chest drive held last moth show total contributions of $2,225.66 from students and faculty members. The collections fall short of the Campus Chest goal by nearly $775.

Doug Kellam, chairman of the drive, released the amounts which will be turned over to the three participating agencies in the Campus Chest. She also gave figures of contributions made from the various segments of the campus.

Forty per cent (or $890.26) will be sent to the World University Service, an organization which aids students over the world. Another 40 per cent will be used for the Goettingen Scholarships Fund to send UNC students for a year of study in Germany and help bring German students here.

The remaining 20 per cent (or $445.65) will go to the Orange County Class for Mentally Retarded Children.

In contributions made during the Campus Chest drive, $206.75 was donated by faculty members. A total of $81.50 was contributed by residents in Victory Village and Glenn Lennox.

Women's dorm contributions were: $41.32, Alderman; $54.97, Carr; $16.20, Kenan; $27.50, McIver; $116.71, Nurses; $60.48, Spencer; $107.76, Whitehead, and $37, Smith.

In the men's dorms, the contributions were: $30.58, Alexander; $4.45, Avery; $24.11, Aycock; $10.66, B-V-P; $49.96, Cobb; $25, Connor; $6.52, Graham; $2.03, Grimes; $3.72, Joyner; $13.65, Lewis; $29.66, Mangum; $9.11, Manly; $17.49, Old East; $3.73, Old West; $10.37, Parker; $30.95, Ruffin; $2.92, Stacy; $21.79, Teague, and $15.20, Winston.

Faulty Timing Device Kills Capsule Catch

INGLEWOOD, Calif., April 14 (AP)— A faulty timing device today dashed Air Force hopes of making a sensational aerial catch of a capsule from the satellite Discoverer II.

But experts still plan to eject the capsule later tonight as a test of its various kinds of equipment. It will fall north of the area where Hawaii-based planes were poised to try to snatch it as it parachutes down.

They called the recovery try a 1,000 to 1 shot. And despite the odds, it looked for a while as though conditions were ideal. The orbit was about as good as could be hoped for—low, nearly circular and short lived.

Air Force Ballistic Missile division headquarters here said nonetheles a majority of the shot's primary objectves were achieved. These include launching techniques, propulsion, communications, orbital characteristcis and orbital stability.

Future capsules will contain mice and monkeys. If the recovery technique works out, it may be used to bring down gentles the first men to venture into space.

Discoverer II was fired into orbit yesterday from Vandenberg AFB, Calif.

Plans called for its small, 160-pound capsule to be ejected near Hawaii on command from an island radar station. As it parachuted earthward, giant C119 Flying Boxcars were to swoop over it and try to snag it with a trapeze-like device—trailing poles with a nylon web between. If they missed, destroyers would pluck the buoyant package from the sea.

The scheduled ejection time tonight was 7 p.m. EST.

Roy Johnson, director of the Advanced Research Projects Agency, said in Washington this test may include operation of the retrorocket and parachute. The test was slated for the moonlet's 17th orbital pass.

The retro-rocket acts as a brake, slowing the capsule for re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere. The capsule, shielded by the nose cone, is blasted explosively away from the mother satellite. The satellite the entire second stage rocket of discoverer II, is expected to continue in orbit for 90 days or more.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Yes-Gans Was A Radical

There have been few students in recent UNC history who have kicked up as much controversy as Curtis Gans. Seldom has any student had so many others disagree with his opinions. Rarely has any individual gone out on a limb so many times for so many issues.

Throughout this year, little voices have been audible on this campus saying "Gans is a radical" or "what's that so and so trying to do?" The answer is simple. Gans wanted to provoke thought. He wanted to interest the students in what he felt were the main problems confronting a university. He succeeded.

The new editor of this paper has been as bitterly opposed to Gansism and its many connotations as any other student. Yet there are four areas in which he cannot be faulted.

1. Gans is tough.
2. Gans is smart.
3. Gans is hard working.
4. Gans is honest.

Nobody can ever question these four statements. Few people have ever taken into consideration the many, many, many hours which he put in on this paper, in quest of a better university, all of this without decent recognition.

This editorial is far from a justification of his every move. It is rather a one shot tribute to a man, who deserves some mention.

Every few years this campus needs a person to be editor, who is a radical, who will stimulate thought, and who will educate not only the students, but also the faculty and administration. Such a man was Gans. Perhaps he severed a few sensitive nerves, but more important he lifted a few students from their normally apathetic nature.

Regardless of your personal feelings towards Curtis Gans, there isn't one student in this University who doesn't owe him a vote of thanks, for a thankless task capably performed.

Secretary Dulles- He Must Resign

Several weeks ago Secretary of State John Foster Dulles received a scrawled letter from a little girl in Indiana. The leter said: "When you were well, everybody thought you were terrible. Now that you are sick, everybody thinks you are wonderful."

The little girl thus made a profound comment about the perennial American weakness to go off on an orgy of sentimentality. Simply because Secretary Dulles is suffering (and bravely) from an incurable cancer is no reason to hail him as the greatest occupant of that high office since Dean Gooderham Acheson.

This country is heading towards a climactic series of negotiations with the big, bad, bold Russians. It is imperative that our representation be the very best that it is possible to obtain.

Nobody ever questioned the Secretary's courage or determination. His wisdom has been questioned in the past, and this newspaper questions his wisdom now — the wisdom (or lack thereof) which he is currently showing by continuing to hold the title (if not the responsibilities) of our Secretary of State.

Secretary Dulles should resign. Tomorrow would not be too soon.

Speedy Budget

Last Thursday night the Student Legislature passed the 1959-60 budget for student activities. It involved over $120,000, covering every major field of student endeavor.

The amazing thing about this budget is not the amount involved or the scope of its coverage. It is rather the research behind it and the rapdity with which it was passed.

On the first point, it is obvious that many hours were spent in the preparation of this momentous work. And the ease with which it passed our student solons is due to this.

The paper pays tribute to Charlie Gray, Gordon Street and the many others who worked so faithfully for a good cause. Their's is a job well done.

Don Furtado Final Report

(This finishes Student Body President Don Furtado's final report to the students. The first seventeen points were run previously. Ed.)

(18) Audit Board — The Audit Board is the student group which is responsible for the management and supervision of the $1,900,000 passing through the Student Activities Fund Office. In past years, it has often not functioned as it should. This year, it has succeeded in clarifying various financial policies, in formalizing employee benefits and policies, and in exercising more adequate supervision of student monies.

(19) Committee on State Affairs —Realizing that this year is an important budgetary year for the University, a Student Committee on State Affairs was organized. Chaired by Norman Smith, it has succeeded in preparing an illustrated booklet for distribution throughout the State, has initiated a personal visitation of various representatives, has sponsored a student letter-writing campaign in support of the University budget, and is presently paying weekly visits to the legislative chambers in Raleigh. The work of this committee has been commendable, but its real success may now depend upon the response of the students to Student Government's plea to write their legislators and point out the great educational needs of this University.

(20) Secretariat—The Student Government offices are the origin of varied and numerous communications, now too extensive for one secretary and the elected Student Government Secretary. Paddy Wall, Secretary of the Student Body, and John Brooks, Presidential Assistant, have established a ten-member secretariat who will be of great assistance to the office in fulfilling the various demands of the Student Government organization.

(21) Traffic Court—The Student Traffic Court has found itself greatly hampered by the lack of flexibility in the administration of penalties for University traffic offenses. Because of the State statute all fines for University as well as town offenses must be collected by the municipal court. It is felt that if a series of graduated fines could be established for Universtiy traffic offenses, enforcement of regulations would be much more fair and efficient, and that funds gained could be used for the improvement of parking facilities. The question was placed before the Attorney General of the State but was ruled illegal because of the previous existing statute. Consideration of the problem is still going on and should be continued in the coming year.

(22) Budget Committee—The Student Budget Committee, which makes budget recommendations to the Student Legislature, was appointed immediately following Christmas vacation this year, much earlier than it had been in the past. This additional time has enabled Charlie Gray, Treasurer of the Student Body, and the Committee to make a more careful appraisal of appropriation requests by various student organizations, and the forthcoming budget should illustrate the careful attention and inspection which has been given to each request.

(23) Discriminatory Clauses—A request has been made by the President of the Student Body that the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities adopt a policy which would prohibit the future admission to the campus of any social groups which contain clauses limiting membership on the basis of race or creed. This followed the passage of a resolution opposing such clauses by the Student Legislature. The request further stated that this policy should not apply to any organization now on campus, because such pressures would result in unnecessary confusion. The Executive Committee of the IFC has submitted an opposing argument. No action has been taken at this time.

(24) Student Union—The need for a centrally located and adequately equipped student union which can offer recreational and organizational facilities of the nature needed by the University of North Carolina is quite obvious. For the past two years the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial has been working for the inclusion of such a union in the University's budget request. This year, it held one of the top priorities for capital improvements, and the budget request was highly recommended by the Board of Trustees and was recommended by the State Board of Higher Education. The Advisory Budget Commission of the State did not include a union in its recommendations (along with several other eqlally important items), but the University last week again stated their support for the union in their appearance before the Appropriations Committee of the State Legislature. Dean Fred Weaver and the Board of Directors should be cited for their devotion to the union concept. The decision of the State Legislature will be made in the coming weeks, and, once again, the importance of student support, verbally and by letter, cannot be over-emphasized.

This completes a brief and not wholly complete summarization of activities of Student Government's executive element during the past year. Many problems still face Student Government, and in my eyes the greatest of these is the problem of communication with the students. As our University grows and expands, it becomes increasingly difficult for the students to identify themselves with the efforts of their Student Government. This is a disturbing trend and one with which all parts of the extensive Student Government organization should be vitally concerned.

On behalf of the officers of Student Government, Ralph Cummings, Paddy Wall, Charlie Gray, and myself, I would like to express our appreciation for the opportunity to serve during the past year. It has been a maturing and a rewarding experience, one which I sincerely wish each student could have.

"Ah, Yes — We're Thinking About Considering a Possible Inquiry"

Dialogue Concerning Free Will

Frank Crowther

Ezra was speaking: "But why just take your life for no damned reason at all? How do you know it won't be casting yourself into nothingness? Why not keep the something you already have?

"Oh, don't hand me that ancient argument," replied Lyman. "Look, if I kill myself and there is nothing, how will I ever know? I couldn't know if there is merely a total end. And if I die and find that there is a god, he will necessarily have to forgive me for what I did."

"Forgive you?" said Ezra. "Ha! He would damn you for destroying that which he gave you."

"Don't be such a puritanical fop," said Lyman. "Take this for an example: Either I know there is a god by his telling me so in a very distinct and unchallengeable way, or I have free will to make my own choice. Agreed?"

"What are you trying to say?"

"Just this," said Lyman. "If I have no choice, if it is somehow already determined and this determination is manifest as a disbelief — as in my case — then I can't be wrong. But this hardly seems plausible, particularly to you. So, let's say that "God gave us the power to make our own choice for or against him. O.K.?"

"Yes, I suppose so," said Ezra.

"Alright! If he gave us the choice, leaving it completely to us, and I decide negatively, then he has to forgive me for making the wrong decision. If he had wanted us to make the positive choice, why didn't he allow us the one decision in his favor?"

"Well, that's the trial of life," returned Ezra. "We have to strive for an understanding of Him through individual choice. You can't expect it to be given to you on a damned platter!"

"Quite so," said Lyman. "I didn't ask that it be given. All I am saying is that he has to forgive us for making the wrong choice if we do, since he was the one who originally gave us the power to choose the wrong one!"

S. G. Problems

Information, Meetings And P. R.

Norman Estes Smith

One of the most important problems facing student government is the campus apathy toward it. The students do not understand student government or realize its power. Since the future of student government depends on the interest and participation of the students, steps should be taken to establish a strong connection between the two. Action can be taken now in three areas to solve some of this problem.

The Daily Tar Heel can create interest in and publize student government. There is a need in the paper for more feature articles which ar interesting and enjoyable for the students to read, and a series on the leaders of the student body and different organizations on campus could meet both the qualifications and also help to solve the apathy problem. How many students know very much about N. S. A.? Not very many, and the paper can provide information about N. S. A. This is only one example out of many possible ones. The students deserve to know where their money goes and what it is used for. The Daily Tar Heel can be a valuable link between the government and the electorate.

Another link can be established by the members of the Student Legislature. They have an obligation to their electorate to attend dorm or fraternity meetings and to tell what the legislature is doing and what it has done. It is the understanding of the electorate on which the legislators should depend. The legislature as a whole can also take action to better publize its actions. Copies of bills and resolutions the body is considering should be sent to the presidents of each dormitory and fraternity and posted by them on their bulletin boards. Then the students could see what their legislature is doing. If action is taken in these two areas, a greater knowledge of student government will result.

A third place where steps can be taken to promote better public relations is in the executive branch of student government. After an election the leader of the student body should not dissolpe in mystery behind one of the doors in Graham Memorial. Although the president himself can not make too much contact with his electorate, he can institute a strong means of contact with the people. A presidential aid in charge of student relations should be appointed to attend meetings of dormitories, fraternities, and campus organizations to inform them about actions taken by the president and his plans for the future. This is one way the president can assume leadership in attacking campus apathy.

In these three areas action can be started now to destroy the greatest potential danger to the future success of our government here at Carolina. It should be a prime concern of both political parties. Now is the time to act.

Letter From Levy

Building and Grounds Department, UNC:

Congratulations! You have added another 'first' to your long list of outstanding accomplishments.

Certainly your department must be brimming with idea men to have come up with the ingenius suggestion to plant quicksand pits in strategic areas around the new dormitories. I am certain that other progressive schools who wish to acquire the 'forward look' will want to follow your excellent leadership, so I reproduce here your clever recipe: (1) Keep in touch hourly with the weather bureau so as to be prepared to begin Operation Quicksand 24 hours before a Chapel Hill monsoon: (2) Choose a well traversed spot on the campus and dig a hole about 3½ feet deep and as wide as possible: (3) Fill up hole with very loose sod and remove all traces of work.

You will be pleased to learn that thus far (the pits have only been in operation a few days), the quicksand pits have caused the loss of eleven pairs of shoes, the ruin of nine pairs of socks, and the soiling of seven trousers! My only suggestion for improvement would be to dig the holes approximately seven feet deep and see if you can dispose of a few superflous students.

My sincere congratulations,
Ed Levy

Russia's Teh Year Plan

Cynthia Bivins

Somehow a discussion of education seems inappropriate at this, a time when most of us are suffering from acute spring fever, resulting in an absense of any thoughts of scholarly puruits. Still, we happened on an article a few weeks ago, and we cant seem to forget it.

This article, which appeared in the GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS (March 22), was a commentary on Soviet education written by one of Woman's College's well-versed instructors, Jordan Kurland. Mr. Kurland's special interest in Russia — her history, her language, her music, and her people. That he should be well-informed on her education is no surprise. Upon reading this article, there is no wonder that he and many others respect many of the practices of this system of education, so foreign to our own, and so inclusive.

Most of us are familiar with Russia's Five Year Plan, but do we know as much of her Ten Year Plan? This plan, created to establish compulsory education for the first four years, near-compulsory for the next three years, and a final, optional three years, is one which puts our own "Twelve Year Plan" to shame.

Russian children are assigned outside work beginning in the first grade, with the assignments becoming progressively harder as they advance. By the time the Russian teenager reaches his last three years of school, he is expected to study at home one hour for every hour he spends in the classroom. His classes, incidentally, are held six hours a day, six days a week, 230 days a year ,as opposed to our average of 180 days per year.

The Soviet child is acquainted with the classics long before his American counterpart is stumbling over "To be, or not to be . . ." A foreign language is introduced to the Russian children in the fifth year, with conversation in the new language stressed from the beginning of the instruction. Familiar to most, though, is the Soviet concentration on the sciences. Biology, physics, chemistry, advanced algebra, trigonometry, solid geometry, calculus and astronomy; all are presented to every Soviet student.

In his article, which was actually composed of excerpts from his speech presented to a P.T.A. in Greensboro, Mr. Kurland went further to establish his point on familiar grounds. A starkly realistic comparison was brought forth by his mention of the fact that the Soviet graduate has five times the amount of science and mathematics that the Massachusetts Institute of Technology requires of its entering freshmen. Should M.I.T. fall to the Russians, it seems unlikely that their students would have many American classmates.

What of the extra-curricular activities in Russian schools? Such activities are common, but they have no academic affiliation. If the Russian student decides to jump on any bandwagons, he must do it on his own time. School is a serious occupation to these young people, and they are willing to work much harder and longer than the average American teenage scholar.

Your logical question now is — Why? Mr. Kurland gives five very adequate answers:

1. In Russia, intellect and culture command great respect.
2. Mass education is still a novelty in Russia; an adventure.
3. Due to a lack of comic books, cowboy movies, and "Gunsmoke" on television, Russia has naturally remained more serious. Russian children are not accustomed to the luxurious diversions so well-known to most American children.
4. Russia is willing to pay the intellectual. Behind the Iron Curtain the scholar, the teacher, the scientist enjoy the favor and respect that is bestowed upon the gray-flannel man in America.
5. "Concentration is on subject matter at the expense of personality."

In this fifth and final reason for the success of the strenuous academic schedule of the Russian child. We see the weakest point in the Russian philosophy of education. Russia is willing to push her children to the threshold of their intellectual capacities, and then shove them even further along. Well-circulated is the fact that the Russian child is often pushed to the point of exhaustion and ill health. Few children can withstand such pressure and challenge. Also the Russian drive for academic progress leaves little time for social progress.

Perhaps, then, Russia is paying too great a price for the development of her young intellectuals. She may be developing a generation of all-knowing human machines. Then again, we may be paying an even greater price by continuing our own half-hearted attempts at education. We may argue that our aim is not to develop a generation of maladjusted scholars, but to create a group of well-rounded youngsters. These well-rounded veterans will then be prepared to meet the challenges of the intellectual offerings in the collegiate realm, and will thereby become even more well-rounded. Somehow, though, all this "well-roundedness" still hasn't taken the edges off of the American philosophy of education . . .

TO POSSESS & ENDURE

The desire for posession is only another form of the desire to endure; it is this that comprises the impotent delirium of love. No human being, even the most passionately loved and passionately loving, is ever in our possession. On the pitiless earth where lovers are often separated in death and are laways born divided, the total possession of another human being and absolute communion throughout an entire lifetime are impossible dreams. The desire for possession is insatiable, to such a point that it can survive even love itself. To love, therefore, is to sterilize the person one loves. The shamefaced suffering of the abandoned lover is not so much due to being no longer loved as to knowing that the other partner can and must love again. In the final analysis, every man devoured by the overpowering desire to endure and possess wishes that those whom he has loved were either sterile or dad. This is real rebellion.

PHYSICIAN SPEAKS

A physician who has had extensive experience with the World Health Organization of the United Nations and a well known writer in the field of preventive medicine will be a guest speaker at the UNC School of Medicine today.

Dr. E. Gurney Clark will speak at the Combined Staff Conference of the School of Medicine at 4 p.m. in the Clinic Auditorium.

"Uses of Epidemiology by the Clinician" will be Dr. Clark's subject.

The physician and epidemiologist is a native of Mississippi, attended the University of Mississippi, and received his A.B. and M.D. degrees from Vanderbilt University.

Dr. Clark studied public health at John Hopkins University, receiving a master's degree in 1931 and a doctor's degree in 1944.

He was a Fulbright visiting professor at the University of Oslo, Norway, in 1953 and a visiting professor at the School of Hygiene in Ankara, Turkey, in 1955.

Dr. Clark is a member of the leading American scientific societies and an honorary member of the Swedish Dermatological Society.

PROFS ATTEND MEET

Dr. C. Hugh Holman, chairman of the UNC Department of English, and Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, professor of English at the University will attend the annual meeting of the Southeastern Renaissance Conference at the University of South Carolina and Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., Friday and Saturday.

Professor Holman will preside over a section of the Southeastern Renaisance Conference Saturday. Professor Lyons will read a paper entitled "Authorizing Critical Trespass with Compare" on the afternoon of the same day.

COUNCIL WIVES VISIT

The wives of the members of the Council of State and the wives of the members of the General Assembly are visiting N. C. Memorial Hospital and the UNC School of Medicine today.

The visiting ladies are guests of the Women's Auxiliary of Memorial Hospital and UNC.

The day-long program will begin at 11 a.m. in the Clinic Auditorium of the UNC School of Medicine. At that time Dr. Richard M. Peters and Dr. Robert Zeppa, both of the Department of Surgary, will stage "Demonstrations of the Most Recent Equipment Used in Heart Surgery."

After the demonstration, the visiting ladies will be taken on a tour of the children's section of the hospital. They will inspect a new addition in this area of the hospital that was dedicated last month. This is "The Children's Room," built as a memorial to Robbie Page, son of Mrs. Robertson Page, who was president of the Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority at the time of the death of her son. Over half of the funds for the construction of the new project were furnished by the national sorority.

At 1 p.m. luncheon will be held at the Carolina Inn.

The visitors will tour the Ackland Art Center and the Louis R. Wilson Library during the afternoon. While at the library, they will visit the Rare Book Room and the North Carolina Room.

The North Carolina Room contains the finest collection of books relating to the Tar Heel state in existence.

OIL MEN HERE

Oil industry representatives will attend a five-day management institute on April 20-24 here, sponsored by the N .C. Oil Jobbers Association.

Industry representatives will join faculty members from the UNC School of Business Administration in conducting classes for the fourth annual institute. Topics of study will include advertising policy, business insurance and taxes, burner service, developing service stations, inevntory control and product shrinkage.

North Carolinians who will serve as instructors include five Raleigh men: E. P. Claytor Jr., Dunn & Bradstreet; Van Wyck Webb, Dupree & Dortch; R. H. Carson, Raleigh News & Observer; J. C. Little Jr., attorney, and Don M. Ward of the Oil Jobbers Assn.

Other instructors will be John L. Moorhead of C Knox Massey and Associates, and M. M. Fowler, Gulf distributor, both of Durham; J. L. Berry, oil distributor, and W. Reid Fitchett of Ryder Tank Line, both of Greensboro, and A. E. Roberts of Bocock-Strowd, Winston-Salem.

Three representatives of major oil companies will come from New York City to lead institute sessions. Three UNC faculty members teaching will be Rex S. Winslow, Richard P. Calhoon and Joe S. Floyd.

Persons completing their third year of study at the institute will receive a certificate. Classes will be held daily in Carroll Hall.

PHYSICS LECTURER

Prof. Lawrence M. Slifkin of the UNC Department of Physics is serving as a visiting lecturer at Washington College, Chestertown, Md., today through Friday.

He is visiting under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is now in its second year.

The American Institute of Physics is a federation of the five principal societies in the field of physics research and teaching, including the American Physics 1 Society, Optical Society of America, Acoustical Society of America, Society of Rheology and the American Association of Physics Teachers.

Lectures, informal discussions, assistance to faculty members concerning curriculum and research problems in physics, and talks with students are features of his visit. Professor Slifkin will be the guest of Prof. Conrad K. Rizer, head of the Department of Physics at Washington College.

He was a research associate at the University of Illinois for two years and also served on the faculty of the University of Minnesota. He was in the Army during World War II.

Professor Slifkins field of research has been in crystal plasticity, diffusion in solids and semiconductors.

Duke Defeats Carolina, 3-2 Behind Ron Kalish

By ELLIOTT COOPER

An unassisted double play by Duke first baseman Charlie Dunlevy choked off a ninth inning Carolina rally and gave the Blue Devils a 3-2 victory over the Tar Heels yesterday in Emerson Stadium.

Duke shortstop John Frye provided the power that brought his team from one run behind and vaulted them into a 3-2 lead with a two-run homer in the seventh inning. This was all winning pitcher Ron Kalish needed as he limited the losers to but one hit over the final five innings.

The loss left the Tar Heels with a 7-3 overall season record but a losing 1-2 mark in conference play.

Tar Heel Ninth

Trailing by one run going into their half of the ninth, the Tar Heels sprang to life after Tommy Saintsing, batting for pitcher Johnnie Stott, flied out to left. Larry Craver then walked and went to third on Gerald Griffin's third single of the afternoon.

At this point Duke Coach Ace Parker came to the mound an ordered an intentional pass for Russ Hollers which brought up Carroll Bolick. Carolina mentor Walt Rabb countered by bringing in Al Baldwin to face southpaw Kalish.

Baldwin came inches from becoming the hero of the day as he laced a foul just outside the first base line before lining to Dunlevy who quickly stepped on first to double up Hollers and end the ballgame.

Duke Scores First

Duke drew first blood in the third inning on a single by Frye, a walk to Mark Brownstein, and a pair of sacrifices by Pete Maynard and Dunlevy.

The Tar Heels came back in their half of the same inning to tie up the score as Craver dropped a double into short centerfield, went to third on Griffin's bunt single, and came home on a sacrifice fly by Hollers.

In the fourth inning Carolina went ahead as they got three hits and a sacrifice fly to produce one run but left the bases loaded as Hollers flied out to end the inning.

Carolina Lacks Attack

Carolina's hitting attack left a great deal to be desired as almost half their hits were of the infield variety. Had the Duke infield been on the ball when Craver hit his short fly into center and someone remembered to cover second the Tar Heels would have gone the whole game without an extra base hit.

Kalish, who racked up his third win of the year in four decisions, struck out eight Tar Heels including Bolick three times. The big lefthander hung up at least one strike out in every inning except the seventh and ninth.

Carolina starting pitcher Ben Harding was coasting along going into the seventh inning but then he suddenly lost his touch for a brief moment as he walked Kalish, whom he has fanned twice before, and then served one to Frye which the sophomore proceeded to lose in the left field hedge.

Freshmen Gain Second Win In 8-4 Victory Over Duke

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Carolina's freshmen gained their second victory of the year in three games by overpowering the Duke frosh 8 to 4 in Durham yesterday afternoon.

As they did in their last outing against Oak Ridge Military, the Tar Babies jumped off to a quick lead in the first inning. Successive hits by Larry Neal, Paul Swing, James Helton, and E. C. Haithcock sandwiched around a Duke error brought three runs scampering across the plate. Adding one more in the second and two in the fourth frame the frosh found themselves with six big runs while Duke was yet to scratch.

Not until the sixth inning was Duke able to solve the righthanded deliveries of Carolina starter Nick Warren, finally pushing across two runs with the aid of one hit. Warren pitched beautifully in his seven inning workout, allowing two runs on only three hits. Jack Ree finished up as the Blue Imps managed to add two more markers to their total before the game ended.

Larry Neal had a day to remember at the plate for Carolina with three singles and a double while scoring four runs. Butler led Duke with two hits in four trips.

YANKS BEAT ORIOLES

BALTIMORE (AP) — The New York Yankees sprayed 17 hits around spacious Memorial Stadium, including a bases-loaded homer by ailing Bill Skowron, for a 13-3 romp Tuesday over the Baltimore Orioles.

Skowron, who had prevailed upon Manager Casey Stengel to let him play first base, also knocked in a run with a single and double while wearing a corset for a sprained back.

LACROSSE TEAM WINS

Carolina's lacrosse team with less than two weeks practice defeated a combination of Duke freshmen and varsity players 7-3 at Duke yesterday.

VOLUME LXVII, NO. 140 | Complete UP Wire Service | CHAPEL HILL, NORTH CAROLINA, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1959 | Offices in Graham Memorial | FOUR PAGES THIS ISSUE

New Officers, Legislators Will Be Sworn In Tonight

By DEE DANIELS

The newly-elected student body officers and legislators will be sworn in at the first meeting of the 27th session of Student Legislature tonight.

The solons will meet at 7:30 in Phi Hall, 4th floor, New East.

To be sworn in are: Charlie Gray, student body president; David Grigg, vice president; Sue Wood, secretary, and Bob Bingham, treasurer.

Recently-elected legislators representing the Student Party include Swag Grimsley, Taylor McMillan, Bill Norton, Dan Brown, Bob Smith, Ed Cox, Bill Lamm, Charles Carroll, Bob Thompson, Sherman Kennedy, Don Dotson, Jim Blue, Bill Mallory, Bob Pierce, Bill Woodard and Linda Biser.

Elected as legislators in the spring elections were the following candidates of the University Party: Pope Shuford, Maxine Greenfield, Dixie Jackson, Nancy Baker, Fred Lavery, Rick Overstreet, Jack Lawing, Peyton Hawes, Gordon Street, Al Walters, Frank Eagles, Neal Boden, Hugh Ragsdale and Bill Young.

Dave Jones (SP) will present a bill tomorrow night to permit legislators two excused absences per session, since there is now only one session each school year.

The bill will also, if sanctioned, permit legislators to move from their districts and still retain their Legislature seat.

Jones will introduce another bill, on behalf of The Daily Tar Heel, to transfer $125 from the advertising funds of the newspaper to the photography fund.

A bill to permit the Women's Residence Council to have a referendum on whether or not they should collect social fees in the women's dormitories.

Raleigh Newsman Ain't Ugly Enough

Charles Craven of The Raleigh News and Observer has been ruled "not eligible" to run in the Ugliest Man on the Campus contest, according to APO President Randel Etheridge.

Etheridge told Craven by letter, "As president of this chapter, I felt it only fair to tell you that although you are not eligible to run, you have been nominated for the contest by some of your State College admirers."

Craven said that he "would be happy to publish the picture of the Ugliest Man right here along with my own . . . if the contrast is flattering enough." Craven spoke in his column, "Byways of the News," in Wednesday's News and Observer.

The Ugliest Man contest will run through Friday afternoon. Polls are maintained every afternoon in the Scuttlebutt, Y Court and the Pine Room. A student may vote as many times as he wishes on the basis of a penny a vote.

"I understand that some students are actually running a campaign for this 'honor'," Etheridge said. "All in all the contest are running quite closely today (Wednesday). Carolina is fortunate to have so many unusual forms of humanity."

UMOC will be named early next week and presented with a suitably engraved plaque.

University Club Gives By-Laws To Legislature

The University Club will open its membership to any student and will provide a check on expenditures — if Student Legislature passes a bill with new by-laws for the club.

The bill will be introduced by Dave Jones, president of the University Club and SP members of the Legislature, at tonight's session.

The proposed new by-laws for its operation in the future were discussed Tuesday night at a meeting of the University Club.

A revision committee composed of several members of the club who were interested in setting it on a sound basis met several times during the last week and drew up a proposed set of by-laws. Max Coley, UC representative from Lewis Dorm, served as secretary for the committee.

The new governing rules for the club were read to the membership at Tuesday's meeting. They were then gone over a section at a time with minor revisions being proposed and voted from the floor.

The new rules won unanamous approval from the body. They must be approved by the Student Legislature before they can take fefect.

"We worked hard and gave a great deal of study to some of the problems that have faced the University Club in the recent past," said club President Dave Jones. "We now have two classes of membership that allows anyone to take part in club activities to any extent he wants, and still represent the interest of his dorm or house."

Jones also said that the new by-laws define more carefully the duties and responsibilities of club officers and places a three-way check on all expenditures.

The new by-laws will be introduced as a bill at the first session of the 27th assembly of Student Legislature.

Lecturer Praises Spaniard

By WILLIAM G. FRIEDRICH

Prof. John E. Keller of the Department of Romance Languages, featured speaker for the final Humanities Division Faculty Lecture Tuesday night, said that Juan Ruiz, archpriest of Hita, might well be one of the all-time greats of Spanish literature.

Ruiz, known as the "Spanish Chaucer," lived in the 14th century and wrote the "Book of Good Love." Keller said Ruiz has also been called the Spanish Homer and the Spanish Boccaccio, but he does not approximate either of these writers as closely as he does the English poet.

Prof. Keller said Juan Ruiz lacks Chaucer's depth and dignity, but he compensated for this realism and franknes which the great Englishman never managed to capture.

Prof. Keller, who received his Ph.D. here in 1946, stated that Spanish historians claim Chaucer read the "Book of Good Love" and that he traveled in Spain and was a member of the forces that invaded the Peninsula in support of Henry of Trastamara against Peter the Cruel.

According to Spanish critics, Keller enumerated, there are three summits: the "Quixote" in the novel, the "Celestina" in the dramatic and the "Book of Good Love" in the lyric, satiric and dramatic. "Ruiz's book is as universay in its appeal as the 'Canterbury Tales,' but its failure to reach us is due to the fact that there is no readily available translation of all 7,000-odd quatrains," admitted Dr. Keller.

Little is known of Ruiz except for what he reveals in his book. His birth place is uncertain, and it was once believed that he spent 13 years in prison where he wrote the "Book of Good Love."

BULLETIN

RALEIGH, April 15 (AP) — A well-organized group of supporters successfully carried a 75-cent minimum wage bill through the House Wednesday after systematically defeating most of a host of crippling amendments.

After three days of sharp, sometimes angry, debate, the House voted 66 to 39 to send the bill to the Senate. If passed there, North Carolina would become the first state south of Pennsylvania to have a minimum wage law.

Dulles Resigns As Secretary; President Will Fill Post Soon; Herter Is Likely Replacement

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15—(AP)—Cancer forced John Foster Dulles to resign today as Secretary of State. A sad, moist-eyed President Eisenhower announced Dulles' decision at a dramatic news conference.

The vacationing President said he had not finally made up his mind regarding a successor to the 71-year-old cabinet member. He promised to filled the post "as quickly as practicable," and reports continued both here and in Washington that Under-Secretary Christian Herter, 64, is the most likely choice.

In a voice betraying his emotion, Eisenhower told a small group of newsmen that Dulles now is "incapacitated for carrying on the administrative load" of his offcie, "in addition to assisting in the making of policy."

The President actually said "absolutely incapacitated," but he later sent word to reporters that he had not intended to use the word "absolutely." It then was deleted from the official White House transcript.

Eisenhower said at the conference that the latest medical findings on Dulles' condition "are not of the kind that make him helpless." And he announced he is keeping Dulles on as a consultant on foreign policy.

Cancer Spread To Neck

Dulles' doctors concluded in Washington yesterday that his cancer probably had spread to the neck. A February examination disclosed abdominal cancer and Dulles underwent radiation treatments.

For the past several days he had suffered neck pain. That caused him to return to Washington Sunday from Florida, where he had been resting. He re-entered Walter Reed Army Hospital.

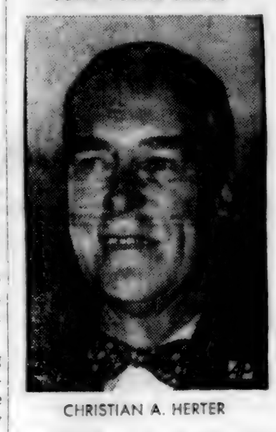
Eisenhower conferred with Dulles for 45 minutes there Monday and reportedly urged his good friend not to make any hasty decision.

This morning reporters covering the President's vacation headquarters were alerted by White House press secretary James C. Hagerty to be on hand for a 9:45 a.m. news conference. They were not told Eisenhower would be there but the quick arrival of Secret Service agents foreshadowed his appearance.

"What I have to say concerns Secretary Dulles," Eisenhower announced solemnly a moment after striding into the hotel press room. Facing a hastily set up battery of cameras and floodlights, the President added:

"I had a (telephone) conversation this morning with him, and in view of the findings the doctors have made yesterday, he has definitely made up his mind to submit his resignation."

JOHN FOSTER DULLES



CHRISTIAN A. HERTER

It was at the point Eisenhower said Dulles is incapacitated for the top State Department job but not helpless—and so:

"I have asked him to remain as my consultant, and I will appoint him to some office that makes it possible for him to be useful both to the State Department and to me."

Eisenhower, his emotion showing clearly, went on:

"I personally believe he has filled his office with greater distinction and greater ability than any other man our country has known—a man of tremendous character and courage, intelligence and wisdom.

No Decision On Successor

"With respect to a possible successor, no final decision has been made, and I will let you people know as quickly as it is practicable."

The fact that Eisenhower did not immediately announce a successor caused some surprise. There had been widespread expectation he would promptly name Herter, who has been acting secretary since February.

Herter already has been picked to represent the United States at a western foreign ministers' conference in Paris starting April 29.

In response to a question today, Eisenhower said that Herter—even if he does not become Secretary—will be on hand when the Western ministers meet with Russia's minister at Geneva May 11. The President explained:

Mangum Cops Most Improved, Outstanding Dorm Trophies

Mangum dorm was awarded the trophy for the outstanding dorm of the year last night at the annual Interdormitory Council Awards banquet held at Watts Restaurant. This dorm won over second place, Lewis, by ten points. Accepting the first place trophy for Mangum was President Tommy White.

The trophy for the most improved Dorm also went to Mangum. This award was based on last year's points record compared with this year's record.

The third place trophy went to Joyner. Receiving the award for the outstanding dorm president of the year was Joe Herndon of Joyner. Herndon is a junior business administration major from Parkton. "I was very happy and surprised to receive this award," he said.

Another individual trophy went to Mike Childs of Grimes a sophomore history major from Wilson. Childs was chosen as the most outstanding IDC representative of the year. He is also active in the General Committee of the Carolina Symposium and is on the Freshman Camp Committee.

Cobb Dorm received the award for the dorm which has shown the most interest in intramural sports.

Approximately 70 people—both old and new members of the IDC and several faculty and student guests—were present.

Rudy Edwards, outgoing president of the IDC, presided over the banquet and Dave Alexander, chairman of the IDC Contest Committee, presented the trophies.

Phi Majority Defeats Bill

A bill for the sterlization of women having over two illegitimate children was defeated by an overwhelming majority of Philanthropic Literary Society members Tuesday night.

The bill debated by the Phi is the same as the controversial Jolly-Davis proposal now before the N. C. General Assembly. The Jolly-Davis bill calls for sterlizing women who have as many as three illegitimate children.

In the Phi debate, Rep. Dave Matthews, who is president pro tem and chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Phi, defended the bill.

Matthews supported his stand by citing thegre at cost of supporting illegitimate children by state and county agencies and explained that many of the "unfortunate" children became delinquents and criminals.

He also commented that the threat of sterilization would make women more conscious of their "morals" rather than so many actually being sterilized.

Rep. Bill Jackson, in his attack of the bill, said such action violates inalienable human rights. Instead of the bill, Jackson proposed that correction should be directed at the poverty and insecurity which breeds the people who habitually bear illegitimate children. He also called for rehabilitation for violations of society morals.

Rep. Glenn Johnson, also speaking against the bill, said religious groups are opposed to the Jolly-Davis proposal because "they realize sterilization is not truly a corrective measure, but a punitive one."

Johnson advocated a "stricter moral code through education" as a permanent rectification for the problem. "As long as our society condones illegitimacy, we will have the problem with us. One cannot legislate morals."

Berlin Series Begins On TV

"Berlin and the Future of Germany" will be discussed on "Briefing Session," a new series beginning Saturday at 6 p.m. on WUNC-TV, Channel 4.

Guests for this week's program will be Telford Taylor, chief counsel for the prosecution at the Nuremberg Trials, and Wilson Hall, N.B.C. correspondent. They will give their views on such pressing questions as, "Can the Berlin Crisis Lead to War?" and 'What Compromises or Alternative Policies Are Possible for Berlin?"

Edward W. Barrett, dean of the Graduate School of Jurnalism at Columbia University, is host and moderator for "Briefing Session."

The 13-week series is offered by WUNC-TV in cooperation with the National Educational Television and Radio Center, in an effort to bring before the public some of the vital foreign and domestic issues facing U. S. policy makers.

In coming weeks, some of the topics to be covered include "How Much Defense Can We Afford?", "The Challenge of the Soviet Economy," "Inflation — It Costs and Causes," "Automation and Unemployment" and "The Reason Behind Racial Antagonism."

Three Carolina coeds have already been entered in the Miss Chapel Hill of 1959 Pageant to be held here Friday, April 24. The winner of the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored contest will represent Chapel Hill in the Miss North Carolina finals. Miss Chapel Hill of 1959 will be awarded a $200. scholarship, a complete wardrobe from Robbins House of Fashion and an all-expenses paid trip to the four day state pageant. All entries in the Miss Chapel Hill contest must be made to J. D. Wright or R. B. Fitch before Tuesday, April 21. Beauty, talent and personality will be factors considered by judges in deciding the winner of the contest.

Election Bd.- Hank Patterson

For the first time in recent memory, the Elections Board has done a really "top drawer" job.

Seldom has this campus been treated to such an outstanding and smoothly run election as they were last Tuesday. The lion's share of credit for this capable task well performed must go to chairman and freshman Hank Patterson.

Without slighting the rest of his committee, it must be pointed out that Patterson has done a job better than any of his recent predecessors, who were far older when they attempted the same thing. It is refreshing to see youth moving into the ranks of student Government.

Keep your eye on young Patterson. Don't let his talents escape you.

More will be heard from him.

A Fine Writer

Dennis Parks is a reasonably normal and somewhat ordinary young man — except for one little thing. Mr. Parks has a 40 pound angel on his back. Which is to say that Parks is driven by his private demons to write some very exciting poetry, a sample of which we are honored to print on our editorial page today.

"My Angel Contemplates Sin" will appear in somewhat more permanent form late this month when the second issue of Spectrum magazine is placed on sale. This magazine, a joint effort of Parks and some of his friends, is completely independent of any UNC connections or controls. This fact has caused some of the university's officials a few anxious moments. Rather than repeat the silly charges of "obscenity" which were hurled at the first issue of Spectrum (thereby giving the magazine priceless free publicity), it might be wiser for university and campus leaders to maintain a discreet silence in the face of this completely independent activity.

Other efforts by Parks (that are suitable for publication in a newspaper) will be printed from time to time. Meanwhile, we urge your closest attention to "My Angel Contemplates Sin."

Change Needed

The Student Legislature now stands 30-20 in favor of the Student Party, following last week's elections. So, it becomes clear to the more politically astute members of the student body that the balance of power has shifted both in the legislative and the executive branches of our government.

There is an old expression that usually comes into use at a time like this — "to the victors go the spoils." And so, the Student Party will probably control all the major legislative posts, and the University Party moguls will hand out the executive plums to their loyal supporters.

Yet, a question comes to mind: Why aren't more of the positions handed out on a merit basis?

Perhaps a good start would be for the Student Party to recognize that Gordon Street of the University Party is the best man for chairman of the Finance Committee.

Last Message From Furtado

To a great degree, whether this University grows greater as it grows larger will depend on the students themselves and what they demand of it. It is for this reason that Student Government must remember its real reason for existence — to provide a voice and nucleus for concerned and mature student action.

Many worthwhile operations such as the International Students program, the Committee on State Affairs, and the student judiciary system, are being carried on now. However, if we wish to justify our self-governing status, we must be concerned with more than the mechanical functions of such operations.

Student Government must confront the growing problems of the establishment of a proper academic atmosphere, in which students can be challenged to think and then to apply the fruits of their academic endeavors. Toward this end Student Government should strive for more adequate study facilities, library resources and faculty salaries, as well as proper advising and counseling systems. Student government should establish programs which will allow incoming students to become acquainted with faculty personnel and to discover that the knoweldge that they have to offer is not to be limited to formal classroom contacts alone. Student Government should work for the establishment of an intensive faculty evaluation which would be a carefully planned self-examination of goals and methods by the faculty as well as helpful and objective critiques by the students.

The University has been an educational leader in the past not just because of the faculty and the administration, but because there have been students who are concerned with its goals and actions. You, the student reading these words, may be one of those who criticizes Student Government and admittedly, there is much substance for criticism, but what have you done to remedy our real problems. You may finish reading this and promptly forget, or you may decide to devote some of your energy in the future to the establishment of a positive and active Student Government, and the realization of a University — where students can find intellectual stimulation, knowledge and understanding.

I am sure that Charlie Gray and his fellow officers will welcome your efforts and interest.

New Poem By New Poet

Dennis Parks

My angel contemplates sin
As you might read the crystal eye
My angel contemplates sin
In a manner not unlike
The act itself
The angel has no eyes but fists
Slab wristed square pounding
My angel contemplates sin
As you might kiss your brother
My angel contemplates sin
In a manner not unlike
The act itself
Her columning thoughts rounded
Raise dust with solid wings
My angel contemplates sin
As you might pocket your hands
My angel contemplates sin
In a manner not unlike
Casual, at home, with her peers
Natural, out of necessity
My angel contemplates sin
As you might scribble I love wine
As you might scream with pain with joy with expectation
As you might shoot yourself
Loud, but by yourself
Hoping you might yet see a conclusion
Thoughtless, out of curiosity
Helpless, out of impatience
Wordless, out of knowledge
As you might construct an accident
Momentarily, unprecedented
Unique odeless, forgotten
As you might live alone ....
After hours, pinching
To test your reality
As you might try religion
Once a week and turning
Away because it never lasts
My angel contemplates sin
As you might shoot a spider
Testing your skill
On small life
As you might try your luck
My angel contemplates sin
In the loin of her wings
Beats her head round
Practicing
My angel contemplates sin
(Only when she isn't flying)
And is perched in the rear of my head
In a manner not unlike the act itself.

Around Campus

Rusty Hammond

Bleary-eyed coeds had a shock during the heat of the campaign when they stumbled out of their rooms in the morning to find signs saying, "Sorry I missed you, David Grigg."

Seen downtown: A coed notices the parking meter has expired on a parked vehicle and a traffic cop is closing in with blood in his eye. She drops a charitable coin in the slot before he can get there and goes along her way.

The PiKA's are all stirred up about the PiKA letter that circulated around campus during the political fracas. Heard one student ask another, "Are you a PiKA?"

"No."

"Oh, then you're an independant."

Around 6 o'clock every day last week, the lower quad looked like it had been hit by a small, paper-bearing tornado. The litterbugs were happy to stay in the dorms during this cold spell, though.

Unofficially, the write-ins for editorship of this rag were both numerous and humorous. Of course, Hank Snow, golden boy of the Journalism School, came in first with 540. Assorted ballots were cast for Ron Shumate, Doug Eisele, Neil Bass, Harold O'Tuel, Dave Jones, Curtis Gans, Fidel Castro and Adolf Hitler.

New editor Young promised during the battle to "campaign until the last minute." Paid off, too, by gosh. He won.

So now North Carolina has a black eye named Henderson.

UP sweeps big four positions: SP has 30-20 margin in legislature. Will it be "I'll scratch your back if you'll scratch mine," or, "I'll knife you in the back if you'll turn it?"

Ex-boss Gans was kind enough to leave empty space on his last edit page for droodling. Actually, it was a column by Cort Edwards after being censored.

About Henderson

Editor:

On Sunday April 12, Mary Alice Rowlette had the byline on a featured article "Henderson Strike: When Will It End." I should like to answer her rhetorical question somewhat differently than she did.

I do not believe that this strike, or any other just strike, should end or can end until a freedom from economic, moral and social exploitation is achieved. Until the innate value of all human beings is recognized and especially until the differences of color, race, religion and nationality are no longer exploited for hate and as means to increase an individuals economic want, but from want of equal educational opportunities, from the want of basic self respect and respect from other that we all need. Until he is freed from the tyranny of secularism, nationalism, racialism so that he may no longer be exploited by "capitalists" little interested in human dignity unless its green and grey or concerns themselves.

I am not counselling all strikes or strike tactics. It is too bad that some of the strikers do not respect the law. It is a tragedy that the law does not respect them. As for the high school girl quoted as saying "Oh, they disgust me" — this is the greatest tragedy of all. To be disgusted by a fellow man instead of understanding the humanness of them and their situation and needs, whether at fault or not does not matter. I am sure that she did not realize that people lived and thought as they did, or that their disgustingness is hers as well and that she shares it, as well as the responsibility for it, with them, and with you and I.

Mary, you ask "when will it end?" It will never end except by force, by tyranny or by death of us all. It can never end as long as you wish to write articles freely and I wish to answer you. And for both of us and our freedom, I thank them for the strike; for the courage to organize and stand for their rights and ours. If they have regressed 30 years, it is a regression for our freedom and to the exercise of our constitutional freedoms, guaranteed us only if we exercise them.

World Community

A world community can exist only with world communication, which means something more than extensive shortwave facilities scattered about the globe. It means common understanding, a common tradition, common ideas, and common ideals . . . The task is overwhelming and the chance of success is slight. We must take the chance or die.

Robert Maynard Hutchins

A Letter To Anthony Wolff

Perhaps the Budget Committee's whacking off $700 from the funds available for "The Carolina Quarterly" is a good idea. "The Carolina Quarterly" prides itself, so I hear, on its independence, apparently so much so that it ignores the needs of the student body generally. As it stands now, why should it get any more at all from student funds? If there is a real need for its being published, it will be published. Adversising is, of course, mundane and commercial, but after all, some of the best ivory towers have been built on foundations of self-sufficiency. So what if Dr. Blitz at Almighty U doesn't approve of advertising in Little Magazines?

Who cares about Dr. Blitz, anyway? Why should "The Carolina Quarterly" achieve a status in American literary circles comparable to that of more established 'little magazines'? Can "The Carolina Quarterly" consider no mission greater than gaining a reputation at least equal to the already "established" Little Magazines? If that is its whole purpose, keeping up with the Joneses, then why not run it like the Jones run their magazines and hire real genuine professional editorial talent? I understand, Tony, that the staffs of the other reputable Little Magazines (and I refer here only to those published by colleges and universities) hire editors either from the faculty or from outside. Students may be allowed to work on the magazine for the invaluable experience, but do not determine policy.

As I understand it, only students are on the staff of "The Carolina Quarterly." While this may be admirable insofar as experience for those students is concerned, it certainly can never make for a top drawer publication. Why not draw on our talented faculty. It might be well to have the staff composed entirely of faculty, with interested students around to do the dirty work. True, a faculty member in his right mind would not undertake editorial responsibility without due monetary recompense: no one would unless he wanted "experience." Maybe experience is the only reason for being that "The Carolina Quarterly" has: excercise in editorship of this sort of publication for students who intend making a career of it and who can say, on graduating, that they were editor of "The Carolina Quarterly" in ninteen-fifty whatever. It looks good, anyway, on an application form.

You have a paragraph about "The Carolina Quarterly" representing the University, but you have all sorts of qualifications about the type of representing the "Quarterly" actually does. May I add another? The chief positions on the editorial staff are not elective. If they were, the possibility of a flexible editorial policy might exist which would reflect even in some vague way a climate of student opinion or attitudes. But the offices are not elective, the magazine has very little to do with student attitudes, it is not a students' magazine. Why, then complain about student apathy toward it? If a product doesn't sell even at the same price of a beer, don't blame the customer. Blame the product.

Sure. So what? Just because an activity is sponsored by students doesn't automatically make it worthwhile. And certainly the students' sponsorship of the "Quarterly" is indirect, to say the very least. Also, when you say "represent," is it the primary concern of those in charge of various student-sponsored activities to impress outsiders (non-Carolina students), or is the principal responsibility to meet the needs of students right here on the Carolina campus? Evaluation of a student activity should only be made by that yardstick: How much good it is doing students and the local community. What Dr. Blitz thinks of it is quite beside the point. I am sure that if the "Quarterly" were enthusiastically endorsed by a majority of the students as an activity with a need and a place on the campus, there would be little difficulty in getting the Activity Fee increased $1.00 a year, for which $1.00 each student would receive a copy of each issue of the "Quarterly." This is done in other institutions; why not here? Four thousand dollars or so would be right tidy, wouldn't it?

What I'm trying to say is this: I'm all for the "Quarterly," but not as it is now, serving what appears to me to be no function at all except as a plaything for embryonic editors. And apparently it cannot be the equal of the already established Little Magazines unless the funds are enough to purchase the same caliber material that they publish. Since this does not appear to be possible, and since heaven knows, there are more than enough literate, intellectuals and all Little Magazines of a quality far superior to "The Carolina Quarterly" that can keep most of us busy enough, then why not make of "The Carolina Quarterly" something stimulating for down here, something unique instead of imitative, something for which there would be a great public right here within a radius of five miles? Forget Dr. Blitz and the Jones.

Maybe, Tony, you can let us know what the real reason is for "The Carolina Quarter's" being. Picasso has said that a painter paints because he has to. Does an editor have this same underiable urge? Is "The Carolina Quarterly" published only because an editor has to edit?

But moan not over this sacrilegic indifference to "The Carolina Quarterly's" problems by the insensitive hordes. Rather bewail with me the fact that there is not yet a publication on the campus that represents the intellectual and creative activities of the University, rather than merely the editorial talent of a very limited group of students who may decide that a piece from Zanzibar would look or read better, and at least be more international, than a bit by some local yokel.

Me, I'll take the beer any day.

THE MANY LOVES OF THORWALD DOCKSTADER

When Thorwald Dockstader—sophomore, epicure, and sportsman—first took up smoking, he did not simply choose the first brand of cigarettes that came to hand. He did what any sophomore, epicure, and sportsman would do: he sampled several brands and then picked the mildest, tastiest, pleasingest of all—Philip Morris, of corris!

Similarly, when Thorwald took up girls, he did not simply select the first one who came along. He sampled. First he took out an English literature major named Elizabeth Barrett Grisht, a wisp of a girl with luminous eyes and a soul that shimmered with a pale, unearthly beauty. Trippingly, trippingly, she walked with Thorwald upon the beach and sat with him behind a windward dune and listened to a sea shell and sighed sweetly and took out a little gold pintil and a little morocco notebook and wrote a little poem:

I will lie upon the shore,
I will be a dreamer.
I will feel the sea once more
Pounding on my femur.

Thorwald's second date was with a physical education major named Peaches Glendower, a broth of a girl with a ready smile and a size 18 neck. She took Thorwald down to the cinder track where they jogged around 50 times to open the pores. Then they played four games of squash, six sets of tennis, 36 holes of golf, nine innings of one old cat, six chukkers of lacrosse, and a mile and a quarter of leap frog. Then they went ten rounds with eight-ounce gloves and then they had heaping bowls of bran and whey and exchanged a manly handshake and went home to their respective whirlpool baths.

"I think I'll stick with PHILIP MORRIS," he said

Thorwald's final date was with a golden-haired, creamy-browed, green-eyed, red-lipped, full-calved girl named Totsi Sigafoos. Totsi was not majoring in anything. As she often said, "Gee whillikers, what's college for anyhow—to fill your head full of icky old facts, or to discover the shining essence that is YOU?"

Totsi started the evening with Thorwald at a luxurious restaurant where she consumed her own weight in Cornish cock hen. From there they went to a de luxe movie palace where Totsi had popcorn with butter. Then she had a bag of chocolate covered raisins—also with butter. Then they went to a ritzy ballroom and cha-cha'd till dawn, tipping the band every eight bars. Then they went to a Chinese restaurant where Totsi, unable to decipher the large and baffling menu, found a simple way out of her dilemma: she ordered one of everything. Then Thorwald took her to the women's dorm, bedded her in the window, and went downtown to wait for the employment office to open.

While waiting, Thorwald thought over all of his girls and came to a sensible decision. "I think," he said to himself, "that I will stick with Philip Morris. I am not rich enough for girls."

Anybody is rich enough for Philip Morris—and for Philip Morris's brother cigarette, Alter-tip Marlboro, the cigarette with better "makin's". The flavor's fine, the filter filters, the price is right.

Frosh Camp Puts Emphasis On Education

The Freshman Camp, under the direction of Ralph Cummings, will emphasize educational challenges rather than campus "adjustment" to new freshmen at the camp in September.

Cummings, who was recently appointed chairman of the camp by the Freshman Camp Planning Committee, said the three-day program from Tuesday, Sept. 8, to Friday, Sept. 10, would revolve on the central idea that college students know little about why they are being educated.

Between 150 and 180 new freshmen are expected to attend the sessions at Camp New Hope in September.

In addition to Cummings, George Grayson will act as vice chairman of the camp. Jim Carse of the Y staff is adviser. The Y sponsors the Freshman Camp each year.

Twelve New Members Initiated Into Rho Chi

Twelve new members of Rho Chi, national honorary pharmaceutical fraternity, were initiated at a supper meeting Monday night.

Carolina Meets Wake Forest

Tar Heels Go After Second ACC Victory Behind Young

By ELLIOTT COOPER

With two straight conference defeats hanging over its head, Carolina travels to Winston-Salem this afternoon to see if it can break the spell at the expense of Wake Forest.

The Tar Heels are currently holding a 1-2 ACC mark which is exactly opposite that owned by the Deamon Deacons. What is even more unusual is the fact that the Deacs have beaten both of the teams which own wins over Carolina while the Tar Heels have licked Clemson, the squad which holds a 4-3 decision over Wake Forest.

String Ends

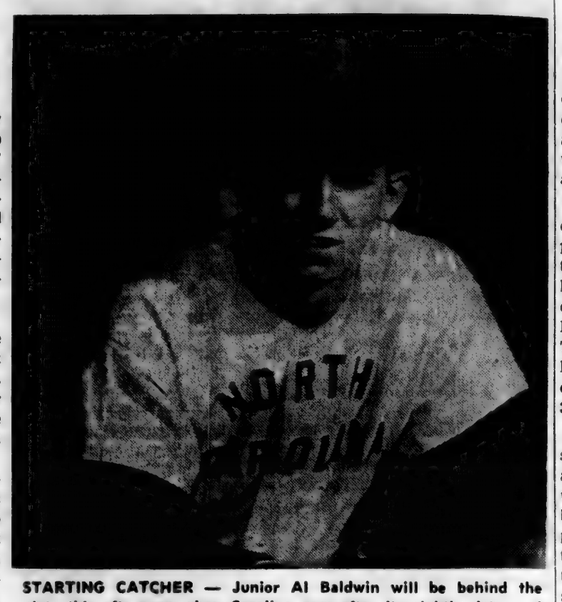
The 3-2 victory that Duke gained over Carolina Tuesday marked the first time in 19 games that a Tar Heel baseball team has been beaten in Emerson Stadium. The last team to turn the trick was a Blue Devil nine that beat the Heels 5-4 two years ago.

Since Wake Forest has had its last two games postponed, Coach Gene Hooks could easily send any one of his hurlers to the mound to face the Tar Heels. Heading Hooks' list of possible pitchers is sophomore right hander Robert Piemmons who leads the Deacon mound corps in innings pitched. Other possibilities include senior Bob Lawrence (0-1) and soph Jerry Galehouse.

Young To Pitch

Carolna Coach Walt Rabb will use righthander Wayne Young to start off the contest. Young has been hampered by shoulder trouble so far this season and has yet to come around to the form he exhibited last year.

Rabb will once again platoon depending on who Wake Forest sends to the mound. Regardless of who the Deacon hurler is, the infield should lineup with Larry Craver at second, Harold Workman at shortstop, and Tommy Camp on third. Two of the three outfield positions will be manned by Johnny Burgwyn and Gerald Griffin.



STARTING CATCHER — Junior Al Baldwin will be behind the plate this afternoon when Carolina goes after its eighth victory of the season against Wake Forest at Ernie Shore Field.

The Wake Forest infield should read Ron Guthrie at first, Bobby Brown at second, Charlie Forte at third, and Bill Barr at short. Sophomore Jay Franklin, who is hitting .478 through six games, will be in the Wake outfield along with Byron Bullard and Buster Ledford.

After today's game with the Deacons the Tar Heels will lay off a day before taking on N. C. State here Saturday afternoon.

Tennis Team Seeks Fifth Straight Win

By JOHN JUSTICE

The Carolina tennis team will be trying to rack up its fifth consecutive conference win today when they meet State College here.

Coach Don Skakle's netters have defeated Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, and Clemson without suffering a loss in conference activity. Clemson, whom the Carolina squad defeated handily by the score of 7-2, won over State last Tuesday, 6-3.

In the match with the Clemson Tigers Monday, sophomore Bruce Sylvia lost his first match of the year, going down 6-4, 6-2, to Mohammed Nasim, the Tigers' number two player.

The feature match of today will be between the Tar Heel captain, Geoff Black and the top man for State, Mickey Solomon. Solomon lost to Clemson's Sunny Sumner, whom Black defeated Monday.

Skakle will keep the same lineup that he has used for the last couple of matches. That will be Geoff Black, number one, followed by Bruce Sylvia, Ben Keys, Marshall Happer, Walker Lockett, and Tommy Ricks in the singles. The doubles will probably be Sylvia and Happer, Black and Lockett, and Keys and Causey.

FROSH NETTERS WIN

Carolina's freshman tennis team humbled Duke 8-1 Tuesday as the Tar Babies won all the matches with the exception of the number one singles where Butch Griffin defeated Comer Hobbs 3-6, 6-0, 6-3.

The Summary

Singles—1. Griffin (D) defeated Hobbs 3-6, 6-0, 6-3. 2. Hansell (C) defeated Hyde 6-4, 6-1. 3. Jordan (C) defeated Ratliff 6-2, 6-2. 4. Carlton (C) defeated Lee 6-4, 6-0. 5. Sanders (C) defeated Chaiken 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. 6. Eidson (C) defeated Hamel 6-4, 6-2.

Doubles—1. Hobbs and Jordan (D) defeated Griffin and Hyde 9-7, 3-6, 6-4. 2. Hansell and Carlton (C) defaeted Ratleff and Chaiken 6-2, 6-2. 3. Sanders and Eidson (C) defeated Lee and Spong 6-1, 6-4.

WAA SOFTBALL

The WAA Softball Intramurals began last week with Kappa Kappa Gamma winning the first game from the Kappa Delta's. Kappa Kappa Gamma will play Pi Phi Tuesday, and Kenan will meet Tri Delta Thursday.

Carolina Wins Big Four Rod And Gun Meet

Carolina rod and gun participants copped the Third Annual Big Four championship Tuesday by scoring a total of 24 points. Wake Forest was second and State third with 16 and 8 points respectively.

Tommy Wellons was the only man on the home team to take a first place as he racked up 50 points in the bait casting competition to beat his team-mate Dick Rocco. The event was held at the Durham Wildlife Club on a cold and windy day. This factor probably cut the entry list considerably. A total of 48 participated. Spectators numbered around 30.

In the team scoring, Carolina scored eight in trap shooting, with a second and a third, four in archery with a third and a fourth and 12 in bait casting by taking the top two positions. Wake Forest won the first two places in archery and the last two places in bait casting. State's scoring was in the trap shooting with a first and a fourth. Scoring for the target rifle competition was disregarded due to a discrepancy in the type of rifles used.

Carolina's number one trap shooter in previous meets, Gay Cowan bowed out to State's Lacy Langdon and teammate Dick Nichols as the latter two sharpshooters took 1st and 2nd places. Langdon broke 21 of the birdies, Nichols 20 and Cowan 19. Each man shot at 25 birds in this event.

In archery, it was Wake Forest all the way with Joe Rawley and Co-Ed Lynne Smathers taking the top two places by scoring 258 and 232 respectively. In all arrows broke the gold, a total of 324 points are made. Rawley's score of 258 is considered to be a good one. Bob Cofod and Howard Lewis of Carolina were 3rd and 4th with scores of 207 and 200 respectively.

Entrants in the bait casting event were few as Wellons of UNC took his second trophy in this event. He was the winner in the fall field meet. Rocco was second. Dayle Phillips and Buck Lyda of Wake Forest took the last two places.

Big Four Sports Day

Practice for the 13th annual Big Four Sports Day will be held today from 4 to 6 p.m. All students who are interested in trying out for any of the activities should report to the playing area at 4 p.m.

These tryouts are necessary in order to have the best participants represent our school. Persons who desire to tryout for one of these sports but cannot be present at today's practice should call the Intramural Office at 9424. The tryouts are open to all male students both undergraduate and graduate.

The events in the Big Four Sports Day are badminton, volleyball, table tennis, handball, horseshoes, golf, softball and tennis.

Freshmen Tangle With Deaclets Here Today

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Fresh from a rollicking 8-4 triumph over Duke on Tuesday, Carolina's freshmen will be hoping to make it two straight in the Big Four at Emerson Stadium this afternoon. Wake Forest provides the opposition and they too will be trying to keep their Big Four record clean.

The winner in this one will undoubtedly occupy top perch in the standings, though in this kind of rivalry that position leaves much to be desired in terms of security.

It might look like batting practice out there today if the Tar Babies and the Deaclets continue on their present hitting rampage. Carolina clubbed out thirteen hits against Duke and Wake Forest managed eleven in their 6 to 4 victory against that same club last Thursday.

Coach Pat Earey has been experimenting with a two-platoon system in the first three games to determine the individual strength of the club. He tends to favor, however, a lineup consisting of Larry Neal on third, Len Dellolio at short, Paul Swing at second, and Pete Farrior on first with Whitey Wade catching. The outfielders used most frequently and easily three of the biggest in the Big Four circuit are James Helton in left, Ronnie Miller in center, and E. C. Haithcock in right.

The starting pitcher should come from what Earey has termed the nucleus of his mound staff, that being Nick Warren, Jerry Carpenter, or Dave Murr.

Golfers Play State College

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's varsity golfers, knocked off in their last two outings, will be out for their first ACC win of the year here today when they play host to N. C. State.

The Tar Heel linksmen had run away with five straight victories, all at home, before they went on a northern swing and were cut down by both Maryland and Virginia. The Heels have a 5-2 overall record, but a meager 0-2 conference mark.

State has shown plenty so far in compiling a 5-1-1 slate. The Pack tamed Clemson's Tigers Tuesday by 16-11.

Carolina lost to Virginia 15-12 and to Maryland 20-7 in the northern swing. The "home grounds" have more to do with golf than any other sport, as golfers used to their own course are lost in new surroundings.

Gray Announces Openings For Government Positions; Interviews Start Wednesday

More than 150 appointments to student government positions will be made within the next several weeks.

Student Body President Charlie Gray announced Thursday that interviews for the various positions will begin Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m. and continue every afternoon, except weekends, until further notice.

Application blanks for the offices are available in the student government office, Y Court and the Reference Room of the Library. These applications must be turned in before Monday, April 27.

Appointments sheets for the interviews are posted in the student government office.

Gray urged students to apply for the positions available, saying, "There is much work to be done in student government for the coming year. For student government to run as smoothly as possible, the cooperation of the entire student body is necessary."

Attorney General (1), who is responsible for the functions of the attorney general's staff, for rendering opinions on the validity of organizational actions and other duties as named by the president.

Attorney General's Staff (no set number of both men and coeds), which is responsible for investigation of violations of Campus and Honor codes, for serving as counsel for the defendant and for assisting the attorney general as needed.

Associate Director of the Merchants Association (1), who sits in a non-voting capacity on the Association's Board of Directors, is a liasion between students and merchants and heads the Student Bad Check Committee.

NSA Committee (10 and coordinator), which works as a liasion between the campus and the national and international student community and notifies students of available scholarships and study program.

Traffic Advisory Commission (7), which evaluates and investigates motor vehicle problems and submits recommendations for solutions.

Traffic Court Investigation Staff (7), which presents all needed information concerning a case to the Traffic Court and sends summons.

Student Council (1 coed), on which the coed wills it in on all cases involving appeals and constitutionality presented to the council.

Campus Stores Committee (3), which meets with the administration and faculty committee to discuss operations of campus stores, vending machines and book exchange; controls profits and represents student opinion.

Library Committee (7), which works with the administration on student grievances concerning Library policies and programs.

Audit Board (5), which is responsible for the proper administration of the $2,000,000 handled annually by the Student Activities Fund Office and formulates financial policy.

Honor System Commission (2), which studies the Honor System, makes recommendations concerning judiciary reforms and maintains student concern in the Honor System.

N. C. State College Carnival To Be Featured On CU Day

State College's Carnival activities will be a featured attraction during Consolidated University Day at the State College Student Union Saturday.

Students from the three branches of the Consolidated University—UNC, WC and State College—may participate in the events planned for the second CU Day this year.

Tom Long, president of the CU Student Council and chairman of the UNC delegation to the council, said around 8,000 attended a similar carnival held last year at State.

Although CU Day is Saturday, officially, a free dance for students is being held tonight from 7 to midnight in the State College Union.

From 1 p.m. to midnight Saturday, organizations from here, WC and State will be sponsoring such carnival games and booths, as bingo, ring pitching and roulette wheels.

Climaxing the CU Day activities Saturday will be a dance from 8 p.m. to midnight. Bands will provide music for both the dances tonight and Saturday night.

Jimmy Capps' "Our Best To You" Will Be Here For Spring Frolic

Nearly 400 song requests were made when WPTF announcer Jimmy Capps broadcast his "Our Best To You" record show from the UNC campus several years ago.

Capps will be here again Friday, April 24, under Davie Poplar for a "lawn party" to follow the Inter-dormitory Council's Spring Frolic dance.

UNC students may make song requests for Capps' April 24 program by filling out a blank which appears in today's paper. These blanks must be mailed to Capps by Sunday.

In addition to the records on "Our Best To You," local talent will also be used for the April 24 radio program.

The Spring Frolic dance will be held from 7:30 to 10:15 p.m. Originally set for the parking lot at Hanes Hall, the dance will be moved to another location because of a concert in Memorial Hall the same night. The new location will be announced later.

A combo will furnish the music for the dance. Free refreshments will be served.

"Our Best To You," one of the best known of Radio Station WPTF's shows, was started in 1947 by Capps. Many of the 70 to 80 letters received each day for the show come from college students.

Before joining the WPTF staff, Capps worked for radio stations in Columbia, S. C., and Greenville, S. C. He says that his idea for "Our Best To You" came from his experience in Greenville.

(Below is a blank with which students may request numbers on disc jockey Jimmy Capps' radio show, "Our Best To You," which will be broadcast from Davie Poplar April 24. The blank should be filled out and mailed to "Our Best To You," Radio Station WPTF, Raleigh, before Sunday.)

KATARINA REAL
. . . grad student performs in Carolina Folk Festival

Carolina Folk Festival Will Feature Students

A group of UNC athletes and a graduate student will perform during the 11th annual Carolina Folk Festival here Saturday in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

The UNC students will be joining in with a program of square dances, Scottish country dances and Highland exhibition dances, guitarists, fiddlers and Negro folk music.

During the program, a Flamborough Sword Dance which originated in England will be performed by a group of athletes including Ben Hammett, Bruce Crump, Tommy Saint Sing, Harvey Salz and Mac Turlington.

The Folk Festival is being sponsored by the N. C. Folklore Council. Tickets will go on sale at the door one hour before the program at 8 p.m.

Other features during the festival will be Scottish dances from Charlotte and Greensboro, who will join with folk singers, fiddlers, guitarists and square dancers in a salute to the folkways of Tar Heelia.

Also, 'Cile Turner, interpreter of Negro folk music, the "Dixieland Square Dancers" of Raleigh, bagpipper Jack Smith of Winston-Salem and drummer John Strickland of Grifton will perform during the evening.

Dr. Norman Cordon, head, head of the N. C. Music Program, is chairman of the festival.

As explained by Miss Sally Southerland of Charlotte, director of the "Queen City's Own Scottish Dancers," Scottish Highland dances include the well-known Highland fling, sword dance,' 'shean trews" and Flora Macdonald's Fancy, dances which commemorate some military victory or honor some famous person. Highland dances are done singly as an exhibition by a solo dancer.

By contrast, country dances are reels and strathspeys, social dances which involve groups of four or more persons. Many of the present-day American square dance evolved from figures in Scottish country dancing, Miss Southerland explained.

Oak Ridge Physicist Leads Mountain Retreat

An Oak Ridge physicist will lead a retreat for Episcopal students April 25 and 26 at Camp Vade Mecum in the Saurra Mountains near Winston-Salem.

Carolina students who will be attending the weekend spring retreat have been asked to contact the Rev. Robert Insko or Miss Barrie Neal at the Episcopal parish house by Sunday.

"Those Strange Words: Judgment and Salvation" will be the topic of the retreat to be led by the Rev. Dr. William Pollard, physicist at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

In addition to Carolina Episcopal students, representatives from Duke, Wake Forest, Woman's College, State College ad High Point College will also attend the retreat.

Other clergymen who will be present for the weekend retreat are the Rev. J. A. Vivrette, the Rev. Ronald Woodruff, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien and the Rev. Mr. Insko.

Cost of the retreat has been estimated at $4. Transportation will be provided.

Khrushchev's Latest Published In Moscow

MOSCOW, April 16 (AP) — A new book by Nikita Khrushchev has been published here. It is entitled "Toward Victory in the Peaceful Competition With Capitalism."

The book, issued by the State Publishing House of Political Literature, includes various speeches made by Khrushchev and also texts of his conversations with foreign journalists and the like during 1958.

Legislature Installs Officers; Fourteen Bills Introduced

By STAN BLACK

The Student Legislature reorganized itself after the swearing in of new members last night by the newly installed speaker, David Grigg.

Newly chosen officers and committee chairmen are Jim Scott (SP), speaker pro tempore; Maxine Greenfield (UP), clerk; Bob Nobles (SP), Ways and Means Committee chairman; Gordon Street (UP), finance committee chairman; Linda Biser (SP), filing clerk; and Bill Lamm (SP), sergeant-at-arms.

The "Big Four" officers of student government, Charlie Gray, David Grigg, Sue Ann Wood, and Bob Bingham, were sworn in as the first order of business by Student Council Chairman Erwin Fuller.

Incoming student body President Charlie Gray outlined the program his administration will follow in the coming academic year in a "State of the Campus" address. In his comments Gray covered every major area of campus activities, pausing to discuss several more fully.

Outgoing Speaker of the Legislature Ralph Cummings was presented a gavel in recognition of his fine efforts in presiding over the past two sessions. The body gave him a standing ovation upon his acceptance of the award.

Fourteen bills were introduced in a flurry of new business at the opening of the session. Of these bills three were passed under special orders.

A bill introduced by Bob Nobles (SP) commending the outgoing student body executive officers for their "devotion and dedication to the best interests of the student body . . . and their spirit which has unified us and led us to greater accomplishments . . . "was passed under special orders.

Jim Crownover's (SP) bill to authorize a referendum among women dormitory residents concerning the collections of social and activity fees was also passed after consderable oppostion by Rep. Don Dotson (SP).

Congressman Jonas Speaks At Tonight's Grail Banquet

Rep. Charles Raper Jonas of the 10th Congressional District is expected to arrive here between 5 and 6 p.m. today for a banquet honoring new members of the Order of the Grail later today.

Jonas is expected to remain in Chapel Hillf or at least another day and return to Washington sometime Sunday.

Jonas, who is North Carolina's only Republican in the U. S. House of Representatives, was elected last November to his fourth consecutive term in Congress.

In connection with his career as a congressman, Jonas announced this week that he is currently deciding whether or not to run again in 1960. No decision had been announced Thursday. Jonas told a Charlotte Observer reporter that he would like to retire to his law practice in Lincolnton.

Jonas was first elected to the House with the Republican sweep of the presidency and Congress in 1952. He was re-elected in 1954, '56 and '58.

In his student days at UNC, Jonas was active in various extra-curricular organizations. He served as student body president and was tapped into the Order of the Golden Fleece.

His only prearranged appearance on campus will be at the banquet tonight at 6:30. The banquet will be in honor of 13 new members of the Grail who were tapped early Wednesday morning.

American Geological Society Has Wide Range Of Topics

Approximately 300 delegates from 11 states are participating in the three-day meeting which began Thursday, according to Dr. Roy L. Ingram, head of the UNC Department of Geology and Geography and chairman of GSA.

Structural features of the Grandfather Mountain area in northwestern North Carolina were discussed by Bruce Bryant of the U. S. Geological Survey from Denver, Colo.

The Grandfather Mountain area in the Blue Ridge, he said, is in an area where rocks have been moved great distances. One mass of rock has been moved completely over another rock group, Bryant reported from a study done jointly with John C. Reed Jr., also of Denver.

After this tremendous movement, he continued, erosion has exposed underlying rocks through the great overthrust sheet. Grandfather Mountain was developed as a consequence of these phenomena, the speaker concluded.

A detailed study of ground water disposal areas at the Savannah River Plant in Aiken, S. C., by Stanley O. Reichert of the University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla., showed that rocks tend to decontaminate the groundwater as the liquid perculates through it.

Reichert noted that certain rock types are more efficient than others. Detectable radioactivity travels no farther than 125 feet before being decontaminated by soils, he said.

The study, he revealed, gave a useful picture of physical and chemical properties of various soil strata important in predicting the direction and rate of migration of low-level radioactive liquids.

Stephen G. Conrad of the N. C. Department of Conservation and Development in Raleigh reported on the occurrence of crystalline limestone in McDowell County. He states that there is a possibility that this rock sequence which has yielded limestone for road material in the past may be available for future

A paper dealing with the oldest known rocks in North Carolina which had been prepared by F. Donald Eckelmann, Brown University, Providence, R. I.; J. Laurence Kulp and Leon Long, Columbia University, Lamont Geological Observatory, Palisades, N. Y. was also presented.

The speaker stated that the oldest known rocks in North Carolina which have been measured to date occur on a line from Spruce Pine to Pardee Point. At Pardee Point, he said, an age of 890 million years is recognized.

Other ages, he pointed out, show that mountain building occurred at least three other times at later dates in this area. This latest large-scale mountain building event in this region occurred around 225 million years ago, he estimated.

Other subjects and speakers heard during the Thursday sessions included a study made at Ore Knob, N. C., by Henry S. Brown of State College, Raleigh; an unexplained magnetic distrubance near Beaufort, S. C., by Glenn A. Burdick and H. W. Straley III, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Ga.

An evaluation of highly weathered rock on the basis of its water containing abilities by J. T. Callahan and J. W. Stewart, U. S. Geological Survey, Atlanta, Ga; a report on the relationship between broken crystals found around Spruce Pine with the earth thrust movement found at Grandfather Mountain by Frank G. Lesure of U. S. Geological Survey, Knoxville, Tenn.; and a discussion on rocks in Stokes,, Surry, Yadkin and Forsyth Counties which indicated deep sea deposits by Jasper L. Stuckey and Stephen G. Conrad, N. C. Department of Conservation and Development, Raleigh.

International Open House Held By Cosmopolitan Club

By DAVE JONES

The Cosmipolitan Club's seventh annual International Open House will be held Sunday at the Hillel Hall, 210 West Cameron Ave, from 3 to 5 p.m.

This annual exhibit will show national costumes from almost all countries represented at UNC, as well as objects of art and rare items that represent the countries' culture and history.

Entertainment for the two hour long open house will be provided by the Shades.

Alan Costa, Cosmopolitan Club president, calls the International Open House "an opportunity for everyone to gain understanding." Costa said the exposition will have contributions from many students from foreign countries as well as from Chapel Hillians who have traveled abroad and are displaying souverirs of their trips.

Hawaii, the 50th state, will be the highlight of the display headed "USA." Other areas represented will be Latin America, the Middle East, Switzerland, Germany, France, Sweden, Estonia, India, Korea, Japan, Israel, Greece, Australia, Italy and Bali.

The chairman of the exposition is John Casparis. Mrs. Rachael Salim, Marci Klingel and Kitty Allen are in charge of refreshments.

Every year the Cosmopolitan Club sponsors three major campus events. They are the International Open House, the International Picnic and the International Dinner.

This year's International Dinner featured food from 10 different countries and had over 200 paying guests. Chancellor Emeritus R. B. House referred to it as the most successful International Dinner he had ever seen here.

Scheduled for early May is the International Picnic to be held at the farm of Dr. J. P. Gillin. Here the foreign students will have an opportunity to show off their countries' games and dances. The food will be prepared American style.

Durham Union To Hold Rally On Saturday

Several hundred Durham folks are expected to turn out Saturday afternoon at three o'clock for a public rally at the Durham County Court House. The purpose of the rally, which is officially sponsored by the Durham Central Labor Union, AFL-CIO, is to express public support for the striking Henderson textile workers.

Feaured speakers for the rally are Allan Kistler of the national staff of the AFL-CIO in Washington and Boyd Payton, Carolinas' Director of the Textile Workers Union of America and chief union negotiator in the strike. Kistler is personally representing AFL-CIO President George Meany. W. Millard Barbee, North Carolina AFL-CIO President, will also address the gathering.

Plans for the rally were drawn up by a Rally Committee headed by Robert Holifield, President of the Durham Central Labor Union, and UNC graduate Bob Pace, Editor of the Durham Labor Journal, as co-chairmen. The Central Labor Union represents forty-two Durham area AFL-CIO Local Union and a membership of fifteen thousand.

Gov. Luther Hodges, who has been roundly criticized by labor leaders throughout the state for his action in the strike, has been invited to attend and address the rally. No reply has been received from the governor by the Rally Committee.

Dulles

Harassment In Final Hours

Television newsreels last Sunday showed Secretary of State John Foster Dulles arriving at Washington National Airport on his sudden (though not unexpected) return to Walter Reed Hospital.

As Mr. Dulles tottered down the ramp of his plane, a desperately ill man, he was greeted by a battery of microphones and perhaps as many as too swirling, shouting, gesticulating reporters and photographers. Again and again, the reporters shouted: "How are you feeling, Mr. Secretary? How are you feeling?"

It would have been truly magnificent had Mr. Dulles turned on his tormentors and with glacial dignity replied, "I'm dying of cancer, you stupid idiots. How do you think I feel?"

But Mr. Dulles is a public man which means, by American standards, that you play the game according to the rules right down to the end. This is what he actually said to the jackals of the mass media: "I was just telling Mrs. Dulles that I wished the plane could turn around and go back to Florida. It's a lot warmer there." The old man laughed hollowly through clenched teeth and stumbled off to his limousine.

Even Richard Nixon, glib and articulate in the face of Communist Venezuelan mobs, was at a loss for words. Even Nixon, when surrounded by the jackals, was almost incoherent in the face of this pathetic, barbaric tableau.

This newspaper has never been listed among the admirers of Mr. Dulles' stewardship as Secretary of State. For several years now this newspaper has consistently criticized Mr. Dulles as Secretary of State. But John Foster Dulles is also a man, a human being. And even if he is a Public Man, he is entitled to all the elemental decencies.

To harrass this MAN in the hour of his mortal illness is obscene. To harass this MAN for a tidal wave of penny profits is wicked.

No other civilized nation in the world puts its public men through such an ordeal. In the name of charity, in the name of decency, in the name of justice, the American "free" press must evaluate again the boundary lines of responsible journalism.

As everybody knows, John Foster Dulles has resigned his high office. For all practical purposes he thus brings to a close an extraordinary career dedicated to the pursuit of peace and international order. In whatever time the Almighty has left to him, we hope that Mr. Dulles will be able to find the peace for himself which he was unable to find for the world.

'The Squire Of Haw River'

As Commissioner of Agriculture, Governor, and Senator this great man with a common touch rendered services to this state which had seldom been seen in the past and have not been matched since his death.

Scott is chiefly remembered for his work with the North Carolina Grange and his road building projects. Few of us have taken into consideration that he was also a great contributor to the education of young minds.

Scott was a big man. We know that the state and Miss Mary are proud today, to claim him.

Lights - Action

Perhaps one reason that students shy away from the library is simply the fact that they are scared that they will fall and break their neck.

A question comes to mind: "Is it really safe not to have any lights in front of the library at night?" Those big concrete steps are awfully solid.

Of course the paper realizes that this doesn't concern most of us. But, for the few students interested in academic pursuit, maybe the Department of Buildings and Grounds can supply the needed illumination.

William Kerr Scott

A year has passed since the death of North Carolina's former Governor and United States Senator W. Kerr Scott. To those who knew him he still lives on.

It is to this man that North Carolina owes a great debt of gratitude, for it is because of the work that was accomplished during his tenure of office that North Carolina is referred to as the most progressive state in the South today.

Governor Scott's "Go Forward" administration was the most dynamic, progressive administration that North Carolina had seen since the days of Charles Brantley Aycock. It was an administration in which, for the first time in the history of North Carolina, the state funds were put to work drawing interest from the banks that had used them for so many years without paying interest thereon.

Scott, unlike many of his predecessors, did not neglect the farmers who were primarily for his election. He was responsible for the introduction and passage of the bond issue, which saw many of North Carolina's farmers march on the capitol to speak for its adoption by the legislature. He is best remembered by many for "taking the rural people out of the mud." The road system started under his administration and the increased school program were the two most significant steps that North Carolina had taken since the turn of the century.

Scott was 58 years old when he went to Washington as North Carolina's Junior Senator. His age did not hinder him from maintaining his fine physcal form. His staff could set their watches by the time of his morning arrival, for he walked the six and one half miles from his apartment to his office. This was a somewhat slower pace than the one he set while on the track team at State College some thirty years beforehand.

His work in the Senate was invaluable to his state and to his country. Many bills on conservation and agriculture bear his name as a sponsor. He traveled many miles to find the problems of his people and set about trying his very best to solve these problems.

Kerr Scott was a warm, personable man, who was friendly and courteous to all; a true gentleman in the finest sense of the word.

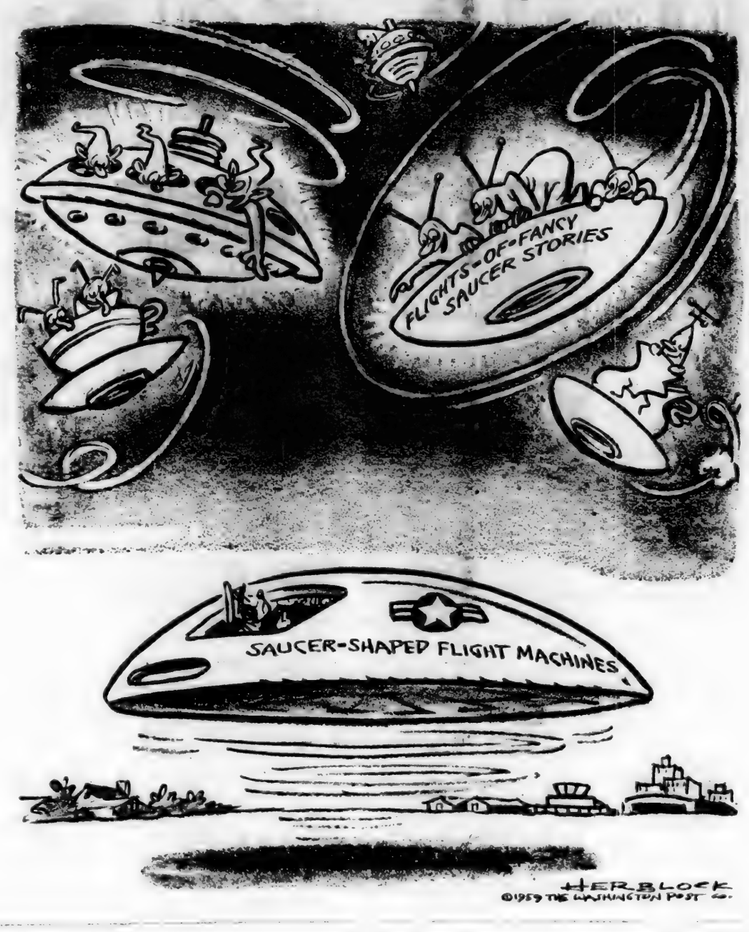
"Hey—Look, Fellows—A Parking Platform"



The Sword And Plowshare

The times in which we live show the most startling contrast between the blackest darkness and the brightest light in all secular history. These are the days in which seven young volunteers are chosen for the supreme adventure of space travel and another young man, remembering his ordered share in the Hiroshima bombing, goes into an emotional darkness all his own.

These are also the days in which the Western democracies prepare soberly to defend themselves against the disappearance of all light and all hope. The United States, as we read yesterday, is going ahead with "plans for a vast nuclear arms build-up of its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization this year"; West Germany's Minister of Defense will be talking this week in Washington with Pentagon officials, who fear that his projects for rearming Germany on German soil with German hardware are too ambitious; the three-power conferences on atomic disarmament will hold their seventy-third meeting today in Geneva, with no immediate hope of progress; a technical group will meet in London to prepare working papers for the western foreign ministers to agree upon and lug to Geneva when they meet their Russian opposite number on May 11.

This year's conferences will not finally decide whether the atom is to be a sword or a plowshare. Our allies and ourselves must be and are sadly ready for the worst of these choices, however much we hope for the better.

But this is what the talking will be about in Washington, in London, in Geneva and elsewhere. Peace, healing, abundance, knowledge—these gifts the atom can provide. When this generation's history is written, as we trust it will be, there may be some wonderment as to why there had to be any debate at all.

New York Times

Harper's Bizarre

All barber shops should display signs reading "Enter At Your Own Risk."

Actually, one does just that, but such a sign would at least be a hint of the possible atrocities within.

Going into a barber shop for the first time is comparable to playing Russian Roulette with a single-barrel shotgun. The newcomer invariably is palmed off on the youngster who graduated from barbers' school just last week. Or he is seated by the palsied veteran whose clippers and haircuts are carry-overs from the 20's. One rule holds: fresh meat's it!

Last summer we witnessed an amazing act of bravery in the face of the barber. It was Saturday morning, and the shop was packed with townsmen. Two of the three chairs were doing record business, but the third stood as ominously empty as the hose at Central Prison. Its barber, resigned to his fate, stood by reading a newspaper.

A man, obviously a tourist, appeared in the doorway. The barber's paper slipped to the floor, and he called out "Next!" No one moved. The stranger surveyed the filled waiting chairs, then looked again at the empty seat. As innocently as before, the barber called out "Next?"

The poor man could see the hand writing on the wall. He stood frozen int he doorway. The barber picked up the neck cloth and dusted off the seat. The stranger cast a glance at his watch, then literally bolted into the chair. Those waiting, to a man, dropped their eyes in respectful mourning. The human sacrifice sat with his eyes closed as the barber buzzed merrily about his temples and neck.

When it was over, the man stood, paid his fee, and, avoiding all mirrors, retired from the field. The waiters remained with heads bowed until he disappeared. As the barber stared through the doorway at his departing handiwork, a look of deep respect came to his face. Then he picked up his paper and sat down in the chair.

For all we know, he's still sitting there.

(All this, with apologies to Mack.)

Bill Styron At Duke U.

Frank Crowther

On Thursday, April 8th, several members of our creative writing class had the pleasure of being in an audience at Duke of about 100 that heard William Styron, author of Lie Down In Darkness and The Long March, read from his forthcoming novel. His new work is titled Set This House On Fire and is due for publication in the fall. It will approach 800 pages in length. Styron said later, however, that in all likelihood it would not appear before the first of next year.

This writer attended two sessions in which Styron participated. In the afternoon, the author read from his own work. That evening, Styron, Burke Davis and Mrs. Frances Gray Patton criticized five short stories which appear in Archive, Duke's version of The Carolina Quarterly. This was an anniversary issue of the campus magazine, thus the appearance of the aforementioned authors along with Randall Jarrell during their two-day celebration.

The portion Styron read was a flashback which, he said, appears approximately 100 pages into the novel. It is presented through a narrator, as is the first half of the novel, who has accompanied the "villain" to the latter's sprawlingly magnificent estate, Merrioaks (my spelling), for an inopportune visit. The villain has been expelled from an exclusive Episcopal prep school for having been caught in flagrante delicto with a local young nymphet (if I may use Nabokov's term). He is already a scoundrel at 16 and, as he admits, preoccupied with sex. As an example, he whispers to his friend, the narrator, during prayer in chapel that, no matter how hard he concentrates, "all I can think about it getting laid." Styron's description of the manor and its occupants is a brilliant reflection of the southern aristocrat's decayed state. His graphic characterizations are indeed exceptional. I, personally, felt quite envious of his facility with the language.

Another interesting segment was the arrival of the seduced lass's oysterman father who wanted "to get thet boy. He took thet young thing and he KNOWED her!" The angered man forced his way past the scoundrel's mother, an alcoholic, and went for the boy. Paradoxically, he went for the wrong boy, the narrator.

Reading over the above, I find it a miserably poor account of the writing itself, so will desist. If you cannot wait until next January, Esquire magazine will publish two excerpts from the book, one in June, the other in September. The latter will be the section Styron read to us.

I carried to this reading a high estimate of the author's talent, and went away hopefully assured that Styron will "become the most mature (as well as talented) member of the entire group of new writers in the 1950's." His writing is reminiscent of Fitzgerald, Mitchell and Faulkner in what we heard of the new novel. Lie Down In Darkness has been said to show the influences of Joyce, Crane and Melville. Through all of these influences, however, comes Styron himself, unmistakably, uniquely, and with a force and style of his own.

After the two session at Duke, I had the chance to talk for a few minutes with Styron. I mentioned that John Frankenheimer, the "Playhouse 90" director, another young man of exceptional talent, would be here at UNC in May to speak for the Carolina Forum and had expressed interest in meeting Styron. Since the latter left immediately after his appearance at Duke, I gave him Frankenheimer's number in New York, hoping they might get together. A "'Playhouse 90" show written by Styron and directed by Frankenheimer would be quite a combination.

When asked about his immediate plans, Styron said that he had been in touch with James Jones, who is now in Europe. They are making plans to meet, probably this summer, in Jones's villa off the coast of Spain.

"Jones tells me," said Styron, "that his doctor told him to stop drinking or he'd injure his health. I told him that all French doctors tell their patients to lay off the bottle. "I'm very pleased with this chance to get together with him . . . and I imagine we'll tilt a few."

The University Lives At Night

Joe Bfsplk

The University lives at night.

In the daytime, it opens its doors to the commerce—the commerce of speaking voices, professors droning on to uninterested classes and people making conversation in Y Court for the sake of making conversation.

At night, the life of the University reveals itself. It reveals itself in the din of pages and patter in a crowded but unused library. It takes form in the bridge players' room of smoke as they quietly, almost stealthily pursue the ephemeral master point to its ultimate conclusion—the two inch story in next week's Daily Tar Heel.

It is a biography told in the quietly moving pages of books in the basement of Alumni Hall, in the sparse gathering at a post-election political party meeting, or in the raucous noise of talk and rock 'n' roll music in Harry's.

It lives in the string quartet industriously sawing at their wooden boxes in Hill Hall in the vain hope that the result Tuesday night will be something of what the composer intended.

The clickety-clack, the driving incessant clickely-clack of the teletypes in the Tar Heel office hasten the pace of the night, and the scene shifts to Memorial Hall where gum-chewing girls are making efforts at character portrayal, groaning all the while about the cold of the building. A chorus comes in and out and grumbles about being moved around like chess pieces on a chess board. And the director keeps up a steady stream of activity in the dream that his activity will eventually make order out of chaos and a play out of a script.

Back in Graham Memorial, the usual handful that frequents the building are there. A few are studiedly over a chess board, while others are reading magazines and studying to the tune of Brahms, Beethoven, Bach, and June Christy. There are some scattered in television lounges throughout the campus seeking wisdom and diversion from the square box with the gray moving image that tells one that so and so has won $10,000 for answering correctly that white is the opposite of black.

A few are playing pool in the pool room, and occasionally a life-like groan emanates from the lips of one as he sees his opponent drop the fifteen ball, costing him the price of a large candy bar. In a dorm the radio tells of a third world war which started last night. Frantic believers go chasing around making frantic phone calls until one finds out that a tape recorder can be hooked up to a radio, and its taped message, when broadcast, sounds much like a radio broadcast.

In the men's dorms a frendly game of cards breaks out, followed along by an equally friendly group of kibitzers, and the resultant noise distracts the lonely few who conceive of the University as a place to study. They make an abortive effort to silence the gathering down the hall, and eventually they too join in. And only a few resist the temptation and bury themselves beneath their dim lamps for purposes of doing assigned reading.

The women have already kicked their shoes off and are sitting on their legs on the top of the bed with a book squarely in the center of their laps. Their attention wanders from the book to space back to the books and back to space, and they fervently pray for something else to do the next night.

The night goes on and in Playmaker's theater one can hear a student opera being rehearsed at the top of a soprano's and an alto's voice. They try hard to both sing well and articulate well, but the resultant sound is neither, and the director gets up to make sure a male character makes his singing entrance gracefully. In the wings a girl stands in studied attention, focusing catlike eyes on the spectre before her and occasionally darting a glance to a chance visitor in the audience.

And then there is the late coffee at The Chuckwagon and the interminable wait for service before the luke-warm cup is delivered.

And then one-by-one, while law students study in Manning Hall, lights go out throughout the campus, and the darkness remains. And the darkness and the rain are all that is left, except for a few lonely travellers on the wet brick pavement of the campus walks.

Such a traveller am I.

Covering The Campus

COLLOQUIUM

Prof. Richard N. Popkin, of the State University of Iowa, will speak before a joint Carolina-Duke Colloquium today at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Seminar Room, 3rd floor Carroll Hall.

His topic will be "Scepticism and Physics."

BSU

Laurence Highfill, guest speaker from N. C. State College's Departments of Philosophy and Religion, will discuss "Existenstalism and the Christian Faith" at the 5:45 p.m. supper forum Sunday.

This is the second in a series of two programs on existenstalism.

PROFESSORS HONORED

Alpha Kappa Psi, business administration fraternity, will honor two University faculty members at an awards luncheon today at 12:30 p.m. in the Carolina Inn ballroom.

Dean Maurice Lee of the School of Business Administration will present the "Silver Awards" to Profs. R. J. M. Hobbs and Rex S. Winslow, both UNC faculty members for 30 years. Hobbs teaches business law and Winslow, economics.

Larry Wilson of Mt. Olive, AK Psi chapter president, will preside. Held last in 1954, the "Silver Awards" banquets have previously recognized seven other UNC faculty members.

Short Course In Photography To Be Offered

The 10th annual Short Course in Southern Photography April 30 and May 1-2 in the Carolina Inn at the University of North Carolina will fetaure some of the nation's outstanding cameramen.

Hugh Morton of Wilmington, chairman of the Southern Short Course, stated that the attendance will be the largest yet, with photographers and newsmen attending from a dozen southern states.

Jess Gorkin of Parade, the Sunday newspaper supplement, will also be a lecturer.

Tom Priestly of NBC Television News will be a featured demonstrater of technique.

Joe Costa, a standby for many years and photographer for the N. Y. Mirror, will be present.

"Exposure" is the subject of a principal address by J. Winton Lemen of Los Angeles.

Saturday, May 2, will be "Editors Day" with the photographers urged to have their editors present.

Henderson Strike May End Soon; Union Head Hopes For Settlement

HENDERSON, N. C., April 16 (AP)—Hints that a settlement of Henderson's 22-weeks old cotton mill strike may be near were voiced Thursday by union leader Boyd Payton.

Payton, Carolinas director of the Textile Workers Union of America, told newsmen that "several strings are out and we hoped that one of them might bring about an agreement."

Later, he hoped for results by the weekend.

Payton's comments came after striking members of the two Henderson TWUA locals had held a two-hour mass meeting at which they gave their general committee authority to make quick decisions including full authority to sign a contract.

"This is what usually happens when things are happening fast," Payton said. "The membership usually delegates full authority to the committee to reach an agreement on things which must be done in a hurry."

America's second largest telephone system!

As servants to over 3½ million telephone subscribers, we strive to make communications so dependable that no one need ever give his phone a second thought.

And, in the growing communities we serve, our job is to enable more people to communicate with one another.

Indeed, Gen Tel is determined to give its growing "family" nothing but the best. That's why we never cease in our efforts to develop new products and services that will make the telephone still more convenient, economical and useful.

Knowing how vital the telephone is in modern American life, Gen Tel "invests ahead" in new plant and equipment to make sure that our telephone system will be equal to whatever task it is called upon to perform.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

AT THE PRESENT TIME September 26 seems a long ways away, but when that day finally rolls around it will find Carolina in South Bend, Indiana to meet Notre Dame in football. The Tar Heels have never beaten the Irish on the gridiron and you can bet that Jim Tatum would like nothing better than to spoil Joe Kuharich's season opener for him.

If you think that Carolina's quantity in playing material dominates the ACC we would have to agree with you, but we are still not in the class with Notre Dame. When the new Irish head coach began his spring drills last Friday he found himself surrounded by some 120 potential Saturday heroes, at least 20 more than appeared for the Tar Heel spring drills back in February. Despite this mass of material Kuharich has but 13 lettermen in the bunch.

GONE FROM TERRY BRENNAN'S team which whipped the Tar Heels 34-24 last year are the top three ends, the first four tackles, and the three best fullbacks. Don't start crying for the former Washington Redskins' coach, however, because somewhere in that 120 are the couple of stars which the coach needs to make Notre Dame tops in the country again.

On the style of play he will employ this coming year Kuharich has been quoted as saying, "We may have a few new wrinkles in our offense to fit our talent—but very few. We'll use everything we've been using since I've been a coach—tight T, flanking halfbacks and ends and several other variations." Add to this the fact beginning yesterday Eddie LeBaron, Kuharich's top QB at Washington, showed up to pass on some professional suggestions to George Izo and Don White and you can see that Notre Dame will not be hurting come this fall.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for baseball coach Walter Rabb who has been named the 1959 winner of the Will Wynn Award which is given annually by the Raleigh chapter of the Hot Stove League for outstanding service to the sport. Presentation of the award will be made today at the club's luncheon.

While on the subject of the Tar Heel coach, some of the baseball fans who saw the Carolina-Duke game were, to say the least, quite surprised by his ninth inning decision to pinch hit left-hand hitting Al Baldwin for right hander Carroll Bollick since Duke had a southpaw on the mound. Although the move didn't pay off, it was refreshing to see someone make a move which goes completely against the accepted theory in an attempt to win a ball game.

★ ★ ★

OUR SYMPATHY GOES OUT to Harold Workman who found out the hard way last Tuesday that college infielders, Duke's Butch Allie in particular, still don't always come up with high infield flies. The Carolina shortstop, as if in a trance, didn't start running until it was too late. Allie dropped the ball, but instead of making himself look dumb he turned the tables on Workman and threw him out at second base. It just goes to show that fundamentals cannot be stressed too much.

Scholastic Magazine has announced its high school all-star basketball squad and among those included in the select group is Bill Galantai. The James Madison cager, who is the only prospect to officially say he is coming here next fall, was one of three chosen from New York state.

Deacons Smash Tar Heels, 9-2

WINSTON-SALEM — (AP) — Wake Forest unleashed a 16-hit attack against four North Carolina pitchers Thursday and defeated the Tar Heels 9-2 in an Atlantic Coach Conference baseball game.

Jay Franklin, bespectacled Wake Forest outfielder, boosted his league leading batting average to .536 by picking up four hits—all singles in five at bats. Franklin has 15 hits in 28 at bats.

Bob Plemmons, Wake's sophomore righthander from Old Fort, pitched shutout ball for seven innings. He struck out seven and walked five in picking up his 3rd victory against one defeat.

Carolina Now 7-4

Wake Forest now has a 3-1 conference record and a 6-3 mark overall. North Carolina is 1-3 in the conference and has a season's record of 7-4.

The Deacons scored their runs in threes—in the second, third and seventh. Ace UNC righthander Wayne Young was little trouble for Wake Forest, giving up six runs and six hits in the 2⅓ innings he worked.

Wake Forest moved out front to stay with its second-inning outburst. Charlie Forte opened with a single to right and moved to third when Bill Barr doubled.

Bob Brown then waited Young out for a walk, filling the bases. Bryon Bullard then lofted a fly to center and Forte slid under Bruce Crumps' throw home. Franklin smacked a liner through the box, scoring both Barr and Brown.

Young Lifted

Carolina got into the scoring column with two hits and a fielder's choice in the eighth and picked up another off a tiring Plemmons in the ninth. Coach Gene Hooks decided to get Plemmons out, and lefthander Bob Lawrence came on to retire the final two men.

Freshmen Whip Deaclets, 7-2

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Jerry Carpenter twirled a neat seven inning five-hitter as his Tar Baby teammates pounded three Wake Forest pitchers for a 7-2 triumph here on a cloudless Thursday afternoon.

After enduring a shaky second inning when Wake scored both its runs, Carpenter settled down, allowing only two hits the rest of the way. He had to pitch his way out of another jam in the seventh when he walked the bases loaded with one out. Bill Covington's pop to short and Billy Packer's grounder ended the threat, however, before a run scored.

Eddie Manning took over in the eighth and finished up, retiring the last six men to face him.

Paul Swing got a quick first inning run for Carolina when he smashed a triple to deep centerfield and scored on a wild pitch by Deaclet starter Bob Muller. Wake Forest Coach Charlie Bryant immediately sent in lanky Ernie Loeffler who was eventually tagged for six hits and the next three Tar Baby runs.

After tieing the game in the fifth, Carolina forged ahead in the sixth, sending eight men to the plate in a brief two run rally. Singles by Ron Miller and E. C. Haithcock got things moving before Whitey Wade was hit by a pitch to load the bases with none out. Carpenter walked, sending Loeffler to the showers and bringing on George Warford. After another walk brought in the second run of the inning, Warford proceeded to strike out the side.

Don Hays' two run single in the seventh and Len Dellolio's hit in the eighth accounted for the last three Tar Baby tallies.

Dellolio, Haithcock, and Miller split six hits equally to pace Carolina while no Wake player could manage more than one.

Netters Defeat State 9-0 For Seventh Win

By JOHN JUSTICE

The Carolina netters stroked their way to a 9-0 victory over the squad from State College yesterday afternoon on the Tar Heel courts. In doing so, Coach Don Skakle's racket men won their fifth ACC match without a loss. They have lost only three overall for a 7-3 record.

Ben Keys, number three man for Carolina, won his ninth match of the season. A junior, Keys has lost only to an Illinois man. Bruce Sylvia got back his winning form, as he downed Spence of State, 6-4, 6-3, in the number two match.

Carolina lost only one set the whole afternoon, that being in the number three doubles, which Phil Causey and Neil Dickman won, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1.

After traveling to Davidson for a match next Thursday, the netmen return Wednesday, April 29 to face the Duke Blue Devils.

THE SUMMARY

Singles. 1. Black (C) defeated Sclomon 6-4, 6-4. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Spence 6-4, 6-3. 3. Keys (C) defeated Jacobs 6-4, 6-1. 4. Happer (C) defeated Faelton 6-4, 8-6. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Holmes 6-2, 6-3. 6. Ricks (C) defeated Monroe 6-2, 6-0.

WAA BADMINTON RESULTS

Carolyn Vaught won the Badmintin Singles tournament for Pi Phi, and Elizabeth Cauley and Jean McNeely won the honors in the Doubles round, for Kenan. The two tournaments provided many close matches in the contests of more than 100 entries. Vaught defeated Catherine Belton for her championship, and Betty Root played the finals of the Doubles in their loss to Cauley and McNeely.

Golfers Defeat State, 16½-10½

For the Tar Heel golfers the victory marked their sixth win of the season against two losses. In ACC competition, however, Carolina now stands at 1-2.

Bob Galloway was the medalist for the day as he shot a two under par 70 for the eighteen holes.

Both Galloway and number one man Ed Justa won their matches by a 3-0 score. The only matching which the Wolfpack came out on top was the number four contest where State's Bobby Smith bested Hugh Goodman 2-1.

THE SUMMARY

Ed Justa (C) defeated Pete Patton, 3-0

Best Ball - Carolina 3-0

Don McMillan (C) tied Jim York, 1½-1½

Bobby Smith (S) defeated Hugh Goodman 2-1

Russell To Captain Wrestling Team

Ray Russell, rising senior from Managua, Nicaruaga, has been elected captain of the University of North Carolina wrestling team for 1960.

Pope Shuford of Hickory, a 157-pounder who led the freshman team in scoring this year, has been given a post-season honor of being named captain.

The annual Benjamin Solomon memorial award was voted to Henry Rhyne of Mount Holly, who was ACC runner-up at 137 pounds. This award, which includes a trophy and a grant-in-aid contribution, goes to the varsity wrestler[s] chosen for "character and personality" as developed by wrestling.

The Solomon award was presented to Rhyne by its donor, Sam Planer of Gastonia, at the annual wrestling banquet when the captain elections also were held.

Student Council Asks Dorm Men 111 Revote

A re-election will be conducted in Dorm Men's III for two 1-year Legislature seats, on the direction o. the Student Council.

The re-vote has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 28, according to Hank Patterson, chairman of the Elections Board.

The council called for the re-election after hearing a case Thursday night involving an infraction of the Election Laws.

One of the candidates for Legislature from that district, Roy Goodman (SP), was brought before the council for tending the poll in Alexander Dormitory on April 7 from 2 to 4 p.m. The council considered the case after notification from the Elections Board of the violation of Article IV, Section 4, of the Election Laws.

Erwin Fuller, chairman of the council, said the council did not question the integrity or good faith of Goodman. "We feel there was no violation of the intent of the law. But the letter of the law was abridged," he said.

Erwin said the council believed Goodman was a victim of combined circumstances and that the responsibility for the violation of the Election Law was due in part to the Elections Board, to the Student Party to Goodman himself and to the Interdormitory Council representative who asked Goodman to keep the polls.

In hearing the case, Erwin said the council also considered that fact that there was a discrepancy in the number of names signed on the roster for voting and the number of ballots cast in Dorm Men's III.

Much of the responsibility for the Election Law infringement was placed on the Elections Board. The council expressed its opinion that the board was responsible for Goodman's not receiving a copy of the Elections Laws. Goodman did not receive a copy of the laws at a compulsory meeting of all candidates because he was not present at that meeting. And he did not attend the meeting because there was a question of his academic eligibility at the time.

The council said the board was also responsible that on instructions to poll tenders prepared by the Elections Board, attention was not called to the fact that no candidate may serve as poll tender in a district in which he is running for office.

The council found Goodman in error in not showing any individual initiative in informing himself of the Election Law provisions.

In the April 7 election Goodman led in the balloting with 175 votes. The other candidates and the number of votes each received were as follows: Dan Brown (SP), 156; Phil Edwards (ind.), 152; Vince Mulieri (UP), 140, and Ronnie Millican (UP), 99.

BSU Training Conference Held Today

"His Imperative — My Response" will be theme of the State Baptist Student Union Spring Leadership Training Conference which is being held at Forest City this weekend.

The topic of the conference is divided into four areas: 1. the imperative of the Gospel, 2. the divine encounter, 3. the response of faith, 4. the ethics of response.

The main speakers include Dr. Carlyle Marney, pastor of Myers Park Baptist Church in Charlotte; Howard Rees, Baptist Student secretary for Maryland and the District of Columbia, and Dr. G. M. Bryan, member of the faculty of Wake Forest.

During sessions this afternoon election of state-wide officers will be held.

Erwin Fuller, one of the two student representatives from the North Carolina Baptist Stuednt Unions to the General Board of the North Carolina State Baptist Convention, will preside over the Conference's general session this afternoon.

Ed Mendenhall, Jerry McDaniel (new UNC BSU president), Jerry Morgan, George Seastrom, Fred J. Smith, James D. Strickland and Chick Mikeal are also attending.

New Legislature Marks First Session With Large Number Of Bills

By STAN BLACK

The first meeting of the 27th session of the Student Legislature re-scmbled the first few days of a U. S Congressional session in the number of bills introduced.

Three bills were considered to be important enough to be considered and passed under special orders. A referendum of women dormitory residents concerning the collection of social and activity fees was authorized under a bill introduced by Jim Crownover (SP).

Kay Boortz, chairman of the Women's Residence Council, said that the council will consult dorm representatives before setting the amount of the fees to be voted on.

Bob Nobles (SP) sponsored a resolution under special orders commending the immediate past student body officers for their dedication to the best interests of the student body, bringing student government "to a point of high respect among all those who look to the University for outstanding leadership." Copies of the resolution will be sent to President Don Furtado, Vice President Ralph Cummings, Secretary Paddy Sue Wall, and Treasurer Charlie Gray.

Dave Jones (SP) introduced a bill to transfer $125 from Daily Tar Heel profits to the Daily Tar Heel photography account, as all funds for photography have been exhausted. Special orders was moved for the bill but overruled by Speaker David Grigg on the basis that a bill over $10 must go to a committee.

To circumvent this delay, Jones introduced another bill to authorize the transfer of $9.99. This bill was passed under special orders to allow The Daily Tar Heel to print pictures for the intervening week.

University Club President Jones introduced a third bill to approve the new by-laws of the University Club, since the set approved last year has been lost.

Jones' last bill proposes an amendment to the by-laws of the Student Legislature to allow elected representatives to move from one district to another during a session without the loss of their seats. Also legislators would be permitted two unex-absences per session instead one.

Jim Scott (SP) introduced a bill to appropriate $275 to Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity to defray expenses of its annual Parents' Day. This year the number invited to Parents' Day will jump from 2,000 to 9,000.

A bill to approve the revised constitution and by-laws of the Student Council of the Consolidated University of North Carolina was introduced by Swag Grimsley (SP) and Tom Cordle (SP) for Tom Long, president of the organization.

Bob Thompson (SP) introduced two bills Thursday night, one to approve the constitution of the recently reorganized Professional Interfraternity Council and another to establish a Motor Vehicles Advisory Board to investigate "all traffic or related problems applying to the University."

Two other traffic bills were also introduced. Ed Cox (SP) is sponsoring one to set up a Student Traffic Court Investigating Staff similar to the Attorney General's Staff. A University Traffic and Safety Committee would be established by Bob Nobles' (SP) bill. Its functions would include rules and regulations and the supervision of fines collected.

Jim Crownover introduced a bill to require all members of the Student Legislature to meet at least twice each semester with their constituents. Another bill introduced by Crownover (SP) would appropriate $167.50 to student government for the purchase of a typewriter for the executive office.

Hugh Patterson Is Re-Elected As Council Chief

He is a member of the Order of the Old Well, Order of the Grail, Order of the Golden Fleece and a Morehead Scholar.

Eight Students Tapped By Old Beanbirds

Eight students and two honoraries were "pecked" into the Order of the Old Beanbirds early this morning.

The order was founded in 1957 to honor those persons with "bird-like" qualities.

Honorary members are Mrs. Frances "Fantail" Hogan of the Physical Education Department and Dr. Douglas "DoDo-bird" Sessoms of the Sociology and Recreation Department.

Some of the requisites for membership in the organiaztion are: "(1) they must be able to perch, (2) they must be able to give a worthy demonstration of the Beanbird shufle, (3) they must be able to twitter-tweet, (4) they must be able to control their squawks on the ground and in the air, (5) they must be able to use their claws to cling to the following strong and sturdy limbs — wisdom, service, democracy ,loyalty, humor, beauty, friendship and humility."

An initiation and bird breakfast were held this morning in a special nest fort he new peckees. Beanbirds may be recognized by the blue diaper pins they wear.

Symposium Speakers To Be Chosen Monday

The speakers for the 1960 Carolina Symposium will probably be chosen at a meeting Monday of the Symposium Program Committee.

The Symposium, schedule to begin March 27, 1960, will center on this theme:" The Image of Man: The Individual In an Accelerated Culture."

Ed Levy, chairman of the Program Committee, has asked all members to attend the meeting Monday at 4 p.m. in Di Hall to add final touches on the program, adopt a method of presenting the program and select the speakers.

Levy said the theme of the 1960 Symposium concerns investigating the individual's difficulty in maintaning his identity in a rapidly changing culture, as well as examining the accelerating society.

Shaw Play On Tap For Presbyterians

"The Showing Up fo Blanco Posnet," a one-act play by George Bernard Shaw, will be presented by the Presbyterian Drama Student Seminar April 20-21 at the Student Center off Rosemary St.

The production, directed by Art McDonald, a graduate student in dramatic arts, begins at 8:00 p.m.

The cast includes Frank Mansfield, Blanco; Wendell Manuel, Elder Danields; Nancy Grubb, Feemy; Ed Crow, the sheriff; andn Sally Beard, the mystery woman.

This presentation climaxes a series of lectures by Foster Fitz-Simons, Bob Ketler and Art McDonald designed to foster a better understanding of the dramatic arts.

PAN-HEL MEET

Mrs. E. W. Busse, former Pan-Hellenic Council president at the University of Missouri, was guest speaker at the Pan-Hel meeting here April 15.

Mrs. Busse discussed the ideal goals of a college Pan-Hel Council: interesting people in sorority life and informing them of sorority activities.

Cooper And Boyd Payton Sign, Halting 22 Week Long Strike

By Ron Shumate and Dee Daniels
(Special to The Daily Tar Heel)

HENDERSON, April 17—It's over!

The long, bitter strike at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills ended Friday night following negotiation talks that lasted nearly four hours. Terms of the newly-signed contract were not announced.

The end of the strike immediately turned Gov. Hodges into a hero. As he left the South Henderson offices, preceeded and followed by State Highway Patrol cars, strikers—who had been patiently waiting since 5 p.m.—cheered wildly.

The talks began around 5 p.m. with the arrival of Boyd Payton, Carolinas Director of the Textile Workers Union of America. Gov. Luther Hodges and mill president John D. Cooper, Jr., had conferred for half an hour prior to Payton's arrival.

Hodges came out of the reception room, which was turned into a conference room for the talks, at 9:05 and said very calmly; "Do you boys want to watch them sign the agreement?" There had been no previous hint that any settlement of the 22-week long strike would be reached.

Payton, upon emerging from the smoke-filled room to take a break at 7:05, said "We aren't out of the woods yet."

The agreement, signed by Payton and Cooper—who had to sign left-handed because of an operation he had Tuesday on his right arm—stated "The company and the union have resolved their differences and have arrived at an agreement which is mutually satisfactory."

It went to to say that the agreement is "subject to ratification by the membership of locals 978 and 584." The two locals will hold a closed meeting Sunday afternoon at the Henderson High School.

Gov. Hodges, obviously relieved, said he is "very happy indeed to see the parties agree on a contract so the people can go back to work." He complimented both sides on "their friendly attitude" throughout the negotiations.

Payton, the sole union representative present, told newsmen that he was "pleased that we have been able to work out an agreement . . . I am hopeful that the wounds occasioned by the strike will soon be healed."

Payton also said "We have pledged our full cooperation to the company in bringing this about at the earliest possible moment." He expressed appreciation for the efforts of Gov. Hodges. "He deserves a lot of credit in the solution of the problems here."

Second Shift Monday

Cooper's statement was simply a repetition of parts of the agreement. However, he added, "I will decide before Monday when to start the next shift." He said he intends to start the second shift at 3 p.m. Monday. Cooper said he would start the third shift as soon as he gets the second organized. "I'm gonna run the best I can and as quick as I can," Cooper concluded.

The offices of the mill had been filled with reporters, photographers and a television cameraman since the afternoon.

The talks recessed at 7:19 and resumed again at 8:23. Again, Payton was the last to enter the room. He and Hodges emerged at 8:43 and went outside to confer with the eight-man union executive committee.

Seven minutes later the two returned. A reporter asked Hodges, "How are things looking?"

As Hodges stepped into the room out of the dark, he looked around and said, "Bright in here."

It's All Over

And 15 minutes later it was all over.

When the Governor made his undramatic statement, the room was suspended for a moment in stunned silence. But almost immediately everyone began to squeeze into the pine-paneled den to sign a piece of paper that will bring an end to the disrupted lives of hundreds of tired, anxious and sometimes-violent strikers.

The old clock, which had been so noisy during the quietness of the talks, went unheard in the near-bedlam that broke loose in the offices.

And outside, another bedlam was erupting in the form of voices —voices cheering a man they hated with every ounce of their energy only a few short hours before.

The strike is over!

Carolina Folk Festival Gets Underway Tonight

The Carolina Folk Festival swings into action tonight with several types of dances and folk music at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

Several UNC folks—Ben Hammett, Bruce Crump, Tommy Saintsing, Harvey Salz and Mac Turlington—will perform a Flamborough Sword dance which originated in England.

Others will join in the program of square dances, Scottish country dances, guitarists, fiddlers and Negro folk music for the 11th annual festival.

The Folk Festival is being sponsored by the N. C .Folklore Council. Tickets will go on sale at door one hour before the 8 p.m. program.

Other features during the festival will be Scottish dances from Charlotte and Greensboro, who will join with folk singers, fiddlers, guitarists and square dancers in a salute to the folkways of Tar Heelia.

Also, 'Cile Turner, interpreter of Negro folk music, the "Dixieland Square Dancers" of Raleigh, bagpipper Jack Smith of Winston-Salem and drummer John Strickland of Grifton will perform during the evening.

Dr. Norman Cordon, head of the N. C. Music Program, is chairman of the festival.

YMCA Cabinets Have Openings

Among the YMCA program areas of which the chairmanships are open next year is a new one which will offer students a chance to serve and take part in "interesting" experience, said Jack Raper, YMCA president.

This new committee will go to Raleigh each week to participate in seminars with doctors and observe patients at the N. C. State Mental Hospital.

Raper said a student is needed to assist a YWCA co-chairman in coordinating the seminars and in finding means by which the students may be of use to both Dix Hill and the N. C. School for the Deaf and Blind.

A student is also needed to organize "down-to-earth" type entertainment for Gravely Sanitorium and Memorial Hospital.

Another YMCA Cabinet position open is on the International Relations Committee, which sponsors speakers, forums and discussions in the field of international relations. Next year this commitee will also be responsible for representing the European Seminar program on the Y Cabinet.

Appointments for interviews for these positions may be made in Y Court.

McGuire Receives Award

Frank McGuire, UNC head basketball coach, has been presented the Tar Heel Air Force Award. The Tar Heel Air Force is an organization of the UNC Air Force ROTC unit here.

The certificate McGuire received read as follows: "In recognition of his pronounced interest in the United States Air Force and support of AFROTC activities, Frank Joseph McGuire is hereby appointed Honorary Colonel in the Tar Heel Air Force."

McGuire, who won the NCAA National Basketball Championship in 1957 for Carolina, has been head cage coach for five years. He formerly coached at St. John's, where he graduated.

The Honorary Colonel award adds to many others he has received. McGuire was Coach of the Year in 1957 and is an official Kentucky Colonel.

The presentation was made during a full dress ceremony conducted by the Cadet Corps in Coach McGuire's honor.

Prior to the ceremony McGuire spoke to the Cadet Corps in Gerrard Hall on the qualities of leadership, loyalty, and discipline required of athletic participants and Air Force officers

National Civic Magazine Prints Student's Article

The article describes the program of technical planning assistance provided for North Carolina's municipalities with populations under 25,000 by the Division of Community Planning, State Department of Conservation and Development.

Stewart writes, "In the 18 months of its existence, the Division of Community Planning has filled a recognizable need—providing planning assistance to small towns and cities."

Stewart is a 1953 UNC graduate who worked as city hall reporter for the Asheboro Courier-Tribune in 1958. He has written three articles for Municipal South, a monthly magazine for Southern city officials.

The National Civic Review is published by the National Municipal League, which has offices in New York City.

Communications

To Reach And Be Reached

The paper extends congratulations to the newly installed Big Four officers of the student body, Charlie Gray, David Grigg, Sue Wood and Bob Bingham.

The paper challenges them to solve the greatest problem confronting student government today—the problem of communications between the bureaucracy in Graham Memorial and the student in the Lower Quad. And the paper challenges the man in the Lower Quad to aid in the solution of this problem.

There appears to be an increasing separation of the GM moguls from the man on the street. One, we might add, which is totally unnecessary.

Student government during the coming year can do much to ease this area of trouble by requiring members of the Student Legislature to attend dorm and fraternity gatherings so that they may become better acquainted with their voting constituents.

With four student body officers who are either in fraternities or sororities, it is doubly important that some of the top jobs in student government be parceled out to non-Greeks.

It is mandatory that suggestion boxes be installed in all districts to enable students to offer positive proposals to the local lawmakers.

Most of all, student government must realize plainly and simply, that it must take its programs to the students, for the students will not come to it.

This is the problem. If Charlie Gray and his advisors can reach a practical solution during the next twelve months, his will have been a significant administration.

'Two Legends'- Go And See It

It would be surprising if more than a very few people get excited over this weekend's performance of "The Legends" in the Playmakers Theatre. Yet, this is an event which is unique in recent Carolina history: Under the title are two musical creations—a cantata and a one-act opera—which have been created from beginning to end by students. One need not be a music-lover or an aesthete to recognize that this is a considerable achievement for anyone, but particularly for students, and all those connected with the production deserve the respect and thanks of their fellow students.

The first performance is tonight, and it will be repeated tomorrow. Both performances are in the Playmakers Theatre at 8 p.m. The additional fact that admission is free, compliments of GMAB, should make the import of this editorial perfectly clear: GO! A.W.

The Purpose Of This Paper

This newspaper exists for three fundamental purposes:

1. To disseminate news of interest to students and other members of the University community.

2. To keep a beady, skeptical eye on the workings of the student bureaucracy at Graham Memorial and the bigger bureaucracy at South Building.

3. To be the individual student's public friend and counsel when he collides with either of the bureaucracies mentioned above.

These three purposes can only be realized if students and other members of the university community will look on The Daily Tar Heel as THEIR paper.

Like any other newspaper, this one lives off its "tips." We want to know who is doing what with which to whom.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina. There is published daily except Monday and examination periods and summer terms. Entered as second class matter in the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 8 1870. Subscription rates: $4.50 per semester, $8.50 per year.

Poems For Breakfast

Ed'tor:

I have this morning at breakfast read my copy of the DTH, as is my daily custom. O ten this is a satisfying custom, as I am able to digest simultaneously the offerings of Lenior and your editorial staff.

Today, however, I am less than satisfied. You have presented me with a New Poem By New Poet. I doubt if I could have handled this at lunch, but a' BREAKFAST? emphatically not. Two points in particular bring me conste nation:

(1). This so-called "poem" was printed in reverse order. It reads much better backwards. Not only does it make more sense in this direction, there is a greater flow of lyric continuity.

(2). The editorial next to this "poem" describes the au'hor as a "fine writer" who produces "some very exciting poetry." It urges our "closest attention." We are further warned that "other efforts . . . . will be printed from time to time."

Editor, sir, please leave this garbage, literary or not, to Spectrum. It has no place in the DTH, especially at breakfast. Like what the hell?

Al Alexander

Edi'or:

In reply to Mr. Levy's so clever letter of congratulations to the Buildings and Grounds Department, I feel it necessary to commend those two agile gentlemen who managed to lose their shoe: and yet preserve their socks from ruin. For someone who is Vice Chairman of the Carolina Symposium to write such a juvenile letter is disappointing to those who look to the Symposium as a symbol of intelligent leadership.

Cecilia Husbands

(A portion of Mr. Levy's letter was reprinted recently in the Durham Herald by the greatest folk humorist since Mark Twain. We refer, of course, to "Sid." Ed.)

Thanks From Paddy Wall

To the Student Body:

I believe that two of the hardest things a person is called upon to do are to say thank-you when one's heart is filled with gratitude that words seem inadequate to express, and to say farewell, when one is leaving behind such a meaningful segment of life as two years at this University.

I do, however, want to take this final opportunity to say a sincere thank you to the members of this student body for the opportunity you gave me last spring to work so closely with the student government of Carolina, and also for the interest and support you have exhibited in student government this year. To many students of this campus, student government is only a necessary evil, and I'm very sorry, for to those who have worked in it, it has been a most rewarding, educational, and invaluable experience.

Working with students from every area of the world and from all the student governments in the United States, programming and conversing with outstanding leaders of our state and nation, learning through experience the functions of a democratic government are all opportunities offered in the student government curriculum of our campus. I believe that our program is unique in that there is an area and a place for every student on the campus who is interested in participating.

Our executive positions would be worthless were it not for the students who do show interest and are willing to accept the responsibility upon which a democratic government depends.

I urge each student on this campus to become more acquainted with the functions of the student government program, including the judiciary systems, GMAB, the Symposium, YM-YWCA, and the many other phases of extra-curricular activity. I feel that it will not only enrich the student government program, but will enrich the lives of all who actively participate in any phase of it, and that you will leave the University better prepared to accept the responsibilities of US Citizenship.

Our democratic way of life depends upon each individual accepting his personal responsibility to the United States, to the world, and to himself—to make the most of every opportunity before him.

Paddy Wall, Secretary of the Student Body

Voices Of Dissent

Frank Crowther

VOICES OF DISSENT. A selection of articles from Dissent magazine. Grove Press 384 pp. $2.75; Evergreen paperback, $1.95

This publication by Grove-Evergreen has stirred quite a bit of interest and reaction among men of all sociopolitical creeds. Dissent magazine's editorial staff lists the names of many well-known critics of our times: Irving Howe, Norman Mailer, Meyer Schapiro, Erich Fromm, Norman Thomas and, a man who recently appeared at UNC, Michael Harrington. Whether we may label these writers en group as radicals or socialists or democratic socialists is a matter of debate. Probably, we should weigh each in his own value.

I find it difficult to read these essays and believe that these men are of one belief. To me, they obviously are not. Lewis Coser and Irving Howe seem more stable and lucid in their presentations. Although all these men are rather adept at twisting other men's thoughts to suit their purposes, they offer an interesting argument for a socialistic structure of society, their own brand of utopia. They talk of "curdled realism" and our lives in "the shadow of defeat" and maintain that "socialism is the name of our desire." What this desire actually is becomes somewhat curdled itself in the reading of these essays.

As an example of the befuddlement, Coser and Howe, in their joint essay on "Images of Socialism," write: "Utopia without egalitarianism, utopia dominated by an aristocracy of mind, must quickly degenerate into a vision of useful slavery." Thus, they assert with Marx, socialism must be brought about by the activities of the workers. So, I ask, what do we do, take national polls to decide key issues? No? Oh, I see, the workers elect speakers who lead them and reflect their collective thoughts and desires. These men are then an elite group by themselves, but shhhh, don't for heaven sake call them by that name. "The aim of socialism," they continue, "is to create a society of cooperation . . ."

Well, I guess. National and international cooperation, let's learn how to get along, admitting that there will be conflicting interests and desires. This ancient wish is undoubtedly an honest one, but those foolhardy souls who believe such will ever exist are rather naive. First tell us how we render impotent such things as the drive for recognition, jealousy, lust, envy, hate, the latent need for violence as a spice in the human diet, and many other component parts that go together to make up what we refer to as the human animal. If these men reply that these are things which cannot be controlled and should not be controlled (lest they be accused of another sort of slavery), then I answer quite bluntly that you never are going to get anywhere near total cooperation. The harsh facts of history gentlemen, not yours. And I don't are on the side of my argument, believe that there ever will or could be a society without an elite, without an aristocracy.

In conclusion, I will say that the group of essays is one of the most interesting I have read in some time. They rap the South, accuse Picasso of irresponsibility and conformism, and present us with some "superficial reflections on the Hipster."

Views & Previews

Anthony Wolff

Human society has a lamentable habit of deserting the steep and thorny road to heaven in favor of the primrose path of idiocy. In the current age, when idiocies of one sort or another are narcotizing us on our merry way to damnation, it is happily inevitable that perceptive observers should issue a warning—however vain their heroic attempt seems to be.

There comes a time, however, when warnings of disease or disaster lose their potency; serious commentary becomes cliche, and the mass develops an all-too-ready and effective resistance to advice or exhortation.

At such times, the devices of humor, turned on the affected part of society, can expose the malignancy in a new light. Through the subtle agency of laughter, humor often penetrates all defenses; and if the humor is raised to the level of full consciousness, it may, by circumventing the defenses, illuminate both both the defenses and the problem behind them.

Such "conscious humor" is, perhaps, characteristic of our time: it is the humor which brings us to awareness with a wry, even bitter laugh; not the humor which dispels awareness in hysterics.

Of this sort of humor, three examples are reviewed below, each aimed at some specific human foibles—continuing, current, or imminent.

This book concerns the race of rats: specifically, the efforts of several of its members to stay out of the rat race. To further confound the issue, the rat race is a non-athletic event peculiar to humans, but unknown to undomesticated rats.

The particular rats of this fable, however, are verging on humanity. They live in a brownstone on New York's swank East Side, in close contact with humans. And, to add to their troubles, they are all more-or-less literate.

It seems, however, that the rat's society requires no literacy for citizenship: a rat does quite well without it. So when a semi-literate rat, Cadwallader by name, comes across the word "gold" in The Conquest of Mexico, he finds that his conceptual powers are strained. Since rats need no currency, the meaning of the word is lost to him, and he goes in search of it.

Unavoidabley, Cadwallader's pursuit of human understanding leads him close to "sanity"—in the rat lexicon, a disease peculiar to humans, characterized by erect posture and the pompous delivery of utterances.

A willing reader who follows Mr. Lynes' clever, seemingly easy tale to its end will find himself with a new view of many human foibles: money, war, domestic problems, suburbia, and so on. The institution that is really the object of this fable is nothing so trifling, however: it is the whole precarious structure of human society, which, at most, is only necessary; and, at best, never sufficient.

Faithful readers of The Reporter have seen most of these satirical verses in that magazine under the pseudonym of "Sec." (French for "dry.")

The little verses printed here
Do not sell peace of mind or beer
But are constructed to arouse
Impertinence toward sacred cows.

Under her piercing gaze pass such assorted sacred cows as over-production and planned obsolescence, women's fashions, automobiles, bomb tests, segregation, Latin American revolution (an annual event these days, often necessitating several repeat performances), and so on through a frighteningly long list.

Miss Mannes is perceptive and witty, with an excellent command of the language. Her verse is only occasionally marred by a lapse in meter. The only problem is that, while these verses are individually funny, they are condusive to misanthropy in the aggregate.

Still, the collection provides an excellent record of some major faults in modern society; and if after a while it just ain't funny any more, well, that's not Miss Mannes' fault.

Osborn's drawings are, as always, directly on target.

Until about a year ago, Mr. Feiffer was the pride and joy of a small weekly called The Village Voice. Then came the publication of Sick, Sick Sick, and Mr. Feiffer woke up famous. The current book is an attempt to repeat the success of his debut.

This is a large order, but he fills it. The form of this one is different—four long stories instead of brief sketches—but the humor is the same.

Again, like the books reviewed above, PASSIONELLA is aimed at exposing the poses of human beings, whether they be bosomy movie queens with their prosaic adulators and "hip" boyfriends, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or those who insure peace with bigger and better bombs.

"Boom," the story about nuclear weapons tests, is funny because it says simply and with a straight face the same words that the AEC dresses up for public consumption. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that Mr. Feiffer's presentation of the subject will do more than cause a few laughs.

Contemporary humor is not all funny.

Campus Hosts Science Fair

Photomicrography and spectrometry are usually subjects reserved for study by advanced college students, but enterprising young high school scientists have moved with ease into these and similar technical fields.

Proof of these youngsters accomplishments are displayed here today at the State Science Fair where 70 students from throughout the state are competing for honors and prizes.

Top prizes for the two exhibits judged best in the physical science and the biological science divisions will be trips to Hartford, Conn. to compete in the National Science Fair in May.

The N. C. Academy of Science is sponsoring the science fair program, with the support of 38 businesses and agencies in the state. The Institute of Natural Science at UNC is conducting the two-day State Fair here.

Dr. H. D. Crockford of the University of North Carolina, who is state director of the science fair program, announced that exhibits were in place in the Morehead Planetarium building noon Friday and judging began at 1 p.m.

Exhibits may be viewed by the public on Friday from 9 a.m. till 4 p.m. today.

Winners will be announced at a Saturday luncheon, when all competitors will be guests of the University at 12:30 p.m. in Lenoir Hall. Dean James Godfrey will welcome the group and Dr. Crockford will present the awards.

Judges for the physical science division are W. A. Reid, N. C. State College; Henry Shannon, N. C. Department of Public Instruction; and Paul E. Shearin, University at Chapel Hill.

Biological science exhibits were judged by M. R. Carlker, UNC; Hollis Rogers, Woman's College, Greensboro; and L. A. Whitford, N. C. State College.

Anthony Jenzano, Planetarium manager, was in charge of arrangements for the fair. Many of the exhibits will remain at the Planetarium for a special exhibit during coming weeks.

The state fair will culminate months of work by the students in preparing their exhibits, and in competing at fairs in the schools and on the county and district levels.

Seven district fairs produced 10 winners each—five in physical sciences and five in biological sciences—whose entries are shown here this weekend.

Suskin Has Latin Book Published

Dr. Albert I. Suskin, professor of Latin is author of "Roman Literature in Translation" published this week by Harper and Brothers in New York.

The book is a revised edition of a textbook of years ago by the late Professor George Howe and Professor Gustavus Adolphus Harrer. Dr. Suskin is a member of the UNC Department of Classics.

The publishers declare that Dr. Suskin "has retained those excellent features which made the first edition eminent, yet has improved the presentation with translations that are easier to read and more contemporary."

Particular phases of Roman life and literature are presented in translations of the Roman authors whether they were of that period or later.

In the revised edition some less important writings have been omitted and the more important writers, such as Lucretius and Virgil, have been presented in fuller scope. Newer and more readable translations have been substituted in many cases. Essays precede the selections, giving biographies of the writers, and often, short explanations of the pieces.

In easy-to-read English are great paragraphs and chapters from such Romans as Caesar, Cicero, Cato, Virgil, Seneca, Martial, Juvenal, Pliny.

Geologist Observes Quake

The second largest earthquake to strike the North American continent has been described by an "on the spot" reporter.

Dr. Virgil I. Mann of the UNC Department of Geology addressing the Southeastern section of the Geological Society of America, Friday, described the evening of July 9, 1958, when the earthquake occurred along the western edge of the Fairweather Range, Alaska.

The speaker, who was in Alaska at the time, commented, "Observations in the vicinity of Lituya Bay indicate that the quake was responsible for at least one, and possibly two, gigantic waves, plus numerous slides and rock falls.

Only two fishing boats and two people were lost in Lituya Bay as a consequence of this quake; if, however, the area had been densely populated the loss of property and life would have been catastrophic, he said.

Another speaker, Leland A. Fornier who is a graduate student in the Department of Geology working with Dr. Mann on gravity studies in North Carolina, reported on the progress of the program.

He stated that the gravity study sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the University has now been completed in the Coastal Plain and eastern Piedmont.

The purpose of the study, according to the speaker, is to establish the earth's gravitational field in North Carolina. This information, he explained, will be used to identify the types, shapes and structures of rocks below the surface.

"From the rock interpretations," Dr. Mann added, "we hope to be able to explore for minerals associated with specific rock types. Furthermore, the earth's gravitational field must be known by those involved in inter-continental ballistic missile studies."

Gravity studies in the Durham-Sanford Triassic Basin of North Carolina were dealt with specifically by Frank S. Zablocki, UNC graduate student in geology, in another paper.

He discussed the relationship established between the earth's gravitational field and the rocks of the Triassic Basin. A shape of the basement rocks can be established to a modest degree with gravitational study, he said.

George E. Siple of the U. S. Geological Survey in Columbia, S. C., discussed some aspects of heavy mineral distribution in the South Carolina Coast Plain with implications for North Carolina.

Speaking at the technical session Friday morning, he pointed out that heavy minerals found in the South Carolina Coastal Plain suggest a moderate degree of correlation with the development of present surface features.

Carolina Seeks Second ACC Win Against State

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Tar Heels, reeling from three straight conference defeats, will attempt to get back on the winning track this afternoon when they take on State College in a 3 o'clock game at Emerson Stadium.

Carolina enters the contest sporting a 7-4 season record, but in ACC competition the Tar Heels have but one win in four decisions.

Coach Walter Rabb has assigned the starting mound duties to lefthander Ben Hammett who thus far this year possesses a 2-0 won-loss record. In the 21 innings he has worked the southpaw has yielded six earned runs for a 2.7 ERA, the best on the Carolina staff.

State Home Team

Today's game was originally scheduled to be played in Raleigh but when construction work left the Wolfpack baseballers without a field the site was transferred to Chapel Hill. On May 5 the two teams will play their other conference contest with the Tar Heels assuming the home team position.

Wolfpack Coach Vic Sorrell's nine enters the game with a 2-1 ACC mark having been whipped only by South Carolina.

This year's State squad is the product of a rebuilding job which Sorrell had to do since he got only four lettermen back from last season's team. Counted among the missing are Bob Kennell who signed with the Baltimore Orioles, Russ and Danny Casteen, and centerfielder Dick Hunter.

Another Chance

Once again this afternoon Carolina will get another chance to do what it has been unable to accomplish so far in ACC play—beat a sophomore pitcher. In each of the last three games the Heels have faced and lost to first-year hurlers.

Sorrell follows the trend by naming Wilson Carruthers to start on the hill for the Pack. Carruthers, a 6-2 righthander from Greensboro, has two wins without a defeat so far this year.

The Carolina lineup for today will remain essentially the same the possible exception of a last minute change at first base. Larry Craver will be at second with Harold Workman at stortstop while Ferg Nortion returns to the starting lineup at third.

Carolina Batting

As a team Carolina is currently batting .245 while their opposition has racked up a .265 stick mark. Leading the Tar Heel batting attack is catcher Al Baldwin who has a .375 average. Right behind Baldwin are Johnny Burgwyn and David Dale both whom are hitting .333 or better.

The Tar Heels get a brief rest from game activity following today's contest as they have almost a week to prepare for their next encounter against Clemson which is scheduled for Friday.

Yankees Lose, 4-0

BOSTON — (AP) — Boston righthander Tom Brewer, recuperating from a bout with the virus, spun a stylish two-hit shutout Friday for a 4-0 triumph over his longtime nemesis, the New York Yankees.

Brewer looked like anything but a sick man as he avenged his 3-2 loss to the Yankees in their season's opener though the New Yorkers began to tag him harder in the late stages.

Bob Turley, who beat Brewer in a two-hitter in that earlier meeting, was the loser as Boston center fielder Gene Stephens accounted for two runs on a double and a single.

Throwing sinkers and sharp breaking curves off the fists, Brewer gained his fourth victory in 17 lifetime decisions against the Yanks.

Fine fielding support by Jackie Jensen and Gene Stephens helped the tiring Brewer set down the last 15 men to face him.

Terps Threaten Track Team's Unbeaten Mark

By BING SOMERS

Carolina's undefeated track team, with a conspicuous 3-0 record, cautiously invades the state of Maryland today for a dual meet with the awesome Terrapins.

Led by All-American Dave Scurlock, captain Wayne Bishop, and handyman Ray Stanley, the Tar Heels face the toughest task in ACC track, that of defeating Maryland in a dual meet. It is all but an impossibility, and has yet to be done by an ACC team since the conference had its birth in 1953.

Of the above three, Scurlock will enter the quarter and either the 220 or 880; Bishop, the two mile; and Stanley, who is now learning how to pole vault, will try the broad jump, javelin, discus, and maybe even the high jump. At least four first places should be gleaned from this group.

Smith In Discus

Another possibility for a victory rests upon the right arm of Fraser Smith who has and can hurl the discus 140 feet. The two top men in the shot are Jerry Phaup and Dave Leffler and besides Stanley in the javelin, there's John O'Neal.

Carolina will send Bob Eubanks and Ward Sims to back Stanley in the broad jump, Bob Sherrill and Wally Graham in the high hump, and Sims in the pole vault.

Other runners besides Scurlock and Bishop that may scratch are John Sylvester and Benjy Seagle in the 440, Cowles Liipfert in the 880, Liipfert and Bob Foxworth in the mile, and Alex Coffin and Bing Somers in the two mile.

Terp Hurdlers Tough

The top hurdler is Lyndon DeBorde. He is good but, as in too many events, Maryland is so strong and so deep here that a clean sweep appears almost inevitable.

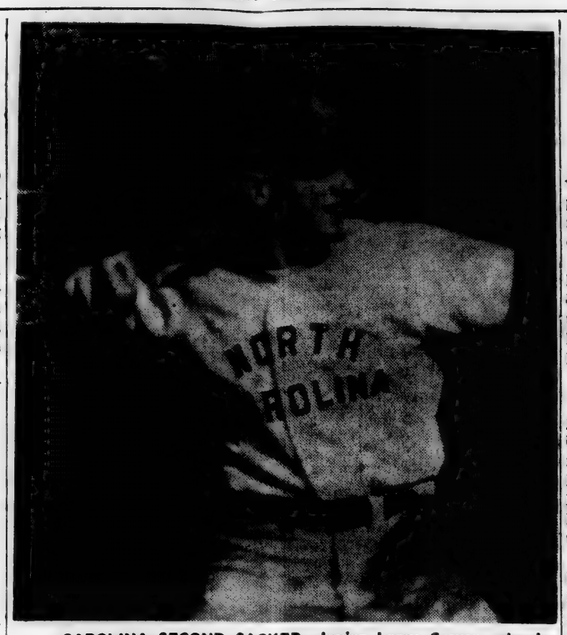
In the 100, Carolina has Graham and Danny Droze, but the Terps have indoor champ Don Whittaker plus a sophomore with the awkward name of Jonas Spiegel, who has a bullet-like start and who has beaten the much-glorified Bobby Morrow indoors.

They run the 220 too, and it s doubtful that even Scurlock with his 7 foot stride, much less Charlie Sowers or John Fox, can keep up with them. Scurlock just might though.

Indoor Stars

Maryland's list of stars runs on and on. Six of them won their individual events in the Indoor Games and both relay teams were victorious. The names Tait, Anderson, Thompson, Draksler, Claggett, Colavita, Lowndes, Whittaker, Spiegel, Pitts, Johnson, Salmon, Starboard, Hansen, Prigg, and, incredibly, even a few others could place high in their events. They are that good.

A scheduled meet last Saturday with Duke at College Park, was cancelled by a 2-inch blanket of snow, but today the outlook is much better and the meet should get under way by 12 o'clock.



CAROLINA SECOND SACKER—Junior Larry Craver, who is currently batting .225, will start at second base this afternoon when the Tar Heels meet State at Emerson Stadium.

Frosh Meet State

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Carolina's yearling baseballers will be laying a three-game winning streak on the line in Raleigh today against the N. C. State frosh.

Rebounding from an opening 9-4 loss to Presbyterian Junior College, the Tar Babies have racked successive wins over Oak Ridage Military, the Duke freshmen, and Wake Forest's Deaclets. With a victory today Carolina can retain undisputed possession of first place int he freshman Big Four standings.

The Wolflets will be trying to recover from the woes of a 19-2 (that's not a misprint) shellacking suffered tot he Blue Imps of Duke.

Tall lefthander Dave Murr will be looking for his second win in the starting role for Carolina. The remainder of the lineup should have Larry Neal , Len Dellolio, Paul Swing, Pete Farrior, and whitey Wade performing the infield duties with Ron Miller, James Helton, andn E. C. Haithcock roaming the outfield.

WAA Archery

Preparations are being made for the Archery Tournament in the WAA Intramurals. The Tournament round will consist of one-half of a Junior Columbia Round with 12 arrows from 20, 30 and 40 yards. Each organization may enter one or more teams of four archers each, with the score determined by the total of the individual scores of the team members.

Previous instruction is required of entries in the Tournament. If this instruction was other than in a class at UNC the girl must report to a scheduled practice, on April 17 or 20 between 3-4:30 p.m.

Lacrosse Team Prepares For Second Engagement With Duke

By DAVE WIBLE

Yes sir, Carolina's 7-3 lacrosse win over Duke Tuesday was a surprise. Not only to the folks who are following the recently organized club, but to the Tar Heels as well.

It just don't seem right for a team, half of which have never played before, to practice two weeks and then go out and lick a squad that has been in business as long as Duke.

Duke Surprised

Duke, of course, got the biggest jolt of the afternoon. Expecting bunch of spastics, they started a mixture of freshman and jay vees. In the third quarter when Carolina led 7-1, the Tar Heels swear the Duke coached slipped in his first team. But, by then, it was too late.

For three years a group headed by Frank Riggs, Fred Stack, Spense Everett, Les Sutorious and Joe Alexander has been trying to get a team organized here. It was not until this spring that the group, backed by 25 others, was able to get a coach and equipment.

Through the joint effort of head football coach Jim Tatum and athletic director Chuck Erickson the team was finally set up. Tatum gave line coach Ed Kensler permission to coach the team, and Erickson gave the equipment.

The boys who got the ball rolling showed what they could do in a game. Riggs and Stack, along with Will Brown played a smashing defensive game that kept the ball away from the Carolina goal for most of the game.

Scoring Leaders

Not offically a varsity sport, the squad will probably have to be content with playing Duke this year. There is a chance that it will make a northern trip and play some schools in Virginia, but nothing is definite yet.

Tuesday, the club will play at Duke again, and the following Tuesday Duke will be over here.

For those Carolina fans who like their sports wild and woolly, lacrosse should fit the bill. Jimmy Brown, famed fullback of the Cleveland Browns, reportedly said, "Give me football on Saturday and lacrosse the other six days of the week."

End Of Strike Brings Fast Relief From Tension, Headaches, Boredom

By RON SHUMATE and DEE DANIELS

Strike-ending talks in Henderson Friday were like a giant-size aspirin—quick acting and headache-relieving.

Henderson, in the mid-afternoon, closely resembled any other sleepy little Southern community.

Business on main street was going on at a leisurely pace. Women wearing sleeveless blouses and gaily colored cotton skirts were calmly doing their afternoon shopping, oblivious to the bright sun's hot rays beating down on their backs.

As children, in denim playclothes, darted across lawns, lost in the fantasy land of child's play, there was no hint to passers-by of the tension permeating the air and the homes of the townspeople, who had become unwillingly entangled in the long bitter fight between union and management.

When three o'clock rolled around, at least a portion of the town's citizenry had a chance to release some of their tension. But unfortunately, it had to be released at their fellow human beings.

This was the scene on the picket line at the two strike-torn cotton mills. The strikers' every emotion was poured out across the hot street at the strike-breakers as they rolled out of the mill. Their car windows were rolled up; they moved quickly in order to escape the shouts and taunts of the embittered strikers.

But some of them didn't completely escape. Some were struck by bricks thrown from the crowds of strikers lining the street for nearly a half mile.

About an hour later, Governor Luther Hodges rolled dramatically into the parking lot at the offices of the south Henderson plant. The Governor was flanked by State Highway patrolmen—men he had sent to Henderson to try to maintain some manner of peace.

Thirty minutes later, Boyd Payton, Carolina's Director of the Textile Workers Union of America, arrived—unescorted.

Payton was a man alone. He arrived alone. He met with the Governor and management officials alone. He came outside the conference room alone. He left to go to dinner alone.

Once, upon emerging from the smoke-filled conference room, he was asked if he felt lonesome. "Very lonesome," he answered solemnly.

Once the strike talk had ended, Payton was not alone. He was interviewed—along with Hodges and Cooper—on television; he was interviewed at the mobile unit of one of the two local radio stations; unionists ran up to him to say a word or two or shake his hand—usually both.

And when Governor Hodges left—again escorted by two Highway Patrol cars—he was cheered wildly by the strikers, who, only a few long hours before, had had nothing but animosity for him.

The strikers cheered because they were relieved. And they were relieved because they were tired of the strike. They didn't want the strike. They were led into it by the union officials. But the strikers were faithful—never grumbling, except to say a harsh word against mill officials or against the Governor.

To the strikers who had lined the streets around the mill since the afternoon, the Governor must have appeared to be a knight in a shining black Cadillac.

But the Governor too was relieved. The strike had been a migraine headache for him—and the whole state—for 22 weeks of struggling, talking, planning—and suffering.

And as the Governor rode off into the night in his jet black mount, the cheering continued. It was a time for gaiety.

A headache is no fun.

Questionnaires

Questionnaires on the leisure pursuits of undergraduate students are being given to 10 per cent of the student body by the Panhellenic Council, Women's Residence Council, Inter-Dormitory Council and Interfraternity Council.

The four councils are cooperating with Elsie Prevatte, graduate student in recreation curriculum, who is conducting the study of leisure interests and pursuits.

Student cooperation in filling out the questionnaires accurately and promptly is essential for the study, Miss Prevatte said.

Ford Foundation Grants Sum To B.A. School

The Ford Foundation has granted the School of Business Administration here $60,000 for a five-year's "problem-oriented" research program.

The research will be conducted by members of the faculty in the UNC Business School, it was announced by Dr. Maurice W. Lee, dean of the school.

The funds will be used to provide research leaves of absence for faculty members, encouragement of summer research activity in lieu of summer school teaching, conduct of pilot studies designed to test research plans and to refine methodology, operation of faculty research seminars, employment of statistical, clerical, and other research assistants and provision of computing and other service facilities.

Student Party Selects New Officers Monday

New party officers will be elected at a meeting of the Student Party Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Roland Parker I and II.

The new officers to be elected include a chairman, vice chairman, secretary, treasurer and four members of the SP Advisory Board.

The only active candidate for chairman is Dewey Sheffield. Running for SP vice chairman are Norman E. Smith and Bob Nobles.

Study Commission Discusses Church, Nuclear Warfare

A public meeting of the "Sunday Commission on the Church and Nuclear Warfare" will be held Monday in Carroll Hall at 9:15 p.m.

Chairman of the group is Dr. David Monroe, professor of political science. The commission consists of 10 citizens from Chapel Hill, including Dr. Monroe.

Present plans call for sending several representatives to Washington to testify before Congressional committees on atomic energy.

The commission is currently concerning itself with two questions: "Should the Church declare itself as absolutely opposed to the use of nuclear weapons? Can we, as Christians, find any better way out of the present stalmate than has been suggested by our political leaders?"

In conjunction with requests from the commission, 150 students have responded to questions about the position that America should take in Berlin and the U. S. stand on nuclear warfare. Of the replies, 147 call for a firm stand in Berlin, while three are in favor of withdrawal.

The main purpose of the group is to sample the opinions of a cross section of the population, particularly young Americans. The commission was started in the local Presbyterian Church, and is now attempting to bring in other Chapel Hill church groups.

Dr. Monroe called for a large turnout Monday night pointing to the necessity of getting the opinions of a large portion of the University citizenry on the problems to be discussed. He particularly urged students to attend.

United Nations Series Begins On WUNC-TV

The late Tyrone Power will be featured on WUNC-TV Monday night at 9:15 in the first of a United Nations film series entitled "Eight Steps to Peace."

World law will be discussed in this film with explanations of how it can guarantee world peace with justice for all nations.

During seven other films on the United Nations to be held over the local television station, speakers such as Raymond Massey, Henry Fonda, Robert Ryan, Vanessa Brown and Vincent Price will be featured.

The final film of the series will present the above speakers as they advocate world peace, under law, through the United Nations.

The films were written and produced in California and were shot both in Hollywood and New York under the sponsorship of the Pierce Butler Jr. of the Foundation for Education in World Law, Inc.

High School Debate Teams Hold Finals Here This Week

High school debating teams which were successful in the statewide triangular competition and in district contests held at six host colleges will enter the 47th annual final contest of the North Carolina High School Debating Union here Thursday and Friday, according to E. R. Rankin, Secretary.

The list of high schools whose teams will enter the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup and the district contests in which they emerged as champions follows:

Gatesville high school, affirmative, and Perquimans high school of Hertford, negative, from the district contest held at East Carolina College, Greenville, on March 31.

Biscoe high school, affirmative, and Laurel Hill high school, negative, from the district contest held at Flora Macdonald College, Red Springs, on April 7.

Broughton high school of Raleigh, both affirmative and negative from the district contest held at Meredith College, Raleigh, on April 9 .

Hildebran high school, affirmative, and Mount Holly high school, negative, from the district contest held at Catawba College, Salisbury, on April 10.

Marion high school, affirmative, and Ashe Central high school of Jefferson, negative, from the district contest held at Appalachian State Teachers College, Boone, on April 10.

A general meeting of all debaters and teachers attending the final contest will be held at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in Gerrard Hall. Welcome will be extended by Dr. Ernest L. Mackie of UNC.

John C. Brooks, president of the Philanthropic Literary Society, and Gary Greer, president of the Senate of the Dialectic Literary Society, will also participate in the opening session. A drawing will be conducted for sections and pairing in the preliminary debates.

The visitors will make a tour of the campus after the meeting and will then visit the halls of the Phi and Di Socities.

The preliminary debates will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, and the semi-finals are scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday.

The final debate for the Aycock Memorial Cup will be held at 3 p.m. Friday in Gerrard Hall.

The query is: "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the essential features of the British system of education." This is the national high school debate query of the current year.

Organ Recital Today

A student from the class of UNC Asst. Prof. Glenn Watkins, Mrs. Braswell will play the following selections: "Prelude and Fugue in D. Major" and three "Chorale Preludes" by J. S. Bach, "Carillon" and "Comes Autumn Time" by Leo Sowerby, "Divertissement", by Louis Vierne, "La Nativite" by Jean Langlais and "Litanies" by J. Alain.

At UNC she is a member of the University Chorus and has appeared in other student recitals in Hill Hall.

She is a former student of pianist Lauris Jones at Salem College and has studied organ with Mrs. George Corby of Winston-Salem and Dr. Jan P. Schinhan, former professor in the UNC Music Department.

Gray Appoints Crownover As Presidential Assistant

The Student Party legislator succeeds John Brooks, who served Don Furtado during his term as president. Crownover is now in his third session in the Student Legislature. He is serving his second term as SP floor leader.

"I have had the privilege of working closely with Jim this past year, and I have no doubt that he will be of invaluable service to me in all my endeavors," said President Gray in making the announcement.

Gray went on to say that Crownover had proved his ability in the Legislature and as head of various executive committees. "I feel, with Jim's advice, I will be able to offer a program this year that will be representative of the entire campus," Gray said.

"I am deeply honored," Crownover said in accepting the appointment. He referred to party line and said they would have to be crossed many times this next year to have a truly representative and successful student government.

"Obviously, the president and I cannot do it alone. We will need the help of every interested student on this campus. I urge you, and the president urges you to apply for a position in student government between now and Wednesday," said Crownover.

In addition to being legislative floor leader for the SP, Crownover has been president of and is now manager of Aycock Dorm. He was chairman of the Drinking Rules Committee and the Campus Stores Committee.

Since he began taking part in student government activities at Carolina, Crownover has served on the SP Advisory Board, the Judicial Review Committee, the Committee on State Affairs, the Orientation Committee and the Ways and Means Committee. He is a recent initiate of the Order of the Old Well and the Order of the Grail.

Y Executive Committee Chooses Cabinet Soon

The Executive Committee of the YMCA will be holding interviews throughout this week to select Cabinet members for the 1959-60 school year. The Cabinet consists of chairmen of different areas of Y work.

There are three positions on the finance committee to be filled for next year. These are the chairmen of the Faculty-Chapel Hill, the Alumni and the Student-Parent fund drives.

According to Allen Daniels, treasurer of the YMCA, the Y hopes to raise over $14,000 next year through these three drives. This amount will be used to finance program, office and secretarial expenses.

Daniels further emphasized that the chairmen of the three drives will have large committees to work with them in organizing and supervising the fund raising campaign.

Daniels offered to talk with anyone who is interested in a position on the Finance Committee and who wishes to find out, before he is interviewed, more about the committee's responsibilities. Daniels may be contacted at the Kappa Sigma house.

The chairmanship of the Public Affairs Committee is also to be filled for next year. This committee sponsors speakers, forums and other programs on public affairs. In the past, this committee has arranged visits to the campus by such men as Edward P. Morgan and William McGovern.

Any students who are interested in being interviewed for these or any other Cabinet positions of the YMCA may arrange an interview by signing the schedule posted in the lobby of Y Building.

Ford Physicist Speaks In Carroll Hall Monday

A physicist for Ford Motor Company will speak on "The Christian Faith and the Scientist" Monday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

Dr. Albert W. Overhauser of Ford is being brought here for the second lecture of the Williams Gaston series.

Dr. Overhauser is supervisor of solid state physics at the Ford Motor Company's Scientific Laboratory, Dearborn, Michigan. He took his Ph.D. at the University of California in 1951, was research associate at the University of Illinois, 1951-53; and was assistant professor, then associate professor at Cornell, 1953-58, before taking up his present position with the Ford Company. His field of research is theoretical physics.

The Gaston Lectures are a memorial to William Gaston, the famous jurist of New Bern, and are presented to the public under the auspices of the UNC Newman Club.

Dr. Overhauser will also speak to a joint UNC-Duke physics colloquium, to be held Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. in Phillips Hall. His topic will be "The Symmetry of Color Centers."

Opera Tonight

The second night's performance of an original opera by two UNC students will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Playmakers Theatre. No admission will be charged.

The opera is "Whatever Passes Along the Paths of the Sea," written by Thomas Rice and Russell Link. Both Rice and Link are graduate students here.

An instrumental ensemble will accompany the singers and will be conducted by the composer, Thomas Rice. Link is directing the production.

Rice and Link have also written a short chamber cantata entitles "Fully Clothed in Armor, With Her Shield and Spear, Athena Emerges From the Forehead of Zeus." The cantata will precede the opera.

Marilyn Zschau and Wayne Garber will sing the cantata. Accompanying them will be Ted Quast and Don Fouse.

New Wesley Officers

Senate Apparently Favors Herter As Dulles Successor

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP) — Speedy Senate confirmation of Christian A. Herter as Secretary of State seemed assured today on the basis of Congressional samplings.

Democrats as well as Republicans praised the appointment. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Senate Democratic leader, said it will be welcomed by those who have worked with Herter and who "have confidence in his ability, his dedication and his perseverance."

"Since he has been working closely with Secretary Dulles, his appointment assures continuity of policy," Johnson said. "He will have the backing of a united America."

The Assistant Democratic Leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, called it an excellent choice and said "I hope we will confirm this appointment quickly and settle the matter once and for all."

Without waiting for President Eisenhower's formal nomination, Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) called a meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for Tuesday to consider Herter's appointment.

Fulbright said Herter plans to appear before the Committee to answer any questions.

Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass): "I will vote for his confirmation with pleasure and confidence."

Carolina Playmaker Is Directing Old UNC Play In Copenhagen

Kai Jurgensen, on leave from the Carolina Playmakers this year, is director of a play which just opened in Copenhagen which promises to be a highlight of the Danish 1959 theater season.

Jurgensen who is in Denmark on a Fulbright Fellowship made a suggestion that a long-forgotten play by a famous Norwegian author be taken out of moth balls and produced.

His suggestion was accepted; the play opened April 10.

How did Jurgensen happen to know of the forgotten play?

Because the author of the play—Agnar Mykle—was a student at the University of North Carolina seven years ago. Mykle was a Fulbright Scholar at UNC.

When Jurgensen got to Copenhagen last year and studied at the Royal Theater and taught at the University of Copenhagen, he found that "Mike" Mykle, as he was called in Chapel Hill, was Scandinavia's most famous current author. He has written three novels and several volumes of short stories.

The former Carolina Playmaker, says Jurgensen in a letter to Chapel Hill friends, is "so much of a celebrity and a national hero that he cannot step out of his door in Norway without being pursued by autograph hunters."

One of his recent books, "The Song of the Red Ruby," created a squabble. There were those who thought it obscene. A court suit was brought against the book. Mykle won the suit, and the resulting publicity boosted the sale of his book. "It was Ulysses-type pornography," writes Jurgensen.

In a casual conversation with a Copenhagen literary agent, Jurgensen urged the agent to read the play Mykle had written in Chapel Hill seven years ago.

The idea caught on, the play is being produced—with some of the finest actors and actreses in Denmark. Director Arne Weel of Alle Scenen Theater in Copenhagen is producing the play. Jurgensen declares that if the play is as big a success as he expects it to be, he will take it also to Helsinki, London, Oslo, and Stockholm this summer.

CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS IN COPENHAGEN — Conferring on the Copenhagen production of "Morning in Yellow Orange" are, left to right, Prof. Kai Jurgenson of the University of North Carolina Department of Dramatic Arts; Arne Weel, director of Alle Scenen in Copenhagen, and Agnar Mykle, Norweigan author who wrote the play seven years ago when he was a Fulbright student in Chapel Hill. Mykle is now a famous Scandian author. Jurgensen advised that his Carolina Playmaker produced play be presented in Denmark.

Jim Crownover; Gray Was Wise

Charlie Gray has made a conspicuously good start as President of the Student Body by appointing Jim Crownover as presidential assistant, in his first official act.

With four members of the Universtiy Party occupying the four top executive positions in student government, Crownover's service will be highly valued, as he is a member of the Student Party. Secondly, Crownover as a non-Greek will perform well as a liason from Gray's office to the dormitory areas.

We anticipate big things from Crownover in the next year, and offer the hope of the paper that he will work with President Gray and at the same time, push the ideas of his constituents in the Student Party, whom he represented in the last election. A cross section of opinions will be healthy for the second floor of Graham Memorial.

We are pleased at the same time with the broad minded outlook of the new chief executive.

Alligators? Thanks, But No

The Daily Tar Heel was amused to note that a student at Louisiana State University had recently shot an alligator with a bow and arrow, right there on the campus in Baton Rouge.

Distractions such as alligators represent a most ominous trend in the American educational system. Outrages such as this must not be allowed to continue.

The Daily Tar Heel suggests a Congressional investigation to determine the extent of penetration that these alligators have made on the LSU campus. This paper stands for equal educational opportunities for all, but when alligators try and break the barrier, we draw the line.

Have compassion for your fellow students at LSU. Who knows, something like this could happen in Chapel Hill.

Russ Link- A Fine Job

While the paper is passing out kudos for meritorious achievement, there is another person that can be added to the list.

This person is not a leading politician, nor is he prominent as a name personality in any sense, but he has carved out a conspicuous niche for himelf in the minds of a few, and his work has benefited many more.

The person is Russ Link, whose chairmanship of the Petite Musicale Committe over the past two years has been studded with singular achievements as well as an overall program of such general excellence that has made the Petites Musicales one of the most singularly worthwhile of all Graham Memorial Activities Board programming activities.

He has had the courage to go out on the limb with the unusual, to do the usual without fear that the audience would be bored, and to put out the effort to make the balanced program of both worthwhile.

Public Meeting

Law And Order

Dr. David Monroe of the political science department has started an interesting project, along with nine other local citizens.

The group he represents is concerned with the problems of nuclear fallout and the present stalemate in the cold war. He is currently interested in sampling the opinions of young Americans on how we may best assure that law and order will reign on the international level.

Tomorrow night at 9:15 in Carroll Hall, his commission will hold its first meeting which is open to the public.

The Daily Tar Heel strongly urges you to attend. We can all learn from such "give and take" round table discussions.

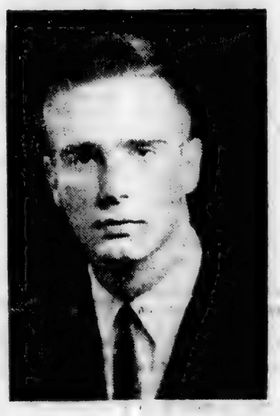
Grigg's Legislative Talk

(The Daily Tar Heel is pleased to be able to print this message from Student Body Vice President David Grigg. The remarks appearing below were delivered by Grigg to the opening session of the Student Legislature on Thursday night. Ed.)



From a theoretical point of view I think there is little doubt that the legislative branch is the most powerful in student government. It should be and can be the most important. I say this because I want to emphasize upon you the responsibility that each of us has accepted.

Each of you represents a section of this campus and at the same time have responsibility to your particular district and at the same time have one to the student body. Do not think lightly about the position you have accepted; it is one of tremendous importance in student government. In your hands lies the fate of a major portion of the next year's success. At the end of the coming year, the legislature will be held in account for its success or failure; each of you as an individual will also point back to your accomplishments or shortcomings.

For student government to approach its potential this body must be one of positive action. We must take the initiative. In the past weeks many areas of interest have been pointed out. Student government is far from perfect, and only with a great deal of time and effort on the part of each legislator can this body do its part to bring and to maintain student government at the optimum where it should be. This can not be emphasized to strongly.

In a few minutes you will elect the officers for the coming legislative assembly. I will expect a great deal from these officers. I emphasize especially the clerk and the filing clerk. They will have to be willing to give time and energy to their jobs. I will heavily depend on them because in order to have a smooth running legislature, their duties must be carried out faithfully and regularly.

The importance of the standing committee chairmen cannot be overemphasized. From them I will expect a detailed report at each session and prior to each session the written changes which the committee has made in any bill it has been considering. It is essential that these chairmen work closely with the speaker in order to have a smooth running legislature. While it is the duty of all of us to be well informed on what is going on as well as the issues at hand, a great deal of time on the floor can be saved by efficiently run standing committees. This will be up to the chairmen.

Attendance at both legislative sessions and committe meetings is essential. We cannot function representatively or efficiently without the attendance of practically all legislators. There are definite rules, of which you are or will be shortly informed, concerning attendance. I shall urge that these rules be enforced and I shall be favorable to a roll call vote at any time.

We owe to each other to the positions we hold, and to our purposes for being here a due amount of respect. I hope that at all legislative sessions male legislators will wear coats and ties except in extreme heat, when shirts and ties should be acceptable.

I shall encourage any relevant debate on any issue and will try in so far as possible to give each side of any issue an equal opportunity to the rostrum. Only by being completely aware of the issues at hand and by thorough consideration can each legislator wisely cast his vote. I hope debate will be above personalities — let us argue with what a person says not with the person himself. Give everyone the right to his opinion and respect for what he believes. Here again is the way to mutual understanding and cooperation — the keys to a successful legislative year.

In closing may I welcome the new legislators tonight. I urge you to become immediately active in all legislative activity. And of course it most certainly good to see the old faces on whom I shall depend so much.

This year promises to be a truly productive one in UNC student government. A great deal of its success is up to you. I am looking forward to working with you; we have an excellent group in the 27th Assembly. I hope you will call on me at any time to be of any assistance that I can.

Minorities And Rights

Editor:

Last night in legislature I spoke in opposition to a bill which would authorize the Women's Residence Council to collect social fees from dormitory residents. I opposed this bill on the grounds that a limited segment of the campus should not be empowered to impose a mandatory tax on a student of the University—that participation, financial or otherwise, in any pursuit other than required scholastic activities and campus-wide, self-imposed, activities should not be mandatory. I stated that the minority which might not care to participate in these particular activities of a group they find themselves in through no choice of their own should be protected by the student body from any financial imposition other than regular university fees and the campus wide activities fee. One speaker, when asked if he did not think the rights of the minority as well as the majority should be the concern of the legislature stated that he did, but that you have to be "practical." This seemed to be the general attitude of the legislature. Only representatives Blanton (CIPP), Miller (Ind.) and myself voted to uphold the rights of this minority.

This effort was in the interest of a minority—perhaps a very small minority. Part of it may be composed of those who are at the University on a limited budget and who might better use this money, in their own discreetion for some other purpose. There may also be those who simply do not care to participate in this extra-curricular activity and should be guaranteed the right to choose as they see fit. The so-called leaders and representatives of the student body must not believe that there are any such people at Carolina. If they do, they certainly demonstrated no regard for them.

By all means let the women have their social program and their social fees. If there is enough interest in it there should be no problem in finding funds. But do not tax those who can least afford to pay. Do not force those who do not wish to participate in the social program to support it financially. Do not trample the rights of minorities as you have done.

Don Dotson

'Being Lead'

Editor:

I am not a leader of women on this campus, but I am sick of being led. I know that I am not in favor of the double standards that exist on this campus for men and women. I think that all people, human beings, should be given the same privileges and opportunities. I do not like discrimination of any kind, especially that directed against me as a coed.

Why are junior and senior girls not given the opportunity to make their own decisions and run their own lives as freshmen men are given this opportunity? Does someone have to look out for women all their lives? When we go beyond this university life, get out in the world, we will have to make our own decisions. Therefore, it seems to me that the women on this campus should now be given the chance to experiment in running their own lives, and making their own decisions about when to come in, when to take showers, and where to go.

Let us have the opportunity to come and go and stand on equal status with the men. As Belinsky pictures it in his Utopia "women will not be this slave of society and man. She will, like man, freely follow her inclinations without losing her good name, that monstrosity of conventional ideas." Why won't they let each individual woman make her own rules and regulations to fit her life so that she can develop into a useful and responsible member of our society. Let's unite the apron strings on this Carolina coed's finishing school and incorporate her into a university of broader freedom and opportunity.

AN INTRODUCTION TO HAIKU: An Anthology of Poems and Poets from Basho to Shiki. Translations and commentary by Harold G. Henderson. 190 pp. New York: Doubleday & Company. $4.50 (hard-bound); $1.25 (Anchor Paperback).

The first chapter of this book carries the astounding note that there are about fifty monthly Japanese magazines devoted to haiku, with an equal number devoted to the somewhat more elaborate tanka form; which means, according to Dr. Henderson's calculations, that in magazines alone there are about a million of these fragile poems published each month.

In Japan, then, a haiku is not only a familiar thing: it is an art which is practiced by everyone, including university students. These "records of high moments' are often composed only for the author's personal pleasure or for the circle of his intimate friends. Obviously, this is a cultural phenomon which has no analogue here, where one keeps one's high moments to one's self, or, if possible, avoids them altogether. It is not only the sharp difference in attitudes toward poetry, however, which keep haiku from becoming known in America. The difference in attitude — or, better, difference in vision — means only that haiku will never be the popular pastime in the U.S.A. that it is in Japan. What keeps Japanese haiku from crossing the ocean is the near impossibility of translation: the special form of haiku (taree lines of five, seven and five syllables) does not permit the same poetry in English which it evidently does in Japanese.

Perhaps the major virtue of this book, then, is its triple-rendering of each haiku: into a rhymed three-line evrse, first, to give an impression of the strict form provided by the syllabic regulation of the originals; then in footnotes, a romanized transcription of the Japanese, and an English version as nearly literal as possible. The two English versions — one "poetic," the other literal — give the reader a valuable opportunity to get more of the feel of the original than he could with either one alone.

For the quality of the translations themselves, most of us will have to depend on Dr. Henderson's reputation as a translator, and the enthusiastic response of learned critics. Most important for those ignorant of Japanese, however, is the excellence of the English versions as poems themselves, and the clearness of the commentary and notes.

POETS OF TODAY V. Poems by O. B. Hardison, Jr., Kenneth Pitchford and Sheila Pritchard; with an Introductory Essay by John Hall Wheelock. 191 pp. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $3.50.

This book is of primary interest because it includes the first major publication of poems by O. B. Hardison, Jr., one of the younger members of the U.N.C. English faculty. Perhaps few poets would have the courage to begin their public careers with a sestina; much less a theological dialectic in sestina form. The opening poem in Dr. Hardison's collection is, however, just that, and this bit of technical display presages the major faults of the poems which follow: the poet is too concerned with the intellectual possibilities of his craft and subject matter, and the poetry suffers. The logical end of such consern is "Bernini's Colonade," which is concocted of hidden allusions and a central image which requires a lengthy footnote to achieve clarity. Perhaps an accompanying photograph would have been better.

On the other hand, Dr. Hardison obviously knows what he's about. The lack of warmth and life — of much real poetry — in his work is offset by an informed concern for philosophical argument and satire, and highly developed craftsmanship.

The rest, particularly Mr. Wheelock's essay on poetry and science, is well worth inspection.

Here we have the sophistocates' Charles Metcalf Breezy, typewriter-composed, filter-tip compositions thrown out under the influence of martinis in Mr. Reid's spare time. I have my prejudice for beer poets.

The dust-jacket announces in bold blue letters, ODDMENTS - INKLINGS - OMENS - MOMENTS, and then below, with the same type case, family and number, but in red ink, POEMS. If this means to imply that the book is divided up evenly with only one-fifth labeled "Poems", then I will credit the publication with minus four-fifths pretention and an equal degree of humility — but the blurb inside ravishes my naive critical nature and forces me to accept the guilt of misreading the title. The blurb credits Mr. Reid with being "captivated by the freshness of the familiar." I cannot find him the least bit "colloquial", but rather, "chatty." As for being "fresh", I read him more as being "witty." They feel a "confident grace" in his verse; I notice a "bourgeois bouancy." They tell us he is "humorous;" I hear him "limp."

The pieces which make up this book are sketches with a No. 3 pencil; glazed ashtrays labeled sculpture. Most of these sketches are pleasant, some good, but none are near great — none even strive to be great. And here is the essential weakness in his scheme of writing. If there is no conscious, articulated campaign for greatness in his writing, we do not have a poet to watch.

But, Mr. Reid never need want for an outlet because Mr. Reid has the New Yorker and the New Yorker has him.

Davidson Makes Bid For Scholastic Honors

Davidson College will make its bid for national scholastic honors today when a team of four undergraduates matches wits with a team from the University of Minnesota on CBS television's "G. E. College Bowl" at 5 p.m.

The half hour program pits teams from leading American colleges and universities against each other to answer questions taken from all fields of knowledge.

"G. E. College Bowl" will originate from the campus of the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. If Davidson defeats Minnesota, the program will be televised nationally from the Davidson campus April 26.

The winning team's school is given a $1,500 scholarship for each performance, and the school of the losing team receives a $500 scholarship.

Henderson Question: Who Won?

HENDERSON, N. C., April 18 (AP)—While this city eased back into a state of normalcy, its bitter cotton mill strike all but settled, the favorite question was:

"Who won?"

The most appropriate answer was, "Nobody."

The members of the Textile Workers Union of America's two striking locals managed to preserve their organization. But, in so doing, they suffered several setbacks to Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills in a new one-year contract.

The company managed to see an end to the five-months strike without having to liquidate. Its president, John D. Cooper Jr., said plans for liquidation were in the works.

The city lost most of its biggest payroll for five months. The figure was placed at more than 1¼ million dollars.

Asked if he thought anyone had won the strike, Boyd Payton, TWUA-Carolinas director and strike leader, replied:

"I don't think it's the kind of situation that can be said has been won by anyone anymore than you can say a war has been won. I am glad we came out of it maintaining our union."

Cooper said he was glad the dispute was over. "I had been hoping we would be able to agree before I had to liquidate the plant which I would have done before I gave in to them."

The two sides reached a compromise agreement on the arbitration issue which keyed the strike during negotiations late last year. They also came to terms on other stumbling blocks—seniority rights, dues checkoff and effective date of a new contract.

All agreements but the contract date were victories for the company.

The strikers have maintained that arbitration was necessary to the life of the union. The company originally wanted the 14-year-old contract provision abolished.

Statewide Drama Event Begins Here Thursday

The 36th annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association will be held Thursday through Saturday here with the Carolina Playmakers acting as hosts.

Twenty-five drama producing organizations throughout the state are expected to present productions and compete for honors. They represent high schools, colleges and little theatres.

As a special feature of the annual conference, the Playmakers will present Lee Simonson, noted New York scene designer and theatre historian, in a talk in the Playmakers Theatre Saturday at 10 a.m. Simonson will remain with the UNC Deartment of Dramatic Art as guest lecturer for two weeks after the C.D.A. festival.

The three-day festival meeting will include a series of plays presented by the drama groups, all of which are winners of district festivals held earlier this month.

The program will open on Thursday at 2:40 p.m. with the presentation of three plays by city high schools: "Before the Bullfight" from Durham, "These Doggone Elections" from Kannapolis, and "Genesis" from Durham.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m., three college groups will appear. Wingate College will present "Mooney's Kid Don't Cry;" Mars Hill College, "Electra;" and Wilmington College, "Give Us Time to Sing."

Friday at 9:30 a.m., The Durham Theatre Guild will stage "Lord Byron's Love Letters;" E. K. Powe Jr. High School, Durham, will present "The Bishop's Candlesticks" and West Jefferson High School, "Judgment Comes to Dan'l."

Other plays on the Friday schedule are "Forgotten Land" from Goldsboro, "Escape by Moonlight" from Charlotte, "The Maker of Dreams" from Kannapolis, and "The Dancers" from Wilmington. These plays will be seen in the afternoon session, beginning at 2 o'clock.

The Friday evening schedule includes "The Breaking of Bread" from Elon College, and "I Rise in Flames, Cried the Phoenix" and "Lithuania," both presented by Appalachain State Teachers College, Boone.

After the talk by Lee Simonson on Saturday morning, the Playmakers will hold special conferences for high school and college groups.

The Saturday afternoon meeting will feature two original plays, "Crazy John" from Goldsboro and "From Rome to Damascus" from Boone. Other productions are "The Blue Concerto" by The Little Theatre of the Seymour Johnson Air Base and "Around the World in Eight Days" by The Summit School of Winston-Salem.

FELLOWSHIPS

The Department of sociology and anthropology announced that one or more three-year fellowships in anthropology are available to students qualified for graduate work, who have a special interest in linguistics.

The fellowships, made possible by the National Defense Act, include allowances for dependents. Students with previous graduate training are not eligible to apply.

Applications should be made by letter to Professor William Noland, Chairman, Department of Sociology and Anthropology.

Shirt Satellite Launched!

The first Shirt Satellite is finally a reality! Just yesterday, during their lunch hour, Van Heusen scientists launched a Van Heusen Century Shirt into the stratosphere. It's now circling the earth 180,000 miles up, in an orbit so large that a grown man couldn't walk it, even in a whole day! Traveling at the legal 35 miles per hour, it is expected that the Van Heusen Century Shirt Satellite will remain up there in the blue beyond for at least 1200 years. And, with luck, maybe 1201.

"But," you will ask, "what value will the Shirt Satellite have for science?" Just this, friend! It will further prove the immutable law that the soft collar on Van Heusen Century Shirts won't wrinkle . . . ever! You see, the slick Van Heusen physicists have attached an electronic Wrinkle-ricter to the collar of the Van Heusen Century Shirt. This clever device will constantly send back electronic reports on the condition of the collar, so, for 1200 years, we earthlings will have absolute proof that the soft collar on Van Heusen Shirts won't wrinkle . . . ever. Should you ever have any doubts, just drop in to the Van Heusen office, and listen to the reports coming back from the Shirt Satellite.

One more thing—the Van Heusen Century Shirt Satellite will drop back to the earth in the spring of 3157 (possibly 3158) and you're all invited to the return party! If, in the meantime, you want to see the Van Heusen Century Shirt, you can at your campus haberdashery. He has them in 5 collar styles, in white, stripes and colors. $4 & $5. At better stores everywhere or write: Phillips-Van Heusen Corporation, 417 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

Do You Think for Yourself? (THIS TEST WILL GIVE YOU A CLUE! *)

1. If your parents exhibited "baby pictures" of you to a friend, would you be (A) embarrassed? (B) merely interested in your friend's reaction? (C) just plain annoyed? A☐ B☐ C☐

2. You are making a speech—and suddenly find you have a large hole in your clothes. Would you (A) excuse yourself and leave? (B) pretend you didn't know the hole was there and finish the speech? (C) cover up the hole with a handkerchief? A☐ B☐ C☐

3. Would you rather have the characteristics of (A) U.S. Grant? (B) Thomas Edison? (C) J. P. Morgan? A☐ B☐ C☐

4. You have taken your date to dinner and find you haven't money to tip the waiter as well as take your date home. Would you (A) ignore the waiter? (B) take him aside and tell him you'll tip him next day? (C) tip him and walk your date home? A☐ B☐ C☐

5. Mathematics is your poorest subject, yet you are fascinated by the idea of being an atomic physicist. Would you (A) try to overcome your difficulties with math? (B) pick an easier occupation? (C) ask yourself if it's physics you like or its glamour? A☐ B☐ C☐

6. Your roommate is a nice person, but suddenly takes to asserting an ability to foretell the future. Would you (A) notify the authorities? (B) ignore the whole thing? (C) give him tests to prove to him he's wrong? A☐ B☐ C☐

7. Do you believe the maxim "It's a long lane that has no turning" is (A) a complete non sequitur? (B) a well-known fact? (C) an allusion to a common phenomenon? A☐ B☐ C☐

8. Would you rather have as a birthday present (A) something expensive? (B) something long-lasting? (C) something beautiful? A☐ B☐ C☐

9. In choosing a filter cigarette, would you pick one that (A) claims it filters best? (B) merely says it tastes good? (C) gives you a thinking man's filter and a smoking man's taste? A☐ B☐ C☐

If you're the kind of person who thinks for yourself . . . you use judgment in your choice of cigarettes, as in everything else. Men and women who think for themselves usually smoke VICEROY. Their reason? Best in the world. They know that only VICEROY has a thinking man's filter and a smoking man's taste.

*If you have checked (B) in three out of the first four questions, and (C) in four out of the last five . . . you think for yourself!

Tar Heels Defeat State, 5-2

Hammett Goes All The Way; Carolina Collects 10 Hits

By ELLIOTT COOPER

In a game played during a continual drizzle yesterday at Emerson Stadium the Tar Heels, behind the five-hit pitching of lefthander Ben Hammett, whipped State College 5-2 for their second ACC win of the year.

The victory over the Wolfpack gives Carolina an 8-4 overall mark and a 2-3 record in the league.

To support Hammett, who is now 3-0, the Tar Heels rapped out ten hits against the three State hurlers that came to the mound. Leading the attack with two hits apiece were Harold Workman, Al Baldwin, Russ Hollers, and Ferg Norton.

The Tar Heels began fast as they knocked State starter Wilson Carruthers out of the box before he had retired a single man. Workman, John Burgwyn, and Gerald Griffin loaded the bases on two singles and a walk before Baldwin drove in one run when Wolfpack shortstop Jim Cox booted a double play chance and Hollers knocked in two more with a single to left.

Carolina got its other two runs in the fifth on singles by Baldwin, Norton, and Vaughn Bryson and a sacrifice fly by Larry Craver.

After the game was held up some fifty minutes in the bottom of the sixth the Pack rallied in their half of the seventh to score both of its runs. Up until this time Hammett had shut out State yielding only two hits which came in the first inning.

Although the Heels collected ten hits for the afternoon they still were not able to get the clutch hits which would have broken the game wide open as thirteen men were stranded on the base paths.

Golfers Face S. Carolina

By J. R. BROWN

The Tar Heel golfers, confident after Thursday's victory over the State Wolfpack, left this morning for Columbia, S. C. They will be the guest of South Carolina's Gamecocks tomorrow afternoon and will be looking for victory number two in A. C. C. competition.

So far the linksmen have not won an A. C. C. match away from home. On a recent trip North, the Heels suffered losses at the hands of Virginia and Maryland. Maryland has a very strong team this year and along with Wake Forest will be co-favorites in the A. C. C. tournament coming the first week in May.

However, should the Tar Heels continue to win they will provide plenty of competition for the title, especially since the tournament will be held at Finley Golf Course. The Gamecocks have not been very successful this year and the Heels will be favored.

Coach Ed Kenney will start the same six men who competed against State. Ed Justa will head the list in the number one slot. The sophomore golfer from Rocky Mount has been playing very well in this, his first year on the Varsity, and much is expected from him in the future.

In number two position will be Bob "Spook" Galloway, who was medalist against the Wolfpack Thursday with a two under par seventy. Don McMillan and Hugh Goodman will play in positions number three and four. Paul Erhardt and Dave Sloan finish out the starters.

After the South Carolina match, the Tar Heels will face their arch rival, Duke. This match will be played on Duke's new golf course on Friday afternoon. Duke has lost only to Wake Forest in A. C. C. play, and the Heels will have their work cut out for them.

Thus far this season the golfers have comprised a 6-2 record. Five of the victories came from non-conference matches, Indiana, Cornell, Davidson, Princeton and a fine University of Michigan team bowed to the Tar Heels. This proves that as far as golf is concerned the A. C. C. is very strong.

This can be better illustrated by two recent successes on the professional golf tour by Duke's Art Wall and Wake Forest's Arnold Palmer. Others who have played for A. C. C. schools are Mike Souchack (Duke) and Harvey Ward from Carolina. Golf is an interesting sport and more support for the team is urged. Let's get out to Duke Friday and see the Heels in action!

Hardin Gets Navy Job

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — (AP) — Wayne Hardin, 32-year-old backfield coach for the Naval Academy, has handed the head coaching job at Navy Saturday. He quickly accepted it with a happy, confident grin.

Hardin succeeds Eddie Erdelatz, who stepped down 10 days ago "for personal reasons" in a sudden resignation that shocked Navy football fans everywhere."

Appointment of the likeable redhead from Stockton, Calif., makes him one of the youngest head coaches in the academy's history. Only Tom Hamilton, named to the job at the age of 27 in 1934, was younger.

Hardin was picked by the Naval Academy Athletic Assn.'s executive committee from about 30 serious appliants. He received enthusiastic endorsement from Capt. Slade Cutter, director of athletics, and Rear Adm. Charles L. Melson academy superintendent.

Coker To Ga. Tech

CHAPEL HILL, — (AP) — Fullback-halfback Don Coker, leading punter in the Atlantic Coast Conference, will play football for Georgia Tech now that his eligibility at North Carolina has expired.

The 6-1, 205-pound junior from Reidsville, N. C., has accepted a scholarship from the Atlanta school, although he won't be eligible to play until the fall of 1960. He is listed as a junior although he still has some credit hours to earn for full status.

He was denied another varsity season at North Carolina because the ACC ruled an alumnus illegally had provided a golf club membership for him in his hometown.

Coker, who was married last November, plans to finish the semester here and move to Atlanta this summer or fall. He is majoring in industrial relations.

Intramurals Track Meet

The preliminary rounds in the annual spring track meet will begin at 4 p.m. Monday, April 20 on Fetzer Field. The finals in this event will be held on the second day, April 21.

The Intramural Office estimates that they will have around 300 participants in the event. Last year the record for the 100 yard dash was taken by Mac Patton from Zeta Psi. His time was 10.5.

The events this year are: 60 yard dash, 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash ¾ mile run, 880 relay (shuttle), 440 yard relay (shuttle), discus, shot put, high jump and broad jump.

ALL CAMPUS TENNIS

Entries will be due for the All Campus tennis tournament on Wednesday, April 22 at 6 p.m., and should be turned in to the Intramural Office at 315 Woollen Gym.

ENTER OFTEN—HAVE FUN—AND WIN! But think carefully! This puzzle is not as easy as it looks. At first the DOWN and ACROSS clues may appear simple. There may appear to be more than one "right" answer. For example, the clue might read: "Many a coed will be given her best date's P- -N." Either "I" (PIN) or "E" (PEN) would seem to fit. But only one answer is apt and logical as decided by the judging staff, and therefore correct. Read the rules carefully. ENTER AS OFTEN AS YOU WISH. Good luck!

RULES—PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

1. The College Puzzle Contest is open to college students and college faculty members except employees and their immediate families of Liggett & Myers and its advertising agencies.

2. Fill in all missing letters . . . print clearly. Use of obsolete, archaic, variant or foreign words prohibited. After you have completed the puzzle, send it along with six empty package wrappers of the same brand from L&M, Chesterfield or Oasis cigarettes (or one reasonable hand-drawn facsimile of a complete package wrapper of any one of the three brands) to: Liggett & Myers, P. O. Box 271, New York 46, N. Y. Enter as often as you wish, but be sure to enclose six package wrappers (or a facsimile) with each entry. Illegible entries will not be considered.

3. Entries must be postmarked by midnight, Friday, May 29, 1959 and received by midnight, Friday, June 5, 1959.

4. Entries will be judged by the Bruce-Richards Corporation, an independent judging organization, on the basis of logic and aptness of thought of solutions. In the event of ties, contestants will be required to complete in 25 words or less the following statement: "My favorite cigarette is (Chesterfield) (L&M) or (Oasis) because ....." Entries will be judged on originality, aptness of thought and interest by the Bruce-Richards Corporation. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in event of final ties. Illegible entries will not be considered. By entering all entrants agree that the decision of the judges shall be final and binding.

5. Solutions must be the original work of the contestants submitting them. All entries become the property of Liggett & Myers and none will be returned.

Cosmopolitan Exhibits

Exhibits from more than 20 different countries will be on display today from 3 to 5 p.m. during the Seventh Annual International Open House, being sponsored by the Cosmopolitan Club at the Hillel House.

Alan Costa, club president, said he expected over 1,000 persons to attend the Intnernational Open House. Free refreshments will be served. And a local singing group the Shades, will provide entertainment.

UNC Student Receives Med Library Internship

Miss Elizabeth Morrison of Asheville has been selected by United States National Library of Medicine in Washington, D. C. for a year's internship beginning in September.

Miss Morrison is a student in the School of Library Science. She is working toward a graduate degree in medical librarianship. This is the first student of the UNC School of Library Science to receive such an appointment with the National Library.

This advanced training in Washington will lead to appoved certification by the Medical Library Association.

NSA Regional Conference Elects Ed Levy, Bob Nobles

Two UNC students were elected this weekend to offices for the Carolinas-Virginia Region of the National Student Association.

Ed Levy was selected as executive vice chairman, and Bob Nobles was elected student government vice chairman. A Johnson C. Smith University student, Charles Jones, was named chairman of the region.

The elections were held at the NSA Spring Regional Conference at Sweet Briar College in Virginia last weekend. Twenty colleges and universities were represented at the conference.

A feature of the meetings was an address by Al Lowenstein, UNC alumnus and former president of the USNSA. Lowenstein is currently employed by Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

As executive vice chairman, Levy will serve on the national executive committee of the USNSA, work in this region to recruit additional schools forthe NSA and assist with regional programming.

Nobles' office involves planning a regional conference for student government personnel and aiding the coordination and communication among the 36 schools in this region.

Air Force Film Tonight

"The Air Force and the H-Bomb," an official USAF film, will be shown tonight in Carroll Hall at 8:30. The local AFROTC detachment secured the film for the YM-YWCA, which is sponsoring the showing.

A 'Y' official who previewed the film commented that "it shows an H-bomb blast in living color." There will be a discussion of the religious implications of thermonuclear weapons both before and after the screening.

Henderson Strikers Are Back At Work

HENDERSON, N. C. — (AP) — Union members began returning to their jobs Monday afternoon at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills, writing the finish to a long and sometimes violent strike.

Company president John D. Cooper Jr., who signed a new one-year contract with the Textile Workers Union of America, claimed the victory in the struggle.

"It was a grand slam for the mills," said Cooper. "We achieved the aim we set out for last November" when the Union went on strike in the face of company demands for contract changes.

Cooper did not elaborate, but presumably he referred to limitations on arbitration included in the new agreement which was worked out with Gov. Hodges taking a personal hand in the negotiations.

The management claim of victory conflicted with the weekend statements of Boyd Payton, TWUA Carolinas director, that the settlement was a victory for the union.

Although large crowds were on hand at the mill Monday, there was none of the disorders which marked shift changes while the strike was in progress. Returning strikers took places on a second shift, getting started for the first time Monday afternoon.

Cooper said he would announce next Monday a date for the start of a third shift. Since Feb. 16, the mill had been running on a single shift.

Missing from the Henderson scene Monday were State Highway Patrol trooper sent in by Gov. Hodges to help preserve order.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt said the number of Patrolmen, at times up to 150, had been reduced to the normal 15 for the district in which Henderson and Vance County is located.

Minnesota Cops Contest

Four Davidson College students were defeated by a team from the University of Minnesota Sunday on the television show, "College Bowl," on CBS.

The two teams competed in answering questions during the program. The final score was Minnesota, 155 points; Davidson, 50. A $1,500 scholarships went to the winning school and a $500 scholarship was awarded the losers.

Dewey Sheffield Sweeps In As Student Party Head

By DEE DANIELS

Dewey Sheffield swept into the office of Student Party chairman last night at the regular party meeting.

His only opponent was Bob Nobles.

Assisting Sheffield as vice-chairman will be Norman E. Smith, who defeated Nobles for the position. Randy Davidson was elected by acclamation as party secretary.

Elected to the SP Advisory Board for 1959-60 were Dave Jones, Pete Thompson, Martha Morgan and Bill Norton. They defeated Swag Grimsley and Bob Nobles for the positions.

By acclamation, Bill Whichard was selected as sergeant at arms.

Pappy Churchill and Betty Phillips were nominated as candidates for recording secretary, but due to the absence of both, the election was postponed until next week.

Don Furtado, student body president during the past year, spoke to the body expressing the feeling that "student government has been progressive" for the past year.

Concerning the party, he told members, "A party exists, not to elect people, unless they elect standards and ideals, but for a better campus community, a better state and a better nation."

Furtado outlined some accomplishments of the past year such as the installation of "hear here" phone booths in dorms, expansion of the attorney-general's staff, better study facilities, success of the committee on State Affairs, appointment of a student director for the Merchants Association, dormitory visiting agreement, formation of a Foreign Student Council, an improved Publications Board and a better coordinated Traffic Council.

The former president urged the party to concern itself with guaranteeing a better academic atmosphere on the campus. He stated that "many students leave here without ever having studied and many leave without ever having thought, which is even worse."

Furtado feels that the biggest problem facing the campus today is that of communication. There is a need for it with the faculty, with the national student community and with the students themselves, he said.

Room Deposits Are Due Soon

Men student now assigned to dormitory rooms have the option of reserving space for the summer and fall sessions providing they do it by Wednesday.

Room reservation deposits for the summer and fall must be made with the University cashier in South Building. However, a room reserved for the summer does not entitle the occupant to that space in the fall.

For the summer sessions double rooms will be available in Joyner, Mangum, Grimes, Ruffin and Winston (for graduate men). Rent in these dorms is $20 for each session, according to the housing office.

Single rooms will be available in Manly, Stacy and Lewis with a charge of $30 per session.

Graham will house married students for $40 per session.

A reservation fee of $10 must be paid for fall rooms by Wednesday. Room rent for the fall semester must be paid by Sept. 1.

The housing office is located in Room 3, South Building.

Charlie Gray Corrects List

Additions and corrections to the list of student government appointments released last week were made by Student Body President Charlie Gray Monday.

Omitted from the list were two vacancies on the Publications Board.

Gray said he especially urged students who will be here in summer school to apply for various positions in student government for the summer sessions.

He also reminded students interested in the position of attorney-general to apply Wednesday or Thursday, since the appointment will be presented to Student Legislature Thursday night.

The final day that students have to submit applications for the more than 150 student government positions available is Monday, April 27. Interviews with applicants will begin Wednesday of this week and continue until further notice.

Gray said the number of vacancies on various student government organizations that were reported in the newspaper was lower in many cases than the actual number available.

Want A Flick? Take Your Pick

The Free Flick Committee of GMAB would like to know and is placing boxes around campus for your suggestions.

Ballot boxes were placed today at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial, on a table in the Y Building, and in the lobby of Lenoir Hall. The boxes will be out one week for students' ideas on next year's flicks.

Any and all suggestions will be considered in making up the list, but budgetary considerations will limit the choice.

The committee itself is holding an organizational meeting today at 2 p.m. in the Honor Council Room at Graham Memorial. Anyone particularly interested in helping out has been invited to attend.

The new co-chairmen, George Grayson and Stan Black, have divided the committee into three sections for the 1959-60 school year. The sections will be concerned with domestic films, foreign films and special films. The sub-committee idea promises to insure a more varied and interesting program next year.

Suggestions in the boxes will give the committee its best guide to what the students want to see. The co-chairmen have urged everyone to vote for at least five flicks, more if possible.

Three Contests Entered By High School Students

Over 5,000 high school students in North Carolina have entered three of six academic contests being sponsored by the University Extension Division, it has been announced by E. R. Rankin, secretary in charge of the contests.

He reported that 1,904 students from 106 North Carolina high schools entered the academic contest conducted in the field of chemistry which was held March 27. In 1958 there were 1,676 student entries from 76 schools.

A total of 1,200 students from 93 schools participated in the annual high school physics contest held this year on April 3. The figures again show an increase over 1958 when 1,074 students were entered from 70 schools.

The largest number of entries to date, 2,610 from 130 schools, were for the mathematics contest given April 10. Last year there were 2,261 students from 117 schools in the competition.

The three remaining contests are in the languages: Latin, Spanish and French.

Deadline for entries in the Latin contest is Thursday, April 23; Spanish contest, April 30; and French, May 1. Officials of schools desiring to enter students from accredited North Carolina public schools should contact Rankin before the deadline.

Three examinations will be given in the Latin contest: (1) for those now taking first year Latin; (2) for those now taking second year Latin; and (3) for those now taking third or fourth year Latin. The examinations will be given in participating schools throughout the state on May 1.

A prize of $10 is offered for the best paper in each examination. The UNC Scholarship Committee has announced that it will award a merit scholarship in the University at Chapel Hill to the student winning first place in the Latin contest, exclusive of entries in the first division which is for first year Latin student.

The examination reqiures the ability to comprehend and translate Latin and knowledge of forms and syntax English derivation and Roman civilization.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary Monday were:

Fred Robinson, Robert Briggs, Ranjit Tirtha, James Wilson, David Turnbull, William Wardlaw, Franklin Schaeman, Oscar Simpson, Robert McCormick, Mjoru Hrutfiard, Betsy Harris, Lewis Hawley, William Crabtree, Frank Huntley, Franklin Jones and William Thomas.

One-Act Play Given Tonight

George Bernard Shaw's one-act play, "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," will be presented by the Presbyterian Drama Seminar Monday and Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Presbyterian Hut.

The story of the only "western" Shaw ever wrote revolves around the trial of the notorious, debonair Blanco Posnet, who is accused of stealing a horse. Horse stealing at that time and in that part of the country was considered a cardnial sin, with the usual penalty of death by a lynching mob.

Another character in the play, Elder Daniels, is noted for his vicious, sarcastic remarks about the church. Daniels' intent is to save every soul, even the one of the carousing, wild Blanco, who is in reality his brother.

The difference in the two characters is that Blanco has decided to "be himself" rather than to put on a "pious front" as does his brother.

Playing the part of Blanco will be Frank Mansfield, and Wendell Mannuel will be starred as Elder Daniels.

Other members of the cast are Nancy Grubb, Feemy; Ed Crow, the sheriff; Sally Beard, Hannah and a mysterious woman; Harold Smith, Strapper; Nancy Faison, Jessie; Norwood Holmes, the foreman; Anthony Harvey, Nestor; Tony Candler, Waggoner Jo, and Diana Harmon, Babsy.

Directing the production is Art McDonald, graduate student in Dramatic Arts. The lighting, staging, scenery, makeup costumes, publicity and props are being handled by the participants.

The play is being presented to enable inexperienced students to participate in a dramatic production.

Sewer Worker Invites Khrushchev To America

WASHINGTON, April 20—(AP)—A 62-year-old sewer construction inspector has invited Soviet Russia's Premier Nikita Khrushchev to visit the United States as his personal guest.

Clarence E. Moullette, of Camden, N. J., an unsuccessful candidate last year for a Democratic congressional nomination in New Jersey, extended his "cordial invitation" by letter not only to the Premier but to Khrushchev's wife "and entourage."

"It is my prerogative to disagree with my government and use my citizenship in what I expressly deem my right under the Constitution of the United States," Moullette told Khrushchev.

". . . You should see first hand how we live and work and love."

Sheffield-'Last Hurrah'

In the memory of the editor, no student has come onto this campus and burst into the upper echelon with such rapidity as has Sheffield. He arrived here in September. In October he decided to run for a seat in the Student Legislature. He was defeated for the nomination by a rousing 47-5 margin. Did this stop Sheffield? No!

He promptly decided to seek a seat on the Honor Council. Did he receive the endorsement of the Bi-Partisan Selections Board? NO! Did this stop Sheffield? NO!

He won, finishing a strong second in a field of nine, the only candidate running for this high office who was not endorsed. He was sandwiched in between George Grayson and Howard Holderness for the three seats open. Amazing? YES! But so is Sheffield.

The following week he defeated three candidates for the vice chairmanship of the Student Party. In this job, Sheffield has done more than any person before him in recent years.

Then came the spring elections. Again Sheffield was on the scene. We remember well the night of the Big Five Political Rally in Gerard Hall, when Sheffield went storming to the microphone, looked Angus Duff in the eye, and emphatically stated: "I have been in politics a long time." This, is the understatement of any year.

Sheffield was on the losing side this spring. But, this was not his fault. He did not go to bed for the last three nights of the campaign, so he continued his efforts around the clock to save some victories for his party. Had it not been for his yeomen's services, the University Party margin of victory would have been far larger than it was.

And now, a little over seven months after his stormy arrival on the UNC campus, Sheffield has ascended to the chairmanship of his party.

We like to think of Sheffield as a professional — or better yet as something out of "The Last Hurrah."

Library Lights

Last week we called for more lights on the outside of the library so as to ease the possibility of a student falling on the steps and sustaining an injury. And now we offer our plan to provide this needed illumination.

Install floodlights from above the steps. There may be attached to either trees or to an outlet from the second floor of the building. Put them at such an angle as to supply the light one must have to safely navigate the hard concrete steps, and yet make sure that they will not be at all blinding.

How about it library officials? The fall you prevent may well be your own.

S. G. And The Administration

Last Thursday night a reception was held at the Chancellor's for members of the administration and students recently elected to major offices. Although the conversation was not terribly deep, the old lines were broken and new ties were formed.

The paper encourages this type of social gathering and hopes that the students who were fortunate enough to attend will continue the contacts which have been made. Student government needs the administration. And the administration needs student government.

The administration has clearly shown that it recognizes this. It is hoped that student government will too.

Legislature

Roundup

By DAVE JONES

"The first session of the 27th assembly of the Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina will come to order." So spoke Student Body Vice President Ralph Cummings Thursday night.

Within a few minutes the Chaplain had given the invocation, the minutes had been dispensed with, and Erwin Fuller, the Chairman of the Student Council, was swearing in the new officers.

First he called Bob Bingham, then Sue Wood, then David Grigg. As soon as Grigg was pronounced to be the vice president, Ralph Cummings rose from the vice president's chair, shook hands with his successor, and walked to the back of the room to join Don Furtado, who had a few brief minutes as president left.

Charlie Gray was called and sworn in.

As soon as he was pronounced president by Fuller, Gray walked up to the rostrum and read his State of the Campus message.

David Grigg had a brief word to say to the new legislature about the coming year. Then he swore in the newly-elected and re-elected members of the legislature.

Most significant and most exciting was the election of legislative officers. This is called organization. In the U. S. Congress it is done strictly on party lines and by senority. Here these two rules are so blurred as to be almost indistinguishable. (Who among you can name the senior SP in the legislature?)

Ghosts of the recent past were on everyone's mind as they made their nominations in caucus and on the floor of the legislature for speaker pro tempore.

This position has been held in recent years by such people as Charlie Pittman (now president of Phi Delta Theta), Al Goldsmith (champion of many campus battles), Gary R. Greer (the author of the first tome on deferred rush), John Brooks, and Norman Barrett Smith.

Jim Scott of Dorm Men's II was elected as the new speaker pro tempore. Jim meets the requirequirements of the office. He is genuinely respected by the members of the legislature. He knows how to conduct himself at all times, in and out of the speaker's chair.

Committee chairmanships are valuable offices. They offer the holders a perch from which to make utterances that are news. They are excellent training ground for future, higher offices. The chairmanship of the Ways and Means committee was most recently held by Norman B. Smith. The chairman of the new, year long, 27th assembly is Bob Nobles, one of the four representatives who represent the boys in Avery Dorm.

Lovely Ann Lucas was the most recent chairman of the Rules committee. She was succeeded by Ed Cox. Ed is one of the Student Party's freshmen legislators. This offers him a chance to make a name for himself, even if he doesn't have the physical attributes of his predecessor.

Gordon Street was re-elected chairman of the Finance Committee. Street himself was absent. He is in the infirmary, but nevertheless he defeated Swag Grimsley of the Student Party 23-11.

Maxine Greenfield, an old friend of the elections board, was unanimously chosen as clerk of the new legislature. (I'll bet she wishes she had never paid the five dollars when she starts cutting stencils on the 14 bills introduced by the body Thursday night.)

Of the 14 bills introduced last night, three were ordered passed by special orders. One of these, BF-27-14, was written while the others were being read. It was a bill to let The Daily Tar Heel transfer $9.99 from its profits to its photography budget.

Why $9.99? The rules of the legislature require a week's consideration of any bill have to do with more than ten dollars. The DTH is in desperate need of funds for photos and a week's run without them would not have made the readers or the Editor of the DTH very happy.

"Can You Afford $25 A Head For Us?"

New President Speaks

Gray's Inaugural Address

(This is the first of three parts of Charlie Gray's inaugural speech to the Student Legislature last Thursday night.—Ed.)

April 16, 1959, we stop and look at student government at U.N.C. After a short analysis, one cannot help but be very proud of the student accomplishments on this campus. Through the years, student government has grown from a small handful of students still hesitant from faculty control to the large, autonomus, and respected organization that exist today.

Mature, responsible, and representative action by past student leaders has brought about this present status. The students now tax themselves, provide their own entertainment, solve student problems, initiate new ideas and needs, and most of all stimulate their classmates to search for truth, knowledge, and understanding which may be utilized in creating a better university a better state, and a better world.

These high ideals and beliefs of Carolina student government must be continued, moreover, broadened and strengthened to assure the students the right of expression, initiative, and self-government in the years to come. I dedicate myself and my administration to the attainment of these goals.

There are many areas of student government and student life that need immediate attention. It is impossible to mention all these areas or forsee the problems that will arise in the future.

A satisfactory solution to the needs facing the students today is impossible to predict. Student government can only mention these problem areas and devote all its efforts to correcting the situations.

The one area that must be strengthened first is the line of communication between student government and the student body. No administration can be a success unless the students are aware of the aims and actions of their student leaders. With all the intricacies of college life, this line of communication tends to weaken or even break.

To help strengthen these lines, I plan to have a very active cabinet, composed of people whose sole purpose will be to act as a liason between student government and the various areas of the campus. By having weekly meetings with this group I hope to be able to see the needs of the whole campus as well as relate my plans to the students.

I also plan to have a regular article in The Daily Tar Heel that will give the president a chance to express his ideas to the campus. The final method to strengthen the communication lines will be in the hands of the student legislators. I sincerely hope each of you will make an attempt to keep in constant contact with the students in your district, inform them of the legislature's action and get their opinions on the various matters.

This would increase the interest in and the knowledge of student government immensely.

One of the largest and most important segments of our campus is in definite need of help from student government. This segment is the fraternal organizations. Because of a certain amount of laxness on the part of fraternities and because if the beliefs of an increasing number of people, the future of Greek organizations at Carolina could be dim, unless something is done.

This is where student government can be of great assistance. I plan to work with the IFC to present a program that will help fraternities prove to everyone that they are not harmful to any student, but are a definite asset to college life.

Such a program would consist of more stress on scholastics, more faculty teas and discussions, steps to improve relations between fraternity and non-fraternity men, a broader program of informal rush during second semester and other steps that prove necessary. If fraternities are to keep their present rush system and ultimately their high status, they must take immediate action.

There is much room for improvement in the dormitory life of our campus. Because of the age of many of our dormitories and because of inadequaties of our student union, there now exist a definite shortage of social facilities for the dormitory men. An adequate social rounded education. Until we can life is one of essentials of a well-acquire permanent accommodations, student government must seek to alleviate the social need as best possible.

I plan to strengthen the IDC's social program, continue the coed visiting agreements, and investigate the possibility of converting some of our present dorm basements, which are now used for storage, into temporary social rooms. If this latter point is to become a reality, it will require hard work and co-operation among student government, the IDC, and the university administration.

Golden Speaks

Fifty years ago my Orthodox mother said that Judaism in America was doomed; the kosher butchers were too careless, the American rabbis were beginning to shave, and the men and boys were no longer saying their prayers three times a day.

My mother would be greatly surprised today. Fifty years later we not only have chocloate matzos, but we also have Elizabeth Taylor. And not only Elizabeth Taylor. Marilyn Monroe too. Now all we need is Jayne Mansfield and we'll have it made. I am organizing a special UJA Jayne Mansfield Scholarship Fund.

Right Man

Down at Cape Canaveral, where the missiles are launched, live a whole group of scientists, psychologists and doctors who spend all their time trying to find the right man whom they will launch toward the moon when the time comes. They have filed thousands of index cards describing top physical volunteers. Machines constantly process these findings. The list of available candidates is now down to fifty, and eventually this concerted hunt will narrow down to one man, physically sound, psychologically right and smart. Truly, he will be a mens sana in corprore sano. But there is something absurd about the purpose of this team. Having found the perfect man, it seems the last place they should send him is to the moon. Rather they ought to keep him there, to help propagate the race. They ought to shoot off the least qualified man, because we need the best man like we never needed him before.

Harry Golden

Hemingway

Ernest Hemingway, replying to a question concerning the best intellectual training for the would-be writer, said: "Let's say that he should go out and hang himself because he finds that writing well is impossibly difficult. Then he should be cut down without mercy and forced by his own self to write as well as he can for the rest of his life. At least he will have the story of the hanging to commence with."

The Paris Review

Driving Letter

Editor:

It is only a matter of time before the first traffic fatality will occur in Victory Village. When it does, it is a good bet that the victim will be a child under five years of age, and the driver of the car involved will have been guilty of exceeding the established speed limits in Victory Village.

The responsible parties are the residents of Victory Village (the main transgressors) and lax attitude of the man against Victory Village who ignore these transgressions, and the Chapel Hill Police Dept. who permit these offenses to go unpunished.

The solution is simple:

Post the speed regulations at both entrances to the Village with a stern warning that they will be enforced. Enforce the regulations—with a few tickets to emphasize the fact that this is no idle threat. Notification by the management of the Village that residents who disregard the traffic regulations will be ineligible to maintain Village residency. This will save some youngster's life.

Patterns Of Communication

Frank Crowther

The April 18 issue of Saturday Review is out and included are their Seventh Annual Advertising Awards. The awards are given in the offllowing fields: (1) Public Service and Interest Campaigns; (2) Corporate Campaigns; (3) Public Relations Campaigns; (4) TV and Radio Citations; and (5) Special Citations. We applaud their original idea and intention and hope that they will influence the quality of and integrtiy behind advertising of the future.

There is an admirable idea behind these awards. "Because Saturday Review is continually concerned with the communications pattern in the United States, it has observed with deep interest the progressive development of advertising as a medium of idea communication, a much more subtle skill even than the communication of news. It was from awareness of this development in institutional advertising that SR decided originally it would be in the public interest to recognize distinguished and responsible achievement in this field of communication."

The awards committee included men of various fields: the director of U.S.I.A.; advertising managers, editors and publishers; professors and deans of business administration, law and journalism; and men in the employment of big business itself. There were 24 members of the committee.

The top public-interest and service awards went to Weyerhaeuser Timber Company for their campaign on scientific tree-farming and conservation as a means of assuring a perpetual supply of wood for America, and to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company "for its campaign of many years effectively discussing health and disease in constructive, informative and sober terms . . ."

The top award for corporate campaigns was shared by Corning Glass Works (second year running) "for dramatizing (their) research and development role . . . in creating versatile types of glass for an increasing number of consumer and industrial uses" and Esso Research & Engineering Co. for "varied achievements of their research program in finding new uses for oil, as well as improving their basic petroleum products."

The public relations award went to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico for their presentation of the "many-faceted appeals and advantages of the island's life, culture and economy to persons on the mainland who are contemplating visiting, living or working there."

We were most interested in the awards in the field of TV and Radio. There were seven awards to the following programs: (1) NBC News (Huntley-Brinkley); (2) Playhouse 90 (hurrah!); (4) The Metropolitan Opera: Small World; (5) Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra; (6) The Moiseyev Dancers; and (7) Disneyland. It is significant that five of these programs are what is normally referred to as "cultural" shows. They were cited for their "finest moments of the year," "maintaining a high standard of musical taste'," breaking through the parochial barriers and subject matter, and "proving that education, entertainment and impeccable taste are not necessarily incompatible."

Finally, the special citation, long overdue, to Edward R. Murrow "for focussing symbolically in his person and career the great crisis of the television industry at a time of national need for enlightenment when self-examination by those who control the tremendous television medium is most urgent and necessary; for his notable speech to the industry on its responsibility to inform as well as entertain the American people at a time when this nation is in a death struggle for survival; for his repeated proven capacity to create shows on both television and radio that stretch the mind of his audience while also informing and interesting them and for personifying in large measure what television could and should be as a medium of public communication in the United States."

We may only add that we wish Mr. Morrow could be divided into a dozen Murrows, all of equal stature. And our congratulations to Saturday Review for a fine public service of its own.

Big Boom

Last week the editor and two of his associates were privileged to see a USAF film, "The Air Force and the H-Bomb," on loan from the local AFROTC detachment to the campus 'Y.' This film will be shown tonight at Carroll Hall, and we urge you to see it.

The paradox of our time is that the finest young Americans — upright, decent, law-abiding — are the men who hold in their hands the awful power to blow up the world. The ancient dream of a heaven on earth is now recognized to be impossible; however, HELL on earth is all too possible and all too probable. This paradox is illuminated in this superb film. See you at Carroll Hall.

Civil Service examination for these Air Reserve Technician positions have been announced.

The jobs are located at Bates Field, Alabama; Memphis, Tenn.; Donaldson Air Force Base, South Carolina; Miami, Fla.; and Dobbins Air Force Base, Georgia.

Air Reserve Technicians are full-time career civilian employes who are also members of the Air Force Reserve. In addition to their civilian assignments, they are assigned to equivalent positions in the reserve organization with an appropriate military rank or grade. Air Reserve Technicians enjoy all the benefits accruing to Federal civil service employes as well as extra pay and benefits of the Air Force Reserve.

DUKE-UNC COLLOQUIUM

A special joint Duke-UNC Colloquium will hear Dr. A. W. Overhauser from the Scientific Laboratories of Ford Motor Company in a special program today at 4:30 p.m. in 206 Phillips Hall. Dr. Overhauser will talk on "The Symmetry of Color Centers."

H-BOMB FLICK

A special showing of "The Air Force and the H-Bomb," an official USAF film, will be held in Carroll Hall at 8:30 p.m. today. Sponsored by the Y, the film will be preceded and followed with a discussion of the moral and religious implications of thermonuclear weapons.

YRC

The Young Republicans Club will meet today at 7:30 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room.

STUDENT WIVES

The Student Wives will hold a social hour today at 8 p.m. in the Victory Village Day Nursery.

CHEM FEMS

The Chem Fems will hold a social meeting Wednesday night at the home of Marian Berry, 180 Bagley Drive.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

The Psychology Club's regular meeting will be held today at 7:30 p.m. in 105 Gardner Hall.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Robert B. Hughes, assistant professor of education and member of the International Council for Exceptional Children. He will speak on "The Exceptional Child."

BAPTIST REVIVAL

The Rev. Douglas Aldrich, pastor of the Forest Hills Baptist Church in Raleigh, is conducting revival services for the Carrboro Baptist Church every day through Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

DEBATE SQUAD

The Debate Squad will meet today at 4 p.m. in the Grail Room. Election of officers will be held at that time.

UNIVERSITY CLUB

The University Club will meet today at 7 p.m. in Di Hall to nominate officers for the coming year.

FRESHMAN CAMP

A compulsory meeting of all men interested in serving as counselors for next fall's YMCA Freshman Camp will be held today at 7 p.m. in 306 Carroll Hall.

The meeting will be in the form of an actual training session; therefore, attendance is required.

If anyone is unable to attend because of an unavoidable conflict, the student has been asked to contact Ralph Cummings or George Grayson.

SOUND AND FURY REHEARSALS

Rehearsals for the Sound and Fury production will be held at 7:15 p.m. today in Memorial Hall for the chorus and Act I and Act II.

Herter Assumes New Duties; Will Travel Less Than Dulles

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON, April 20—(AP)—Christian A. Herter took command of the State Department today with a pledge to rely on teamwork rather than personal diplomacy.

The 64-year-old New Englander strongly implied he would do far less traveling than the cancer-stricken John Foster Dulles did when he was well.

"I will travel if I feel it is necessary to travel," Herter said. "But, as you know, I have always been a pretty strong teamworker, and I have got every great pride in my associates in the department."

Dulles Broke Travel Records

In six years, Dulles broke all travel records for a Secretary of State, flying more than 559,000 miles on one-man diplomatic missions around the world.

Herter, returning from a South Carolina vacation, outlined his approach to his new duties at the airport a few hours after President Eisenhower formally nominated him as Dulles' successor.

The new Secretary made clear that C. Douglas Dillon, 49, Under-Secretary of State for economic affairs, would be his choice for the No. 1 assistant spot, moving up to the job which Herter vacates.

Delay Has Not Hurt Prestige

Herter took the position that Eisenhower's three-day delay in naming him as Dulles' successor, after Dulles resigned, has not hurt his prestige with foreign diplomats.

"The only delay was that he (Eisenhower) was waiting for the physical report that he wanted me to have made for him and which I was delighted to have made for him," Herter told newsmen.

Herter's associates have been disturbed by the delay, including Eisenhower's last minute request he undergo a confidential physical checkup to back up his own doctor's view that arthritis of the hip would not handicap him unduly.

To stress Eisenhower's full backing, these officials anticipated an administration campagn building up Herter as a man with White House authority on all foreign policy issues.

Herter Aware of Tasks

Herter was described as acutely aware of the formidable diplomatic tasks confronting him during the remaining 21 months of the Eisenhower administration. His immediate problem is to direct final preparation for the Paris meeting April 29 with the British, French and West German foreign ministers.

Leaning on his metal arm crutches, Herter reported to his welcomers that he had arranged to talk to Dulles at Walter Reed Army Hospital to review key diplomatic problems.

Annual Parents' Day Held Here Saturday

The School of Medicine will hold its third annual Parents' Day Saturday, April 25.

Officials of the School of Medicine have sent an invitation to all the parents of all students enrolled in the Medical School as well as to parents of past and future medical students.

Registration and tours of N. C. Memorial Hospital and the School of Medicine will begin at 9:30 a.m. The annual meeting of the Parents' Club will be held in the Clinic Auditorium at 10:30 a.m.

A welcome will be extended to the parents and guests by George Watts Hill Sr. of Durham, member of the Executive Committee of the UNC Board of Trustees and chairman of the Trustees Committee on Health Affairs.

A general business session will be held at which time new officers of the Parents' Club will be elected. Present officers are V. G. Herring Jr., Goldsboro, president; John S. Patterson, Washington, D. C., first vice president; Dr. Alfred W. Hamer, Morganton, second vice president and Mrs. P. D. McMichael, Reidsville, secretary.

William M. Ginn, Goldsboro, president of the Whitehead Medical Society, a student organization, will express the appreciation of the students for the donations made to the school during the past two years by the Parents' Club.

Dr. Reece Berryhill, dean of the School of Medicine, will address the parents on "The Effects of the Budget Commission's Recommended Budget on the University Medical Center."

The Parents' Club is a statewide organization, with some members outside of North Carolina. Within the state, the organization is divided into five regons. New officers for each regions will be elected at regional meetings that will be held at 12:10 p.m.

A picnic lunch will be served on the campus at 1 p.m. This will be followed with tours of the hospital and school of Medicine for those who arrive too late to go on the morning tours.

Health Administrator Speaks In Virginia

Dr. Henry T. Clark Jr., administrator of the University Division of Health Affairs, will address alumni groups in Virginia and Tennessee during the coming week.

Dr. Clark will speak in Roanoke, Va. on Tuesday, April 21 and in Kingsport, Tenn. on Thursday, April 23. Some 200 former UNC students are expected to attend these two meetings.

The Division of Health Affairs is composed of the UNC Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy, Public Health and N. C. Memorial Hospital.

Professor Publishes Rock Book

The Florida Geological Survey has recently published a bulletin by Prof. William A. White of the Department of Geology concerning some rock features of Central Florida.

Professor White's paper deals with a study and interpretation of land forms, drainage and lakes in Florida.

The Withlacooche Valley between Richlands and Dunnellon, he reports, was formerly occupied by a large lake which drained through the Hillsborough River.

He pointed out that relict beach ridges drop 80 feet in passing from insoluble rocks in Polk County to soluble ones in Lake County and suggested that subsidence has been a factor in late topographic history of the area underlain by soluble rocks.

The peninsular divide from Cape Canaveral to Indian Rocks, he continues, is transverse and seems to result from a succession of ancestral capes which were localized by a structure. No evidence was found for the lately noticed westward tilt of the peninsula, he added.

The large shallow lakes are ascribed to solution by shallow, horizontal movement of ground water through sand, over limestone in areas where the piesometric surface is above the land surface. No lakes occur where limestone lies bare at the surface, Dr. White concludes.

Recreational Institute Here On Thursday

Recreation and therapy for patients in hospitals will be discussed intensively during a three-day meeting which opens Thursday here.

The southern regional institute on recreation in hospitals will be held for the fourth year, with sessions at the Morehead Building.

Institute participants will arrive in Chapel Hill on Thursday, and register during the early afternoon. The first session will begin at 2 p.m.

The keynote address will be given Thursday night by Dr. Paul Haun, psychiatric education specialist for the State of New Jersey and a former staff member of Graylyn Psychiatric Center in Winston-Salem.

Among the panelists will be Col. Harold A. Conrad, chief of professional services at Womack Army Hospital, Ft. Bragg; Dr. James F. Conner, director of professional services, VA Center, Kecoughtan, Va.; Miss Madolin E. Cannon, consultant with the Department of Public Welfare, Harrisburg, Pa.; and Dr. Martin W. Meyer, therapy coordinator with Indiana's State Division of Mental Health.

Planetarium's Newest Equipment Will Depict Wonders Of Universe

By BILLY ARTHUR

Recently developed Zeiss Planetarium instruments, which will depict new wonders of the universe in the Morehead Planetarium, are now being manufactured by Carl Zeiss, Inc., at Oberkochen, West Germany, according to information received here.

Their acquisition has been made possible by the recent gift of $25,000 by John Motley Morehead, UNC alumnus and donor of the $3,000,000 planetarium installation here.

Use of the new auxiliary equipment will provide Morehead Planetarium audiences with a greatly enhanced impression of events in the starry domain, and will make the Zeiss instrument here comparable to the newest and superior to the earlier models.

According to Planetarium Manager A. F. Jenzano, probably the most important improvement to be made to the Zeiss instrument in the Planetarium here will be a development by Prof. Walther Bauersfeld, inventor of the Planetarium.

In the field of stellar astronomy the earlier planetarium instrument demonstrates a fixed apparent brightness of the stars by correspondingly large holes in the star plates, without provisions to demonstrate the proper motions of individual stars. Now according to Jenzano, Prof. Bauersfeld and his colleagues have perfected separate projectors which mount integral with the instrument and are capable of demonstrating not only proper motions of some of the most prominent stars through a period of about plus/minus 129,000 years but also their accurate relative sizes, and varying brightnesses.

"The use of this new auxiliary equipment will lead to wholly unanticipated impressions of events in the universe," according to Jenzano.

Other improvements to be made in the instrument on the UNC campus include new stellar effects, primarily a Sirius parallaz and aberration projector with automatic operation geared to and driven by existing mechanisms.

This projector, Jenzano said, will demonstrate the processes which lie behind the conceptions of stellar parallax and abberation of the stars. "That means the use of apparent changes in the position of a star as viewed from the moving earth in the calculation of its distance from earth" he said.

The parallax projector will demonstrate this process as well as a superimposed process called the aberration motion. Aberration motion does not depend upon the distance of a star but is determined by the ratio of the speed of the earth to the speed of light. When one looks at a star his view is directed slightly in advance of the star's actual position becaue of the difference between the speed of the light from the star and the speed of the earth, his viewing platform.

Jenzano pointed out that this will be extremely instructive in explaining mean local time and the equation of time.

This equipment consists of a lattice-ring framework mounted to the centerpiece of the Morehead Planetarium instrument in the plane of the celestial equator. It is driven around at a speed with annual revolutions, and a small projector attached to the ring projects the mean sun as a line. Thus, with annual and daily motion in combined operation, both suns may be continuously observed during the course of a day.

"This, then," says Jenzano, "will provide means of clearly presenting to the eye the basis for the equation of a time."

Still another piece of new equipment will be to demonstrate the nautical triangle.

According to Jenzano, this device will permit the Morehead instrument to be used for further instruction in spherical astronomy.

The nautical triangle gives the navigator a celestial line with which to establish his position on earth.

"There is considerable educational value," according to Jenzano, "in the demonstration how the nautical triangle changes in a certain geographical latitude during diurnal rotation of the heavens from the rising to the setting of a certain star. Future celestial navigation classes will have more fruitful Planetarium sessions as a result of this improvement of the Planetarium instrument."

Jenzano himself leaves Sunday for Oberkochen to spend some time in the Carl Zeiss factory to study the new equipment in order that it may be installed on the Chapel Hill instrument by Morehead Planetarium technicians and demonstrated as early in the future as possible.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

CAROLINA'S 5-2 VICTORY over State College here Saturday kept the team's pennant chances alive, but it did not alleviate the fact that every time the Tar Heels take the field from now on out they will be hovering on the brink of destruction. The win over the Wolfpack brought the Heels' conference record to 2-3 which is not to good considering better than half of the season has yet to be played.

This is not to condemn the record which Walter Rabb's crew has compiled; it is simply to state that they have a long way to go if they entertain any ideas of taking the ACC title. Without a doubt the ACC has much better balance among its teams this year than it did a year ago, but we still feel that one of the eight will finish the campaign with five or less losses.

With this thought in mind the plight of the Clemson Tigers, the conference's defending champion, is almost disasterous. Bill Wilhelm's team started off the year like a house afire and ripped through nine straight opponents without a defeat until Carolina cooled them off 6-3. Since that time the Tigers have become cooler and cooler until now they are definitely cold. After the Tar Heels whipped them they have taken it on the chin from N. C. State 8-7, Virginia 4-3, and Maryland 7-3.

RAIN SAVED CLEMSON from having Duke put the quietus on them Saturday so the Tigers will bring a 4-4 ACC mark to Chapel Hill this coming Friday. It is our opinion that on this day one of the two teams is going to be eliminated from NCAA playoff hopes. It would be asking too much to assume that either team could absorb another loss this early in the year and still come back to win the title without a playoff. This goes double for the Tigers who already have one more setback than the Tar Heels.

The pitching performance turned in by Ben Hammett last Saturday makes the junior lefthander the top winner on the Carolina staff; quite a change from his position a year ago. Troubled by a sore arm last season Hammett worked out 14 innings and finished up with a 0-2 won-lost mark. Despite this his ERA was 1.92 which is better than his current percentage. But who is to say that he would trade his old ERA for his persent 3-0 mound record.

IT CERTAINLY DIDN'T take the brass at the Naval Academy long to figure out who they wanted to succeed Eddie Erdelatz. After having no football coach for ten days Athletic Director Slade Cutter announced Saturday that the new mentor would be backfield coach Wayne Hadrin. With the appointment of somebody on the staff, the Navy follows Army who also dipped into their own bag and came up with Glenn Hall to replace Earl Blake.

From the type of football teams that Erdelatz has been fielding since he came to the academy in 1950 you would not think he was suffering from a lack of material but that would seem to be the reason behind what is called "a series of conflicts with the academy brass over athletic policies" that he has been having with his bosses. It is possible, however, that Navy is going to cease being a gridiron power and Erdelatz sees the handwriting on the wall. We can't imagine that he is getting out of football permanently so it will be interesting to see where his "two-stage huddle" turns up next.

DON COKER'S DEPARTURE for Georgia Tech will take some of the thrill out of seeing Carolina be forced to punt this coming fall. Coker was never a great offensive star and probably would not have been next season, but that didn't seem to effect his punting ability. What hurts worst of all is the reason behind Coker's ineligibility; he accepted a golf club membership from an alumnus. If the Tar Heels never have to punt next fall that Sugar Daddy's generosity won't matter; but if they do we wish this munificent individual would buy us another kicker as good as Don Coker.

Individual Fencing Tourney Will Begin On Thursday

Spectators will be welcome at the annual individual fencing tournament, co-sponsored by Intramurals and the GMAB, which will begin this Thursday evening at seven in the Rendezvous Room with the foil competitions. All persons interested in entering any of the three weapons may sign up either at the GM information desk or at the Intramurals Office in Woollen Gym.

These competitions are open to all men students of the University regardless of fencing experience. Trophies will be awarded for the first three places in each weapon with the sabre and duelling sword events following next week and the week after. Entries must be signed up at least 24 hrs. in advance of the particular event.

Methods Of Scoring

For the benefit of the uninitiated the object in a fencing bout between two fencers is to score five hits or "touches" on the opponent first. Such hits are determined by a "jury" consisting of a director and four judges. As soon as either man accumulates a total of five hits he is declared the winner. It is the director (in Europe, the "president") who actually conducts the bout, giving the various commands such as "en garde" etc. which start and stop the bout. He also presides over the determination of hits by polling the other members of the jury who together with him vote and determine the "validity" of possible touches as they occur.

As each touch occurs and is awarded by the director it is added to that fencer's score and the contestants return to the center of the fencing strip where, upon command to begin again, they fence until another hit is made or until the director should halt them for some infraction of the rules such as a "foul" (out-side target area hit), going off strip, a clinch, etc. Midway in the bout when one of the two has scored as many as three touches, they reverse positions on the strip before going on for the remaining points. This is done in the interest of fairness in order to equalize any conditions such as lighting, judging etc. which might favor either position.

Different Weapons

Each of the three weapons in fencing has its own conventions or rules such as the target area of the body upon which touches may be scored and parts of the weapon itself by which these must be done. A touch is not valid unless it is said to "arrest" the point when scoring with that portion of the blade, although scores are allowed in sabre with portions of the "edge" of the blade as well.

It is the function and duty of the judges to determine whether the attempted touches have indeed arrived properly upon the target area prescribed for that weapon and with the proper part of the blade in contact with the target. If so, it is said to have validity or to be "valid" but there still remains a matter of "time" which is determined by the director. In order for the given fencer to score a point he must be valid (as voted by a majority of the jury) and be first in timing as determined by the director. In other words the touch goes to the fencer who first scores validly upon his opponent as determined by the judgment of the jury.

Other Conventions

Certain other conventions assist the jury such as breaking a tie in timing in favor of the man who is said to have "right-of-way" (that is, initiates the attack first) because the convention declares that a fencer if attacked should first defend himself (parry) and then counterattack (riposte) and that if he does so he will then enjoy the "right-of-way" against any renewal of the attack by the originator of the action.

"Benefit of doubt" is another such convention which is said to exist when there is no clear majority in favor of validity on an action and the fencer who is so hit questionably is not considered touched but is said to receive the "benefit of doubt" but he cannot have any other touch by him on his opponent counted after that in the same action no matter how clearly valid as the question of whether he himself was hit first cannot be resolved. A foul which occurs has the effect of nullifying anything which follows in the same action or "phrase".

Hammett On Top For ACC Pitching Honors

GREENSBORO, April 21—(AP)—Carolina's Ben Hammett has opened a slim margin over a closely-bunched collection of a dozen moundsmen who are engaged in a torrid battle for 1959 pitching honorrs in the Atlantic Coact Conference.

HAMMETT

Hammett, according to ACC Service Bureau compilations, boasts a 3-0 won-lost record after beating N. C. State last Saturday. The only other pitcher still unbeaten — and with two or more decisions — is Ty Cline of Clemson, who is 2-0 but there are no less than nine who have lost only once and a 10th, Clemson's Harold Stowe, is 3-2 in defence of his ACC pitching crown won last season with a 14-4 record.

The won-lost standing is Hammett's lone lead, so close is the battle.

Rod Brown of Virginia, 2-1 has the best earned run average, 1.44. Dick Reitz of Maryland, 4-1, is a fraction behind in ERA with 1.47 Stowe tops the conference in strike outs with 39 and Cline has the best control record, only five bases on balls issued in 28⅓ innings of work.

Robert Plemmons of Wake Forest, 3-1, and Reitz are tied for second in strickouts, each with 35, and Ron Kalish of Duke, 3-1 is next with 30. Reitz has the second best control record, having issued only 10 walks in 43 innings.

Other leading pitchers include Jim Roller of Clemson 2-1, Wilson Carruthers of N. C. State 2-1 and Dick Young of North Carolina 2-1.

Cline ranks third in ERA at 2.22, Plemmons fourth at 2.37 and Stowe fifth at 2.38.

Maryland Hands Track Team First Loss Of Season, 91-40

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The Carolina track team fell before invincible Maryland 91-40 here Saturday for its first conference defeat of the season.

Tied for high scoring honors with 11 points apiece were Carolina's Ray Stanley and Nick Kovalakides of Maryland. Stanley won the discus and placed second in the broad jump and javelin.

In the javelin Kovalakides set an ACC record with a toss of 239 feet, 2½ inches to better the old mark by more than 23 feet.

Dave Scurlock won the 440 with a time of :48.9 and placed third in the 220 behind Don Whittaker and Jonas Spiegel.

The three other Tar Heel victories of the meet came in the two mile run which Wayne Bishop won, the 880 which Cowles Lippfert won, and the one mile relay.

TRACK MEET FINALS

The finals for the discus, high jump, shot put and broad jump jump were held yesterday. The results are:

High Jump — Ainslie (SAE) 6 feet, Bilbro (Phi Delt) 5 feet 10 inches.

Broad Jump — O'Bannon (DKE) 20 feet 4 inches, Smith (PiKA) 20 feet 4 inches.

BURKE WINS AT HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Tex. — (AP) — Jack Burke Jr., playing a course he tramped practically every day as a boy, fired an 8-under-par 64 Monday to beat Julius Boros by five strokes in an 18-hole playoff for top money in the $30,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Taking birdies on six of the first eight holes, Burke had a 30-34-64 while winning his home town tournament a second time since 1952. He collected $4,300. Boros, former National Open champion from Mid Pines, N. C., had a 35-34-69 to pick up second money of $3,000.

Each player also received $435 as his 25 per cent share of the playoff gate receipts.

Burke became only the second player to win the 12-year-old tournament a second time. Cary Middlecoff, who won $1,400 for a fifth place tie at 279, won in 1950 and again in 1953 when he won a five-way playoff with a 69.

Both Boros and Burke ended a regulation 72-hole tournament Sunday in a tie at 277-11 under par for the 7,133-yard par 72 Memorial Park course.

Frosh Lose To WJC 5-2 In 12 Innings

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Wilmington Junior College broke up a tight pitching duel between the Seahawks' Bones Gibson and Tar Baby Nick Tarlow with three runs in the 12th inning here yesterday to defeat the frosh 5-2.

Tarlow, Carolina's hardluck southpaw with a blazing fast ball, had held WJC in check since the eighth, allowing only two hits and striking out five. The roof fell in, however, in the 12th when, after a hit and a sacrifice, Barry Cauble's third hit of the day drove in what proved to be the winning run. The Seahawks added two more before the inning was over.

The Tar Babies found themselves behind in the first inning when Robert Coon blooped a single into left, scoring Rudy Groomes who had gotten on by an error. Starter Dave Murr settled down and pitched shutout ball until the fifth, then walking a man home with the bases loaded. Louis Holcomb pitched the sixth and seventh before Tarlow came on in the eighth.

In the frosh half of the sixth Wayne Foushee dropped a bunt single, Ron Miller slapped a double to left, and Len Dellolio walked to fill the bases. With one out, E. C. Haithcock dribbled a slow roller to second which had the makings of a double play until shortstop Jerry Richardson threw wild past first. Miller and Dellolio came across to tie the game 2-2.

Former Wilmington High School star Ed Carrol started on the mound for WJC and pitched scoreless ball for five innings while giving up one hit in each of his five frames.

The frosh will be at Wake Forest this afternoon for a game with the Deaclet, returning Wednesday to play host to Campbell Junior College.

Frosh Lose To State

State's surprising Wolflets handed the Carolina freshmen their first conference loss of the season in Raleigh aturday with a convincing 9-3 win.

State's much-publicized, three-sport athlete from Wilmington, Roman Gabriel, pitched the win while his mates bombarded three Tar Baby pitchers for a continous flow of line-drive base bits.

E. C. Haithcock was the only Tar Baby able to collect more than one hit off the curve-balling Gabriel.

Lacrosse Team Opposes Duke

The recently formed Carolina lacrosse team will take on a squad from Duke University for the second time this year at 4 o'clock this afternoon on Duke's field. The Tar Heels were victorious in the first encounter, beating a combination of Duke varsity and freshman players 7-4.

In that game, Carolina jumped to a 6-1 halftime lead, and coasted the rest of the way with many reserves seeing action and everyone getting into the game. Duke attempted to save face by playing varsity stickmen at the end, but Carolina prevailed.

Today the Tar Heels hope to face only the Duke varsity, and the feeling among the Carolina players is that another win could be pinned on their slate despite the lack of practice and game experience.

Aside from games with Duke, the stick squad is hoping to schedule games with either Virginia (who beat Duke 13-5 Saturday), Washington and Lee, the Maryland freshmen, or the Quantico Marines.

Coach Ed Kensler's probable starters for today's game are at attack; Spence Everett, Joe Alexander, and Les Sutorius, midfield; Cliff Pannell, Buddy Nathans, and John Richards. The three defensemen will be Frank Riggs, Will Browne, and Buddy Gould with Al Walters in the goal.

Intramural Track

The preliminary events in the Intramural Track meet were held yesterday on Fetzer field. The results are:

60-yard dash — (Fraternity Division) Fredick (Kap Sig), Amos (Phi Delt), M. Smith (PiKA) Wilson (DKE), Carson (Phi Kap Sig), Davis (Phi Delt). These boys along with the rest that are mentioned will appear in the finals today. (Dormitory Division) Troutman (Joyner) Moore (NROTC), Nelson (Avery) McElroy (NROTC), Whitty (Winston), Macon (Cobb). (Graduate Division) Chambliss (Law Sch), Turney (Peacocks), Patserouras (Med Sch), Kelso (Law Sch), Bonczek (Peacocks).

880 yard dash—(Fraternity Division) Everett (Phi Dap Sig), Stem (Phi Delt), Fredrick (Kap Sig), Singletary (PiKA), O'Bannon (DKE), Schuler (Phi Kap Sig). (Dormitory Division) Folkomer (Cobb), Moore (NROTC), Caton (NROTC), Macon (Cobb), Chapman (Cobb), McArthur (NROTC). (Graduate Division) Turney (Peacocks), Patsevouras (Med Sch), Kelso (Law Sch), Finnegan (Med Sch), Light (Peacocks), Chambliss (Law Sch).

North Carolina Symphony Will Play Here Friday Night

By JACKIE MC CARTHY

It's Symphony time once again in Chapel Hill. Each year, just about the time spring arrives, bringing with it cherry blossoms and the smell of just-mown grass, the North Carolina Symphony comes to Chapel Hill.

On Friday, the Symphony, under the direction of Benjamin Swalin, will present a concert at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Soloist will be violinist Elaine Skorodin of Chicago, Ill.

Since first appearing with the Chicago Symphony at a Young People's concert, Miss Skorodin has been soloist with many orchestras including the Chicago Symphony, the Grant Park Symphony, the National Symphony of Washington, D. C., and the St. Louis Symphony.

Winner of the national auditions of the Friday Morning Music Club of Washington, D. C., and the Allied Arts Violin Award of the Society of American Musicians, Miss Skorodin's other honors include the Farwell Award of the Musicians Club of Women and a contest for string players sponsored by the Chicago Musical Arts Club.

She has recently presented recitals in Town Hall, New York; Orchestra Hall, Chicago, and Washington. Miss Skorodin is a member of the faculty at Chicago Musical College.

For the Chapel Hill concert Miss Skorodin will play the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in D major by Paganin-Wilhelmj.

Other selections to be played by the Symphony here Friday include Handel's Overture to the Royal Fireworks, in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the death of the composr; Brahms' Symphony No. III, Opus 90; Rimsky-Korsakov's Overture, The Russian Easter; and Jan Philip Schinhan's Fantasy for Orchestra.

Dr. Schinhan is a former professor of music here. A noted musician and composer, he is the first recipient of a commission relating to the Benjamin Award of $1,000 for "restful" music. The commission was established by Edward B. Benjamin of New Orleans and Greensboro.

Students may attend the Chapel Hill concert by purchasing a student membership in the North Carolina Symphony Society. Memberships are $1 and may be secured in Bingham X or at the door. Student wives will also be admitted for $1.

Although the home offices of the Symphony are located in Chapel Hill —in Bingham X, just beside Lenoir Hall—the Orchestra actually spends very little time here.

When January's cold winds whistle through the North Carolina pines, the Little Symphony, composed of 25 musicians, begins its nine-week tour. The Orchestra this season played 64 concerts for children and adults in 31 North Carolina communities, bringing symphonic music to towns whose concert facilities are inadequate for the Full Symphony.

'Parade' Editor Speaks At Inn

Ed Gorkin, editor of "Parade," the 17,000,000 circulation Sunday newspaper supplement, will be a main speaker at the Southern Press Photographer's short course at the Carolina Inn here, April 30 to May 2.

Hugh Morton, director of the short course, stated that Gorkin will lecture to the photographers on "Feature Pictures."

Morton stated that the outstanding "headliner" speaker for the course is Alfred Eisensteadt, staff photographer for "Life" Magazine who will speak on "Use of the 35 millimeter Camera." Eisensteadt is one of the half a dozen great photographers in his field in the world.

The man who won the top prize as "Television's Photographer of the Year" also will be on the program—Tom Priestly of Columbia Broadcasting System.

Morton also announced that the world's "foremost photographer of women" is a faculty member for the course. He is Mills Steele of Greenville, S. C. and will talk on phases of women's fashions.

French Musicologist Speaks In Hill Hall

Marc Pincherle, French musicologist, will speak at the southeastern chapter meeting of the American Musicological Society today at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Pincherle, appearing under the auspices of the Ambassade de France and the UNC Music Department, will discuss some aspects of his research in instrumental music.

He was born in Algeria and studied violin in Paris. Editor of several French periodicals, including "Le Monde musical" and "Musique," Pincherle has written numerous articles and books.

He is best known for his research on the history and music of the violin and for his studies on the music of Corelli and Vivaldi.

Pincherle has taught at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris and has served as president of the French Society of Musicology.

Three Named To Fill Post

Three students were named Tuesday to replace University Party legislators, all of whom had to resign because they had been elected to office in another branch of student government.

John Minter, UP chairman, said Hank Patterson had been selected for the Legislature seat formerly held by Student Body President Charlie Gray in Town Men's II.

Ann Terry was appointed to replace Student Body Secretary Sue Wood in Dorm Women's I.

Replacing Neal Boden, who was recently elected to the Student Council, in Town Men's III will be Mac Griffiss.

All three appointments are subject to the approval of the student body president and Student Legislature.

Coed Counselors Meet; Should Bring Handbook

Coed orientation counelors for the fall have been asked to bring copies of the Women's Handbook to a meeting today at 8:30 p.m. in 106 Hanes Hall.

A review of dormitory and social rules for women will be held at the meeting.

Sandy Trotman, chairman of the Women's Honor Council, will speak to the counselors on the significance of the Honor Code in the orientation program.

The Counselor's Orientation Manual will also be distributed and discussed at the meeting.

Six-Day Symposium Planned; 'The Image Of Man' Is Topic

The Symposium Program Committee announced Monday plans for a six day Carolina Symposium, March 27 to April 1, 1960, according to committee Chairman Ed Levy.

Six major hour addresses will be presented on each of the Symposium nights. Prospective speakers will be contacted soon in an effort to draw the best authorities available from the areas with which the Symposium will be concerned, Levy said.

The over-all subject will be "The Image of Man: The Individual in an Accelerated Culture." A day of the program will be devoted to each of the following divisions:

(1) "Concepts of Man: an examination of the theories of the nature of man."

(2) "Socio-Economic Factors in Our Society: forces causing an increasing impersonalization of human affairs."

(3) "Technological and Scientific Society."

(4) "The State: an exploration of the individuals relation to the state and its laws."

(5) The Modern Arts."

(6) "Education and the Individual."

Copies of the addresses will be studied by a board of three authorities in each of the program areas. These boards will lead discussion and ask questions after each address. In the afternoons seminars will be scheduled, featuring the main speakers and other participants from local and outside sources.

There will also be luncheon and dinner hour discussions.

"We have every expectation that the 1960 Symposium will be the greatest yet," said Levy, "because our program is being organized well in advance, and we are able to draw first-hand from experience gained in past Symposiums."

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Charlotte Blynn Noell, Fred Colson Robinson, Robert Edson Briggs, Ranjit Tirtha, William Clark Wardlaw, Franklin Joel Schaeman, Oscar Romulas Simpson, Bjorn Frederick Hrutfiord, Murphy Morgan Osborne Jr., Darrell Blaine Hawkins, Herbert Leland Bentley, Betsy Field Harris, Lefis Burton Hawley, William Crabtree, Franklin McGhee Jones, William Gibbs Thomas and John Francis Cretty.

SO YOU THINK YOU'VE GOT TROUBLES — This poor feller, "Dirt Farmer" Bill Davis, was picked by his friends (?) as the "Ugliest Man on the Campus." Pore Bill was 260 votes uglier than his nearest competitor, Jeff Churchill of Lambda Chi Alpha. Farmer Bill is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Better luck next time, boys.

'Dirt Farmer' Ugliest Man To Plow Across Campus

Bill Davis, sponsored by Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, has been elected "Ugliest Man on the Campus" in the contest held last week.

Davis swept 814 votes in the contest sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity. He ran under the name "Dirt Farmer."

"All told, there were 2,626 votes cast for the 10 constestants," said APO president Randel Etheridge. "Next year we anticipate a greater number of contestants and a somewhat more active contest than we had this year.

"We do feel this contest to be an outstanding success and thank those who made it possible through their interest and cooperation," Etheridge concluded.

Winner Davis will be presented with an engraved mahogany plaque bearing the ugliest man symbol and the inscription, "Ugliest Man on Campus, 1959, William Davis, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, presented by Alpha Phi Omega."

The presentation will be made as soon as the plaque is engraved.

Diana Johnson
"Miss Chapel Hill 1958"

Queen Diana Johnson Will Crown Successor

Coed Diana Johnson, who has been Miss Chapel Hill this year, will crown her successor Friday night in the auditorium of the Chapel Hill High School.

The ninth annual Miss Chapel Hill Pageant will begin at 8 p.m. The event will consist of a talent contest, evening dress and bathing suit appearances.

Seven UNC coeds have been entered in the pageant. They are: Clara Tucker, Ann Lucas, Patricia Wilson, Faye Gooch, Beverly Baily, Carol Carruthers and Jane Newsom.

For the winner of the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored contest, a wardrobe and college scholarship will be awarded her, in addition to a free trip to compete in the Miss North Carolina Pageant in Durham later.

Modeling a part of the wardrobe the new Miss Chapel Hill will receive are Jo Anne Baker, Diana Johnson and Mary Cabell Carlan, shown in the surrounding pictures.

Strikers Siege Mill Gates; Hodges Calls Meeting Today

By NOEL YANCEY

HENDERSON, N. C., April 21 — (AP)— Enraged, frustrated strikers, convinced that management had betrayed their new contract by refusing them immediate return to work, continued an angry, yelling siege today of gates at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills.

About 100 highway patrolmen, summoned during the night, escorted some 300 non-strikers from the two plants. They had spent the night there, while police, armed with riot guns, machine guns and tear gas, patrolled outside and a cluster of strikers challenged the workers to come out.

The officers escorted workers on the day shift to the plants amid threats and jeers from the strikers. Three cars were stoned and officers broke up a fight between one of the drivers and a striker.

Gov. Hodges will meet with union and management leaders at 11 a.m. Wednesday in a new effort to ease the tension.

Disgruntled bystanders yelled and jeered as the day shift left, but there were no incidents. At the South Henderson plant, there seemed to be fewer coming to work on the second shift than did last night.

Police Chief C. C. Harris said his men would try to get the second shift workers out after the end of their work at 11 p.m., assisted by the state troopers.

About 250 strikers were on hand as shifts changed at the south plant.

"You yellow bellies," shouted one, "we'll get you tonight." Another screamed, "Yellow, yellow bunch of scabs. You're scared to walk in," as the non-strikers' cars went in the gates. Many of the vehicles had broken windshields.

Payton said the union had understood in the presence of the Governor that "The top figure of jobs not available to our people wa 436.

"Today," he continued, "we find out from the company that they had already hired new people for the second shift and in some cases even the third shift and they now consider these people as having replaced the strikers. Therefore the (negotiating) committee has asked for an accounting of jobs open. . ."

Cooper, however, said he didn't know where Payton had heard the figure of 436. "He didn't get it from me."

The mills president added that no agreement is in effect now with the union, declaring that its members have "repudiated it by their actions. They don't seem to have any sense of responsibility for their own commitments."

He said that the new violence would not discourage him from continuing a second shift. "If I shut one down," he said, "I will shut them all down, and I won't open them up anymore."

Last night a dynamite blast ripped up a section of earth inside the plant gates. A few rifle shots broke windows or ricocheted off plant walls.

Spring Frolic Friday Night

The IDC-sponsored Spring Frolic dance Friday night will be held in the parking lot area at Smith Dormitory. The place for the dance was changed from the Hanes Hall parking lot because of a concert in Memorial Hall the same night.

A combo will play music for the dance from 7:30 to 10:15 p.m. Friday. Afterward, a lawn party will be held under Davie Poplar. The special feature of the lawn party is the local broadcasting of Jimmy Capps' "Our Best To You" radio music program.

At least 100 song requests from Carolina students were sent to Capps over the weekend.

In case of rain the Spring Frolic dance will be moved to the Tin Can.

UNC Professor Receives Guggenheim Fellowship

Dr. Steven B. Baxter, an associate professor of history at UNC, has received a $5,000 Guggenheim Fellowship to study next year at the Hague in Holland, doing research on "The Life of William III" in the royal archives of the Rijksarchief Library.

Before coming to Chapel Hill in September 1958, he had taught at the University of Missouri and at Dartmouth College. He has the B.A. degree from Harvard University and the Ph.D. degree from Cambridge University in England. He is a specialist on William III, who lived from 1650 to 1702.

Prof. Baxter will return to his teaching duties here after his year in Holland.

If You Want A Room, Better Get It Today

Today is the deadline for men students to reserve dormitory rooms for the summer and next fall.

Room deposits must be made with the University cashier in South Building. Although a room is reserved for the summer session, it will not entitle the occupant to that space in the fall.

Double rooms will be available in Joyner, Mangum, Grimes, Ruffin and Winston (for graduate men) during the summer sessions. According to the housing office, the rent in these dorms is $20 for each session.

Manly, Stacy and Lewis dormitories will offer single rooms to students with a charge of $30 per session.

Married students will be housed in Graham dormitory for $40 per session.

The reservation fee for fall rooms is $10. Room rent for the fall semester must be paid by Sept. 1.

'Oh, Hellas!': It Plays Here

Rehearsals every night mark increasing activity in anticipation of the May 1 and 2 presentations of this year's Sound and Fury production, "Oh, Hellas!"

The show, written by Lew Harlee and Carl Bridgers, is Carolina's version of Aristophanes' comedy, "Lysistrata." Starring in the UNC production are Jane Newsom as Lysistrata, Jane Durham as Myrrhina, Nancy Aubrey asCalonika, Al Miller as Lykon, Bill Monnell as Demetruis and Wally Graham as Kinesius.

A group of other actors, singers and dancers will be included in the "Oh, Hellas!" presentations in Memorial Hall.

Directing the cast in rehearsals for the past several weeks has been Joel Fleishman. The musical direction is being handled by Lew Harlee. The choreographer is Tony Millili. Al Salley is in overall charge of the production.

Music from the show will be presented over "Our Best To You," radio program of Station WPTF, Friday, beginning at 10:30 p.m.

Student interested in working with the Sound and Fury production may assist with completion of sets and costumes in Caldwell "Z."

Faith, Science Complimentary, Says William Gaston Speaker

Faith and science are complimentary, rather than contradictory, said Dr. Albert W. Overhauser, scientist with the Ford Motor Company, Monday night in Carroll Hall.

Dr. Overhauser was featured here as the second lecturer on the William Gaston series. The topic of his address was "The Christian Faith and the Scientist."

Defining "faith" as the intellectual assent to the testimony of another, Dr. Overhauser said faith is rational because it involves an evaluation of the reliability of the source.

"The faith of the scientist gives perspective to the work and life of the scientist who is engaged in systematic recording of God's 'voice' in the first of His revelations — the created universe."

Dr. Overhauser took his Ph.D. at the University of California in 1951 and worked as research associate at the University of Illinois from 1951 to 1953. For the next five years he was at Cornell as assistant professor and associate professor.

He joined the Ford Motor Company as supervisor of solid state physics at the Scientific Laboratory in 1958.

Go And Apply-Gray Needs You

Today marks the start of student government interviews for over 150 positions to be given out to deserving and interested students. In past years the response has been good; that is, more applicants than jobs.

Surely there is a job in student government which would interest every student. On one end you have the traffic advisory council and the attorney general's staff, while on the other, we find the foreign student's committee and the summer school Honor Council.

Student Body President Charlie Gray is showing a willingness to overlook party affiliations using instead the criteria of, experience and capabilities. This was evidenced by his selection of Jim Crownover as presidential assistant.

So c'mon by the second floor of G.M. and see Chas about employment. Remember, student government is no better than the students it serves.

Nice Weekend? We'll Sure Try

The editor of this paper views the Daily Tar Heel as an enterprise which should be of service to the student body whenever possible. Therefore we try and remain cognizant of problems which are presented to us by members of this academic community.

Lately, students have besieged the editor, complaining that it rains too much on the weekends. The editor agrees. Therefore, our crusade for this week is to insure a clear weekend in order that all students can have a nice time Saturday and Sunday at Morehead, Nags Head and Myrtle.

The editor plans to contact student leaders on the second floor of Graham Memorial and the administrators in South Building in attempting to bring an end to the excess moisture. If necessary, we may sponsor a rally on the capital steps in Raleigh.

One way or another, we will do our best to give you a clear weekend.

A New Harry Golden Plan

Up in Detroit there is a motorists' holiday. No tickets are issued. Cars go through red lights, make I turns, and even bowl over pedestrians without so much as a traffic cop's whistle cutting the air.

All of this had a curious beginning. For years the Detroit police force was the mid-West's finest. Colored and white policemen patrolled their beats, kept order and lived in amiable protessional harmony. But lately when colored policemen have come up for promotion they have been assigned to the police scout cars. The white poliremen objected. They did not want to ride side by side with a colored policeman.

So all the Detroit cops went on strike. They refused to issue traffic tickets. All of which made Police Commissioner Hart pretty hot under the collar. "Integrate or Quit!" he announced. But force is not, and never has been the answer. If the white policemen will work with the erect but not the sedentary colored policemen the answer is to make all the policemen in Detroit vertical again. Since they cannot patrol the whole city on foot, let Police Commissioner Hart issue pogo sticks. Law and order will again prevail and errant motorists will be ticketed and the Detroit Traffic Commissioner can sleep the sleep of angels.

Some Notes In Review

Gayle A. Henrotte

Thomas Rice and Russell Link presented Two Legends in a final performance at the Playmaker's Theater Sunday night, April 19. The two legends were concerned with the birth of Athena from the head of Zeus, and with the death of Cassiopeia, a vain queen, by order of the gods.

The first legend was a cantata presented as a curtain raiser. Marilyn Zschau as Hera and Wayne Garber as Zeus gave an extremely amusing rendition of the myth. Ted Quast (violin) and Don Fouse (violoncello) gave a bright and charming interpretation to the score which so effectively underlay the voice parts.

The opera, "Whatever Passes along the Paths of the Sea," had a colorful stage setting. Each character was costumed in a different color which separated him as an entity from the other characters and dancers. With the minimum of staging, the directors were able to achieve two definite scenes, one inside a palace, and another outside it at the edge of the sea.

Ethel Casey as Cassiopeia, the queen, gave a dramatic performance, rich and clear. The king, Cephius, sung by James Gibbs, was throughout a soul-full role, which the artist handled well, giving a poignant rendering to the final scene with his lament for his murdered wife. Here the composer was able to blend orchestra and voice with grace and balance.

The role of Andromeda, the prophesying daughter with terrifying visions, was performed by Rebecca Carnes, who managed to portray the other-worldliness of the character with dignity and abandon. Marilyn Zschau, taking her second role of the evening as Medusa, managed to convince with her deep portrayal of that horrid monster. Hunter Tillman as Perseus had a short but energetic part subduing Medusa with his sword, and telling the audience about it at the same time.

The silent dancing figures of Chenault Spence (the Queen's attendant), Darwin Soloman (the snake monster), and Carolyn Meyers, Sybil Mathis, Barbara Hicks, and Margaret Starnes (snakes) were convincing, each in his or her separate part.

As one would expect, Tom Rice's music was entertaining, continuously varied with very warm and flowing melodies as the drama demanded. The score was excellently performed by the orchestra: Martha Halliday and William Evans (flutes), Eddit Bass and Fred Reiser (trumpets), Jim Lambeth (trombone), Liddell Adams (tuba), Joanne Goulson (percussion), Nancy Walker(piano-celesta), Ted Quast (violin), and Don Fouse (violoncello).

The combined efforts of Tom Rice and Russell Link produced an interesting work, one dramatic with extremely poignant moments. Perhaps they are planning to work together again? This reviewer looks forward to such with anticipation.

Lower Quad & Lacrosse?

Editor:

I am now living in the Lower Quad, and rumor has it that all upper classmen will be asked to move out. This move is being made so that the University can put freshmen and counselors in the same dorm.

If I am going to be asked to move, I would like to know now, not in July. Who will make the decisions as to whether the upper classmen will be asked to move out or not, and when will the decision be made?

A Lower Quad Resident

Rusty Hammond:

Before you write your degrading opinions of lacrosse, I wish you would take the time to first see the game played. You would probably find that, like all other normal people, lacrosse will be one of your favorite sports. It's really a fine game. Why not see it some time?

New President Speaks

Gray's Inaugural Address

(This is the second of three parts of Student Body President Charlie Gray's inaugural address to the Student Legislature last Thursday night. Ed.)

Another problem in the dormitories is one that has long been on the minds of student leaders and the administration—How to improve the study conditions? Although complete quietness can never be attained, a strengthening of the derm advisor system and the perfection of the IDC court system could go a long way toward obtaining better study conditions in the dormitories. Student government should also continue its quest for more study rooms. A legislative committee has already made some progress in this area, but much remains to be done. Again the possibility of converting some of our dormitory basements, namely Manly or Mangum, into study rooms should be thoroughly investigated. Such a room would be invaluable to the residents of many dorms.

Other needs of the dormitories are an electric appliance area, more vending machines, better means of fire protection, available first aid equipment, more efficient janitorial service, the paving of roads in some areas and others. These problems should be approached as soon as possible.

Student finances is an area that will compel much work. This is one phase of student government that has suffered from neglect and because of this, many organizations have developed a laxness toward the handling of their appropriations. First of all I plan to have all matters concerning finances codified. Then as a check against loose spending, the Budget Committee will become a year round organization that will receive monthly reports on the financial progress of all student government organizations and be able to check any unnecessary spending of the students' money.

Student relations in three fields need to be strengthened. The first area is student-faculty relations. Faculty teas and discussions in dorms, fraternities, and sororities would be one method toward improving student-faculty relations. The second area is student-town relations. For the acquisition of favorable zoning laws for construction and co-operation in solving our traffic problem student relations with the towns people must be as harmonious as possible. The third area is fraternity-non-fraternity relations. At many large universities there is a tremendous tendency of a psychological wall to develop between the different residents on the campus. This is a very unhealthy situation and I definitely think all efforts should be taken to prevent such a situation from arising here at Carolina. While the Order of the Grail aims at improving all student relations, the formulation of an IFC-IDC committee to further promote activities and understanding between the two residences would help assure us of a more unified campus.

I plan to continue the study committee on our judicial system. There is much in our present system that needs clarifying and codifing. A study committee should also be formed to discuss constitutional revision, since our present constitution is out of date. Along this same line is the redistricting of our legislative seats. This action was necessitated by the passage of the single spring election amendment to the constitution. Another area of study that will give the students a chance to exert their initiative is the committee on Academic Affairs. Here the students will have an opportunity to present to the administration their suggestions as to how the academic life of the University can be improved. In no way, however should the students dictate to the administration, but merely offer suggestions that at times the people in South Building are unable to see.

Carolina is called "the cultural center of the South," yet our program for outstanding speakers has been very poor. The Carolina Forum has the funds to present an adequate and varied speaking program and I intend to see that this is carried out.

Probably the most controversial student organization on the campus is the National Students Association. The NSA has been praised and condemned by many different circles. Which criticism is correct is not known by any student on this campus. I can definitely see the good points in NSA, but it is impossible to successfully push an organization that many of the students feel is unrepresentative of their actual beliefs. I plan to give the people who have doubts on their minds the chance to actually see the operations of NSA. If a deep study of the organization and a presentation of its policies does not remove all doubts of this group, then we will have to consider seriously if NSA offers any contribution to the betterment of Carolina life. I will do all in my power to prove the worth of this organization to the entire campus.

Charlie Jonas' Grail Speech

Harold O'Tuel

Speaking at the annual Grail Banquet Friday night, Representative Charles R. Jonas of Lincolnton stated," People are responsible for the kind of government they have; they have the kind of government they deserve. To get better government people must take an active interest in it." This writer strongly agrees with the speaker. Today government is criticized on every level—national state, local, and certainly on this campus. No doubt criticim is helpful, but when critical remarks are made, one should be prepared to better the situation. Governments should be under the scrutiny of their components, but at the same time these elements ought to realize their position and possible influence in yielding more acceptable governmental action.

We cannot safely escape our duty in future governmental activity, for as Rep. Jonas remarked, "Educated young men can exert the greatest influence. The kind of government and world will, in part, be dictated by our desires. In the next generation we will determine policy." To a degree this places us right in the middle of those qualified persons, in an educational sense anyway, who presently and ultimately will determine the future of our society. To many this is no doubt frightening, for it demands that we be great in order to better our government and to perpetuate the tenets of our way of life. Again Rep. Jonas offered wise words "Compelled to be great is no misfortune, but an opportunity." The most sobering comment of the night was "Our generation must either be great or perish."

For those who will view the world, nation, state, and campus beyond the limits of Saturday's big dance, tonight's scheduled poker game, and today's round of golf a great deal of truth and sound advice is discernible from the comments of the informed Republican congressmen, representing North Carolina's Tenth District. Charles R. Jonas is no alarmist or crusader. Although being on the opposite side of the political fence, this columnist can but heartily agree with Mr. Jonas on the quotes here presented and sincerely wish that many others held the firm beliefs of this 1927 University of North Carolina graduate.

We realize that you have insuperable problems which normally preempt any fanciful consideration today, but why not take a moment for the following and see if you can fathom their implication.

The first is a Zen Koan which J. D. Salinger used as the inscription in his book of nine short stories: "We know the sound of two hands clapping. But what is the sound of one hand clapping?"

The second, whose author we have not been able to establish, appears, among other places, in Erich Fromm's book, THE FORGOTTEN LANGUAGE. It reads as follows: "Last night I dreamt that I was a butterfly and now I don't know if I am a man who dreamt he was a butterfly, or possibly a butterfly who now dreams he is a man."

Long Epistle On Quarterly

It would seem that some defense of the present editorial policy of The Carolina Quarterly is now in order. From time to time during the past year, the editors have kept what they hoped was a discreet silence inasmuch as they believed that certain events and situations were patently the outcome of confused opinions and feelings which would show themselves to be such in the usual progression of certain trends on this campus. It now appears that this view was to some extent naive, for what I have called confused opinions and feelings is still as much the case as it was perhaps six months ago. That rationality and personal honesty have been absent from many of the various expressions of criticism of which The Quarterly was subject, has obviously not been an insight that many of the spectators of the debate have been aware. Moreover, the vague manner in which the issues have been articulated makes the problem of giving a defense against any such criticism extremely complex and difficult; but I shall try to interpret the main points of the controversy and atempt to give what I think is at least a partial defense of the present policy of our editorial staff.

There are two points of view that seem necessarily to hold concurrently about The Quarterly, if one is to come to any realistic understanding of what a feasible policy is or might be. The first idea is that the magazine should serve to encourage young writers on the University campus to write and to write well. The point of contention, however, does not seem to be in terms of whether or not The Quarterly fulfills this responsibility as much as it is in terms of the specific manner in which this responsibility should be fulfilled. Whether or not indiscriminate publication of student efforts is a valid means of encouragement to any honest writer is left to the common sense of the reader. What The Quarterly has tried to di is 1) to er. What The Quarterly has tried to do is 1) to consideration 2) to give as detailed and lengthy criticism of a particular work as the promise of the work and the time of a staff member permitted (in most cases the energy and time spent upon this activity has been considerable) and finally 3) to publish such works as were of comparable excellence with the other material in the magazine, i.e. there has been the attempt to maintain a uniformity of standard. Only critics who believe that The Quarterly should be a magazine solely containing student writing could possibly feel that there is something unfortunate about this plan.

For those who still hold that the magazine should publish solely student work, I can only ask that they imagine as honestly as possible the future of such a magazine, both in terms of its literary worth as well as the ultimate value of such a publication to the students of the University considered as a whole. With all due respects to the tremendous spirit and capability of the editors of Spectrum, I can only say that were it not for the almost absurd notoriety which this magazine received upon its initial publication, the general interest in its contents would have been negligible both to a large majority of students on this campus as well as to those few who take literature more seriously. One need glance at any of the student publications of solely student work from any other university or college campus to realize what is the ultimate fate of this sort of publication. Perhaps these publications have value, but most often the value is felt most strongly by the members of their editorial boards who not only publish these magazines but who also write most of the copy for them. Unfortunately, it is a rarity for young editors to give very valid criticism of their own work or that of their close associates, especially when the possibility of publication is a direct outcome of that evaluation.

The dirty hand of justice was never more evident than the Tar Heel review of "Mrs. McThnig." That reviewer admitted his personal qualifications in this column: "The reviewer joined the OTHER children."

Confessing that he missed the first scene (which sets the mood of the entire play), he goes on to say that "he only wishes that he had stayed in bed." He is right. He should have. He was still asleep.

Mr. Fred Sitton, the director of "Mrs. McThing," and one of the finest total casts ever assembled here created some theatre magic on Saturday night; the first uncontrived "magic" seen here in several arid years. The play—no masterpiece, just quietly charming—was tastefully designed so that what happened on stage took precedence (as it should be); was directed with a fine sensitivity (every actor seemed confident about his character); and was acted splendidly (the smaller roles no less engaging than the larger ones). The production as a whole seemed to have no fault worthy of comment in view of its contrasting excellence.

Your reviewer suggested that the play was unworthy of production. To this, I can only repeat Fitzgerald's wise words: There is no confusion like the confusion of a simple mind."

N. C. Symphony Plays Schinhan

Jan Philip Schinhan, distinguished musician and composer, is the first recipient of a commission relating to the Benjamin Award of $1,000 for "restful" music. The commission was established by Edward B. Benjamin of New Orleans and Greensboro.

Dr. Schinhan's composition, "Fantasy for Orchestra," will be played at several concerts by the North Carolina Symphony this season. These performances will be in Chapel Hill on April 24, in Greensboro on May 4, and in Kannapolis on May 7.

Soon after Dr. Schinhan came to the United States as an opera conductor in 1913, he took his place as a leading organist in San Francisco. He joined the music faculty of the University in 1935.

His intensive musical training includes degrees from the University of California and the Ph.D. from the University of Vienna. In addition to many compositions, he is the authoritative editor of "The Music of the Ballads," and "The Music of Folk Songs," recently published by Duke University.

Since his recent retirement as professor of music, Dr. Schinhan has resided in Kannapolis where he spends his time in composition, and also as visiting professor of organ at Davidson College.

SPRING AT THE CREEK

Fungus Amungus-Huh

Research papers on insects, water fungi, flora of the Carolinas, and a study of chemical effects on plant growth are being presented by University biologists in Knoxville, Tennessee, this weekend.

Climaxing extensive studies and observations, four University professors and two graduate students delivered their findings at the annual meeting of the Association of Southeastern Biologists held Thursday through Saturday on the University of Knoxville campus.

John T. Mullins, graduate student from Highland Springs, Virginia, presented a report on the reproduction and life cycle of the Chytrip, a rare fungus which he discovered growing in lakes in the Chapel Hill area.

His study marks a rediscovery of the primitive plant, as it hasn't been seen in 20 years. Until Mullins discovery, the plant has been found only near Shelby, N. C. and in Germany.

The plant is unique as the two sexes grow separately and reproduction occurs sexually, as well as asexually. Usually, the two sexes appear on the same plant.

Concentrating on Odonata insects, which include dragonflies and damsel flies, Dr. C. E. Jenner, head of the Zoology department, discussed his experiment with the effects of day length on the growth and development of the species.

With the use of artificial light, he found that varying lengths of daylight produce notable changes in the maturation of the insects.

Jenner explained that long periods of exposure, from 13 to 14 hours produce nymphal development, whereas 11-hour exposure periods prolonge development. Degree of influence differs with the various species.

If daylight exposure is markedly reduced, development will be completely suspended.

Concluding a two-summer's study at the Highlands Biological Station, Dr. W. J. Koch, assistant professor of Botany, gave a report of fungi discovered in the ponds and streams of North Carolina mountains.

Jenner's study consists of a survey and description of parasitic organisms which survive on dead and living animals and produce decay.

Dr. V. A. Greulach, professor of Botany, assisted by John G. Haesloop, graduate student from Greensboro, evaluated a chemical technique for identifying plant growth substances. The technique may also be employed to determine compounds that inhibit plant development.

Having traveled over 120,000 miles and collected approximately 175,000 specimens of flora in the Carolinas during the last three growing seasons, Dr. A. E. Radford, asociate professor of Botany, presented a progress report on his project.

George, Lambe Place In Physics Contest

Michael James George of Greensboro and Randolph Leland Lambe of Charlotte placed first and second, respectively, in the state high school physics contest with 1,200 student participants.

The winner and the list of students who gained honorable mention were announced by Dr. Paul Shearin, professor of physics and chairman of the awards committee.

Michael George, the first place winner and a student at Greensboro Senior High School, is entitled to a Merit Scholarship awarded by the UNC Scholarship Committee. The scholarship will cover the cost of tutition for one year and will be renewed each year if the winner makes satisfactory progress in the University. Lambe, who placed second, goes to Harding High School, Charlotte.

A three-way tie for third place involved John McHugh of Durham High School; Terry Lee Roberts, Lee Edwards High School, Asheville; and Robert Ervin Cunningham Jr., Greensboro Senior High School.

Students receiving honorable mention are as follows: Harmon Lindsay Morton, Central High School, Charlotte; Tom Earl Hanson, Durham High School; James Davidson Morrison, Lee Edwards High School, Asheville.

David Wood Swain, Needham Broughton High School, Raleigh; Rodney Andrew Hill, Greensboro Senior High School; Jesse Willard Myers Jr., McLeansville High School; William Owen Wallace, R. J. Reynolds High School, Winston-Salem; Burnell Parker Curtis, New Hanover High School, Wilmington; William Miller Goss, Hendersonville High School; Leslie Roy Brady, Newton-Conover High School, Newton; Jerry L. Markatos, New Hanover High School, Wilmington.

Thomas Carl Ward, Needham Broughton High School, Raleigh; Dillard Lovell DeHart, Lee Edwards High School, Asheville; Wendell Jack Bouknight, New Hanover High School, Wilmington; James Monroe Hoell Jr., Rocky Mount Senior High School; Allston Julius Stubbs, Durham High School.

Last year there were 1,074 student entries from 70 high schools for the physics contest sponsored by the UNC Extension Division.

The physics contest was open to members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Each school with participating students selected the best three papers from the total submitted and sent these papers to the University where they were graded and judged by faculty members of the UNC Department of Physics.

The UNC Extension Division has also conducted contests in the fields of chemistry and mathematics; the winners of these contests will be announced soon. Entries are still being accepted for the Latin, Spanish and French contests.

Deadline for these remaining contests are Latin, April 23; Spanish, April 30; and French, May 1.

Computer Instruction Offered

Summer instruction in functions of electronic computers will be offered by the Consolidated University of North Carolina here August 17 to 28 soon after the Univac 1105 Data Automation System is ready for operations at Chapel Hill.

Dr. John W. Carr II, director of the Computation Center, announced the "Courses in Frontier Research on Digital Computers." It will be an intensive series five hours a day, for engineers, scientists, and industrial and business users of computers.

A distinguished visiting faculty is announced. These include some of the world's leading authorities on electronic "brains." Invited lecturers are Prof. Alan J. Perlis of Carnegie Tech; Prof. Marvin Minsky of M. I. T.; Prof. Philip Dreyfus of Paris; Prof. Saul Gorn of the University of Pennsylvania; Prof. Heinz Schecher of Munich, Germany; Dr. R. W. Hamming of the Bell Telephone Laboratories; Prof. David Young of the University of Texas; Dr. Heinz of Zurich Switzerland; Dr. Jack Moschman of the Corporation for Economic and Industry Research in Washington, D. C.

Dr. John W. Carr III will also lecture as well as direct the whole program. Dr. Carr came to Chapel Hill from the University of Michigan. He is one of the world's leading authories on electronic high-speed computers.

The purposes of the courses are twofold: presenting an introductory course aimed at persons in North Carolina and the southeast who have not as yet received a background in fundamentals of digital computers, and two advanced courses, "interlaced" in the hours of lectures, for practicing scientists, engineers and professional computer programmers.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

MARYLAND'S CREAMATION of the track team last Satusday leaves but one Carolina squad undefeated in con ference competition this spring — the tennis team. Coach Don Skakle's crew is only two wins away from wrapping up their second straight ACC title, and it would be safe to say that they already have it in the bag with the matches against Duke and Wake Forest being mere formalities.

While not as completely overpowering as Vladamir Cernik's team was a year ago, the present squad has come a long way considering what the outlook for them was several months ago. Skakle got only two seasoned players off the championship squad, Geoff Black and Ben Keys. He should have had a third in Dick Makepeace, but the little left-hander decided to trade his racket for a job in Richmond.

In addition to this loss, Skakle got very little quantity wise from what had been a fine freshman team. Luckily for him Bruce Sylvia returned along with Tommy Ricks but that was all. In the loss of Spencer Gray, Dee Heather, Buzzy Cowart, and Dave Thurmond the coach had to settle for a lot less depth on his present team.

THE MOST IMPORTANT additions to the net team this year have been Marshall Happer and Walker Lockett. Although neither one of these two played a great deal under Cernik, they have gotten their chance and are now very strong at the four and five positions. Under Cernik only six men played in a match and consequently the margins of victory were big since the younger players were watching instead of participating. This policy has been scrapped this year and it is to Skakle's credit that he has sometimes sacrificed the final score for seasoning.

We don't know if it is fact that the matches are closer this year or that maybe the weather is better but there have been more people out to watch the team perform than was the case last year. We can't say that the present aggregation is more colorful because with the exception of Black all the colorful players graduated. Besides playing good tennis Bob Bortner, Steve Bank, and Malcolm Clark all let their emotions unfold when a poor shot was pulled off.

Now talking to yourself about misplayed shots out on the court may not be the proper thing to do, but in some cases it is certainly amusing to the spectators. We will never be able to forget Clark, who in a moments of complete despair, would shout ou his own name to relieve the tension. Regardless of color, however, if you are interested in seeing some good tennis this present team can fill the order so if you have not taken a look at the ACC 1959 tennis champions do so next Wednesday — it will be the last chance.

ALMOST A YEAR AGO, on May 25, 1958 to be exact, Sugar Ray Robinson defeated Carmen Basilio for the world middleweight title. Sinec that time the Sugar Man has not dared to step into the ring. The recent repercussions caused by this situation only serve to prove that the fight game is now bordering on the ridiculous. Robinson has gone to the courts to stop the New York State Athletic Commission from taking his title away from him.

But here is what's really rich, at the hearing Robinson's lawyer, Martin Machat, declared that the commission ruling was unconstitutional because it was "a means to take away property — the title — without due process." With this kind of jazz going on the first thing you know Robinson will be wanting the court to appoint someone to fight for him.

Track Meet

The three divisions of the Intramural Track Meet were won by DKE fraternity, Joyner dorm, and the Med School.

The DKE's won their class by 1/5 of a point over the PiKA's who finished with a score of 20 points. Four-fifths of a point behind the PiKA's came the Phi Delt's.

Joyner racked up 33½ points to beat out Cobb for the dorm honors by 2½ points, the NROTC was third.

In the graduate division the Med School took first place with 39½ points with Peacocks and the Law School coming in second and third.

Braves Beat Reds

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The first-place Milwaukee Braves won their fifth game against a single loss Tuesday, beating Cincinnati 7-4. Henry Aaron's sensational hitting — a single, double and triple—helped Warren Spahn to his 248th major league victory.

Vada Pinson, 20-year-old rookie outfielder, matched Aaron's hitting with a similar spree to drive in all the Cincinnati runs.

WHO'S ON THIRD — Ferg Norton's two hits against State College have virtually ended the game of musical chairs which has been going on to try and find a permanent third baseman for the Tar Heels. Although still not a top glove man the sophomore from Raleigh will probably start at the hot corner for the remainder of the season.

Lacrosse Team Takes Second Win Over Duke

A hard scrapping Carolina lacrosse club kept its perfect record by stopping Duke 6-2 yesterday in Durham.

Attackman Spence Everett spirited the Tar Heels with two goals and two assists. Other goals were scored by attackman Les Sutorious and Joe Davies.

Joe Alexander, Buddy Gould and Sutorious were credited with assists along with Everett.

The alert Carolina defense of Frank Riggs, Will Brown and Gould kept the Blue Devils at bay almost at will. It was not until late in the second quarter with a Carolina man in the penalty box that Duke scored.

The Blue Devils second score came late in the fourth quarter. Unassisted, the Blue Devil got what is called a "garbage" goal.

Women students from eight schools will participate in the event, representing; Duke University, Woman's College, East Carolina College, Meredith College, Catawba College, Peace College, Salem College and U.N.C. Each college will enter two players in the Single's Tournament and one other team in the Doubles.

The players will begin registration at 9:00 a.m. at Woman's Gym, and will then draw for placement on the tournament chart. In the Singles round a match will consist of one set until the finals, which will be the best two of three. The Doubles will have two out of three sets for all matches. Play should start around 10:00, and will continue until 12:30 when a lunch break will be taken. The matches will resume at 2:00 and continue until the tournaments are completed.

Last year five schools participated in the Tennis Day. The finals of both tournaments found Duke vs UNC, and Marion Eells took the Singles Championship for Carolina while Duke triumphed in the Doubles. This year Prissy Wyrick and Carolyn Vaught will represent UNC in the Singles and Pat Hunter and Margaret Horner will play the Doubles.

From the interest and skill shown in the Tennis Day of last year a talented field is expected to provide some great tennis and thrilling moments in this gathering of the best college women tennis players in this section of the country.

Debate Squad Names Officers; McMillan To Succeed Simpson; Battle Maryland Debaters Next

He and other new squad officers were elected at a meeting Tuesday, and two forensic keys were awarded for "outstanding achievement in debating" during this part scholastic year.

Other new officers of the squad are Joe Roberts, vice president; Jeff Weisenfeld, secretary and representative to the Forenic Council; and Clay Simpson, treasurer.

The forensic keys were presented to McMillan and David Evans.

Only one meet is left on the debate schedule this year. In May the squad will try to outtalk the University of Maryland debators in the ACC tournament.

The 11 members of the UNC Debate Squad have participated in 11 tournaments this year.

Four varsity debators received "outstanding debator" awards at the Marshall-Wythe Tournament at William and Mary College in Virginia. They were John Brooks, David Evans, Tom Long and Clay Simpson. At this meet the team won seven and lost five debates.

The squad was undefeated at both the Emory University Invitational and the New York University tournaments. At the New York contest the UNC group placed second among 40 teams.

The eight other meets attended by the group this year were these: Wake Forest Novice Tournament, Wake Forest Dixie Classic Tournament, South Carolina Invitational, Maryland University - Capitol Hill Tournament, Vanderbilt University-Southern Universities Conference, Boston Invitational Tournament, Brooklyn Invitational Debate Tournament and the Virginia Discussion Conference.

Retiring Debate Squad officers are Clay Simpson, president; Tom Long, vice president, and Taylor McMillan, secretary.

Members of the squad include: Steve Burch, Charles Carrol, Jeff Lawrence, Joe Roberts, John Snyder, Brooks, Evans, Long, Simpson, McMillan and Weisenfeld.

Coeds To Vote Tuesday On Question Of Activity Fee

Coeds will vote Tuesday to give or deny the power of collecting social and activity fees to the Women's Residence Council.

In the same referendum, coeds will be making a decision as to the power of the WRC to determine the amount of the fees after a series of discussions with women dormitory residents.

The vote will be "yes" or "no."

The referendum was called for by Student Legislature as an aftermath of a Student Council decision earlier this year. The council, after hearing a case concerning the levying of the fees, ruled that the WRC collection was unconstitutional.

To give coeds the opportunity to express their opinion on the fees, Student Legislature last week passed a bill authorizing the referendum.

The referendum is being handled by the Women's Residence Council under the supervision of the Elections Board. The time the polls will be open in all coed dormitories will be announced later.

Kay Boortz, WRC chairman, said Wednesday the council will determine the opinions of coeds through the vote Tuesday, through the various dorm administrations, dorm representatives at large to the council and through discussion groups.

The referendum to be voted on Tuesday states: "The Women's Residnce Council has the power to collect social and activity fees and to determine the amount of the said fees after a series of discussions with women dormitory residents."

RALEIGH, April 22 (AP) — Negotiations in Gov. Hodges' office to settle the Henderson Cotton Mills strike ended in failure Wednesday afternoon with the Governor issuing a statement strongly criticizing both union and management.

Saying "my patience and that of the public is about exhausted," Gov. Hodges revealed he had wired John D. Cooper, president of the strike-bound Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills, asking him to hold off operation of second and third shifts "until matters are cleared up satisfactorily."

Hodges said in his statement that the mill has" intentionally or otherwise misled all of us, including myself" by failing to report that only 222 jobs were available in the mills for returning strikers.

In Henderson, State Highway patrolmen kept order Wednesday as the embattled evening shift went to work at the mills.

Groups of about 200 strikers gathered at each of the two plants and shouted defiance at the workers as they drove into plant gates. Most of them rode in cars with broken windshields and dented bodies, results of earlier violence in the 23-week-old strike.

One car arrived late at the north plant aftert he patrolmen had left. The two men riding in the auto said a mob of strikers tried to pull open the locked doors and as the car pulled away from them, smashed the windshield and a side window with a barrage of bricks.

The two workers identified themselves as Franklin D. Autry and Billy Earl Wilkins, 21, both of Stem in Granville County.

At the south plant, a striker grabbed a newsman's arm and pointed to a worker entering the doors about 100 yards away.

"See that" he exclaimed. "He's got a shotgun." However, highway patrol Lt. R. H. Chadwick said the long, slender object the worker carried was not a gun, but a baseball bat.

Payton has contended that under terms of the settlement, the strikers were to get most of the jobs on the second shift, which started Monday night, and the third shift when it is begun. Instead, said Payton, only about 30 strikers were hired for the second shift, the rest non-strikers.

The mills, struck since Nov. 17, have been operating on one shift since Feb. 16, and most of the dynamitings, brick-hurling and other violence has occurred since then.

The first shift went to their jobs without hindrance Wednesday while patrolmen and yelling strikers stood by. But Tuesday night the second shift had to leave under police guard while rifle shots whacked into their cars and puddles of burning gasoline lighted up the night. "That's just a sample," a woman shouted. "There'll be more tomorrow night."

No injuries have been reported during the current violence.

Student Legislature To Consider Eleven Bills At Meeting Tonight

When the Student Legislature convenes tonight for its second meeting this session, there will be 11 bills for their consideration.

The solons will meet at 7:30 p.m. in Phi Hall, 4th floor, New East.

Jim Crownover's (SP) bill to require each legislator to attend at least two meetings at each housing unit in his district will be considered.

At these meetings the solon would be required to (1) inform his constituents of what he is doing in Legislature, (2) inform them of what others are doing in Legislature and (3) give them an opportunity to ask questions and offer suggestions.

Crownover said yesterday, "My main purpose in introducing this bill is to help make it clear to all legislators that one of their chief responsibilities is to the people."

He feels the ultimate result that passage of the bill would bring about is the building up of better communications between the Legislature and the students.

Due to the misplacement of the by-laws of the University Club, Dave Jones (SP) introduced a bill last session to approve new by-laws which would go into effect with the swearing in of the University Club's 1959-60 officers.

Jones also introduced a bill last session to transfer $125 from the Daily Tar Heel profits to the DTH photography budget.

On behalf of the Traffic Advisory Commission, Bob Thompson (SP) presented a bill, which will be discussed tonight, to establish a Motor Vehicles Advisory Board.

Another bill for the Traffic Advisory Commission was presented last time by Bob Nobles (SP), to establish a Traffic and Safety Committee.

Thompson is the author of bill, on behalf of Erwin Fuller, for approval of the constitution of the Professional Interfraternity Council.

Jim Scott's (SP) bill to appropriate $275 to Alpha Phi Omega for expenses incurred during the staging of Parent's Day will be on the agenda.

Presented last session by Ed Cox, (SP) for the Traffic Advisory Commision, was a bill to establish a Student Traffic Court investigation staff.

Swag Grimsley and Tom Cordle (both SP) authored a bill, to be considered tonight, to approve the revised constitution and by-laws of the Student Council of the Consolidated University.

A bill to appropriate $167.50 to the Student Government executive office for the purchase of a typewriter, introduced by Crownover on behalf of the secretary of the student body, will also be on the agenda.

Jones' bill to amend the Legislature by-law to allow representatives to move from their districts and still retain their seats will be another bill before the solons tonight

IDC Honorary Society Taps 13 New Members Wednesday

A ceremony for the initiation of 13 new members into the IDC Honorary Society highlighted the Interdormitory Council meeting Wednesdar night in Phi Hall.

Before the names of the new members were announded, an inaugural address was delivered to the IDC by newly elected President Otto Funderburk. The other major item of business was the election of five member to the IDC Court.

In his inaugural address to the new members of the IDC, Funderburk mentioned six projects that the council would be mainly concerned with next year.

The projects included such items as the Dormitory Council courts and IDC Court, for which Funderburk called for continued emphasis. He also called for the expansion of the Coed Vising Agreement and the social program for dormitories in general.

Funderburk said the IDC should work for additional improvements of the intramural program and of the physical facilities of the dorms. A revision of the point system for the Outstanding Dorm Contest will be carried out, he said. And Funderburk also referred to a desired continuation of sending out roommate preference sheets to new students.

The council selected five members for the IDC Court at the Wednesday meeting. These new members are Larry Stacey, Lee Kittredge, Rowell Burleson, Tom Mehl and Jim Kinney.

Phil Edwards, who has served as social chairman of the IDC this year, asked the IDC members to urge students to attend the Spring Frolic dance and lawn party Friday night.

The dance will be held from 7:30 to 10:15 p.m. in the Smith Dormitory parking lot. At 10:30 p.m., Jimmy Capp will broadcast his "Our Best To You" radio program from under Davie Poplar.

By BOB GIBSON

Rex Harrison has recommended the Sound and Fury production, "Oh, Hellas!", as well worth seeing. Two presentations of the show will be held May 1 and 2 in Memorial Hal.

Harrison made favorable comments about the show when he dropped by for the Tuesday night rehearsal during one of his rather infrequent visits to Chapel Hill.

His prediction that he repeated during the rehearsal was that the show would be a success.

Because of previous committments, Harrison will not be able to be here for the presentation of "Oh, Hellas!" May 1 and 2. But he said, "Anyone who fails to see the show will be missing some terrific entertainment."

Tickets for the production go on sale Monday at Y Court and in Graham Memorial for 50 cents.

The production, under the direction of Joel Fleishman, is based on Aristophanes' "Lysistrata." Harrison said he was amused with the lines and lyrics of the UNC adaptation if the Greek comedy.

Harrison left Wednesday morning for his home in Carrboro, N. C., where he often has some difficulty when people confuse him with the start of "My Fair Lady." There is 'absolutely' no relation, he said.

Orientation Interviews Will Finish Up Tonight

Tonight is the last opportunity for prospective men's orientation counselors to be interviewed. The hours for interviews are from 7 to 10:30 in the Woodhouse Conference Room in Graham Memorial.

Tom Overman, men's orientation coordinator, has urged all men who have made application and not been interviewed to come at some time tonight.

Episcopalian Supper To Feature Spaghetti

Like spaghetti?

And Ed Crow's combo?

And what about the Arboretum?

A spaghetti supper will be served at the Episcopal Church parish house Sunday (in three different shifts) with atmosphere music by the Crow combo. And, of course, the Arboretum is right behind the parish house.

Tickets for the supper are being sold at the church for $1 or may be purchased at the door. The three meals will be served from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Twenty-Five Drama Groups In Competition

The 36th annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association will be held today through Saturday in The Playmakers Theatre, with The Carolina Playmakers acting as hosts.

Twenty-five drama - producing organizations from throughout the state are expected to present productions and compete for honors. The represent high schools, colleges and little theatres.

As a special feature of the annual conference, the Playmakers will present Lee Simonson, noted New York scene designer and theatre historian, in a talk in the Playmakers Theatre Saturday at 10 a.m. Simonson will remain with the UNC Department of Dramatic Art as guest lecturer for two weeks after the C.D.A. festival.

The three-day festival meeting will include a series of plays presented by the drama groups, all of which are winners of district festivals held earlier this month.

The program today opens at 2:40 p.m. with the presentation of three plays by city high schools: "Before the Bullfight" from Durham, "These Doggone Elections" from Kannapolis, and "Genesis," also from Durham.

This evening at 7:30, three college groups will appear. Wingate College will present "Mooney's Kid Don't Cry;" Mars Hill College, "Electra;" and Wilmington College, "Give Us Time to Sing."

Admission to each session is 35c. Tickets will be available in the Greenroom of The Playmakers Theatre.

GMAB Banquet

New officers and committee chairmen of Graham Memorial Activities Board will be installed tonight at 6 o'clock in a special banquet at the Carolina Inn Ballroom.

Angus Duff, president; Tony Salinger, vice president, and Jean Blakenship, secretary will officially take office tonight as will the new GMAB committee chairman.

Officers Nominated For University Club

Officers for the coming year were nominated by the University Club Tuesday night.

Mike Deutsch and Dave Jones were nominated for president; Bill Edison and Jim Mangum were nominated for vice president; April Longanecker was nominated for secretary and Al Smithson was nominated for treasurer.

These candidates will be voted on by the University Club at the next meeting Tuesday night. Nominations are not closed and any club member who is interested in serving in one of the ofices may seek a nomination Tuesday.

Officers elected will begin their terms May 1 and will serve for one year. They will be governed by the club's new by-laws, now under consideration by the Student Legislature.

State College To Be Host To Democrats

The second annual state-wide rally of College Young Democratic Clubs will be held in the College Union Building at N. C. State College this weekend.

Highlights of the program, announced by Jimmy Hunt, state vice president, will include a reception by Gov. and Mrs. Luther Hodges at governor's mansion Saturday at 3:30 p.m.; speeches by some of the state's leading Democrats; movies about the founding of the Democratic party; a panel discussion of the question: "Why A Democrat?;" and a banquet attended by the Council of State and other prominent leaders.

Registration fee for the rally will be $2.50. The program begins Friday at 2 p.m. All members of the UNC YDC have been urged to attend. About 15 North Carolina colleges will be represented.

Jane C. Gray Award To Be Given Sunday

Kappa Delta Sorority will present the Jane Craige Gray Award to an outstanding junior girl Sunday afternoon.

The annual award, given in memory of the late Mrs. Gordon Gray, wife of a former president of the Consolidated University, will be presented at a reception in Graham Memorial Lounge.

The award is based on character, scholarship and leadership. A committee composed of members of the administration and campus officers has selected the recipient. The winner's identity will be kept secret until Sunday.

At the presentation, Dean Katherine Carmichael will speak on the significance of the award to the campus, and former Chancellor R. B. House will pay tribute to the late Mrs. Gray and present the award to the winner. Members of the Gray family from Winston-Salem are expected to attend.

Two More Days For Interviews

Just two more days . . .

Friday will be the last day for YMCA interviews for cabinet posts, according to Jack Raper, YMCA president.

Fourteen cabinet positions in various areas are open for the coming year Raper said.

Students may sign for interviews in the lobby of the Y. Information concerning the various cabinet areas is available in the Y also.

New Staff Members Announced By Young

Daily Tar Heel Editor Davis B. Young anncunced several staff changes Wednesday.

Ed Riner has been moved from managing editor to his old position of assistant news editor "to give him the experience to allow him to take over as news editor in the fall."

Harold O'Tuel will no longer be serving as co-associate editor due to increased work with the Publications Board. Young said, "O'Tuel will however, be of great value to us as chairman of that group. He has by no means withdrawn his affiliations with the paper."

In place of Riner, a new co-managing editor has been added. He is Chuck Ross of Kingsport, Tenn. Ross will be working with Ron Shumate in this capacity. Frank Crowther will be a single associate editor.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary Wednesday included:

Court Term

A calendar of 110 cases has been scheduled for trial at a criminal term of Orange County Superior Court in Hillsboro next week.

MONOGRAM CLUB

The Monogram Club will meet tonight at 7 o'clock to elect officers for the coming year. All club members are asked to be present at this meeting.

New Bills For Student Solons

There are two bills confronting the Student Legislature which should be passed. The first of these is a bill to make meetings of all legislators with their constituents compulsory. The second deals with a bill to transfer one hundred and twenty-five dollars from Daily Tar Heel profits to the Daily Tar Heel photography budget.

For far too long, members of that august body—the Student Legislature—have shirked their responsibilities to the people in their respective districts who have elected them. For anyone who has never run for a seat in the Student Legislature, let the editor quickly run through the routine.

You are nominated by a party, usually by acclamation. Three nights before the election, you set out through your respective district to shake hands with the voters. Usually, you are running in a district where one party or the other is sure of winning, regardless of the extent of your back slapping.

Then comes that wonderful Tuesday when you win your way into the exclusive club, which meets once a week on the fourth floor of New East. If you are a typical member, these once a week meetings end your responsibilities as a legislator.

You sit in the session each Thursday night, let someone like Charlie Gray or Jim Crownover introduce all the bills, never take part in debate, know little about the issues confronting the Legislature, vote in a block, go downtown after the meeting for a coke and head home. Surely, this is a typical week for a typical legislator.

Now, we see in Representative Crownover's bill, a chance to overcome this pervailing attitude. In requiring members of the Student Legislature to attend dorm, sorority and fraternity gatherings at least twice a semester, the campus politicos are finally forced to report to the people.

And so gentlemen (members of the Student Legislature) maybe you will be wise and impose this added responsibility on yourselves. And maybe you will not. The choice is yours. If you choose correctly, you will prove early in the session that this Student Legislature will be superior to the ones in the past.

The second bill is to transfer one hundred and twenty-five dollars from advertising to The Daily Tar Heel photography budget. At the present time, all of the photography budget has been used. At the same time, the paper is perpared to turn over a considerable sum to Student Government at the end of the year, money gathered from extensive advertising campaigns.

It seems only logical that the paper should be allowed to take one hundred and twenty-five dollars of this money and put it on photographs for the rest of the year. Unless this is done, we face the unfortunate possibility of printing no photos, or using perhaps, the same ones every day.

And so for a good start, this new Student Legislature can pass both of these measures.

On Dorm Social Fees

Editor:

In reply to Representative Don Dotson's letter published in the Daily Tar Heel on Sunday, April 18.

Yes, Mr. Dotson, you did speak in opposition to a bill in legislature on Thursday night, however, apparently you were not aware of what you were speaking against. You were not opposing social and activity fees, nor were you upholding the rights of minorities.

Actually you were impinging upon them for the bill was not one which would authorize the Women's Residence Council to collect social and activity fees. The title of the bill was "A bill to authorize a referendum of women dormitory residents concerning the collection of social and activity fes." Only the women students of the university can give W. R. C. the power to manage their social and activity fees.

This bill is giving the women dormitory residents the right to speak for what they want through a referendum. This is giving them the opportunity to have the last word. Nothing is being carried on behind their backs. Their voices will be heard.

These fees have been traditional as have the men's fees. All that W. R. C. is seeking to establish is what the men have had for a number of years. Since the constitutionality of the fees was challenged, W. R. C. wants the women students to have the opportunity to decide just what they want in conjunction with their dorm life.

Preceding the referendum small discussion groups led by members of the dormitory administration concerning the advantages and disadvantages of having such fees, proper amounts to be collected and methods of collecting the fees, will be held.

The minorities and majorities will be heard through four channels: Their discussion groups, their dormitory administration which consists of their dormitory officers, their representatives-at-large to the W. R. C. and their vote which will constitute the final decision.

Can you think of a more fair way in which to learn their desires? The Women's Residence Council exists for the women students—for the betterment of their welfare and social code. It tries to anticipate the needs of the coeds and to work to the best alleviation of those needs.

The Women's Residence Council feels that it is unfair to impose a social and activity fee upon the women if it is not desired and if there is no need for it.

It is up to the women of this university to determine their desire and need for these fees. For this reason, W. R. C. is authorized to call a referendum of the women students. So, Mr. Dotson, the minorities can speak and their opinions and ideas will be given utmost consideration.

Kay Boortz, Chairman
Women's Residence Council

Letter From Sonny Evans

Curtis Gans:

I intentionally waited until after the selection of your successor to write this letter, since I knew you too well to think that it would have been published otherwise.

You chose for yourself, a difficult role this past year, and thus dismissed all of the plaudits and adulation that come from pursuing the bubble of popularity and empty honors. The caliber of writing in your editorials has been better than I ever remember; your coverage of the fall elections gave those elections a substance they never knew before; and your critical and outspoken comments in support of your beliefs have caused reevaluations all over the campus.

The Daily Tar Heel has never made greater contributions as an active participant and partner in campus affairs than this year, and you are to be congratulated.

Eli (Sonny) Evans
Student Body President 1957-58

(This letter from Sonny Evans, although addressed to former Editor Curtis Gans, was given to the present editor by an independent party and meant for publication. Ed.)

"Tell You What — Let's Offer To Guarantee As Much Democracy As They Have In The Capital Of The U. S."

Neither Black Nor White;

Mostly Shades Of Gray

Norman B. Smith

The discussion turned, as it often does, to nuclear warfare. First, it was pointed out that hydrogen bombs can be made of such immense capacity that one would be capable of destroying most of New York City's eight millions. Someone else mentioned the devestating effects that nuclear fall-out can have, how a bomb dropped on New Yory City under optimum wind conditions would spread a cigar-shaped pattern of death as far as Washington, D. C., snuffing out a great percentage of the lives along our densely populated eastern seaboard.

The increasing incidence of delterious mutations was mentioned: there was news of freak birth recently recorded in some of the northern United States test fall-out areas and of dire predictions made by scientists who resigned in disgust from high ranking government positions. Then there were hints of the manufacture of a cobalt bomb, a lethal weapon which would transform by ionization its normally harmless shell of cobalt into an element so noxious that every living thing on the earth would perish in a short time.

"But the death," said one, "how could it be worse? First your hair falls out, and your skin dries and scales. You have dysentary and you are nauseated. Your blood vessals rupture under your skin. Your digestive tract is a mass of ulceration. Every inch of your body writhes in a contortion of pain. I have heard that the government is stocking cyanide so that death can be more merciful if there is wholesale nuclear contamination."

"I'll tell you what could be worse," said another. "To live could be worse. You battle leukemia; liver malfunction keeps you in constant agony. You live to see your children being born with two heads or four arms or no legs or three eyes or God knows what else."

By this time the group of boys lounging in the dormitory room late on that Friday night had begun to dwindle. It was three o'clock now and the wind blew more gustily outside, sending little bursts of the chill spring rain in through the half-open window to re-soak the drying socks on the radiator. The street light steadily illuminated the dripping, still bare tree twigs just above it with a half-pale, half-cobweb effect. Suddenly a lance of lightening drazzled on the grass (Marchly turning pale green) below; it was followed by a too-near clap of thunder . . . . the first electric storm of the year. Then the lights went out.

George, his roommate, now the only one left said, "Maybe this is symbolic, the lights going out, I mean. Maybe the lights will go out before long, the lights of civilization, or — why not? — the lights of life.

"Science, the thing that we all believed in, and we still do — there's no question about it: science is our god — this thing we believe in is leading us to our own destruction. We finally learned how to annihilate ourselves in a ridiculously simple way, and someone is going to be so fascinated with the idea or afraid that someone else is, that he will push the button and that will be it. Or maybe this about pushing the panic button.) Well, someone will push the button and thatwil l be it. Or maybe this slow business of accumulated radiation and mutation and that sort of thing will be what gets us."

"You're right, I think," he replied. "The cycles have all run out on us."

"The cycles?"

"Yes. Take, for example, the art cycle. My art teacher was remarking the other day that painting is all through. It has run the gambit of expression, form, and everything else until now there is no place left for it to go. He spoke of other art forms taking the place of painting, but he didn't sound very sincere. Painting has been with us since the dawn of man's intelligence, you know. Or look at literature. The new movement is obviously being led by the beat generation. Everyone has been waiting for it to find a direction, but it hasn't yet. Do you know what I think? There is no direction left. Literature has done everything it can. When you look back, you find that it has been only variations on a theme anyway, the theme of Socrates (who certainly plagirized it from some pre-Socratic philosopher). And people have run out of variations on the theme. The cycles are all ending — politics, economics, religion, music, anything you want to analyze. With deadly precision the end is coming."

One talks strangely late at night . . . when the winds and rains of the Ides of March are probing blindly around outside and when an isolated burst of lightening has disabled the electrical circuits. Next morning the sun was shining, there were barely perceptable buds on the tree that had been lit up in bizarre nakedness under the street light, and they went to classes.

Last Part Of Gray's Speech

(This is the third and final part of Charlie Gray's inaugural address to the Student Legislature a week ago tonight. Ed.)

It is the duty of the president of the student body to see that all organizations meet the responsibility that they owe to the campus. This I will do—from the largest to the smallest subsidery organization.

Responsible student government is a necessity. Student government should also offer it's assistance in helping independent student groups, such as the YMCA, Di and Phi, IFC, and others, to accomplish their planned objectives when these objectives will add to the betterment of the campus.

The traffic problem at Carolina is becoming increasingly acute as our university grows in size. More student control and enforcement of our present traffic rules would make the students more aware of the seriousness of this situation. A strong traffic committe with the power to fine, and to study solutions to the many parking problems is a long-needed organization on this campus.

A written policy from the administration stating the amount of control student government has over its employees has been necessitated by the recent state move to reclassify all state employees. It is our hope that student government will be allowed to retain its present autonomy in this field. A definite cut policy should also be presented to the students—one that in no way restricts the students to less than three cuts per class. A more unified and more liberal set of drinking rules is also badly needed.

Probably the biggest obstacle that student government will face all year is the acquisition of a new student union. We all realize the tremendous need for such a building here at Carolina.

A fully equipped union would be the educational and social center of the campus and in itself would alleviate many of the problems that exist at the present time. Only through student pressure has the union been raised to its present priority rating.

We must continue this pressure. If we fail to receive the union through state funds, I plan to investigate all possible ways of obtaining the needed funds to begin construction as soon as possible. There are many ways to approach this goal, only deep study will reveal the most effective way.

I have only mentioned some of the present needs and aim of my administration. Many, many more will surely arise in the coming months. I have high hopes for a progressive, responsible student government.

Continuation Of Tice Letter

(This is the second part of three of Mr. Tice's letter which The Daily Tar Heel is running. Ed.)

Editor:

I have said that from the point of view of the immediate needs of the student body The Quarterly should function as encouragement to those individuals who have the capacity to do good work.

That it should also "represent" this student body is so totally ambiguous that it shall take a bit of untangling to get at what is meant by this term. If by 'represent' our critics mean something as complex and diverse as "student opinion" then my only reply is that perhaps the only realistic place for such an operation is in the field of reporting or polls of various varieties.

Granting the absurdity of this, I take it that what is meant by representing the students of the University has something to do with the percentage of actual student work appearing in the magazine.

If this be the objection I should require the reader to look at the magazine for this year and past years for the purpose of tabulating just what percentage of the space in the magazine is taken up by work done by members of this university. Again I should imagine that unless there is a feeling that only student work is what The Quarterly ought to publish, that the percentage would be reasonable and impressive. If by 'represent' is meant the work both editorial and literary accomplished by some capable students at the University (who can and ought at the same time to be supported by the student body as a whole), then I should think this function is properly conceived. What would it mean to have an editorial policy for The Quarterly which would reflect student opinion. Certainly this has nothing to do with the aesthetic ideas by which the editors make their choices.

It is because of the necessity for some sophistication along such lines that the editor is chosen not by the students but by a board of experienced writers, teachers, and publishers who have some understanding of such technical problems in making their selection.

I would like to suggest that the disgruntlement that many students feel with respect to the editorial policy of The Quarterly, arises from the confused feeling that The Quarterly is serving an ambiguous function instead of a dual one. It is this dual role (however inadequately articulated and inacted) that The Quarterly has held to in the past and continues to contain this year within its tradition. This brings me to the second point of view which I feel is an important one from which to understand The Quarterly's function.

The Carolina Quarterly's overriding editorial policy rests on just this principle: That artistic creation of merit is something that ought to be made available to the culture in which we live, that artistic excellence in any form is both a good thing considered by itself, and further that it is one of the most effective means of helping any person understand himself and the complexities of the world he inhabits.

It is because of this committment that our policy of publishing the best work available to us has become what I hope is a tradition. Naturally, there are many who feel that the quality is either not worthy of publication (which I consider absurd, and in defense would again refer the reader to the publication) or, more significantly, not worthy of this university.

With respect to the latter charge I can only say that considering the history of The Quarterly, the progress it has made is commendable. One of the hindrances to any further progress than has been made is for the most part a result of vested interest (either on the part of editors or influential students exterior to the magazine), or a confusion with respect to the dual vis a vis the so-called ambiguous function of the magazine. What I am trying to suggest is that what I have stated as a double purpose does not mean that these purposes are opposed or contradictory. In fact, the first one is a direct consequence of the second.

Tennis Team Seeks Seventh Straight Win

By JOHN JUSTICE

The Tar Heel netters will be looking for their eighth win of the season today, weather permitting, when they travel to Davidson to meet the Wildcats.

In a previous match in Chapel Hill, Carolina had little trouble with their Southern Conference opponent, downing them 9-0. In that match the Tar Heels lost only one set in the entire match.

Coach Don Skakle's chargers are riding a six match winning streak going into today's match. The overall team record is 7-3. Sophomore Bruce Sylvia and junior Ben Keys are leading the squad with nine wins each. Keys has won nine straight matches after a loss to an Illinois man in the opening contest back in March.

Captain Geoff Black defeated the Wildcats' number one man, Semi Mintz, 6-0, 6-1, in the match played April 10. The only Tar Heel to have much trouble on that day was Marshall Happer, a junior from Kinston, who was extended to 14 games in the first set before he overpowered Dick Hodel, 14-12, 6-1.

Indians Beat Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — The rampaging Cleveland Indians tied together Gary Bell's tight pitching and plenty of long-ball power for a 10-1 trouncing of the Detroit Tigers Wednesday.

Jim Piersall drove across four runs with a home run and a single, Rocky Colavito batted in three more with a homer and rookie Gene Leek added a two-run round-tripper as the first place Indians stunned the power-poor Tigers with their eighth loss in nine games.

Frosh Beat Deacs, 6-2

By C. J. Underwood

Ron Miller provided the offensive spark for the Carolina freshmen Tuesday afternoon in Winston-Salem as the Tar Babies downed the Wake Forest frosh 6-2.

Miller, a big 6-4 outfielder who swings from the left side, gave the frosh all the runs they needed when, in the third inning, he clubbed a grand-slam circuit clout over the distant left field wall. Figuring this might not be enough, Miller greeted Wake pitcher Don Roth with another one as leadoff batter in the seventh, this one a high drive over the right field fence.

Meanwhile, frosh hurler Jerry Carpenter had the Deaclets handcuffed with a mixture of accurate curves and fast balls. An error in the sixth led to the only run chalked up against Carpenter. The Deaclets added one more in the seventh off reliefer Nick Warren.

A game scheduled for yesterday afternoon with Campbell Junior College had to be postponed because of inclement weather. The frosh will be seeking their third Big Four win in four starts when they return to action next Tuesday here against the Duke Blue Imps.

Cards Top Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Alex Grammas, Gino Cimoli and Curt Flood hit homers Wednesday as the St. Louis Cardinals, behind the five hit pitching of Vinegar Bend Mizell, defeated Chicago 8-2.

It was the third complete game for Mizell. Grammas had not hit a homer since Sept. 8, 1955.

Grammas drove a pitch by Taylor Phillips into the left field seats with two out in the second for the first run. The 32-year-old shortstop then hit two sacrifice flines and a squeeze play bunt for three more runs batted in.

Cimoli had three hits, including a ninth inning homer.

N. C. Symphony Orchestra Plays Brahms' In Memorial Hall Tonight

Two concerts will be played in Memorial Auditorium on the University campus today by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Benjamin Swalin, director of the Orchestra.

At 2 p.m. the elementary school children of Chapel Hill will assemble for their annual concert, which will include numbers by Schubert, Rimsky-Korsakov, and others. Some of the children will accompany the Orchestra in playing Schubert's Sanctus, which all of them will sing. Jimmy Carter, 15-year-old violinist from Salisbury, will appear as soloist in the Viotti Concerto 23 in G major.

At 8:30 in the evening the concert program for adults and any children who wish to come will open with the Handel Overture to the Royal Fireworks, in observance of the bicnetennial of George Frederic Handel (1685-1759). A principal feature of the program will be the Paganini- Wilhelmj Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D major, in which Miss Elaine Skorodin will be presented as soloist. Dr. Jan Schinhan's 'Fastasy for Orchestra,' the 1959 Benjamin Award composition, will be played, preceding the Rimsky-Korsakov 'Overture' to "The Russian Easter." The Symphony No. III, Opus 90, which is not often heard, is an interesting program number. This is the 14th successive state-wide tour of the Orchestra, in which more than 100 concerts are given each season.

Miss Elaine Skorodin, talented young violinist from Chicago, will also appear in Memorial Auditorium. Since the age of 10, when she first appeared as soloist in a Young People's concert of the Chicago Symphony, Miss Skorodin has made many important orchestral appearances, and has recently played with outstanding success at Town Hall, New York, Orchestra Hall, Chicago, and in Washington, D. C.

Dieticians Meet, Feast

By WILLIAM TUNSTALL

Have you ever wondered what dieticians eat when they meet?

According to Miss Frances Floore, catering dietician at the Carolina Inn, dieticians are no different from you and me.

When the executive board of the N. C. Dietetic Association meet on April 30th at the Carolina Inn this will be their menu for the evening dinner:

Tomato soup with whip cream and chives.

Danish Lobster with melted butter.

Stuffed baked potatoes.

Broccoli with almond.

Citrus and avocado salad with clear French dressing.

Pecan and butterhorn rolls.

Beverage (Iced tea or coffee)

Baked Alaska with strawberries.

The occasion is the annual spring meeting of the North Carolina Dietitic Association, which will be meeting in Chapel Hill at the Carolina Inn, Thursday and Friday, April 30 and May 1.

Dramatic Associations Give Ten Performances

As part of the Carolina Dramatic Association's 36th annual festival, ten plays by high school and college groups will be presented in the Playmakers Theatre today.

Admission to the events is 35 cents.

Performances are scheduled as follows:

9:30 a.m. — The Durham Theatre Guild: "Lord Byron's Letters."

E. K. Powe Junior High School, Durham: "The Bishop's Candlesticks"

West Jefferson High School: "Judgment Comes to Dan'l"

2 p.m. — Goldsboro: "Forgotten Land"

Charlotte: "Escape by Moonlight"

Kannapolis: "The Maker of Dreams"

Wilmington: "The Dancers"

7:30 p.m. — Elon College: "The Breaking of Bread"

Appalachian State Teachers College: "I Rise in Flames, Cried the Phoenix"

Appalachian State Teachers College: "Lithuania."

Awards For Excellence To Be Presented Friday

Awards for excellence in undergraduate teaching will be presented to UNC faculty members Friday at 4 p.m. in Carroll Hall during the semi-annual meeting of the general faculty.

The winners of the Lola Spencer and Simpson Bob Turner Memorial Awards for teaching will be announced by Dr. Williams Wells, chairman of the faculty.

In addition to the awards, memorials for the late Profs. W. E. Rosenstengel and E. T. Browns will be read at the meeting.

A report on the present state of UNC budget requests will be made by Dr. James L. Godfrey, dean of the faculty. Other reports will be given by Prof. Sterling A. Stoudenmire on the current building program and by Dr. John Carr on the new 1105 Univac Computer to be installed in the Phillips Hall addition.

All teaching personnel in the University have been urged to attend this meeting.

Delta Sigma Pi Elects Bolick

Ted Bolick, rising senior from Hudson, was re-elected headmaster of Alpha Lambda chapter of Delta Sigma Pi at the business meeting Wednesday night. Bolick has served as headmaster since January.

Sam Hummel, senior warden at present, was also renamed to serve in that capacity for the coming year.

Other new officers are Bill Floyd, junior warden; Ed Cox, scribe; James Berry, treasurer; John Boles, historian; and Erwin Fuller, chancellor. Bolick was also named by the chapter membership as its official delegate to the 22nd Grand Chapter Congress of the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi. The congress will be held Aug. 30 through Sept. 1 in Oxford, Ohio.

Methodist's Meet

Six hundred youths, adult counselors and pastors, representing more than 85 churches in five counties, are expected here Sunday for the Durham District Methodist Youth Fellowship Rally at the University Methodist Church.

Rev. Charles S. Hubbard will speak the first day on "In Word and In Deed," the over-all rally theme.

Jim Long, UNC student and former N. C. Conference MYF president, will discuss "Personal Christian Living" for the high school students.

Panhellenic Council Forms New Committee

At the regular meeting April 22 of the Panhellenic Council, plans were made to form a committee composed of Dean Katherine Carmichael and Panhel representatives.

The committee would discuss special sorority problems on campus such as transfer members and membership problems.

Monday night, April 27, 7:30-9:30 p.m., there will be a fashion show in the State College Student Union for college and high school girls. Four UNC coeds will attend to answer questions concerning campus and sorority life at Carolina.

Next year, the seven sororities will pay board for a German exchange coed on the Goettengen Scholarship.

GMAB Lauds Carter As Devoted President

By EDWARD NEAL RINER

Bob Carter, GMAB president 1958-59, was honored Thursday night for being the student who has "done more then any one else to promote student activities."

Carter was presented an engraved desk pen set for his "unselfish devotion to student activities" by Graham Memorial Activities Board during their annual installation banquet at the Carolina Inn Ballroom.

Angus Duff, GMAB president 1959-60, made the presentation. He also said that Carter has always worked for Carolina Students.

"I am deeply humble," Carter said on acceptance, and then he thanked everyone for their aid during the year.

Earlier in the evening, Carter welcomed special guests, the board of directors, and old and new officers and committee chairmen. He said that with this selection of students things "were looking better for student union programing."

He named Howard Henry, director of Graham Memorial, as a big asset to the student union. Under the direction of Henry and the students he said Graham Memorial had started "snowballing for better organization and programming."

Gerald Erdahl, director of the N. C. State College Union, was the guest speaker. Erdahl emphasized the role of the student union and the university in preparing a person for citizenship.

He called the union a "lab in citizenship" because of its cultural, social and recreational programming.

Angus Duff, concluding the program, expressed his hope for a successful year with the purpose to make the potential GMAB the real GMAB.

Robinson Announces Resignation; Ed Levy To Head 1960 Symposium

IT'S A SCREAM—That's Nancy Aubrey screaming in the Sound and Fury production of "Oh Hellas" to be presented Friday and Saturday nights, May 1-2, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Holding Nancy up and playing in the student written and produced musical-comedy are (left to right) Mary Margaret Brown, Joan Brooks, Ann Rountree, and Sandy Regine. The price is fifty cents, and tickets are on sale at Graham Memorial and at the Y.

Robinson's resignation was accepted by the General Symposium Committee at a meeting Thursday afternoon. Levy was unanimously elected chairman at the same meeting.

Robinson told the committee he was resigning for academic reasons. He said he realized the demands of the position when he accepted the chairmanship earlier this year.

"After working with the Symposium during the last two months, however, I realize that my interest in doing a creditable job in preparing for my career has limited my effectiveness as Symposium chairman and that I must choose between these two major fields of interest," he said.

"This decision," Robinson said, "has been extremely difficult."

He expressed his willingness to assist in the work of the Symposium even though he could not continue to serve as chairman.

Levy said he was sorry Robinson had to resign. Robinson said he believed Levy would do an "excellent job in carrying out the program, which, to a great extent, is the product of his time and effort."

Levy, who has served as vice chairman in charge of the Program Committee, was optimistic over plans for the 1960 Symposium, which will feature prominent persons in various fields speaking on aspects of the overall theme, "The Image of Man: The Individual in an Accelerated Culture."

"What we've planned thus far for the Symposium has tremendous potential for capturing the interests of the campus because the program is of sufficient depth and scope to be both provocative and challenging," Levy said.

He further commented that the "potential can be realized only if a great number of dedicated people are willing to put forth the necessary effort. My hope is that the Symposium will realize its full potential."

Since the work of the Program Committee has almost been completed, Levy said he might not appoint another person to fill his former position as vice chairman in charge of the committee. The committee, he said, has no function after choosing the program and selecting speakers.

"Oh Hellas" Ticket Sale Begins Today At G. M. & Y

Tickets are now on sale in Graham Memorial and the Y for "Oh Hellas," Sound and Fury's 1959 production to be held in Memorial Hall Friday and Saturday, May 1-2 at 8 p.m.

The musical-comedy, written by Carl Bridgers and Lew Hardy and based on the Aristophanes' comedy "Lysistrata," stars Jane Newsom and Al Miller in the leading roles of Lysistrata and Lycon.

Miss Newsom, currently one of the contestants for Miss Chapel Hill and a member of the Yack Beauty Court, is a junior voice major from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

A newcomer to the acting world, Miller hails from New Rochelle, N. Y., is a freshman and a member of the Orientation Committee.

Providing the backbone of the comedy are Susie Cordon, Nancy Aubrey, Bill Monell and Frank Beaver in the roles of Lampito, Calonika, Demetrius and Prominus, respectively.

Also in leading roles are Jane Durham as Myrrhina, Sandy Regenie as Arthritis, Paul Burroughs as the messenger, and Robert Williams as the Spartan.

Coming in triplets are three Athenian women and three Athenian men played by Ann Rountree, Mary Margaret Brown, Jane Brooks, Curtis Russell, Joseph Holbrook and Roy Weaver, respectively.

The play is directed by Joel Fleishman, law student and graduate student in Dramatic Art and is produced by Al Salley, an Air Force veteran who is currently majoring in business as a preparation for law school.

Chuck Cushman is the play's stage manager. Business manager for Sound and Fury is Jack Mitchell.

Tickets for the play are 50c per person.

Want To Be A Cheerleader

Interested in becoming a cheerleader?

Present members of the cheerleader squad will be in Woollen Gym lobby Friday between 2 and 4 p.m. to take the names and classes of students who want to try-out.

Head cheerleader Graham said any student down more than two quality points is not eligible for the squad.

Practices will be held April 27 through April 30. These practices are not compulsory, but interested persons have been strongly advised to attend. At these practices three cheers will be taught, and ability to learn these cheers is a major basis of final selection.

Final selection of women cheerleaders will be Friday, May 1, beginning at 2 p.m., and final selection for men cheerleaders has been tentatively set for the same afternoon.

Beauty Pageant Tonight

Joe Stewart is included among the Carolina students who will entertain for the Miss Chapel Hill Pageant tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Chapel Hill High School.

Joe Stewart, who toured with the Air Force for four years and has worked in night clubs throughout the country, will also entertain with one of his night club acts. Stewart is a first year dental student.

Mrs. Kemp Stagg, finalist in the Miss World and Miss America contests three years ago, will direct the pagent. The former Mary Kemp Griffin, Mrs. Stagg also received the honor of being runner-up in the Miss USA contest.

Seven UNC coeds are competing for the title of Miss Chapel Hill. They are Clara Tucker, Ann Lucas, Patricia Wilson, Faye Gooch, Beverly Baily, Carol Carruthers and Jane Newsom.

Diana Johnson, who has been Miss Chapel Hill this year, will crown her successor.

Carmichael To Speak May 3rd

Consolidated University Vice President William D. Carmichael will be the featured speaker during UNC Parents Day on May 3. A band concert is also being planned.

Letters will be sent to all parents of all freshmen in the University, inviting them to attend. Alpha Phi Omega's Parents Day Chairman Larry Haver has indicated that "funds were insufficient to send letters to each student's parents as we had hoped."

Hayer, speaking for the fraternity, has urged each student to extend his parents a special invitation to come to Chapel Hill May 30.

Last year about 1000 parents took the opportunity to visit the campus according to past APO president Harold Johnson.

This year the IDC will hold an open house in Parker Dormitory, serving refreshments to the visitors all afternoon. All other dorms and fraternities will be open to visiting parents during the afternoon hours.

The Naval ROTC unit is planning an exhibit of arms and equipment on the floor of the Naval Armory. The Air Force unit is planning a reception for the parents of its members.

Exhibits will be displayed in most of the University's departments and the usual ones at Ackland Art Center, the Morehead Building and the Library will be open.

Sunday evening the Sound and Fury production will be staged. Also the Planetarium will feature "Color in the Sky." The various organizations of college students at the Chapel Hill churches will also have suppers and programs appropriate to the occasion.

The event is being planned by Alpha Phi Omega, Carolina's only service fraternity. APO brothers will man information booths and officiate at the band concert and speech of Vice President Carmichael.

Spring Frolic Swings Tonight

IDC's Spring Frolic starts swinging tonight.

Providing the starts are shining tonight the dance will be in the Smith Dormitory parking lot with music furnished by the Globes Combo 7:30-10:15 p.m.

In case of rain the frolic will be in the Tin Can.

The lawn party will be 10:30 p.m. through midnight at McCorkle Place.

Jimmy Capps will broadcast WPTF's "Our Best to You" at this time from the Davie Poplar. Also on the program will be Jim Talley with the Shades.

The IDC said that the dress for the evening would be casual.

Refreshments will be served by the Carolina Women's Council and the House Committee of Graham Memorial. Jackie Arnette and Dave Mincey are in charge of the free food.

INFIRMARY

NO. 1 DTH INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Referendum- Yes Vote No

There is an important referendum which will be voted on by women students this Tuesday. Although we seriously doubt the wisdom of making a decision involving social fees in this manner, we are nevertheless anxious to see the barometer of feelings on this touchy issue, registered next Tuesday.

The remaining days before the vote will see meetings in all of the women's dorms — the purpose of these gatherings being a discussion of the merits of this social fee. We urge women students on this campus to follow the proceedings of these meetings with the closest of their attention.

As you decide the stand you will take on Tuesday, consider whether a majority can in this case, speak for all concerned. If three fourths of the women vote for this social fee, do the other twenty-five percent have to pay also? If they do, this is a violation of their rights. We strenuously object to any person being forced to pay his or her money to a fund which will spend its money on some of the unnecessary objects and projects that social fees buy each year.

It is the same question as Athletic Passbooks. Should a student who doesn't believe in or enjoy big time athletics be forced to support them against his will? Once again, we say no.

Keep these questions in mind. Remember the rights of individuals must be guarded.

Appropriation & Restoration

In an editorial which recently appeared in this paper, we praised the work of two student groups — the Finance Committee chaired by Gordon Street and the Budget Committee headed by Charlie Gray. We praised them on two points, the thoroughness of their work and the ease with which it was passed by the Student Legislature.

However, we now take issue with specific appropriations. We feel that funds were unnecessarily cut from several organizations, and equally unnecessarily added to others.

We would like to know the following things: Why was the National Student Association appropriations cut from $1,245.00 to $850.00? Why was the Forensic Council cut from $320.00 to $175.00? Why was the Intercollegiate Debate Squad cut from $825.00 to $100.00? Why was the Graduate Club cut from $1200.00 to $150.00?

On the first of these, the one concerning the NSA, it now appears that money has been appropriated to send only eight students to the Congress plus Student Body President Charlie Gray, who is already payed for out of another fund. This makes a total of nine leaving us three short of a full delegation of twelve. At $80.00 a person, the Legislature should appropriate $240.00 more to send the three needed additional representatives. This University should always have a full delegation at an event of such importance.

It seems a little absurd that the Forensic Council and the Intercollegiate Debate Squad should be cut so drastically. The Forensic Council received only 1/4 of the total requested for speakers. And the debate squad will now be greatly limited as to the amount of tournaments it can compete in during the coming year.

The last, cutting the Graduate Club account from $1200.00 to $150.00, is the worst of all. This is the only organization for grad students, which gives them a chance to gather as a group. To hack 90% off their request, leaves them powerless to seek speakers and to sponsor the type of programs that they should have. The undergraduate politicians should remember that this campus belongs to the graduate STUDENTS as well.

It is a most ominous trend that so much has been taken from groups that pursue more intellectual goals, and so much given to areas covering social aspects. It should be remembered, that we have come here for an education, not a social cocktail.

Maybe, as some of the more worthwhile programs deteriorate in the coming year, the Student Legislature will realize its mistake. And maybe, it will recitfy it immediately. It is far from too late.

But, when everything is pointed towards a big dance, and all is taken away from the deserving groups, this University is no longer a university. It is then, merely a school.

Iron Curtain On The Stage

Cynthia Bivins

Russia's surprise invasion of New York took a particularly delightful form last Thursday when the Bolshoi Ballet from Moscow took over the Metropolitan Opera House. Opening their brief season with "Romeo and Juliet," they left this nation gaping at this new form of propaganda. Using such an art form as propaganda seems a sacrilege, but the Russians apparently aren't sentimental. This group is their showpiece for the world—mighty and expensive, and those are adjectives which every American understands.

This magnificent effort thrives under a twelve million dollar budget while the "Met," which now houses the Russian group, works with six million. Thus, with no real economic problems, the Bolshoi presents ballets in their entirety, thereby taking a dim view of shortened versions of the classics. The problem of costumes is actually no real problem in the Bolshoi Theater, either, for if eight hundred costumes are needed, then eight hundred costumes are used. The Bolshoi surrounds itself with forty tons of scenery, and Americans have never done this, even on their own ballet stages.

The top stars in the Bolshoi Ballet receive personal rewards, wholly out of tune with the remaining Russian salaries. Prima ballerina Galina Ulanova commands $1500 a month for two to five performances with an extra $300 for each additional performance. Apartments and cars are also made available to performers under such a contract.

Logically, Russians seeking this novel level of luxury would automatically flock to the Bolshoi Theater. However, only thirty dancers are admitted each year to the nine year training program, and of these, only twenty ever graduate. The Soviet Union is cautious in its moves to bestow wealth and favor.

Why have the Russian dignitaries supported this cultural program with such extravagance? It it difficult for us to see this group as a weapon, or at least a tool? The Bolshoi Ballet will pay for itself a hundred times over if with each performance it distroys the "misconceptions" of the Soviet Union in the minds of the millions of "unfortunates" outside the Iron Curtain. Russia, then, through her ballet, becomes a stimulator of intellectual and cultural growth. We are now to open our hearts to this newly discovered nation so drunk with the power of art rather than the power of power, as we had once supposed. For most Americans, this pretended motivation is madness, but at least this madness is swathed in net and satin slippers.

We should remember that the Bolshoi Ballet is a near-two hundred year old tradition in Russia, and tradition is to be respected. If this group is being used to propagandize, then we must respect this, too, for we aren't above propagandizing a little here and there ourselves. Most important of all is that out of this tradition and propaganda comes some fine ballet—tossed in as an extra, maybe, but nevertheless there.

To Spread Good Will

Frank Crowther

Once upon a time, a fine man who was a moral ethicist decided that he would travel to the darkest depths of the world's depth of darkness. His purpose: show those cannibals the erring quality of their ways and convert them.

Poor soul, he happened to choose an island of formalistic cannibals. Now you may find it strange that cannibals could be formalistic, but just think how strange Liberace would have looked playing for Socrates' last gathering.

The moral ethicist placed the formalistic cannibals in chains. (Now don't ask me how he did this. After all, there were only two of them and I'm telling the story the way I want to.) He lectured them day and night until they finally became convinced that his way was the best way and promised to mend their lives accordingly. This overjoyed the moral ethicist and he decided to start on a crusade to convince the rest of the world of his beliefs. After all, if two cannibals could be convinced, why couldn't the whole world.

Alas, I hate to end the story on a sad note, but sad it is. When the moral ethicist released the two cannibals, they seized him and broiled him for their dinner that night. They had been so convinced by his arguments that they ate him in order to gain his knowledge. Moral: all crusades end in the soup bowl so always check the menu before attending dinner.

Farm Votes

Balance Of Power Shifts

The day of political power is fast fading for the farmer in North Carolina. A few short years ago the farmer was the most politically powerful man in North Carolina. The candidates who won the farm block were assured of winning the state-wide elections. Today this is not the case, for the next Governor and U. S. Senator will not have to rely so much on the farm votes as heretofore but must concentrate on the voters who are living in the country and working in the city, and those who live in th suburbs and cities.

In those days when the horses and mules were used for the heavy tasks of the farmers instead of tractors, production was slow and consequently more man hours were needed to produce food than is the case today.

With the vast amount of agricultural research that is being done today and the modern mechanization of the farm, less land and fewer man hours are required to produce the same amount of food.

The tenant farmer who merely earned enough (if he was lucky) to exist, is having to look to other fields of work. He is finding that he can earn many times the amount earned on the farm, working in industry.

The two main farm organizations in North Carolina are the Grange and the Farm Bureau. These organizations are the only hope of the farmer to retain some political power and even these organizations will never be able to make the farmer the powerful political force that he once was in North Carolina.

The children, who are graduating from the rural high schools, are not returning to the farms and are looking for better paying and less back-breaking work. The farm and its task certainly hold no glamour for the young man or woman in the world of today. But it is essential that someone live on these farms and produce the food for the rest of us, if we are to exist.

Those of us who are not spending our lives on the farm should when we eat remember the forgotten man, the farmer. D.B.S.

Finish Of Quarterly Letter

(This is the final section of Mr. Trice's letter.—Ed.)

Editor:

It is the opinion of the editors of The Quarterly that the overall quality of the material being submitted is much better than the quality of past years, and there is no reason to suppose that given the support of the students of the University it could not be better.

It is true that in at least one way the editors are conservative. That is, they are trying to maintain the magazine as a means of communicating to anyone who will read it, the better writing of this area, as well as to perform the most important and inclusive function of making some significant contribution to the promotion of artistic consciousness (whether creative or appreciative) in the world.

If this impresses many students as relatively insignificant when they consider their own immediate interests and desires, they might honestly consider how valuable in terms of these same interests and desires as they recur day after day is, for example, a concert by the Melachrino Strings.

Certainly when students can afford a trivial kind of distraction, they can afford a little of their money and time for something which if not wholly in practice at least in intention is more fundamental to what makes them human beings who live in the world essentally and Chapel Hill only accidentally.

Around Campus

By Rusty Hammond

The Dean of Women's office and the Women's Residence Council have come through with some real jewels as sunbathing rules for coeds. Lend an ear: they must sunbathe only on the sunporches, not on the lawn (a little backward, but we'll let that pass), bridge playing is" discouraged" (it can be discouraging, at times), a bathing suit or shorts and halter must be worn (?) and here is the big winner - all "sports" are strictly prohibited. Wonder what sports are available to 25 girls packed onto a small porch?

Don't feel left out just because you haven't been patted on the back by Editor Young. Just come up to the DTH office, fill out an application blank, and get in line. There are only about 200-300 ahead of you at this time, and with any luck at all you may be mentioned before the year ends.

Speaking of back-slapping, we erred last time. We said "as soon as Gans and Young get through slapping each other on the back, maybe we'll get out a paper." Since Gans hasn't come close to slapping Young on the back as yet, lets change it to - As soon as Gans and Young get through slapping Gans on the back.

We realize that with it being spring and all, the young blood starts rising, but things can go too far. Take for instance the other night when some character was racing up and down the second floor of a men's dormitory on a motorcycle. No kiddin!

Instead of a PiKA Beat Dook Parade, how about a Student Party Beat PiKA Parade?

The politicians were sworn in the other night, and with things the way they are we'll probably hear a lot more swearing (and more original, too) before too long.

"British Papers Criticize Ike." Everybody's getting into the act.

A very odd thing happened the other day. Anthony Wolfe actually reviewed a book I had read.

Whatever happened to Frisbees?

So the strike and violence have ended in Henderson. Or have they?

Editor Young came out the otherday against alligators at LSU. I'm with him all the way. Are alligators citizens? Yes. Okay, then let's form a Human Citizens Council and go around throwing rocks at alligators and have lynchings and things. The alligators have spotted dissenion in the human ranks. We must stick together. But we never have before . . .

Brooks Hays- A Moderate

Peter B. Young

BROOKS HAYS, A SOUTHERN MODERATE SPEAKS, University of North Carolina Press, 1959, $3.50.

GEORGE W. CABLE, THE NEGRO QUESTION, Doubleday Anchor, 1958, $0.95.

Brooks Hays is that common American phenomenon — the religious politician. As a mutual friend has put it: "Brooks has been in more smoke-filled rooms than anybody, and that's why I get nervous whenever he starts his confounded praying."

This reviewer is not equipped to deal with the theological subtleties presented by Mr. Hay's unctuous (and ever-present) Baptist faith. But, then, the book under discussion is primarily the record of his long and colorful political career, especially where that career has either triumphed (momentarily) or foundered on "the race question."

The political world through which Mr. Hays has moved with such grace and fluidity to these many years is essentially a simple world. Mr. Hays is a very simple man. On one side are "extremists" — Hubert Humphrey, Herbert Lehman, and members of the NAACP and White Citizens Councils.

On the other side are "moderates" — the good guys who are "members of the lodge" and who hew to "the narrow white line down the middle." It is the Christian duty of all "moderates" to love (and chastize) all "extremists" equally. The delicate process of counselling "extremists" is made infinitely easier if the counselor has a ready fund of old vaudeville jokes. Sample: "I've been a Baptist for 25 years and nobody is going to make a Christian out of me." The reader will positively ache for Mr. Hays to say "manure" when he obviously has a mouth full. The reader will also ache for Mr. Hays to GET MAD. But these are luxries which Christian moderates cannot afford.

The unique political role which Hays continues to play is that of an honest broker between the equally wrong "extremists" on both sides of the civil rights issue. Each little triumph in the back rooms of the Democratic Party is the occasion for an exclamation point. Thus: "When the platform was brought before the Convention delegates, it was approved by a voice vote!" "Jo Sparkman and I were victors in the showdown vote!" And (on the occasion of a rare defeat): "All the work of the moderates went up in smoke!" This is, roughly, the level of political analysis which is maintained throughout the book, leading one reader to comment that it should have been titled, A Southern Moderate Speaks . . . But Not Well.

From his rarified ethical heights, Hays feels free to comment on the question of what the Southern Negro really wants. He guesses (and I think, correctly) that it is "official segregation, not separatism," to which the Negro objects. But what is the ultimate goal of the "moderates"? "Moderation," after all, is simply a tactic, a means to an end. But what end? On this crucial point, Hays retreats for the last time into a fog of pious generalities. In the closing pages of his book, Hays argues for "the American idea . . . the Jefferonian idea . . . and the Christian idea." Needless to say, this is a platform upon which both Orville Faubus and Martin Luther King will be happy to stand.

A Southern Moderate Speaks will undoubtedly make a lot of Christian dollars for the UNC Press. By the oddest sort of irony it will also serve to maintain the image of Chapel Hill as "the fountain head of Southern liberalism." Perhaps the profits from this ill-advised book will serve to subsidize the publication of a scolarly tome by one of our own faculty serfs. One can only hope and (along with Brooks Hays) pray.

It is a relief to turn from the pious political preachings of our Arkansas traveler to the cutting prose of George Washingtos Cable, a 19th century novelist who remains to this day one of the South's greatest literary figures.

The Negro Question is a collection of Cable essays written from 1875 (when the last Reconstruction governments were collapsing) to 1890, just before "the strange career of Jim Crow" began in deadly earnest. The paper-bound Cable volume contains everything which the Hays book so conspicuously lacks—a sense of guilt bordering on agony, moral indignation carried to the "extreme" of righteousness, and genuine political wisdom.

It pains this reviewer to report that the Cable volume was edited by Arlin Turner of the Duke (!) faculty. Read it anyway. Cable is long since dead, and had no choice of editors bear in mind, of course, that Cable is a nasty "extremist" in behalf of elemental human dignity.

Dilemma In Contest

A terrible social deliemma has swept the campus.

Students are frantically writing Emily Post and Amy Vanderbilt.

Emily and Amy are frantically writing each other.

The recent election of Bill "Dirt Farmer" Davis as the Ugliest Man on Campus has upset the social status quo.

The most important question on the minds of students is, "What do you say to a guy who has just received the 'honor' of being selected the ugliest man on the campus?"

Usually when someone wins an election, his friends shake his hand, congratulate him and ask a favor. However, it's a bit embarrasing to do so this with Davis.

It's all right to congratulate someone for being beautiful, intelligent, lucky or popular, but, in spite of all the questions about what to do, it is generally agreed that you do not congratulate someone for being ugly.

However, the fact remains, he did win an election, so offering him sympathy doesn't seem quite the thing to do.

Many students feel the best thing to do is just to avoid him, thus making it unnecessary to say anything about the election. But, again, it must be remembered that he won an election.

Although the possibilities seem slim at the moment, he might be able to grant a few favors. Therefore, it just isn't wise to shun him.

Some people have suggested making a joke of the whole thing, but anyone looking at a picture of Davis can tell that this is no joking matter.

There seems to be no satisfactory answer to the problem. However, it is not in the spirit of the University to let each student work this out for himself.

Organization is needed. If it can't be done right, at least everyone should be wrong alike.

Perhaps this problem should be reviewed by the Social Standards Committee.

Tar Heels Seek Third ACC Win Against Clemson Today

Rabb Picks Hammett To Start For Carolina

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The most important game of the baseball season for either Carolina or Clemson will be played this afternoon at Emerson Stadium when the two teams collide at 3 o'clock in a contest that both must win if they are to stay in contention for the ACC title.

After blasting through their first nine games without a defeat the Tigers were halted by the Tar Heels 6-3 in their first meeting of the season. Since that time Clemson has failed to win a game while losing to N. C. State, Maryland, and Virginia.

The Tar Heels, on the other hand, after their opening victory over Clemson took a nose dive of their own as they lost to South Carolina, Duke and Wake Forest before getting back into the win column by beating State 5-2.

Clemson Record

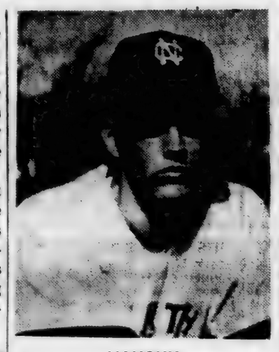
Although the Tigers' 9-4 overall record is better than Carolina's, in ACC play Bill Wilhelm's team is one game ahead of the Tar Heels in the number of games lost. Against league foes the Tar Heels are 2-3 while Clemson has split its eight decisions.

Ben Hammett, who got credit for the first win over the Tigers in relief of Wayne Young, has been tabbed by Coach Walter Rabb to start the game for Carolina. The junior lefthander has racked up three wins so far this season without a defeat with his latest being the 5-2 conquest of State.

Cline Or Stowe

The Clemson hurler is slated to be either Harold Stowe or Ty Cline. Cline is 2-0 this year and has a 2.4 ERA for the third best mark in the conference in that respect. Stowe is far behind the 14-4 record he posted last seaon with a 3-2 current mark. Despite this the big lefthander leads the league in strikeouts and is fifth in the earned run department.

Rabb will start the same team against the Tigers that defeated the Wolfpack last Saturday. In the infield it will be Vaughn Bryson (.120) at first, Larry Craver (.209) at second, Harold Workman (.271) at shortstop, and Ferg Norton (.292) on third.



VAUGHN
. . . starts at first

The Carolina outfield will be composed of Johnny Burgwyn (.344) in left, Gerald Griffin (.222) in center, and Russ Hollers (.346) in right. Al Baldwin, whose .400 batting average is tops on the team, will be the starting catcher.

Tiger Lineup

The Clemson lineup will depend a great deal on who Wilhelm selects as his starting pitcher since Cline plays in the outfield when he is not on the mound. If Stowe should start the Clemson outfield will probably be composed of Bailey Henley (.348), Doug Hoffman (.333), and Cline (.315).

In the infield Clemson will go with Fred DeBerry at first, Zack Burnette at second, Dick Suggs at third with Larry Bagwell stationed at short. Butch Coker, whose .167 stick mark is the lowest on the starting club, is scheduled to open behind the plate.

The Tar Heels will play again tomorrow afternoon at Emerson Stadium when they face South Carolina. In this contest Carolina co-captain Ben Harding is slated to be the starting pitcher.

Big Four Sports Day Coming Up

By JERRY GARRISON

The team representing UNC will attempt to bring back the Big Four Sports Day trophy after a lapse of two years. As always the UNC team will be strong in handball, golf and horseshoes, but it hopes to win enough first place points to bring home the trophy. At the present they expect to have some trouble from State in volleyball and table tennis. The other events will be a toss up.

The Big Four Sports Day was started in 1947, and since then UNC has won 6 events while State and Duke won 2 each with Wake Forest winning the event last year. One year the event ended in a tie between UNC and State.

At Duke This Year

This year the event will be held at Duke on Wednesday, April 29. All first round events are scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. with the exception of golf which will begin at 11 a.m. The second round will begin at 3:15 p.m. with second round golf events beginning at 2:30 p.m.

The events this year are golf, handball, horseshoes, softball, table tennis, tennis, volleyball and badminton. The scoring will be 5, 3, 2 and 1 points in each event.

Team Numbers

In badminton, handball, horseshoes and tennis, the teams will consist of five players playing 2 doubles games and one singles game. In golf, the team will consist of 4 men playing an 18 hole match play. Official rules will be used in softball with the exception of the use of spiked shoes. The table tennis team will consist of 4 men playing 2 singles games and one doubles game. Volleyball will follow the regular rules and will play the best of three games.

Freshman or varsity may not enter the sport in which he is a squad member or a letter winner.

The participates from UNC will leave from Woollen Gym at 1 p.m. Wednesday, April 29. All participates are requested to sign an insurance list at the Intramural Office by April 28. Anyone wishing to enter any event should contact the Intramural Office at 315 Woollen Gym.

Golfers Take 7-2 Mark Into Match With Duke

By J. R. BROWN

Sporting a 7-2 record and two consecutive A.C.C. victories, Carolina's golfers will take on the Blue Devils of Duke on Duke's new golf course this afternoon. The Heels returned home Tuesday with a decisive win over the Gamecocks of South Carolina and should be ready for their arch-rival. Duke has lost only to Wake Forest in conference play while Carolina is all even at two wins and two losses.

The Blue Devils have a strong team this year and are expected to give the Heels a close match. Three seniors, a junior, and two sophomores will start for Duke. Thus, they have experience in their lineup which is always an advantage. On the other hand, the Tar Heels have improved greatly since the start of the season.

With lack of experience being the only drawback concerning a successful season, the golfers have proved by their record to date that the experience is now there. The match shapes up as a good one. If the linksmen can continue playing as they have the past two meets, the Devils will undoubtedly come out on the short end.

Coach Ed Kenney will probably go along with the same line-up as in the South Carolina match. Ed Justa will hold down number one position and "Spook" Galloway will play in the second slot. In positions three and four will be Don McMillan and Hugh Goodman.

Goodman came through against South Carolina Monday with a sub par 71. It was one of his best rounds under competition this season. Paul Erhardt and Dave Sloan will probably play in fifth and sixth spots, however; John McKee may see action.

Coach "Dumpy" Hagler of Duke will start Sandy Hinkle, Dick Siderowf, Jack Benson, and Bob Zimmerman for certain. He will vary positions five and six from a selection among his crop of sophomores. Some good golf is expected to be seen. The Heels played the Duke course yesterday as a warm up for today's meet so they should be all set. They will be gunning for victory number eight and number three in A. C. C. play.

The golfers will play their last match against Clemson next week. This will complete regular season competition. The Southern Intercollegiate Meet and the A. C. C. tournament follow as post season events.

BISHOP RUNS IN PENN RELAYS

Carolina's ace distance man Wayne Bishop, both outdoor and indoor champ in the two mile, will run in the 65th Annual Penn Relays held today at Franklin Field in Philadelphia.

Bishop will be entering the all-collegiate meet for the first time in his career, and will be faced with beating defending champion Gene Martin of Manhattan who won last year with a brisk 9:23.5.

Cardinals Bring Suit

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jerry Wilson, Auburn football player involved in a court suit over where he will play professionally, says he has not signed any agreement with the team that brought the suit.

The Chicago Cardinals, in what is apparently the first court test of a 3-year-old agreement, have asked an injunction to prevent Wilson from playing Canadian football next season.

Wilson, a 235-pound end who finishes college this semester, said he negotiated a $10,000 salary with the Cardinals and was given a $1,000 check by the National Football League club. He said he told the Cardinals he would check with Edmonton. When Edmonton offered him more money, he signed with them and returned the check to the Cardinals, he said.

"I didn't sign any kind of an agreement with Chicago and my understanding is that if you don't have a written contract, it isn't binding between the National League and the Canadian League."

INDIANS WIN AGAIN

DETROIT (AP) — Reliefer Dick Brodowski put down a budding Detroit rally in the fifth inning and hurled shutout ball the rest of the way, saving Cleveland's 10-4 triumph over the Tigers Thursday.

YANKEES LOSE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Senators collected only three hits Thursday but exploited Yankee pitcher Bob Turley's seventh inning wildness for all the runs they needed in a 3-2 victory over the New Yorkers.

Netters Win Eighth, 7-2

NETTERS WIN ____ J-eu . Fc iini

The racket squad from Carolina continued to roll yesterday, as they defeated the Davidson College Wildcats, 7-2. The win is the eighth of the season for the netters under the tutelege of Coach Don Skakle.

For the two Wildcat wins, Dick Hodel defeated Tommy Ricks in the number six match, 6-3, 6-3, while Finley Lee and Doug Orr downed Phil Causey and Walker Lockett, 6-3, 6-2.

Geoff Black, captain of the Tar Heels, continued his mastery over Semi Mintz, Davidson's two-sport man, as he downed Mintz 6-4, 6-2.

The Carolina court men return home next Wednesday, when they meet the Duke Blue Devils at 3 o'clock.

The summary:

Singles: 1. Geoff Black defeated Semi Mintz, 6-4, 6-2. (2.) Bruce Sylvia (C) defeated John Poindexter, 6-0, 7-5. (3.) Ben Keys (C) defeated Tom McCutchen, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2. (4.) Marshall Happer (C) defeated Finley Lee, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4. (5.) Walker Lockett (C) defeated Doug Orr, 6-4, 6-2. (6.) Dick Hodel (D) defeated Tommy Ricks, 6-3, 6-3.

Doubles: (1.) Sylvia-Happer (C) defeated Mintz-Poindexter, 7-5, 6-4. (2.) Black-Keys (C) defeated Harry Broome-McCutchen, 6-3, 6-1. (3.) Lee-Orr (D) defeated Phil Causey-Lockett, 6-3, 6-2.

"LOVE IS BLIND"
Next to the Bible, Shakespeare is the richest source of common quotes. He's responsible for this one, too. See his "Merchant of Venice," Act II, Scene 6:

"THIRTY DAYS HATH SEPTEMBER," ETC.
No need to recite further from this bit of doggerel which has served us all as a pony ever since grade school. For this universal handy reference we are indebted to a man named Richard Grafton who was nice enough to compose the rhyme way back in 1570.

"PUT IT IN YOUR PIPE"
No, Sir Walter Raleigh didn't originate this smoker's challenge. It was R. H. Barham, in "The Lay of St. Odille":
"For this you've my word,
and I never yet broke it,
So put that in your pipe,
My Lord Otto, and smoke it."

Legislature Passes Four New Bills

By DAVE JONES

A referendum for women dorm residents authorizing the WRC to recommend a social and activity fee and an amendment requiring a two-thirds vote were among the four bills passed by the Student Legislature Thursday night.

Jim Crownover's (SP) bill calling for a referendum, which was passed under special orders last week at the first session of the new Legislature, was called back on the floor by the author.

Crownover then explained certain changes in the bill which he had found to be necessary from a view point of constitutionality. He asked to have them incorporated in the bill.

The body passed them as follows: "The administration be requested by the WRC to authorize the collection of a social and activities fee from all women's dorm residents" upon the passage of the referendum.

Representative Bob Nobles (SP) introduced an amendment under special orders requiring a two-thirds vote on the referendum. Nobles explained that this would give the WRC a stronger mandate in asking for the fee. The amendment was passed and incorporated into the Crownover bill.

Dave Jones (SP) discussed two of his bills at Thursday's session. The first was a bill to approve a new set of by-laws for the University Club.

The old by-laws of this organization had not been available for several years, and the club was operating to all practical purposes without written rules, Jones explained.

The body accepted the new by-laws which will go into effect May 1 with the installation of the University Club's new officers.

Jones' second bill was one which authorized The Daily Tar Heel to transfer $125 from its profits to its photography account.

The finance committee, after hearing testimony from Jones and Editor Davis Young, reduced the figure to $90. The Legislature approved the $90 figure.

Jim Crownover's bill to make a meeting of the legislators with their constituents compulsory was defeated by a vote of 25-13.

There had been some slight changes in the bill made by the Ways and Means Committee; however, the legislature did not approve the bill as amended.

Seven new pieces of legislation were introduced Thursday night to bring the total for the new session to 21.

Three have been passed by special orders; four have been passed by regular action; one has been defeated; six have been refered to committees; one has been withdrawn by the author.

Seven have been held in committee for an extra week.

A bill to establish a temporary legislative committee to study and make recommendations on the mosquito problem was introduced by Dave Jones (SP) at Thursday night's meeting of Legislature.

Jones explained that the campus welfare board which had been set up to handle such problems was not yet operative; therefore, he was setting up a temporary group to be appointed by Vice President David Grigg to study the problem.

According to Jones, the problem is serious in Dorm Men's VI (Avery, Parker and Teague). Here the combined effect of the swimming pool, the stagnant water from the tennis court development and the adjacent woods bring out mosquitos in large numbers, he said.

$77,450 Given To University

UNC has been allocated $77,450 by the N. C. Council of State to cover damages from fires on campus.

The largest part of the money, $60,111, covers damages to the University's general store room behind Phillips Hall. The fire at the store room occurred last December.

Instead of making repairs to the old structure, storage facilities will be moved off campus. J. S. Bennett, director of buildings and grounds, said this week a concrete block structure to consolidate storage would be built.

Another $10,226 was allocated by the Council of State for the loss of the Keller house, used by the Division of Health Affairs. This structure was destroyed in January. The remains of the building are being torn down to provide parking space for the Carolina Inn, Bennett said.

The final allocation was $7,113 for

Sam Magill Resigns His Post; Spain Is New Attorney General

Junior Is Appointed; Fills Robinson's Job

The new attorney general is Jack Spain, whose appointment was announced Thursday night to Student Legislature. The appointment is subject to the approval of Legislature, which will act next week.

Student Body President Charlie Gray, who selected Spain to succeed Dick Robinson, commented, "I definitely believe that Jack Spain fills the requirements more than adequately."

The job of the attorney general is to head a staff which investigates violations of the Campus and Honor codes by both men and women. He is also called upon to give opinions on the validity of organization activities and is responsible for any other duties delegated to him by the president of the student body.

Spain has worked this year under Dick Robinson as assistant attorney general. Spain's other campus activities include vice president of the junior class, member of the Program Committee of the Carolina Symposium, member of the Traffic Council and an officer of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Spain has been tapped into such honoraries as the Order of the Old Well and the Order of the Grail. For his scholastic achievements, he has been accepted into the membership of Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Alpha Theta and Phi Beta Kappa.

Spain said Friday he was honored to be appointed to the student government position and commented, "I hope during the next year we can work toward a conscientious appraisal of the judicial system both in procedures and campus understanding."

The new attorney general praised Robinson his predecessor, for "good work he has done in the last year."

In making the appointment, Charlie Gray predicted a possible expansion in the attorney general's responsibilities through probable changes in the judicial system. He further commented that he believed Spain would execute all duties of the office in "a truly admirable fashion."

Gray Announces

Student Body President Charlie Gray reminded students that Monday is the final day that applications for more than 150 student government positions may be made.

The application blanks may be secured from the student government office in Graham Memorial and must be returned there.

The interviews with applicants are being held in the student government office until further notice.

Presbyterians' $125,000 Fund Drive Begins

By WILLIAM G. FRIEDRICH

A two-week $125,000 drive is now in process.

It was launched Monday morning to rebuild the Presbyterian Church which was destroyed by fire in February 1958.

The new sanctuary, expected to be ready by September 1960, will cost at least $300,000. For the $125,000, 38 members, as of Monday morning, had pledged $35,903. In addition, $96,000 from the fire insurance settlement is available for contruction costs.

Students have been asked to participate in the rebuilding campaign on an installment plan. Pledge cards, setting forth payments for so much a month, semester or year, will cover a three-year period.

Ever since the fire, Presbyterians have used Carroll Hall for Sunday morning services. A new fellowship hall, nearing completion, will soon be used for services this summer. The hall, housing student and church school facilities, is located on the church site opposite the University campus on East Franklin Street.

The new Presbyterian Church will have a seating capacity of 699. The old church seated about 400. Even before the fire, double services were required on Sundays to accommodate the congregation and students, which now totals 563.

The old church, built in 1920, was a gift from the late James Sprunt of Wilmington as a memorial to his wife.

The Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church is a strategic center for the denomination in that it serves the largest concentration of Presbyterian college students at any institution in the southeast.

A committee of Presbyterian students will soon be asking Carolina students for subscriptions. The committee is headed by Pete Austin and Cathy Hobert. Bruce Berryhill and Bill Lineberry will cover men's dorms; Scottie Blackwell will visit women's dorms; Don Millen and Julie Redhead are seeking pledges among fraternities and sororities, and Bob Spencer will visit married students.

Student pledges will buy bricks. Bricks cost $15 per hundred which includes labor for construction.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary Friday were:

Rose Hawk, Betsy Harris, Fred Robinson, Robert Briggs, John Wait, Franklin Schaeman, Oscar Simpson, Bjorn Hurfiord, Barry Bell, Charles Carson, Marshall Daniel, Lewis Hawley, Dewey Sheffield, Ralph Tower, Frank Jones, Rufus Russell, William Thomas and William Davis.

Coed Voting On Referendum Is Postponed

The coed referendum on social and activities fees will not be held Tuesday, as had been previously announced.

Such a referendum cannot be held until six to fifteen days have elapsed after the student body president signs the Legislature bill calling for the vote.

Because of a question involving the constitutionality of a bill passed two weeks ago by Legislature authorizing the referendum, the bill was brought up again Thursday night by Jim Crownover (SP). The second bill was passed by Legislature Thursday.

The question of the original bill's constitutionality involved the right of a student organization, as the Women's Residence Council, to tax the students. The referendum to be voted on requests administration to levy social and activity fees which would be turned over to the Women's Residence Council.

Although the date of the referendum has not been set, Elections Board Chairman Hank Patterson said the election would probably be held Tuesday, May 5.

Oh Man!

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.,—(AP)—Saxaphonist Larry Royster has an occupational hazard — he hates the rock'n' roll music he plays.

Last night his band was knocking out the weird sounds at a theater in Rockford, Ill.

Royster stuck paper in his ears to block out the noise of the music and the screaming of the teen-age audience.

Today he went to a hospital here and had it removed ,and tonight he'll wear ear plugs at another rock 'n' roll concert.

For as the bopsters say, man, the paper "just doesn't make it."

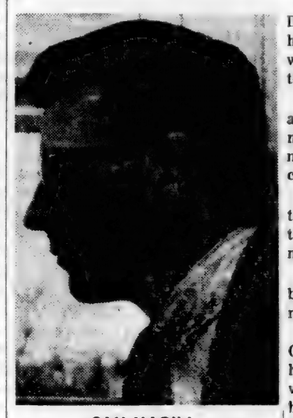
Leaves To Start Work On Advanced Degree

By Ed Riner

Samuel H. Magill will quit his job as assistant dean of student affairs, effective Sept. 1.

This announcement came from Dean of Student Affairs Fred H. Weaver Friday.

Magill has been awarded a special grant from the Danforth Foundation for graduate study in religion. He will begin his studies in Christian Ethics this fall at Duke University.



SAM MAGILL
. . . resigns after four years

Dean Weaver said the study at Duke will allow Magill "to prepare himself for the larger contribution which he is so eminently qualified to make."

He said that Magill had filled an important position in the administration with "unassuming dignity, fairness, imagination and true consideration."

"I'm leaving with mixed emotions . . . I want to go and I want to stay," was Magill's only comment.

Magill's successor has not yet been named, but Dean Weaver will make the appointment.

Student Body President Charlie Gray said, "I am truly sorry to hear that Sam Magill will not be with us next year. While he has been at Carolina, he has earned the respect of every student on the campus."

Gray said Magill had displayed his untiring effort in working with student affairs and in offering invaluable advice to all student leaders.

"I regret that I will not be able to work with him next year, but I'm sure his decision was the one that he considers best," the president said.

A 1950 UNC graduate, Magill has been assosiated with the University administration since 1955, first as director of student activities and, since last May, as assistant dean of student affairs.

Magill has also been instructor in the Department of Religion from time to time.

He is a graduate of Deerfield Academy in the Class of 1946. He received the A. B. degree here in 1950 and the B. D. degree at Yale Divinity School in 1953. He was ordained a minister of the Congregational Christian Church in June 1953.

From 1953 to 1955 he was general secretary of the Davidson College YMCA.

As an undergraduate at UNC, he was president of the YMCA, a member of the St. Anthony Hall, the Order of the Golden Fleece and the Order of the Grail. In his senior year he was captain of the varsity track and cross country teams.

WATKINS, Colo.,—(AP)—Col. John F. Stapp, holder of the world's land speed record, bailed out of a T33 jet trainer plane just before it crashed seven miles north of here Friday.

Stapp escaped without injury: The plane's unidentified pilot was believed injured. He also bailed out.

Stapp was enroute from Wright Air Development Center at Dayton, Ohio, to Denver to speak at a dinner meeting of the American Rocket Society's central Colorado section last night.

Law Awards Are Given

Awards for outstanding achievement were made Friday night to graduating seniors in the UNC Law School.

The awards night Friday was sponsored by the Law Students Association.

Emmanuel M. Paturis received the $300 Block Improvement Award for the most improvement of any law student the past three semesters. This award was presented by Norman Block of Greensboro.

The Lawyer's Title Award, a $100 award for the top graduate in titles, future interest and real property, went to Cecil K. Brown Jr.

The Clark awards were presented to Jimmy W. Kiser, John T. Allred, Thomas W. Warlick, Robert W. King Jr. and Richard J. Tuggle.

Certificates for excellent work on the North Carolina Law Review went to Jimmy Kiser, editor; John T. Allred, Robert W. King and Fred C Meekins, associate editors; Thomas W. Warlick, business manager, and the following members of the board of editors:

Tanner Awards

Knight And King Honored

Samuel B. Knight

James E. King

The Tanner Awards for "excellence in classroom teaching" have been awarded this year to Prof. Samuel B. Knight of the Chemistry Department and Prof. James E. King of the History Department.

The $500 awards were made to the two men Friday afternoon in Carroll Hall by Dr. William Wells, chairman of the faculty, during a meeting of the general UNC faculty.

The selections were made on the basis of balloting by students and fellow faculty members.

Both King and Knight have been instructors in the "superior freshman" course in the University.

The two have also engaged in research activities and have published various articles relating to their fields.

Dr. Knight is co-author of a textbook, "The Fundamentals of Physical Chemistry" and of "Dictionary of Chemistry," which will soon be published by McGraw-Hill.

Dr. King, who is an authority on Western European history, is the author of "Science and Rationalism in the Government of Louis XIV." He is currently writing a book on "The Idea of the Welfare State in European History."

The Tanner Awards were established four years ago by the children of Lola Spencer and Simpson Bobo Tanner. Any teacher of undergraduates is eligible to receive the award.

Previous winners of the award, all of whom are still members of the UNC faculty, are Prof. James Caldwell, history; the Rev. Bernard Boyd, religion; Prof. William Geer, history; Prof. David Basile, geology and geography; Prof. George V. Taylor, history, and Prof. Albert E. Radford, botany.

Henderson To Start Third Shift Tuesday

HENDERSON , N. C., April 24 (AP)—The president of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills, again going against the advice of Gov. Luther H. Hodges, said today he will start a third shift at the strike-bound mills.

John D. Cooper Jr. said the new shift will begin next Tuesday night. Jobs still vacant on the shift will be offered striking members of the Textile Workers Union of America (TWUA), Cooper said.

He said he already had employed enough non-strikers to justify the shift but added there are "quite a number" of vacancies open for union members.

The company's two plants have been the center of bitter violence for nearly six months, since the TWUA struck last Nov. 17 in dispute with management over a new contract.

Cooper reopened the plants Feb. 16 on a one-shift basis. More violence flared as hundreds of jobless

Henderson

Any strike is a miniature war. When the strike is prolonged and/or embittered, it becomes a nasty miniature war. Such a conflict is raging at Henderson now.

The Daily Tar Heel neither excuses nor condones violence. It does, however, attempt to understand violence. This newspaper recognizes that the desperate strikers at Henderson are fighting for their lives and their families.

This newspaper initiated its own coverage of the Henderson strike several weeks ago, under the previous editor, Curtis B. Gans. The Daily Tar Heel was dissatisfied with the wire service coverage of the strike, said covage consisting for the most part of simply parroting back the "canned" statements from the mill management, labor leaders, and the governor.

Editor Gans, therefore, sent several of his staff members, notably Ron Shumate and photographer Peter Ness, to Henderson for the kind of intimate feature reporting that the wire services had failed to provide. Shumate, Ness and other staffers have done a superb job, and it is not too much to say that on several occasions they risked their lives to bring back a good story for your morning perusal.

Upon assuming office little more than a week ago your present editor decided to continue The Daily Tar Heel's own coverage of the Henderson strike. The journalistic reasons for so doing were the same reasons which moved the previous editor. Additionally, however, this editor feels that students need to be reminded that the war is never far away—it is always just around the corner.

Thus it was that Daily Tar Heel staffers, Ron Shumate and Dee Daniels, were in the office of mill president John Cooper last week when the strike was "ended" at the conclusion of a conference between the aforementioned Cooper, Boyd Payton, and Governor Hodges. The Shumate-Daniels story told (among other things) how hungry strikers cheered the Governor as he drove away from the mill.

It now turns out that John Cooper "misled" the Governor, the union representatives, and federal arbitrators on the crucial question of re-employment for the strikers. It was apparently Cooper's blithe intention to sign a contract with representatives of union men whom he would no longer employ! Seldom, if ever, in the history of American labor-management relations has there been a double cross like that! The union is absolutely correct in its most recent assertion that the Henderson strike has been transformed into a "lockout."

Meanwhile, Luther Hodges, "the businessman governor," is firmly caught on his own hook. According to the latest issue of Newsweek magazine, the Hodges program for bringing new industry to North Carolina is suffering severely from the Henderson strike. It turns out that Southern workers are not so "docile" or "anti-union" after all. It turns out that some Southern capitalists (such as our friend, Mr. Cooper) have not yet learned the lessons of the 20th century and continue to regard the labor movement as a personal affront.

There is a very simple way by which Governor Hodges can bring the recalcitrant Cooper to his knees (if not his senses). The Governor can announce (over the weekend) that he is withdrawing the Highway Patrol. Without police protection, the strikebreakers will stay away—far away, and Cooper will be forced to either sign on the dotted line or else to liquidate his investment. But can "the businessman governor" bring himself to this kind of action? No, he cannot "bring himself," but the cold logic of events is pushing him relentlessly in that direction.

Unless and until it conflicts with the requirements of campus coverage, the editor will continue to send Daily Tar Heel staffers into the Henderson maelstrom. Their stories will be printed on the front page and will conform to all the standards of journalistic objectivity. Additionally, the editor welcomes (and will print) letters from readers, pro and con, on the equities of the Henderson strike and Daily Tar Heel coverage of same.

However, the official position of the editor (and therefore of the newspaper) must be made clear: We now support the hungry men, women and children of Henderson. We take this stand knowing full well that the strikers are flaunting the law while John Cooper is (technically) within its majestic protection. We hope the strikers win. We hope the strikers win BIG. We hope the strikers win SOON.

Amen.

Social Fees

Editor:

It seems to me that those who are opposing the referendum from Women's Residence Council should remember several facts when they present their views. The chairman and the Council are supporting this bill because it seems to them that a need exists . . . . not because they want to take on an additional responsibility that will mean a great deal of extra work. The women on the council were elected to be on the council because the majority of the electorate felt they would represent their interests in the most effective way possible. They are representatives who know those who chose them. They know their needs. And I think we can trust them to use good judgement and discression in levying fees and alloting funds. I am not saying that I do not think the minority should not be heard or that each woman should not have the opportunity to vote on this issue. I do, however, want to say that I feel the minority should take into consideration the needs and desires of the majority.

Some of you will say "there is no need!" Do we want to say that there is no need to have a source to draw from when a spray of flowers should be sent to an unexpected funeral or illness . . . for which there is not time to run from door to door to try to get funds. Can we say that there isn't a need for some type of entertainment for the girls who live together for a year . . . or for a party during orientation week. It does not seem realistic to me to think that a social chairman could at the various times when a specific occasion arises collect "contributions." I realize that there are definitely some students who have no desire to take part in any project a dormitory wants to undertake and I also realize that there are some for whom even a small fee is a financial burden . . . because these "small fees" add up.

HOWEVER, any unity a dormitory might have is largely dependent on the few things the girls do together. A part of our college learning is to become adjusted to living in a larger society than that in which we are brought up. And a part of that living is a realization that the needs of the majority are not necessarily our own. Again, some ask if the need for a social fund does exist. The final answer will be given on Tuesday by those who vote. I have thought about the matter and my answer is "yes."

Harper's Bizarre

This, on the passing of a friend. Those of you who know, will know. To the rest he shall remain nameless. It will be better so.

In a way, you all knew him. He sat next to you in math last year. Or he was your lab partner in the fall. Or he was your roommate.

You don't remember exactly when or where you met him. He was that kind. One day you knew him, that's all.

In the morning you ate breakfast with him. You had lunch together, and a beer afterwards (and sometimes three or four). And at night you sat with him in bull sessions discussing politics, campus politics, women, girls, beer, grades, God, god, and people.

You saw him on the way to class. In Y-Court, or the Library. You saw him at ball games, panty raids, church.

You knew him as a tutor, good guy, snow man, Bohemian, lender, borrower, a face, a name. But you knew him.

Then, one day, you missed him. And the next day you didn't miss him. Water will fill holes in itself. "So it must be," you think. "Another drop in, or out of, the bucket."

But it is not so. Water, no thing or person, will fill up or wash away the impression he left with you, or you with him.

If we are the sum of all the moments in our lives, we are the total of all the impressions cast into these moments. Some of these moments were spent with him.

This, on the passing of a friend, not of a friendship.

Rising Poet

Ex-Editor Speaks For Spectrum

Dennis Parks

The irony of the magazine situation on campus is that while THE CAROLINA QUARTERLY receives $1,300 a year from the student funds and SPECTRUM receives no assistance (and undoubtedly would refuse any if offered), the QUARTERLY has no interest in or for the campus while SPECTRUM comes fsom the students and is directed at the creative segment (readers and artists) of the university. A case could be made plausible that since the QUARTERLY is apathetic and SPECTRUM is enthusiastic, the QUARTERLY is more representative of the rampus. And true this is, pitifully. Bht the general student is just as tasiturn about THE DAILY TAR HEEL, yet the students would miss this publilation if it no longer had the funds to be printed. Would the students iare if the QUARTERLY became defunct? Would the students even notice if the next issue never appeared?

With the publication of SPECTRUM, there is interest. If nothing else, there is the thought, "what the hell are these guys going to do next?" But there is something else! There is a magazine which is human. It has excitment, verve, experimentation, mistakes (and admits them) and the courage to chance brilliance.

As the poet and neo-conservative critic (editor of PARIS REVIEW), Donald Hall, said: "The magazine on the whole is of low quality, but EXCITEMENT, my God, yet. Obscene, yes, but who doesn't appreciate a little good obscenity every now and then." The poet Allen Ginsberg summarized his feeling on SPECTRUM when he commented on the final poem: "This is true, & modest, & absolute & for real & an approach at least to a real art . . . At least he begins where he si, and has a humane sense of Man's goofs & time."

It might be worthwhile to discuss the reasons for a "little" magazine (campus, regional, dual-purposed) to exist. They must promote enthusiasm in the writers and they must benefit the general reading public, those not directly interested in the running of the publications. So, accepting these criteria, it must be admitted that a magazine's worth cannot be proven in terms of its aims. Possibly the only way to see if a magazine has any healthy purpose is to print it, sell it (to a critical audience) and watch. If it doesn't go (barring any angels in the background), the editor won't be able to force out another issue. Any attempt to place the responsibility for a traditionaly stodgy magazine on the students' detarhment is simply cowardice. The editor o fany publication must accept total responsibility for his magazine or resign.

There are serious writers on this campus, but you cannot find them when the limit of your personal contacts ends in the GM lounge.

Why doesn't the Student Legislature give the QUARTERLY $200 and one year in which to prove itself. If readers do not think enough of it to pay fifty cents (the price of one beer and a pack of cigarettes) why should the students allow their money to be spent on crutches?

Pirandello's Tales of Woe

Frank Crowther

SHORT STORIES. by Luigi Pirandello. Translated by Lily Duplaix from the Italian. With an introduction by Frances Keene. 303 pp. New York: Simon and Schuster. $3.95

For even the most discerning reader in our country, the name of Luigi Pirandello usually brings to mind the drama, "Six Characters in Search of an Author." One might even know that he won the Nobel Prize in 1934 and was also a prolific short story writer. The bibliophile knows that he penned in his lifetime more than three hundred and sixty-five short stories, wrote several novels—of which the most famous was "The Late Mattia Pascal" — and produced half a hundred plays.

If we examine Pirandello's own life, we see many of the very situations of which he wrote outstanding. Much of his distaste for the human animal bound up in the lebenswelt was probably cultivated during his studies of romantic philology and philosophy at the University of Bonn. His conception of la condition humaine was less than optimistic and compassionate, though there are those who would disagree on this latter point. He was given to periods of incessant chatter and then would sulk and remain reticent. At one moment in his writing bitter and caustic, the next tender and lamentable. A great amount of his work depended on ironic situations and when he chose to be subtly chicane or wildly roisterousic, he did so masterfully.

In most of the stories, as Frances Keene points out, he writes, as did Thoreau, of people who "lead lives of quiet desperation." Life, for the most part, is presented as pretty much of a dirty trick wherein one shrugs one's shoulders and gets on with it. Though concerned with the nature of reality, whatever that means, these stories fail to take a position as to what this elusive chimera might after all be. Pirandello wisely avoids taking a static position in this matter.

There is little space left to enter into a detailed account of the stories. In the first section of tales, "Fumes" is quite the best. It tells of the combined struggle of a group of Sicilian farmers to retain their land for the purpose of agriculture against the lucrative offers of sulphur miners who "wanted to destroy those beautiful farms with their pickaxes ad furnaces." In the end, they are betrayed by one of their own whose weak spine shivers in remorse as he solomnly surveys the centuries old landscape which he alone has deserted.

"Man's Best Friend" concerns the plight of—what else—a dog that is caught in a hopeless frustration of not knowing who his master is. The plot is nicely contrived: a man finds out from his mistress that his wife also has taken a lover, and this, naturally, affronts the gentleman who believes that this is man's sacred right. Ironically, the wife has jilted her lover for another lover and the hapless dog cannot figure who his master is—the new lover, the old lover or the husband. The latter kicks the poor animal in a rage, simply because it was trying to be "man's best friend."

For me, the best tale was "Escape," in which a man is driven to "escape" from his drab, desperate existence by stealing—of all things—an untended milk wagon and absconding into the night.

More Henderson

Half-Nelson Sockafeller

The war had ended, but somebody forgot to tell the front line troops.

Shots were still being fired, dynamite sticks were being thrown, and windows were being shattered, and after a time martial law was put into effect, but, in reality, to no avail.

One rubbing with linament does not cure a migraine, and one exploratory operation does not restore the damage of a seige of cancer. Time occasionally will heal old wounds, but in the process of time something has already been done that can never be undone.

And so it is today in Henderson. Violence is the order, and order is the forgotten.

And while the Henderson story continues, a story of duplicity, of leadership failure, of destruction, and of desecration unfolds again in sharper, more intense focus.

The plot is developing on two levels. On its surface, it is a tale of failure of contractual negotiations, of arbitration, of law and order, and finally of an abortive settlement that revealed the company in shades of dark black. This story will probably have an end. No doubt there will be more violence. No doubt negotiations will continue, and perhaps even the Governor, who is presently irked, to put it in its kindest terminology, will descend from the pedestal of aloofness upon which he has been standing with leaden feet. And in a while, perhaps a day, a few days, a month, or months, the strike will be settled. Workers will go back to work on two or three shifts, and from the official point of view the strike will be over.

But it will not be over, for the story has another meaning, and the scar tissue from this will remain, purplish and raw, as a reminder to all those who shared in the guilt, that a deep wound will leave its mark.

The town will not forget the blazing headlines in this state, and the smaller ones throughout the nation. People from all over will serve to tell them that Henderson is not their home, but is a mill town, a strike town, a town of violence.

The town will not quickly recover from the lawlessness of the past few months, for when lawlessness gets to be the order, this order not nearly so easily changed, as order is to disorder.

And then there are the people in jail, the families who had to tighten their belts in an austerity move in the height of prosperity, and the memories of bitterness, hatred, and fear that time alone cannot totally cure.

In any area things cannot be the same as they were an instant ago, but the people of Henderson who so desparately need a return to normalcy will not be able to get theirs.

For better or for worse the town of Henderson is a changed town, irreparably changed. The people have changed, and the landmarks no longer have the same meaning.

It would be nice to say that Henderson emerged sadder and wiser for the events of the few months, but all that anybody can ascertain at present is that it will emerge sadder.

Ambassador Will Talk Here On Monday Night

Ambassador Waldemar J. Gallman, director general of the U. S. Foreign Service, will be here Monday, to speak to faculty and students on "The United States Foreign Service" at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

His lecture is sponsored by the Committee on International Studies headed by Prof. Shepard Jones in connection with the international studies curriculum established last year by faculty action. Ambassador Gallman, a native of New York, has had a long and distinguished career in the Foreign Service of the United States.

He has been in the diplomatic service for 37 years. After graduation from Cornell University in 1921, he attended the Law School at Georgetown University and entered the Foreign Service in 1922. During the next 14 years, he held diplomatic posts in numerous Latin American and Eastern European countries.

In 1938, Mr. Gallman returned to Washington and was later designated as Assistant Chief of the Division of European Affairs. During the years of American participation in World War II and after, from 1942 until 1948, he served at the American Embassy in London as First Secretary of the Embassy and later as Counselor and Deputy Chief of Mission, with the honorary rank of Minister.

In July 1948, Mr. Gallman was appointed by the President as the American Ambassador to Poland. He remained in that position until August of 1950 when he returned to Washington for assignment as Deputy Commandant for Foreign Affairs at the National War College.

workers from the surrounding area flocked to the mills for jobs.

The strike apparently was settled last week at a session supervised by Gov. Hodges. At that time, Cooper announced he would start a second shift at both plants. When union members showed up Monday as the second shift was beginning operations, they expected to get most of the openings. Instead, only 30 of them were hired; the rest of the jobs were already filled. That was the signal for new outbursts of violence.

Hodges last Tuesday asked Cooper to disband the second shift, and not to begin a third one, until the controversy had been worked out.

Cooper replied that to stop the second shift would be a "surrender to force and violence." Hodges revealed he had written Cooper on April 16 warning him that starting a second shift would be inviting trouble.

The crucial time for outbreaks all week has been 11 p.m., when the second shift goes off work. Rifle fire, stone barrages and gasoline bombs have been directed at carloads of non-strikers, but there have been no serious injuries reported.

FRESHMAN GOLF TEAM WINS

The Carolina freshman golf team defeated Myers Park High School 22-7 yesterday at Finley Golf Course. Carolina's Pete Green was the medalist with a 3 over par 75.

Clemson Defeats Carolina 2 To 1 In Ninth

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Clemson Tigers scored two unearned runs in the top of the ninth inning yesterday to turn what looked like a Carolina victory into a 2-1 defeat.

Going into the final inning Tar Heel pitcher Ben Hammett had retired fifteen straight Tiger batters—then the roof fell in. Bailey Hendley led off the Clemson ninth with a single, and was pushed on to second when Larry Bagwell walked.

Doug Hoffman, the next batter up, dumped a bunt down the third base line and Carolina third sacker Ferg Norton couldn't figure out what to do with the ball. He finally picked it up and threw wildly to first allowing both Hendley and Bagwell to score, and that was it.

The Tar Heels got their only run of the afternoon in the fourth inning on a walk to catcher Al Baldwin and a run producing double by Johnny Burgwyn.

It was a tight game all the way with neither team being able to generate an offense against the opposing pitcher. Hammett, who is now 3-1 on the year, had given up just two hits through the first eight frames, both of those to Hoffman, before having his defense collapse on that one vital play.

The loss dropped Carolina's ACC record to 2-4 and virtually knocked them out of contention for the conference title.

Track Team Faces Wake And Virginia

By BING SOMERS

The Carolina track team, having sulked for a week after the Maryland mauling of last Saturday, but still boasting a respectable 3-1 record, licks its chops again today as two of the weaker members of the ACC, Virginia and Wake Forest, meekly invade Fetzer Field this afternoon for a triangle meet beginning at 3 o'clock.

As always, the Tar Heels will be led by big Dave Scurlock, the All-American half-miler from Greensboro who has run the half only once in dual meets this year and is concentrating on the 440 and 220; captain Wayne Bishop, just back from running the two mile in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia yesterday; and busy Ray Stanley, who has developed into almost a one-man team in the field events.

DeBorde In Hurdles

Lyndon DeBorde, who turned in a splendid performance against those terrible Terrapin hurdlers, should flick through both highs and lows for 10 points, and Fraser Smith can pick up five more in the discus if the greedy Stanley doesn't.

Other Tar Heels who command attention are Cowles Llipfert, who won the half against Maryland; high-jumper Bob Sherrill; vaulter Ward Sims; and the mile relay team of John Fox, Benjy Seagle, John Sylvester, and Scurlock.

Both Virginia and Wake Forest will offer good competition in the sprints and distance races, but will be pretty weak in the other events.

The top Cavaliers are sprinter Bud Reynolds (runs a 9.9 100), half-miler Ralph Havens, and two-miler John Sabanosh. And for the listless Deacons, only sprinter Watt White and two-miler Bob Medlin should throw much of a scare into any ACC team.

Frosh Also Run

The UNC freshman team will run against Wake Forest in a meet simultaneous to the varsity encounter. The Tar Babies are also viewing the Deaclets with bitter, vengeful eyes having been upset by the Blue Imps of Duke on Monday.

Golf Team Loses

DURHAM—The Tar Heel golfers bowed to a strong Duke University team yesterday 19-8. Putting was the deciding factor as the linksmen had trouble on the massive greens of the new Duke course. It was the third loss of the season against seven victories for the Tar Heels.

ADVENTURES IN SOCIAL SCIENCE: NO. 3

Today, ranging again into the fascinating world of social science, let us take up the subject of anthropology—the study of man and his origins.

The origin of man was indeed a puzzle until the Frenchman, Jean-Louis Sigafoos, discovered the skull and shinbone of Pithecanthropus Erectus in Java in 1891. What Sigafoos was doing in Java is, incidentally, quite an odd little story. Sigafoos was a Parisian born and bred. By day one could always find him at a sidewalk cafe, sipping barley water and ogling the girls; each night he went to a fashionable casino where he gambled heavily at roulette and go-fish; in between times he worked on his stamp collection, which was one of the largest in Paris.

Well sir, one summer Sigafoos lost his entire fortune gambling at the casino. He was seriously contemplating suicide when, quite unexpectedly, a letter arrived from one Lotus Petal McGinnis, a Javanese girl and an avid stamp collector, with whom Sigafoos had been corresponding from time to time through the international stamp collectors journal. Until now the nature of their correspondence, though friendly, had been strictly philatelic, but in this new letter Lotus Petal declared that although she had never laid eyes on Sigafoos, she loved him and wanted to marry him. She said she was eighteen years old, beautiful and docile, and her father, the richest man in the tribe, had agreed to give half his fortune to the husband of her choice. Sigafoos, penniless and desperate, immediately booked passage for Java.

The first sight of his prospective bride failed to delight Sigafoos. She was, as she said, beautiful—but only by local standards. Sigafoos had serious doubts that her pointed scarlet teeth and the chicken bones hanging from her ears would be considered chic along the Champs Élysées.

But sobering as was the sight of Lotus Petal, Sigafoos had an even greater disappointment coming when he met her father. The old gentleman was, as Lotus Petal claimed, the richest man in the tribe, but, unfortunately, the medium of exchange in his tribe was prune pits.

Sigafoos took one look at the mound of prune pits which was his dowry, gnashed his teeth, and stomped off into the jungle, swearing vilely and kicking at whatever lay in his path. Stomping thus, swearing thus, kicking thus, Sigafoos kicked over a heap of old bones which—what do you know!—turned out to be Pithecanthropus Erectus!

But I disgress. From the brutish Pithecanthropus, man evolved slowly upward in intellect. By the Middle Paleolithic period man had invented the leash, which was a remarkable technical achievement, but frankly not particularly useful until the Mesolithic period when man invented the dog.

In the Neolithic period came the most important discovery in the history of man—the discovery of agriculture. Why is this so important? Because, good friends, without agriculture there would be no tobacco, and without tobacco there would be no Marlboro, and without Marlboro you would be without the finest filter cigarette that money can buy, and I would be without a job.

That's why.

Without tobacco you would also be without Marlboro's sister cigarette, Philip Morris, a non-filter smoke that can't be beat. Philip Morris or Marlboro—pick your pleasure.

Sacred Choral Music Concert Here Tuesday

A concert of sacred choral music, under the direction of Dr. Wilton Mason, will be presented by the University Chorus in Hill Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m.

The program of sacred music, the chorus will sing Faure's Requiem Mass, "Vexilla regis" and "O sacrum convivium" by G. B. Pergolesi and "Alleluia" by Randall Thomson.

Soloists for the Requiem Mass will be Rebecca Carnes, soprano, and Joel Carter, bass-baritone. The organ accompaniment will be provided by Glenn Watkins. The Mass was written in 1887 to the memory of Faure's fathers.

"Vexilla regis" is processional hymn which was written in the sixth century by Venantius Fortunatus and which has been often set to music by various composers. "O sacrum convivium" was originally an antiphon used in church liturgy. Pergolesi wrote both works in four parts for soprano, alto, tenor and bass without accompaniment.

"Alleluia" is another four-part chorus without accompaniment, written by Randall Thomson, a member of the music department faculty and composer in residence at Harvard University.

Grim Guessing Game Replaces Rabid Rifles

By PHIL CORNER

HENDERSON, N. C., April 25 (UP)—A grim guessing game between officers and unidentified gunmen has replaced uncontrolled rifle sniping in this city's two mill areas. At stake in the game are human lives.

Strikers and strike-sympathizers, inflamed when last week's apparent settlement went awry, besieged the firm's two mills Monday and forced workers to remain inside through the night.

By Tuesday morning a huge highway patrol force, which had been pulled away after the announced "settlement," returned and enabled the workers to leave the plant shortly after dawn.

The reinforced patrol group, and the use of brilliant parachute flares and floodlights brought about a gradual decline of nighttime shooting during the rest of the week. New strategy probably will be needed next Tuesday, when president John D. Cooper Jr. plans to place his mills at full three-shift operation.

Both Gov. Hodges and Henderson Mayor Carroll V. Singleton have asked Cooper to defer the third shift. In reply to Hodges, Cooper said that would be "an absolute surrender to force and violence."

The week, which began in a welter of confusion, ended with a sort of pattern. The early morning opening of the daytime shift produced no violence, small crowds of strikers and little tension.

Larger crowds showed up for the shift changes at 3 p.m. The mood was somewhat more angry, but, with the increased police help, violence was absent.

However, at 11 p.m., when the second shift workers returned home, the tension was explosive and some rifle fire was heard each night except Friday. Friday's shooting began and ended before the workers left.

The shooting at the South Henderson plant, scene of most of the violence, came from a back street. The flares cast a twilight glow over the area, and enabled Henderson police and highway patrolmen—armed with riot guns and tear gas—to patrol the backyards.

They were unable to locate the shooters, but their presence forced a curtailment.

After both sides said they had resolved their differences April 17, it was discovered that the striking Textile Workers Union of America would be entitled fewer jobs than expected.

The agreement broke down and the violence flared to new proportions.

The mills will resume their 11th week of operations in the face of the five-months-old strike Monday. They plan to begin a third shift Tuesday.

Mayor Singleton has announced a news conference in the Henderson city council office Sunday night at 7 p.m.

'CILE TURNER
. . . cuts loose Sunday night

Milk Pail, Piano Or Drums To Accompany 'Cile Turner

Lucille Turner, well known singer of blues, spiritual and folk songs, will present a concert in Hill Hall tonight at 8:30.

Miss Turner, better known as 'Cile, follows no pre-arranged program. Instead, she gives the audience songs she "feels" they would like.

Accompanying herself with either a milk pail, piano, or drums, 'Cile sings to please every mood with her contralto voice. Some of her songs will be originals.

One of her albums, " 'Cile Sings," was recently voted the number one album by Billboard magazine. She records for Colonial Records and has made guest appearances all the way from veteran's hospitals to the Jack Paar TV show.

A few of her vast array of songs are: "Full of the Moon," "Crap-Shootin' Sinner," "Drizzlin' Rain," "John Henry" and "Old Tom."

Tickets may be bought in advance at Ledbetter-Pickards, Sloans Drug, Glen Lennox Pharmacy, or at the door of Hill Hall before 8:30 Sunday night.

Y Cabinet Announced

Twenty-one coeds have been selected for the YWCA Cabinet next year. These new members and new officers will be installed at a banquet Monday, May 11.

Sophie Martin, new YWCA president, announced the names of the Cabinet members at a Y meeting last week.

These coeds are: Peggy Bradford, in charge of hospital visiting; Carol Tieslau, hospital entertainment; Kathy Glavin and Phyllis Glynn, DDix Hill; Dedee Hatten, welfare; Sharon Sullivan, Girl Scouts and Y-Teens; Sally McCrory, Blind School; Claudia Lipscomb, conferences.

Shipra Bose, international relations; Judy Singletary, human relations; Betty Jean Baxter, public affairs; Cynthia Grant, U. N. education; Susie Corden, Y night; Judy Brott, worship and vespers.

Nancy Aubrey, Campus Chest; Kay Knight, publications; Nancy Smathers, office force; Gigi Aires, dorm publicity, and Betty Duke, campus publicity.

Coeds Peel-To Bathing Suits In 15th Sigma Chi Derby

The Daily Tar Heel wouldn't ordinarily advertise a "race to the flesh," but the eight UNC coeds in the Sigma Chi Derby's "race" Thursday will be tripping to—bathing suits.

The race to the flesh is one event in an afternoon of activities in the 15th Annual Sigma Chi Derby at UNC, which will begin with a parade at 2 p.m. Thursday in downtown Chapel Hill.

After the parade, the Sigma Chis will stage six events in Kenan Stadium; and an added feature to this year's Derby will be a girl throwing contest (girls throwing silver dollars), sponsored by Kemp's.

Dollar Throw

Coeds selected from each sorority, the Town Girls Association and each dormitory floor will throw silver dollars from the rock wall across from Kemp's. The girl who throws a dollar the farthest will be given her choice of 10 long playing albums for her organization. Her date will be awarded 10 gallons of ice cream from the Dairy Bar.

Participating in the main events of the Derby will be the seven UNC sorority and the Nurses Dorm.

Serving as master of ceremonies for the Kenan Stadium events will be Fred Swearingen.

Miss Modern Venus

Another attention-drawing event is the Miss Modern Venus contest, during which attractive coeds will compete for the title of Miss Modern Venus.

Entries in this contest include the following: Nancy Wells and Sabra Brew, Nurses; Sally Pullen and Boots Baker, Pi Phi; Judy Bunn and Jane Parker, Kappa; Jean Whiting and Tina Baensch, KD; Maxine Greenfield and Jody Grecio, ADPi; Joyce Farris and Sara Doggett, Alpha Gam; Jane Newsome and Mary Britton, Tri Delt, and Eleanor Smith and Linda Watkins, Chi O.

Hit the Greek

One of the Sigma Chis will be object of attention by eight coeds entered in the hit the Greek contest. Throwing pies at the Sigma Chi, to be selected before Thursday on the basis of most deserving of being hit by a chocolate pie, will be these girls:

Joy Howell, Pi Phi; Boots Uzzell, Nurses; Charlene Bass, KD; Marion Eells, Chi O; Margaret Crowson, Alpha Gam: Donna Irving, ADPi; Linda Rehm, Tri Delt, and Boots Koch, Kappa.

Taking their chances on a secret event (which will be something in the vein of riding on donkeys) are these coeds: Celeste Liffingwell, Nures; Sybil Mathis, KD; Jenny Elder, Chi O; Charlene Fisher, Alpha Gam; Sue Donisthorpe, Tri Delt; Eunice Simmons, ADPi; Missy Selzer, Pi Phi, Alice Dannenbaum, Kappa.

Relay Race

Pi Phi, Sue Wardner, Diana Harmon, Clara Mack, Jane Stikeleather, Gay Wilson and Lee Del Greco; Nurses, Beverly Moore, Dale Whitted, Kathryn Fox, Nan McKay, Beverly Desmond and Bonnie Howell; KD, Peggy Moor, Patsy Stanton, Ann Shaw, Jean Whiting, Sally Green and Lyn Leonard;

Party Party Planned

By DAVE JONES

The first meeting of the Student Party under the leadership of its 1959-60 officers will be held Monday night at 7:30 in Roland Parker I and II.

The chief topic under discussion for the new year will by a possible change to Tuesday for the party's regular meeting time.

Proponents of the Tuesday change have argued that more freshmen will be able to attend Student Party meetings in the fall if the day is moved from Monday. Those opposed to the change feel that Student Party members who are in other activities such as the Di, the Phi and the University Club will not be able to participate fully.

Outgoing Student Party leaders will give their final reports on the past year's activities and the Advisory Board will report on it recent decisions and the party committee appointments.

SP Floor Leader Jim Crownover will give his legislative report concerning the activities of Student Party legislators in the past week's session.

Bill Whichard and the by-laws revision committee will report on its activities and progress to the group, and the entertainment committee will report on the progress made toward a party party.

The newly elected Student Party Chairman, Dewey Sheffield is currently in the infirmary. Party Vice Chairman Norman Estes Smith is making preparations for the meeting and will preside in the event that Sheffield is not able to be present.

Delta Upsilon Celebrates Sixth Founders' Day

Delta Upsilon social fraternity held its sixth annual Founders' Day Ball last night at the Carolina Inn, commemorating the founding of the local chapter on April 25, 1953.

Miss Harriet Houston of Charlotte, N. C., was chosen Queen of the Delta U. Founders' Day Ball by alumni and university officials present at the dance.

Miss Houston, a student at Queens College in Charlotte, was presented a gold crown and a bouquet of red roses by Frank Carper, social chairman. She was escorted by Stan Black, treasurer of the chapter.

The Founders' Day program started Saturday afternoon with an open house for faculty, alumni and University officials at the chapter house.

A formal dinner for alumni, members and their dates and wives began at 7 p.m. in a private room at Watts Restaurant. During the banquet President John Dalton introduced visiting alumni and the current chapter officers.

After the meal Thomas Cornell, outgoing pledgemaster, presented pledge and scholarship awards. The Best Pledge award was presented to Stephen Ross Burch of Edenton.

The Carolina Inn Ballroom was the scene of the formal dance lasting from 9 until 12 p.m. Music for the Ball was provided by Les Sutorius and his combo. Another student group performed briefly during intermission.

ART SHOW

The second annual Sidewalk Art Show will be on exhibit today 12 noon through 6 p.m. on the lawn between Battle-Vance-Pettigrew and the University Methodist Church.

Harriet Houston, chosen Queen of the Delta U. Founder's Day Ball at the Carolina Inn last night.

St. Anthony's May Get Pool

By PHIL RIGRON

Next fall members of the Delta Psi fraternity (St. Anthony Hall) will be in two new houses and they may be the first fraternity on campus to have a swimming pool.

Construction on the new buildings began April 1 and should be completed by the beginning of the fall semester in September. The new buildings are located on Pittsboro Street between Delta Delta Delta sorority and Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The new buildings will costs approximately $125,000. The two old buildings located on Cameron Avenue and Pittsboro Street were sold to the Carolina Inn for $70,000. The property will be used for future extension of the Inn.

The new buildings will house 22 boys. Only 14 can stay in the present main house and the annex. The pool may be finished by next spring.

The fraternity first occupied the current building in 1926.

G. M. SLATE

The Kappa Delta Jane C. Gray Award at 4 p.m. today in the main lounge is the only activity scheduled in Graham Memorial today.

The following activities are scheduled in Graham Memorial Monday: Audit Board, 2-4 p.m., Woodhouse; Publications Board, 3-5 p.m., Grail; S.P., 7-9 p.m., Roland Parker I & II; German Club, 7-9 p.m., Woodhouse; Bridge, 7-9 p.m., Rendesvous; Dance Committee, 7:15-8:15 p.m., Grail; GMAB Publicity, 7:30-9 p.m., Roland Parker III; Grail, 9 p.m., Grail.

Spaghetti Dinner, Combo Tonight In Parish House

The Canterbury Club will sponsor a spaghetti dinner tonight in the Episcopal Church parish house. Music during the dinner will be by Ed Crow's Combo.

The meal will be served from 4:30 to 7:30. Tickets are being sold at the church for $1 or may be purchased at the door today.

Foreign Service Lecture

Ambassador Waldemar J. Gallman, director general of the U. S. Foreign Service, will be here Monday to speak to faculty and studentso n "The United States Foreign Service" at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

Gallman's lecture is sponsored by the Committee on International Affairs headed by Prof. Shepard Jones in connection with the international studies curriculum established last year by faculty action.

Ambassador Gallamn, a native of New York, has had a long and distinguished career in the Foreign Service of the United States.

He has been in the diplomatic service for 37 years.

Key Personnel, Music Featured In "Oh Hellas"

Key personnel are essential in making any play a success, and the Sound and Fury production of "Oh Hellas," coming Friday and Saturday nights in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m., is no exception.

One must begin with a good script, and if it is a musical as "Oh Hellas" is, one needs good music and lyrics. And the first Key person appears in the person of Lew Hardee who co-authored the script with Carl Bridgers, who wrote the music, and who wrote some of the lyrics.

And during rehearsals, the cast is aware of Hardy's presence in assisting Joel Fleishman in the direction of the play, with special emphasis on the music.

Hardee a senior Radio, Television, and Motion Pictures major, has participated in the UNC glee club, participated in the Petite Dramatique production of "Judith."

Hardee collaborated with Bridgers, who left UNC two years ago, largely mail with each mailing bits and pieces of the plot to one another. It was the second collaboration attempt for the pair who combined to write, "The House by the Seventh Sea," which has not yet been produced.

But if a script and music are necessary, then there must be something done with the music, and dancing and directing dances is something of a specialty of Tony Millili, who is the musical-comedy's Choreographer.

Millili, a graduate student in Dramatic Arts, studied under Norman Craig at the Philadelphia Civic ballet, and had the dancing lead in Brigadoon in the Yale Drama Festival. A member of the Mask and Wig Club at the University of Pennsylvania, he has acted in such plays as "The Crucible," "Come Back Little Sheba," "Mr. Roberts," "Harvey," and "The Man Who Came To Dinner."

In "Oh Hellas," Millili has staged two lively dance sequences, which are destined to add life to an already lively play.

But somebody is necessary to get the dancers and the actors on stage, to see that the people know their lines, to make sure the costumes are around, and that the stage is set up as it ought to be, and that person in "Oh Hellas" in stage manager Chuck Cushman.

Cushman is a senior history major frim Winchester, Mass. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity and a former student legislator.

Yet, the overall responsibility for getting everything necessary for the play to open in order falls upon Al Salley, who is the play's producer.

Salley is also a member of Phi Delta Theta. He participated in the Asheville Community Theater, and currently is majoring in business administration with an eye to pursuing a law degree after graduation.

Tickets are now on sale at Y Court and Graham Memorial. The price of admission is a half-dollar.

Dorm Men's 3 Re-Election Is Tuesday; Five Will Run

A re-election for two members of Legislature from Dorm Men's III will be held Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The candidates for two 1-year seats are Dan Brown (SP), Phil Edwards, (Ind.), Roy Goodman (SP), Ronnie Millican (UP) and Vince Mulieri (UP).

The re-election is being held on a direction from the Student Council. The council called for the re-election after hearing a care last week involving an infraction of the Election Law.

One of the candidates for Legislature, Goodman, was brought before the council for tending the poll in Alexander Dorm from 2 to 4 p.m. April 7. The Election Law forbids a candidate to do this.

In its decision, the council said it did not question the good faith or integrity of Goodman, who was unaware of the rule. He violated the letter of the law, the council said, but not the intent of the law.

Much of the responsibility for the rule infraction was placed with the Elections Board and an Interdormitory Council representative who asked Goodman to tend the poll.

UP Will Elect Officers

University Party members will elect new party officers and discuss by-laws for the UP at a meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Roland Parker I and II.

The UP will elect these officers: chairman, vice chairman, secretary, treasurer and sergeant-at-arms.

Student Body President Charlie Gray will also speak at the meeting.

Government Interviews

Students have until Monday to submit applications for positions on various student government organizations.

The application blanks are available in the student government office. Interviews with applicants are being held until further notice.

MONOGRAM CLUB OFFICERS

The UNC Monogram Club met Thursday night and elected the following members as officers for the coming year:

Bob Shupin, President, succeeding Don Kemper.

Nelson Lowe, Vice-President, succeeding Phil Blazer.

John Schroeder, Treasurer, succeeding Don Redding.

Bing Somers, Secretary, suceeding Don Redding.

Fred Mueller, Sergeant-at-Arms, succeeding Bob Shupin.

Tom Cordle, CAA Representative, succeeding Dave Scurlock.

Rip Hawkins, Social Chairman, succeeding Fred Swearingen.

ADPi Ice Cream Party

A homemade ice cream party will be held at the Alpha Delta Pi house Tuesday at 6:45 p.m.

In addition to the ice cream and homemade cookies, music by a combo and the Shades will be featured. Tickets to the ice cream party are being sold for 20 cents.

Legislature & Laziness!

The following is the text of a letter received by the editor of this paper on Friday afternoon. It is written by the Student Party floorleader Jim Crownover, who is also excutive assistant to the president of the student body and a former candidate for the vice presidency of the student body.

Editor:

For the first time in a year that includes portions of three legislative sessions, I have lost some of the faith I once had in some of my fellow legislators.

Thursday night the student solons flagrantly violated their true representation and responsibility to their electorate. I say this, not because I introduced the measure, but only because the bill and its purpose could be construed in on way so as to claim that it was introduced for any reason other than to make the Legislature more representative of student feeling.

The bill called for no more than that each legislator visit each housing unit in his district twice a year, and at these meetings do the following three things: (1) inform the people of what he is doing in Legislature; (2) inform them of what others are doing; (3) give them an opportunity to ask questions and offer suggestions.

I ask you, the students, what do you know about what Legislature does, do you know your legislator, and, above all, do you believe in the Student Legislature as an effective organization? If so, fine. If not, you were denied your opportunity Thursday night

If you do not know what Legislature does, and one of the following legislators represents you, go to him and ask him why he voted against the measure:

Linda Biser
Troy Blanton
Jim Blue
Don Dotson
Frank Eagles
Anne Eckerson
Bob Grubb
Peyton Hawes
Dixie Jackson
Dave Jones
Sherman Kennedy
Fred Lavery
Jack Lawing
Bill Mallory
Taylor McMillan
Bill Miller
Joe Oppenheimer
Rick Overstreet
Hank Patterson
Bill Porter
Bob Sevier
Pope Shuford
Bob Smith
Bob Thompson
Bill Young

If the Legislature doesn't change the bill to a resolution and move reconsideration, they have really "missed the boat." I do not care how they change the wording — the idea is what counts. I challenge you legislators to amend your ways and you constituents to rise up and voice your opinion.

Jim Crownover

(We agree 100% with the sentiments expressed by Rep. Crownover. The paper feels that in defeating this bill, the Student Legislature has publically helped to destroy the very essence of its foundation. For a group that is supposed to be representative, it is about as un-representative as any body we know.

It is unfortunate that a bill like this must be introduced in the first place. It is even more unfortunate that the Legislature defeats such a measure. In a day when this University is ever increasing in size, there is more than ever a necessity for student leaders (?) to meet with their constituents. Does the Student Legislature do this? No. For most of them, their job ceases when they are elected, except for a few good members like Rep. Crownover, who feel a duty to do a first class job.)

More Social Fees

Editor:

The attitude of the woman students who are in favor of the Women's Residence Council's collecting social fees seems to be that if an activity is considered worthwhile by those who participate in it, it should be made compulsory. This seems logical somehow: Everybody likes parties; make sure they go to them. Everyone likes the housemother, so no one will object to a small fine to insure that she receives a present. (If anyone should object, a few nights spent campused will take care of them.)

If this is an exaggeration-if only a few neurotic troublesmakers consider a fee for parties an imposition, why is it necessary for the W.R.C. to collect the fees?

A vote no in the referendum is not a vote against having parties in the dorms, against giving the housemother a gift, against sending flowers to girls who are sick, although this is how the bill has been presented to the woman students by the representatives of W.R.C.. A vote no, simply means that there are many other ways to finance worthwhile activities, and that dormitory unity of feeling (mentioned by Cynthia Grant in her letter) is best furthered by leaving the responsibility for their activities to the girls in the dorms.

"But the dorms don't have the power to collect the fees." (If I am misquoting Kay Boortz, I hope that she will correct me.) No they don't-that is precisely the point. If the girls in the dorms are so anxious for these activities, then they should have the opportunity to conduct them on a voluntary basis.

This would not mean having 80 separate collections for activities, 3 dorm meetings a week to decide on activities, or a treasurer who is haggard from the bookkeeping required to keep funds in order. I can only attribute lack of imagination to those who make this objection.

As nearly as I can find, the social and activities fees are used for floats, exhibits, parties, flowers for the sick, and presents for the housemother and maids (Surplus funds go up in smoke at the end of the year) Why not put breakfasts and coffee breaks, floats and exhibits under one fee (voluntary), to be collected along with the key deposit at the beginning of each semester. Use of the fee could be explained at the first dormitory meeting. Since large parties are held infrequently, girls could sign up for them and pay the treasurer. Money for flowers and presents could be collected by the hall representatives. Surely a girl would prefer a smaller bouquet from the girls who live closest around her to one from "Smith Dormitory."

If there are objections to this plan, there are modifications which will make it satisfactory; these might vary according to the requirements of each particular dormitory. In any event, why not try to devise a suitable plan? This could be one area in which the W.R.C. might offer constructive advice and help to women students, in contrast to their usual approach of making a rule to evade a problem, instead of trying to solve it.

The important thing is that compulsory charity is nothing to be proud of, and enforced activities are an affront to the girl who feels that she is quite able to devise her own amusement. Every student on this campus should be able to choose for himself in such matters. The woman students should not be an exception to this.

Legislative Roundup

Actions With Our Solons

Dave Jones

Thursday night the Student Legislature acted on two pieces of legislation written by Jim Crownover (SP), Representative Crownover acted in what he felt was the best interest of Student Government and of the Dormitory Women students concerned.

The legislature saw fit to defeat one of Crown over's bills and to pass the other. There was absolutely no party or block voting on either of these measures.

In so far as the "Bill to make meetings of all legislators with their constituencies compulsory" is concerned, the prevailing side was against the measure for more or less the following reasons.

It is a bill and not a resolution. It uses the word "Compulsory" and does not have any enforcement provisions; It has a requirement that legislators fill out a form certifying that they have been to all the required meetings etc.; And it does not take fully into account the peculiar problems of the different districts.

In addition to these arguments, there is one which was put forth by one of the bills oponents, that something like this should be expressed oraly and taken on as a tradition, and become a common law for the legislature. He felt that if it were written down it would be only so many words on a piece of paper and have no meaning.

Undoubtedly there will be a lot of discussion on this bill in the next few days. Legislators will be patted on the back and also condemned for their stands on this issue.

Crownover's intent was to put the legislator in a position where he can communicate with his constituants. This is something that has been needed as the biggest problem of Student Government for a long time. Communication has been cited day.

Ift he technical problems in this bill can be licked, and the responsibility of the individual legislator to his constituents be brought home forcefully enough the measure will sail through the body and win unanamous approval, when it is reconsidered.

"A bill to authorize a referendum of women dormitory residents concerning the collection of social and activity fees" was the other Crownover bill.

This fee problem has been a serious one for a long time. It came to a head recently when the old method of collection was ruled unconstitutional.

A bill to authorize the WRC to collect the fees was introduced in the 26th assembly. It got absolutely nowhere. It was so unconstitutional that it just lay there and died when the session died.

Then the introduction of the bill that passed Thursday night brought new light and controversey. As written and passed a week ago the bill said "The question to be voted on . . . will be whether or not WRC shall be allowed to collect . . . fees, to have the power to determine the amount . . . ect."

Student Body President Gray and other experts pointed out that this was likewise unconstitutional. Fees can be collected by or for a student group only after approval by the University.

Thursday night, Crownover called the bill back to the floor and asked for changes which would provide that "The administration be requested by the WRC to authorize the collection of a social and activity fee from all women's dorms."

Now there was on the floor a constitutional measure designed to tackle the ticklish problem of women's fees. Representative Crownover had come a long way in a sticky uphill fight.

But he still had a long way to go. There was serious opposition from members who fetl that minority right were being infringed upon by the setting up of machinery to put the collection of these fees into opeartion.

They argued themselves out, then used all of the parliamentary maneuvers they could think of to continue debate and prevent a vote until their point was driven home again and again.

Acting Speaker Jim Scott (SP) guided the bill through the maneuver and discussion like a pilot guiding the Queen Mary up the Colorado River. (All this time the oldest SP was very glad that he was not in the Speaker's Chair.)

Finally, every motion had been voted on and the vote on the main bill came. The body passed it 29 to 11.

An amendment that had been reccomended by the WRC to protect minority right, and to give them a stronger mandate in the event of passage was introduced by Representative Bob Nobles (SP).

This amendment called for a two thirds vote to effect passage of the referendum. Nobles asked for and got special orders. The amendment passed without serious opposition.

Rights & Duties

Our town is not really full of editors and publishers this week. It merely seems that way. The meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, with related meetings by press agencies, has brought us only about twelve hundred guests. But these twelve hundred represent, in the A.N.P.A. alone, 846 newspapers with a total circulation of more than fifty-two million.

Censorship has smashed type and stopped presses in every part of the world that is dictatorially ruled—chiefly, but not entirely, the Communist world. Even in a democracy, however, we have to watch for fear of interference by some dim-witted public official, by the pressure of a foolish law, or by the unauthorized activity of private organizations. Advertizers in America today do not dictate to newspapers. This is not wholly because everybody has become more virtuous. It is because it wouldn't pay advertisers to try to dictate and it wouldn't pay newspapers to let them dictate. The main asset of any newspaper is the confidence of its readers.

But American journalism is not as free as it ought to be. The directors of The Associated Press yesterday mentioned among the "obstacles to fair and factual news reporting" the restriction of "access to public information in the news." For example, this newspaper recently had a trying experience of sitting for many months on an item of news, because, unhappily, there were officials who didn't believe the American people were grown up enough to be told about the brilliant success of an effort to throw a radioactive band in space around the world.

No thoughtful newspaper man would argue that owners and editors of newspapers have a sacred right to print everything they feel like printing. The right in this case in not the newspaper's right to print, but the public's right to know. If any news vehicle distorts, misrepresents or suppresses, it betrays its trust.

Journalism has to be a business or it could not survive, or would not remain free. It is also a service and an art, and justifies its existence in general and in particular cases by remaining so.

Four Freedoms

A good society is able to face schemes of world domination and foreign revolutions alike without fear.

Since the beginning of our American history we have been engaged in change, in a perpetual, peaceful revolution, a revolution which goes on steadily, quietly, adjusting itself to changing conditions without the concentration camp or the quick-lime in the ditch. The world order which we seek is the cooperation of free countries, working together in a friendly civilized society.

This nation has placed its destiny in the hands, heads and hearts of its millions of free men and women, and its faith in freedom under the guidance of God. Freedom means the supremacy of human rights everywhere. Our support goes to those who struggle to gain those rights and keep them. Our strength is in our unity of purpose.

To that high concept there can be no end save victory.

The announcement of Ladies' Day as a title for a forthcoming book by Dudley Fitts was somewhat mystifying: the similarity to the title of one of those recipe-crammed magazines distributed at the super-market was unmistakable.

Happily, it turns out that the only recipe in this new book is for humor, for Ladies' Day is the latest of Mr. Fitts' translations of Aristophanes. Like Lysistrata, Frogs and Birds — the other plays in the series — this one is a delight.

To be sure, credit for the play still goes to Aristophanes, with the witty and erudite Mr. Fitts listed as translator. Even without direct acquaintance with the source, it seems justifiable to recognize Mr. Fitts more as a collaborator. Obviously, the ancient Greek language and conventions do not just metamorphose into modern English equivalents. Such an updating requires not only a proper reverence for the original, tempered with classical scholarship; but also a creative talent comparable almost to the originary genius.

The extent of Mr. Fitts' service in this department can best be illustrated by a comparison of some lines from his version of Lysistrata with the corresponding lines from the fairly standard version BF (Before Fitts).

The standard translation gives us the following at the very opening of the play:

CALONICE. Good day, Lysistrata; but pray, why this dark, forbidding face, my dear? Believe me, you don't look a bit pretty with those black lowering brows.

This is unwieldly prose and no poetry at all. Mr Fitts renders the same speech:

KALONIKE: Goodmorning, Lysistrata. Darling, don't frown so! You'll ruin your face!

With this, the stage is set for a different business — for plausible women and for comedy. The versions are similar enough in sense to assure the mono-lingual cripples among us that they approximate the original text. They are both "authentic." The difference is that the standard translation is treacherous in its faithfulness to Aristophanes: humor and poetry, the non-corporeal essences of the original, are smothered under a literal blanket.

To compound the crime, the blanket is of Victorian manufacture, and lines that could not have been anything but low burlesque taunts in the original become inept non sequitors in translation. Thus this insipid exchange in the Parados:

CHOROUS OF OLD MEN. Silence! ere my stick has cut short your days.
CHOROUS OF WOMEN. Now, just you dare to touch Stratyllis with the tip of your finger!

Mr. Fitts reads the same exchange somewhat differently, with good results.

CHORAGOS (m): Look out! I've got a stick!
CHORAGOS (w): You lay a half-inch of your stick on Stratyllis, and you'll never stick again!

Not only is the repartee itself funny in the Fitts version; but the tone and structure also permit a comic reading.

Lysistrata is used here for purposes of comparison mainly because it happens to be at hand. It is worth noting, however, that Fitts version is on sale at a very reduced price at the local bookstore; and that the play is the basis for the forthcoming Sound and Fury production, Oh, Hellas!

Also, the success of Mr. Fitts' Ladies' Day (Greek title: Thesmophoriazusae; with a circumflex over the "u" for easy pronunciation) is due to similar virtues. Again, the play has been rendered freely out of real respect for the original, rather than slavishly translated out of misguided devotion to scholarship.

Ladies' Day adds to the usual difficulties of translation the almost impossible problem of literary satire. The play concerns Euripides' attempt to send a representative to the Greek equivalent of Women's Honor Council, in order to defend himself from censure by the irate gals.

The plot gave the conservative Aristophanes an opportunity to parody Euripides' plays as well as to burlesque his character. Many of the plays which are parodied have been lost, and so Mr. Fitts has to make appropriate substitutions. Lines from Shakespeare do the trick in many spots, and miscellaneous other bits and snatches work well elsewhere.

For the rest, it is all a romp: Euripides makes a transvestite of his father-in-law and sends him clean-shaven, wigged, frocked and gowned, lisping like a fairy, to speak in his behalf at the all-girl council. The old man is discovered, of course, and only some spectacular foolery gets the two interlopers off intact, with only their dignity any the worse for wear.

The three plays of Aristophanes previously rendered by Mr. Fitts are all concerned to some extent with social themes. Lysistrata, for instance, can be read as a pacifist tract if one is not in the mood for laughts. Birds involves the search for utopia. Not so Ladies' Day: here Aristophanes was content to reduce the elegance of Euripides to ludicrous posing and bombast, and to take a few pokes at women on the side.

Although the substitutions from Shakespeare and elsewhere cannot restore the literary satire, Mr Fitts has included so much visual humor, coarse punning and general bawdiness in this version that it is a complete delight.

New Election

The paper would like to emphasize that there is an important revote in Dorm Men's III for two legislative seats this Tuesday. It is necessitated by an unfortunate incident, which occured in the first election. Winning candidate Roy Goodman (SP) was a poll tender in his dormitory during the day. This is a specific violation of the Election Laws, which states that no candidate may held out during an election as a poll tender.

It is too bad that Goodman did not realize, and had not been informed of this. He acted as a poll tender in good faith. The paper, although not endorsing any candidate for any office, feels that Goodman has received undue publicity and is the but of nasty whispers. We repeat, he acted in good faith.

Church Yard Goes Parisian

By PETER NESS

Shades of Paris! Anyone passing through the side lawn of the University Methodist Church is convinced of a Left Bank atmosphere prevailing there.

Paintings are strung out along the sidewalk and sculpture and pottery rest on the grass beside them.

The scene is the Second Annual Sidewalk Art Show, which began Friday and continues through 6 p.m. today.

The art work, most of which is for sale, gives the sidewalk and surrounding area a colorful appearnce, not unlike the display of wares by the artist in the streets of Paris

Berets and straw hats haven't been omitted from Chapel Hill by spectators who probably are more "characters" than the artists of the works they've been viewing.

The various pieces of artwork are priced from $5 up to more than $100.

Kappa Delta Sorority To Present Jane Gray Award

Kappa Delta Sorority will present the Jane Craig Gray Award to an outstanding junior girl this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

The annual award, given in memory of the late Mrs. Gordon Gray, wife of a former president of the Consolidated University, is based on character, scholarship and leadership.

Insurance Award

A prize which goes each year to the outstanding senior studying at the University for a career in insurance work has been awarded to George Daniel Carter of Mayodan.

The W. T. Beaty Insurance Award is a cash prize of $75, given by W. T Beaty of Raleigh, general agent for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company.

A scholarship committee of members of the School of Business Administration faculty chose Carter for the honor. Scholarship is the main basis for selection, but some consideration is given to participation in other university activities.

Massey Stars In Peace Film On WUNC-TV

"Does Disarmament Make Sense," starring Raymond Massey, will be a film presentation by WUNC-TV Monday at 9:15 p.m.

This is the second in the series "Eight Steps to Peace," produced by the Pierce Butler Jr., Foundation for Education in World Law, which WUNC-TV is curerntly showing. The first, "World Law," starred the late Tyrone Power. Future programs in the series are star Henry Fonda, Robert Ryan, Vanessa Brown and Vincent Price.

Massey discusses the problem of disarmament and how it can be enforced only if the United Nations is given the power to require all nations to eliminate their weapons of aggression.

It is a plea to strengthen the United Nations so that it may become the instrument capable of enforcing peace on earth. It describes how disarmament, enforced by the United Nations would help eliminate the fear which divides the nations today, and how it would relieve the world of the backbreaking costs of arms.

Massey eloquently points out how every arms race in history has resulted in war, and urges that world law, enforced by a strengthened United Nations, can end the arms race and free mankind from the scourge of war.

Covering The University Campus

GMAB PUBLICITY

A Reorganization and planning session will be in Roland Parker 3, Monday at 7:30 p.m., for the GMAB Publicity Committee.

Co-chairmen Randal Etheridge and Ed Riner have asked that all newly appointed members and the old members attend this meeting.

ENTER OFTEN—HAVE FUN—AND WIN! But think carefully! This puzzle is not as easy as it looks. At first the DOWN and ACROSS clues may appear simple. There may appear to be more than one "right" answer. For example, the clue might read: "Many a coed will be given her best date's P- -N." Either "I" (PIN) or "E" (PEN) would seem to fit. But only one answer is apt and logical as decided by the judging staff, and therefore correct. Read the rules carefully. ENTER AS OFTEN AS YOU WISH. Good luck!

RULES—PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

1. The College Puzzle Contest is open to college students and college faculty members except employees and their immediate families of Liggett & Myers and its advertising agencies.

2. Fill in all missing letters . . . print clearly. Use of obsolete, archaic, variant or foreign words prohibited. After you have completed the puzzle, send it along with six empty package wrappers of the same brand from L&M, Chesterfield or Oasis cigarettes (or one reasonable hand-drawn facsimile of a complete package wrapper of any one of the three brands) to: Liggett & Myers, P. O. Box 271, New York 46, N. Y. Enter as often as you wish, but be sure to enclose six package wrappers (or a facsimile) with each entry. Illegible entries will not be considered.

3. Entries must be postmarked by midnight, Friday, May 29, 1959 and received by midnight, Friday, June 5, 1959.

4. Entries will be judged by the Bruce-Richards Corporation, an independent judging organization, on the basis of logic and aptness of thought of solutions. In the event of ties, contestants will be required to complete in 25 words or less the following statement: "My favorite cigarette is (Chesterfield) (L&M) or (Oasis) because . . . . . ". Entries will be judged on originality, aptness of thought and interest by the Bruce-Richards Corporation. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in event of final ties. Illegible entries will not be considered. By entering all entrants agree that the decision of the judges shall be final and binding.

5. Solutions must be the original work of the contestants submitting them. All entries become the property of Liggett & Myers and none will be returned.

South Carolina Loses 4-1; Young Hurls Three-Hitter

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Wayne Young came in to relieve Ben Harding with one out in the first inning and pitched three-hit ball the rest of the way as the Tar Heels defeated South Carolina 4-1 for their ninth victory of the season.

Harding could not get the ball over the plate as he walked four of the five Gamecock batters he faced to force in the lone South Carolina tally.

To back up Young's superb mound performance Carolina collected seven hits off the combined efforts of Roger Brown and Bud Swygert to post its third ACC win in seven decisions.

Ferg Norton, Vaughn Bryson, and Lary Craver all had two hits apiece to pace the Tar Heel attack. Norton and Johnny Burgwyn each scored two runs.

After South Carolina had gone ahead in the first 1-0 by virtue of the four walks, the Tar Heels rallied to tie the score in their half of the second on a walk to Burgwyn, a ground out by Norton which sent Burgwyn to second, and a single by Bryson.

The Heels got another in the fourth when Burgwyn led off the inning by getting hit by the pitch. After a single by Norton and a walk to Bryson had loaded the bases, Burgwyn was forced at home on a grounder off the bat of Craver. At this point Young, who is now 3-1, got himself a rbi when his grounder to short allowed Norton to race home thus breaking the tie.

Carolina got its other two runs in the sixth on a combination of Burgwyn's getting hit by the pitch again, and three straight singles by Norton, Bryson, and Craver.

ROBINSON WILL FIGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, a former vaudeville hoofer, danced away from a pair of "fight or else" ultimatums Saturday by agreeing to defend his middleweight boxing title against Carmen Basilio at the Los Angeles Coliseum September 21.

Announcement of Robinson's acceptance came from Roy Warner, a San Bernardino, Calif., promoter, and was confirmed by George Gainford, one of Robinson's managers.

Robinson, he of the fancy footwork, was somewhere between his New York home, office, and saloon and unavailable for comment.

INDIANS LOSE

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chicago's White Sox inflicted Cleveland's second defeat of the season Saturday, 8-6, scoring five unearned runs in the ninth inning of a see-saw game. Pinch hitter Earl Torgeson's three-run homer was the big blow for the final Chicago runs.

Track Team Humbles Wake & Va.

Carolina's track team won yesterday's triangular meet with Virginia and Wake Forest by taking off 88 points to Wake's 67½ and the Deacons by 67½.

The Tar Heels had three men who placed first in two events. Ray Stanley won both the broad jump and javelin while Lyndon DeBorde took both hurdling events and Dave Scurlock copped the 220 and the 440.

Carolina's middle distance man Cowles Llipfert ran first in the half mile and tied Wayne Bishop for the honors in the mile.

In the freshman meet the Tar Heel frosh walked all over their opponents from Wake Forest as they rolled up a 120-10 victory by winning every event.

University Chorus To Feature Sacred Choral Works In Concert

Making their second appearance for the academic year, the University Chorus will present Faure's "Requiem Mass" in a concert of sacred choral works to be given in Hill Hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

Conducted by Dr. Wilton Mason, associate professor in the Music Department, the chorus is composed of 60 students representing nearly all the departments of the University. In January the chorus sang the choruses for the Music Department's production of "Carmen."

For this performance of Faure's Mass, the choristers will be assisted by guest soloists Rebecca Carnes, soprano, and Dr. Joel Carter, bass-baritone.

Mrs. Carnes, music teacher in Orange County schools and graduate student in the Music Department, sang the role of Andromeda in the Rice-Link opera, "Whoever Passes Along the Paths of the Sea," recently staged for Petite Musicale.

Dr. Carter, associate professor in the department and director of the Chapel Hill Choral Club and the UNC Glee Club, appeared as Escamillo in the January concert version of "Carmen."

Dr. Glenn Watkins, organist and assistant professor in the Music Department, will play the accompaniment for the Requiem Mass.

The remainder of the program will consist of unaccompanied choral works: "Vexilla regis" and "O sacrum convivium" by G. B. Pergolesi and "Alleluia" by Randayy Thomson.

Camp Lejeune Hosts NROTC

Around 40 NROTC Midshipmen are visiting the Second Marine Division at Camp Lejune.

The midshipmen are getting a firsthand view of the role of the versatile helicopter, a reinforced rifle company in an assault, SCUBA (Self-Contained Breathing Apparatus) gear, the firepower of the 106mm recoilless rifle, and amphibious warfare and vertical evelopment executed by a Brigade airground team.

Prospective Marine officers, the midshipmen are viewing Second Marine Division activities in an indoctrination tour conducted by the NROTC unit as part of its formal training.

The UNC midshipmen went to the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point Sunday. They are accompained during the tour by Marine Major L. C. Norton, member of the Naval Science staff at UNC. Major Walter A. Heyer, is the 2nd Division escort officer.

Annual Parents' Day To Be Held On Sunday

North Carolina legislators have been invited to come to Carolina for its Annual Parent's Day on Sunday. Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity is sponsoring the event.

Information booths will be maintained at the Old Well and in front of the Morehead Building. Information as to activities and locations of University features will be available.

Letters of invitation have been sent to all parents of present and incoming freshmen. Other students have been requested to invite their parents personally.

Open house in the dorms will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Fraternities and sororities will also be open at this time.

The Air Force ROTC will pass in review on Fetzer Field at 2 p.m. also. The Review will be followed by a reception for Air Force ROTC parents in the Air Science Lounge.

An arms and equipment exhibit will be held in the Naval Armory.

A faculty reception will be held at 3:30 under Davie Poplar. At 4:30 there will be an address by Vice-President William Carmichael and a band concert on the same location.

The Sound and Fury production, "Oh, Hellas!", will be held Sunday at 8 p.m. It was originally planned for only Friday and Saturday.

Larry Hayer, a senior from Kannapolis, is chairman of the APO committee planning the annual event.

REJECTION — That's Al Miller being rejected by Miss Chapel Hill, Jane Newsom, in the Sound and Fury production of 'Oh, Hellas!" coming Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Tickets are currently on sale at Y-Court and Graham Memorial. The price of admission is 50c.

Sound And Fury Coming Soon

Miss Chapel Hill, a host of new talent, and some front line experience are all combined in Sound and Fury's 1959 production "Oh, Hellas!" coming to Memorial Hall Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

The play, a student written, student acted, student directed, student costumed, and student staged production, is a take-off on Aristophanes' comic battle of the sexes, "Lysistrata." The play was written by Lew Hardee and Carl Bridgers.

Sch comparative neophytes as Jane Newsom (Miss Chapel Hill), Nancy Aubrey, Susie Cordon, Al Miller, Frank Beaver, Sandy Regenie, Jane Durham and Paul Burroughs promise to add life to the entirely student written, acted, directed, and produced play.

Monell, who plays Demetrius in this adaptation from Aristophanes' famous comedy about the battle between the sexes, is a veteran Carolina Playmaker. He has performed with such groups as the Gilbert & Sullivan Festival Theater, the American Shapespeare Festival Theater, and will be a member of the Colorado Shakespeare Festival company this summer.

Williams, who both dances and plays the part of The Spartan in the Sound and Fury production, has participated in "Unto These Hills," the Durham Theater Guild, and the North Carolina Ballet Theater.

Two girls, destined to make the most important comic contributions to the show are Susie Gordon as Lampito, and Nancy Aubrey, as the irrepressible Calonika.

In playing the chairman of the Spartan Ladies Culture Club and wrestling team, Miss Cordon is stepping into the spotlight for the first time on a Carolina stage. A member of Chi Omega sorority and the YWCA, she participated actively in dramatic productions in high school.

Miss Aubrey, the newly-elected president of the Panhellenic Council, is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority and the Women's Residence Council.

The play is sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board, and tickets are currently on sale at both G.M. and Y Court. The admission charge for either Friday or Saturday night is 50 cents.

Re-Election Today

Five candidates are running for the two 1-year seats of the Legislature from Dorm Men's III to be elected today.

Dan Brown (SP), Phil Edwards (ind.), Roy Goodman (SP), Ronnie Millican (UP) and Vince Mulieri (UP) are the candidates in today's re-election in Dorm Men's III.

The Student Council called for the election after hearing a case involving an infraction of the Election Law.

Polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Joyner, Alexander, Conner and Winston dormitories.

Spectrum On Sale Sunday

A one-act play by George Hill, graduate student in dramatic art, will be included in the second issue of Spectrum magazine, which goes on sale Sunday.

Spectrum includes writing and art work only of persons who are in some way connected with the University. The first issue of the publications was printed in January.

The magazine is backed by Jim Hausman, a student in the Business Administration School. With this issue, Spectrum is under the new editorship of Ted Crane, graduate student in classics.

The controversial first issue of Spectrum was commended by some as a healthy sign of student life; others condemned the magazine as being obscene, immoral and scandalous.

In addition to the one-act play, the second issue of Spectrum will contain a short story by Mrs. Anne Higgins, wife of a sociology instructor, and poems by Ross Baumstone, Dennis Parksand Bill Cheney, all undergradident in history, and Ted Crane, the uates; by Peter Young, graduate studeditor.

The art work for this issue was created by a group of art students and selected by the art editors, Jim Jordan and Robert Shannon.

Copies of Spectrum may be purchased for 35 cents Sunday at the following places: the Intimate Book Shop, Jeff's Magazine Shop, Antonio's Restaurant or in the Y Building lobby. Copies will also be available at the campus bookstores in Raleigh, Greensboro and Durham.

UP Elections Held At 7 P.M.

Party officers for the coming year will be elected at the University Party meeting tonight at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker I and II.

The positions of chairman, vice chairman, secretary, treasurer and sergeant-at-arms are open.

Sergeant-at-arms is a new office with the duties of arranging meetings, sending out notices and keeping a list of members.

Charlie Gray, student body president, will speak to the body.

Proposed by-laws will also be presented and discussed at this meeting, according to John Minter, outgoing chairman.

Lee Simonson

Dramatic Arts Presents New York Set Designer

The Department of Dramatic Art will present Lee Simonson, noted New York scene designer and theatre historian, in a series of lectures this week in The Playmakers Theater. The lectures are being delivered in conjunction with dramatic art classes, which will be open to all students of the University this week.

Simonson will speak today from 10-11 a.m. concerning scene design in a lecture entitled "From Drawing Board to Stage." This afternoon from 2 - 4 o'clock his subject will be "Styles and Alternatives."

Other lectures include "Alice in Ism-land" at 9 a.m. Wednesday; "Scenic Design As a Plan of Action," 2 p.m. Wednesday; "Grassroots Drama in America," 10 a.m. Thursday; and "The Role of the Scene Designer," 11 a.m. Saturday.

Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock a general discussion period will be held.

Simonson will close his stay with the Dramatic Art Department Monday with a public lecture in The Playmakers Theatre at 8 p.m. The title of the talk is "Eugene O'Neill As a Dramatist."

Simonson, an exponent of the "new stagecraft," is the author of a number of outstanding books on the theatre, including "The Art of Scene Design," "The Stage Is Set," "Part Of a Lifetime," "Minor Prophecies" and "Settings and Costumes of the Modern Stage." His work for the stage has included settings for "Liliom," "Back to Methuselah," "Amphytrion 38," "Marco Millions," "The Apple Cart," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Idiot's Delight" and "Man and the Masses."

He has served as director for both the Theatre Guild and the American National Theatre Academy. He is a graduate of Harvard University.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary Monday included:

Rufus Russell, Thomas Rogers, Harry Wells, William Davis, Charles Himes, John Liles, Hilary Daugherty, Janie Wright, Louis Harley, Dewey Sheffield, William Corbett and Frank Jones.

Jane C. Gray Memorial Award Given To Coed By Kappa Delta

Lu Ruth Sutton, a junior pharmacy student, has been named the recipient of the Jane Craige Gray Memorial Award for 1959, given by the Kappa Delta sorority.

This honor goes yearly to the "most outstanding junior woman student" in recognition of her character, scholarship and leadership.

The Beta Chi chapter of Kappa Delta presents it in memory of Jane Craige Gray, the wife of former UNC president Gordon Gray. Mrs. Gray died in 1953.

On Sunday afternoon a reception was held in Miss Sutton's honor at Graham Memorial. She received an inscribed silver card tray as winner of the sixth Gray Award.

Miss Sutton has been a member of the Women's Honor Council, Women's Residence Council, orientation committees and Rho Chi, honorary pharmacy fraternity. She is also vice president of the Valkyries, highest honorary for UNC women students, and is a dormitory counselor to freshmen.

Her other activities in her freshman year included membership in the Pharmacy Senate, in Kappa Epsilon, pharmacy honorary, and in the N. C. Pharmaceutical Assn. and the American Pharmacy Assn.

A graduate of Needham Broughton High School in Raleigh, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Sutton of Waccamaw.

The committee which selected Miss Sutton included Ray Jefferies, assistant to the dean of student affairs; Dr. Katherine Carmichael, dean of women and committee chairman and Donald Furtado, retiring president of the student body.

Representing the Women's Honor Council on the committee was Jane Rhea White. Sue Ballantine sat on the committee representing the women's orientation group.

Included in an advisory capacity were Miss Isabelle MacLeod, assistand to the dean of women, and Dr. Ernest Mackie, dean of awards.

Previous winners of the Gray Award were Paddy Sue Wall last year, Dorothy Byrne Pressly in 1957, Sylvia Tarantine in 1956, Jane Cocke in 1955 and Carol Webster in 1954.

SP Discusses Constitution

The Student Party voted on several proposed changes to its constitution in its meeting last night. Final approval of these amendments is contingent on their passage next week also.

The majority of the proposals were drawn up by a study committee headed by Bill Whichard. A provision to provide for a single executive assistant who would function at all times was passed after some discussion. Another proposal to provide for four campaign coordinators rather than the present one was also passed.

It was decided that the file clerk should be elected rather than appointed hereafter. An amendment to provide for a dual committee to handle membership and publicity functions was tabled until next week for reconsideration by the Revisions Committee. Most of the other amendments were of a more technical nature and all were passed.

The party considered briefly the suggestion that meetings be held on Tuesday nights no action being taken. The election of a file clerk was postponed until next week after Pappy Churchill withdrew, leaving Betty Phillips as the only candidate.

Boating Cruise Planned By UNC Outing Club

The UNC Outing Club is inviting the UNC student body to a boating cruise on Sunday, May 3. The event will be held at Buggs' Island.

All cars, boats and people will leave from in front of Woollen Gym at 9 a.m. Mray 3. Anyone who wishes to go must sign up in the Intramural Office or call for registration no later than Thursday, April 30th. Individuals will be responsible for their own picnic lunches, and the drinks will be furnished by the UNC Outing Club.

Six boats have already been promised to be available for the boating cruise. Anyone who plans to take his own boat must register it with the Intramural Office. These boats must meet the requirements of the U. S. Coast Guard, for the Coast Guard will be on duty at the lake.

A map, giving directions to the Vance County Wildlife Club launching site, where the boats will be launched, will be available to all drivers of cars and to people who find it impossible to travel with the group. Also, wives and dates are invited on the boating cruise.

Camp Counselors Meeting Held In Hanes Tonight

Those men interested in serving as Freshman Camp counselors have been asked to attend the meeting being held tonight at 9:00 in Hanes 105.

This is the second part of a two week training program, and attendance is required. The camp is conducted annually by the YMCA in order to orient incoming freshmen with some of the traditions of Carolina and introduce them to their classmates.

It is not part of the Orientation program but is rather set up to supplement it. The camp is conducted at Camp New Hope, five miles north of Chapel Hill and lasts for six days prior to the beginning of the Fall semester.

Petite Musicale Features Soprano Donna Patton Kelly

By ROBERT STOKES

Donna Patton Kelly, soprano, accompanied by Walter Golde, will be featured in the last Petite Musicale for the spring semester here Sunday at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Kelly's song recital will feature works by Wolf-Ferrari, Brahms, Paladilhe, Faure, Duparc, Pierne, Menotti, Dougherty, Giannini and Walret Golde.

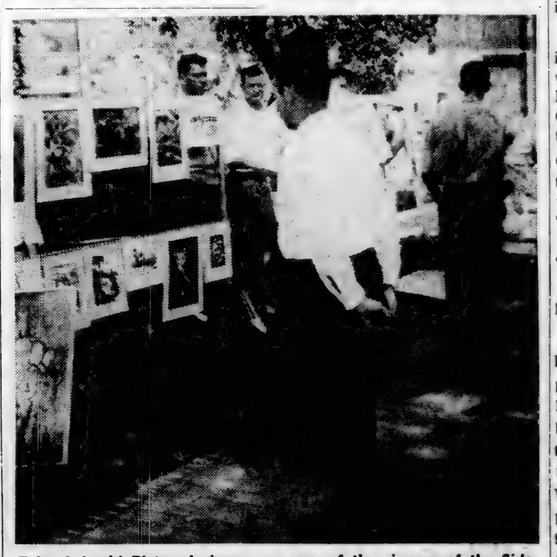
The concert, sponsored by GMAB, student union organization, will be presented in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Mrs. Kelly has been a soloist with the Chapel Hill Choral Club in performances of the Mozart Requiem, the Verdi Requiem and the Brahms Requiem.

The vocalist has sung the role of Pamina in the Magic Flute in the production of that opera sponsored by GMAB and the Music Department. She has also appered as soloist under Paul Young at Duke University and with the UNC Men's Glee Club and the University Chorus.

Mrs. Kelly, a current resident of Louisville, Ky., was the firs recipient of the Institute of Opera Scholarship. She studied with Walter Golde during her stay in Chapel Hill.

Walter Golder, her accompanist, is a Chapel Hill pianist-composer who has presented recitals in Hill Hall and in Graham Memorial. Golde is also a well-known voice teacher, and has accompanied many of his students in Petite Musicales of the past.



Take A Look! Pictured above are some of the viewers of the Sidewalk Art Show that was presented on the campus Friday and Saturday behind Vance-Battle-Pettigrew. The weather was beautiful, something unusual for Chapel Hill and as was expected there was a good turnout for the show which is again planned for next year. All the painting were highly interesting and well-done. Artists and art lovers regroup and we will take another look next year.

The D. A. R. And The U. N.

In a recent meeting in Washington, the Daughters of the American Revolution showed their true colors. In two lighting moves, that group passed resolutions calling for American withdrawl from the United Nations and for U.N. withdrawl from U.S. soil. Really ladies isn't this a little absurd?

The irritating and nauseating aspect of these resolutions is not necessarily that they were passed, but that they were passed by a supposedly responsible organization, representing millions of American women. For women, who are leaders in communities around the country to take action such as this, represents a most ominous trend.

This female contingent need only read a daily newspaper or a simple history text to realize that the era of the Monrow Doctrine, the Roosevelt Corollary and general American isolationism is dead. In the year 1959, in a world of strife and tension, there is a greater need for understanding and arbitration on the international level. And the only chance for this, is through the United Nations.

Honestly girls, if this is the best proposal that you can come up with in your national meeting, perhaps you ought to dissolve and the D.A.R. should get off of American soil.

Shades Of Emmett Till

"The word lynching is believed to have derived from the name of Judge Charles Lynch, a Virginia justice of the peace, who during the Revolution caused British loyalists to be flogged without recourse to due process of law. Lynchings have taken the lives of 1,293 whites and 3,437 Negroes since 1882. Among the States — there have been lynchings in forty-two — Mississippi is first with 574. In recent years lynchings have been relatively rare — one case in 1951, three in 1956."

On Saturday morning in Poplarville, Miss., a gang of vicious race haters broke into "the unguarded courthouse cell of a Negro accused of raping a 24-year-old woman." He was dragged by his abductors from the cell, splattered with his own blood and badly beaten. He has not been seen since. Officials in the Poplarville area have given up hope for his recovery, and fear that he has been lynched by the kidnapping mob.

This sort of mob violence can never be condoned in a country which preaches judicial equality for all. It is probable that there will be arrests made in conjunction with this violent incident. It is even more probable that those arrested will be acquitted by a jury similar to the one which tried those people connected with the brutal and fatal beating of Emmett Till in that same state a few years ago.

And pretty soon, Poplarville will go back to being a lazy 'il ol Mississippi town. People will forget that this lynching has taken place. And the good white people of that area will go back to muttering "that ya gotta keep them people in their place."

But, those of us who are interested in statistics won't forget. We'll remember that Mississippi now has 575 lynchings to be proud of, instead of 574.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if a judge and, twelve jurors put a few white people in THEIR place once in awhile.

More On Quarterly

LETTER TO DENNIS PARKS:

First of all, let's admit that the Quarterly is a dead horse here on campus, which makes all this beating you're doing kind of silly. But the Spectrum is not exactly alive either. The success of your first issue was not all you would like to think. We might run through your formular for success once, just to make sure that everyone understands.

First, play upon the hostility that is widespread on campus against the Quarterly; put yourself in opposition to what the Quarterly stands for: publication of student writers only when they measure up against the outside contributions. Run a few articles in The Daily Tar Heel. State that many professors both here and at Duke are interested and are eagerly awaiting the first issue. (Why shouldn't they be interested? Professors are put, perhaps against their will, into the position of being interested in all kinds of things that students do. It becomes almost a reflex action.)

Next, find a staff. The campus is full of the artsy-craftsy set. Then get a backer to put up enough money to publish an issue.

Then publish yourself. Be a sort of vanity press. There is always an excuse. You didn't receive anything from the campus that was better than the contributions of the staff.

Finally . . . and this is the most important part . . . pray that some young politico will issue a statement that the magazine is obscene. Then sit back and watch the student apathy disappear. . . A sell out. You can now say that you have interest in and for the campus.

Now back to our talk of horses. I think on the tracks they call this doping the horses. It is a strange kind of success, based upon an outside element which has nothing to do with the merit of the horse.

Then you send out issues and get comments. If there are comments, perhaps you can't be blamed for taking them seriously. Take the quotation from Donald Hall, which I assume is either the best thing he had to say or the only thing. When he says that on the whole Spectrum is of low quality he is probably telling the living truth. Any comment he makes after this is undoubtedly tempered by the realization that this is a student-published, student-edited, student-written magazine. The pattern is this: the truth and then a softening of it. Student publications are not judged in the same way that adults ones are.

So what do we have left? If, as I think, the Spectrum's success was based upon sensationalism rather than merit, perhaps you'd better turn in your Savior of Campus Literary Scene Button. It could get to be an embarrassing pose.

To your proposal that the Quarterly be given $200 and one year to prove itself, I'd like to make a few comments. The answer to the Quarterly's problems is not less money but more. There's no reason that the University shouldn't have a literary magazine that matches up to the Virginia Quarterly or the Kansas City Review. I have no doubt that both these magazines are subsidized by their universities or their states. They have paid permanent editors. The Virginia Quarterly has enough money to make some minimum payment for contributions. The Kansas City Review does not pay, except in prestige.

Both these magazines reflect their universities' interest in literature without resorting to sensationalism, without being an outlet for the alphabetical publication of student writing. (Alphabetical: the publication of all the student writers who names begin with "A" this month, "B" next month).

The solution, as I see it, is a state legislative grant or money from some rich angel, which will enable the University to set up a paid, permanent editor with enough money to compete in the little quarterly field. It might take a new Quarterly ten years to rival the Virginia Quarterly Review. As a show of culture from the University it might be worthwhile.

Of course, at the same time, there could be a student magazine where all the writers-this-year, businessmen-next-year could go about busily, happily, publishing themselves.

"You Know, I Don't Think The U. N. Ever Replied To Our Ultimatum Last Year"

Unrealistic & Impractical

Crownover's Meeting Bill

Editor:

For a member of legislature who has made the charge of "unrealistic" and "impractical" as many times as has Rep. Crownover, I am surprised at his indignation over the defeat of his bill. I would also be very glad to tell you, and anyone else who wants to know, why I voted against the bill. (Although I wonder whether the paper is really very interested in hearing the other side, since it saw fit to print the names of the legislators who defeated the bill without asking any of them to make a statement defending their stand to be printed along with the charge of "laziness" and the chastizements of Rep. Crownover and the editor.)

The reasons for voting against the bill are simple: 1) As Rep. Blanton pointed out, the bill which was written to make the meetings compulsory had no provision for compelling except to have the names of the representatives who did not hold meetngs read in legislature and perhaps printed in the paper. Regardless of how you feel about the bill, it would simply be unsound legislation as it was presented.

2) The meetings which the legislators were to have with their districts were to be, possibly, dormitory meetings, and "more informal" meetings in fraternities and sororities. To see inconsistancies of this one only needs to compare a meeting in a men's dormitory with one in a women's dormitory. There is a considerable difference in the percentage of the residents attending, since women, unfortunately, are "required" to attend their meetings. Perhaps Rep. Crownover can write a bill to make attendance at the compulsory meetings compulsory. I am inclined to believe that the people I represent would oppose such a measure.

3) The bill contained a special provision for districts such as town men's IV where these meetings would be "impractical". (I maintain that they would be impractical in any district.) This provision provided for the representative's writing up a list of his accomplishments on behalf of his district to be mimeographed and distributed or place at convenient spots.

The implication of this seemed to be that a "good" representative would be one who had presented a goodly number of bills and filled the legislature with a goodly amount of hot air. I maintain that it is possible to be a "good" legislator without presenting a single bill and without uttering a word in legislature. Besides, what goes on in legislature is printed in The Daily Tar Heel with varying degrees of accuracy and if anyone wants to keep closer tabs on their representative they are free to attend any and all of the meetings of the legislature. So not only is this impractical from the point of view of the intention of the bill, it would also be a waste of the representative's time and the student body's money in having these "accomplishments" mimeographed.

Residents of other districts have equal facilities for keeping track of their representatives in legislature. They are also free to propose and discuss ideas with their representatives on an individual basis, a far more effective method of getting and examining ideas, as many have done with me and I assume other members of the legislature.

I agree that the actions of some members of the legislature may not always represent the feelings of the people they represent. I am not in a position to say for sure. I would only like to remind Rep. Crownover and all the other members of legislature who have so often made the charge that something is "too idealistic" that the representative system under which we operate is a most idealistic system. That is why it is a great system. It is a great system despite all the failings it might have.

I believe there is a difference between being idealistic and being impractical. There is no such thing as being "too idealistic". So you see, an idealistic system will work, in which case you might call it "practical." So I am not saying that what you want to accomplish with your bill in the maintenance of democracy is so idealistic that it won't work.

Being idealistic has nothing to do with it. It just won't do what you want it to do. I do not believe this is a pessimistic view and I would be willing to submit it to the people I represent and to the campus, so it does not disturb me that you print my name in The Daily Tar Heel. I cannot speak for the other twenty-five who voted against the bill, but my guess would be that they feel the same way.

Letter On Henderson

Editor:

You ask your readers to write letters pro and con on the Henderson lock-out.

First, let me congratulate you on your outstandingly good reportorial assistant, your editorials, and articles based on truth and understanding, and the courage you have shown in getting through the fog of misinformation in order to publish facts.

At the University of Chicago, where I taught for ten years, after many years of experience in the field of industrial relations, there was always a group of informed and spineful faculty members to take up cudgels for the underdog if the pressure was myopic in cases of labor disputes. Here, we have informed and intelligent faculty members in our School of Business Administration; but, I suppose we must withhold censure of their spines in view of that body of august politicians in Raleigh. One of our most experienced arbitrators in the United States told me the other day that the reason given by management for not wishing to continue the 14 year old clause in the annual labor contract was that cases were usually decided against management when the Harriet Henderson Mills submitted them to arbitration.

Considering the careful gleaning of men before they go on the national list of arbitrators, to confirm their ability to examine and judge evidence impartially, we agreed this was proof that management might well have examined its practices instead of blaming judges. Even Hodges said this present situation at Henderson shows evidence of long-existing bad feeling between management and workers.

You are quite right in reminding us that situations like that existing in the Harriet Henderson Mills are evidence that "war is just around the corner." But, generally speaking, we Chapel Hillians don't like being jolted out of our comfortable routine.

So we side-step making any effort to get the truth behind superficial accounts of industrial disputes which appear so often in the press. We are therefore quite satisfied to be unacquainted with both overt and covert practices both in the world of industry. Because there is no adequate machinery for handling grievances in many textile mills they cause increasing irritation in the minds and hearts of workers.

We just love to sleep comfortably and think management is always right.

Last Of The Provincials

Frank Crowther

THE LAST OF THE PROVINCIALS. The American Novel, 1915-1925. By Maxwell Giesmar. New York: Hill and Wang. Cloth, $4.50; Paper $2.45.

Rather than restrict myself to a review of Maxwell Geismar's THE LAST OF THE PROVINCIALS, I would like, in addition, to discuss Mr. Geismar's attempt to record the endeavors of our American novelists over the past century. Thus far, the critic's books include: (1) REBELS AND ANCESTORS: The American Novel, 1890-1915; (2) The above mentioned novel; (3) WRITERS IN CRISIS: The American Novel 1925-1940; and (4) AMERICAN MODERNS: From Rebellion to Conformity. A Mid-Century View of Contemporary Fiction.

I have not read REBELS AND ANCESTORS and have only briefly scanned WRITTERS IN CRISIS (since I do not have a copy). The latter work concerns itself basically with the young writers whose formative years were during the first World War but chronologically is centered in the nineteen-thirties, their most productive years.

The fourth volume of Mr. Geismar's "difinitive history of American fiction" (AMERICAN MODERNS is not a part of this history) is in preparation and will treat Henry James, Edith Wharton and William Dean Howells.

The five novelists discussed in THE LAST OF THE PROVINCIALS are H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Willia Cather, Sherwood Anderson and F. Scott Fitzgerald. All of the essays are extremely literate and demonstrative of Geismar's stature as a distinguished critic. And by God he is able to fulfill his role as critic without pedantry or snobbery. He isn't a pure semanticist, or an analyst of technique, or a theory-of-the-novel-ist, and does not need radiologist to discover what a novel is about. Besides that he writes well, being both incisive and interesting . . . even though one doesn't always agree with what he writes (as of Hemingway and Bellow in AMERICAN MODERNS).

The essays on Mencken and Anderson are probably the best, with that of Fitzgerald bringing up the rear (no pun intended).

Mencken was the stay-at-home expatriate, whose escapes were limited to literati gatherings in New York City but who always returned to Baltimore, pistols blazing and sword slashing. ". . . from the ballot-box and from Lohengrin, from women and democracy, the good Lord had already delivered H. L. Mencken. — But not them from Mencken." He believe that the most dangerous animal was woman, but he would agree that man has let her become so. And democracy was probably a noble idea that should returned painlessly to moth balls. "A great nation," wrote Mencken, "is any mob of people which produces at least one honest man a century." Happiness entailed "a good bank account, a negative Wassermenn, a clear conscience . . . A courtroom is a place where Jesus Christ and Judas Iscariot would be equals, with the odds in favor of Judas." Mencken, writes Geismar, allowed himself to become the ringmaster of the American circus, and then was forced to play Mencken as Mencken. "His value . . . lies as much in his profound and unwilling reflection of a period as in his brilliant reporting of it. If he helped to mould the spirit of the post-war epoch, he also betrayed its underlying pressures. (Have they changed in character, lessened in their intensity?)"

Today we think of WINESBURG, OHIO first, then of Sherwood Anderson. In a way, this is parallel to Geismar's observation that the author "became an ancestor before he became mature." Anderson on reflection appears to have been eclectic in deciding which stratum of society he associated himself with. He championed the downtrodden, lived with the aristocrats and probably thought of himself as a wandering gipsy. He (and Hemingway) probably precipitated the vogue of the mid-western dialect, not only in 'proper' writing but in speaking as well. (You cannot get an announcer's job with any of the major radio-television networks without this form of diction.)

He was invoked by the post-war generation as a pioneer and prophet, writes Geismar. "He became a protagonist of the New Realism, with its resolute and even grim insistence upon the fundamentals of life, and especially the unpleasant fundamentals, and especially of American life." So he bore the standard of his time, wrote lyrical eulogies which so often deteriorated into lamentations and never quite knew whom to blame. This, however, does not detract from his prolific achievement as a writer.

While we're at it, a brief note about AMERICAN MODERNS is in order. This book contains, for the most part, previously published essays on eighteen contemporary novelists — from Dreiser, Dos Passos and Steinback to Cozzens, Salinger, Styron and Bellow. Geismar is saddened that we are "by Cozzens possessed," suggests that Faulkner possibly doesn't understand the South and hopes that Salinger will eventually emerge from "the nursery of life and art." He believes that James Jones, William Styron and John Howard Griffin are the bright lights of fiction in the 1950's. I agree with him in Styron's case, but will wait and see with regard to Jones and Griffin. (I'd be interested in knowing how many readers have heard of John Howard Griffin. Probably not one in ten.)

In conclusion: if you are interested in literary criticism at its best, study all of Geismar; if you are concerned with the revival of interest in the 20's, read THE LAST OF THE PROVINCIALS; if you are interested in the contemporary novelists, read AMERICAN MODERNS; if you are interested in none of these, go back to your Westerns and a pox upon you.

STUDENT LOAN FUND NEGOTIATIONS — Joan Castle of Shelby, a graduate student who will become a school teacher, discusses the rules governing a student loan with Harold Weaver, manager of the UNC Loan Fund.

National Defense Loan Program Provides Students With Funds

By PETE IVEY

"Does it embarass you to borrow money for your education?" "Not the slightest bit," declared Joan Isabel Castle, graduate student in education at UNC.

She countered with another question: "Was J. P. Morgan embarassed when he negotiated loans at banks?"

Miss Castle, whose home is in Shelby, regards the funds borrowed from the University Loan Fund as a business transaction that will be mutually beneficial, she hopes, to public school education as well as to herself.

She is borrowing from funds provided by the federal government under the new National Defense Student Loan Program. UNC received $22,777 under that program which gives priority to students intending to go into public teaching. UNC added $2,531 on a one to nine matching basis to make $25,308 available.

The conditions of the federal loans teachers are interesting: A borrower who serves as a full-time teacher in a public or secondary school gets a 50 per cent reduction in the total amount of the loan—that is if he borrows $1,000 he pays back only $500. Futhermore the three per cent interest rate is cut in half. This applies to teachers who teach at least five years after graduation at Chapel Hill. If for some reason they don't teach that long the reduction in their repayments is reckoned on some other basis.

DON'T YOU THINK YOU NEED A COMMA HERE? Or maybe it's a math problem, not an English composition, that these two boys are considering. Gordon Bondurant, left, a graduate student, is shown in a typical scene as a freshman, Berry Spurrier, right, comes to him for academic advice. But that is only the beginning of Gordon's duties because he is called upon daily by freshmen who have problems, not only in their school work but also in their personal life. The UNC resident counselor program, as it is called, places 15 graduate students in undergraduate dormitories to help underclassmen get started on the right foot in their college careers. This is the second year that the program has been carried out on the University campus. UNC Photo by Dave Windley

Dormitory Resident Counselors Help Promote Better Atmosphere

By Ann A. Smith

Many freshmen at UNC are finding that blazing the 'academic trail' is not such a rough job after all with the aid of a special counseling program.

The resident counselors, who are graduate students living in undergraduate dorms, promote a better atmosphere in the dormitories by becoming acquainted with the students, counseling them and devoting themselves to helping students make a sound beginning in their college careers.

These part-time staff members of the UNC Office of the Dean of Student Affairs headed by Fred H. Weaver are: Roy E. Aycock of Greenville, S. C.; George V. Strong, Arlington, Mass.; Hiram B. Black, Matthews; Gordon Bondurant, Winston-Salem; Robert L. Kostohryz, West, Texas; Charles L. Blenkner, Billings, Mont.

Peter N. Mayfield, Atlanta, Ga.; Lewis F. Sutton, Goldsboro; Thomas C. Parramore, Winton; Kenneth C. Danforth, El Dorado, Ark.; Michael Simpson, Charlotte; James H. Thompson, Memphis, Tenn.; Donald C. Smith, Conyngham, Pa.; Anthony E. Harvey, Lynchburg, Va.; and Robert W. Edwards, Louisburg.

The program calls for a resident counselor on each floor of five dormitories in which the majority of residents are freshmen and sophomores.

As "old hands" who have mastered those major and minor crises of college adjustment who are still in touch with academic life, the counselors are in a position to advise their student charges without being pedantic.

They are not expected to give official academic advice; they are, however, available for informal discussions of personal and academic matters — serving as proof readers and critics of term papers and composition and, whether or not girl friends approve, listening to tales of the eternal triangle.

There are other matters of special concern to the freshman such as arrangement of finances, consideration of a fraternity or opportunities to participate in athletics and other extracurricular activities with which the resident counselors can help.

As the year progresses the counselors draw upon their knowledge of University Health service, tutorial services and student religious organizations.

In-service training also provides the counselors with opportunities for getting together to discuss common problems, to learn about the General College advisory program, and to hear trained psychologists explain possibilities and responsibilities of counseling.

Throughout the school year, particular attention is given to each student's study habits, his scholastic performance and interests, his participation in student events and his general attitude toward college.

The counselors consider the student's college entrance examination, his personal history, high school records and other pertinent information.

They also add their share of papers to the student's permanent file in formal written reports each semester.

All of this—counseling and paperwork in addition to their own studies—occupy most of the waking hours of the resident counselors. They do not, incidentally, take more than nine hours of course work, which is not a full academic load.

The counselors are expected to spend at least 20 hours a week in the performance of counseling duties for which they are paid $152.25 each month during the eight-month school year.

As an example of the type of problem with which the counselor is confronted, one reported of a student who early in the freshman year showed signs of discontent.

The student, according to the resident counselor, joined a fraternity at the beginning of the year but decided that he had made a wrong choice. He began to worry about his fraternity and social life, and his grades fell. Finally he was dropped from the fraternity and apparently lost interest in all outside activities.

The counselor was aware that the boy was becoming a recluse, shunning friendship and not going out. What ultimately caused the boy to think himself a failure was a rejection when he tried out for the debate squad.

The counselor reported at the end of the semester that the boy was ready to drop out of school. The counselor's offers at conversation or any sort of contact were rebuffed until one evening when the student came to him on the pretext of asking help in solving a math problem.

The counselor was able to establish rapport with the student from this joint endeavor to complete a subject assignment. Soon the student dropped by the counselor's room regularly for informal chats and the counselor was able to direct the student to the vocational and counseling service which enabled him to find some direction in his educational experience.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

PAT PRESTON'S RESIGNATION from the football coaching staff has enabled each one of the present assistants to move up the ladder a notch. The empty spot on the staff will probably go to some young coach, possibly even a former Tar Heel player. In addition to another permanent coach, Jim Tatum has said that Jack Healy, one of his former proteges while at Maryland, will help out with the backfield this coming year while studying here for his masters.

For the first time since Bud Carson came to Tatum's staff several years ago there will be a slight rotation of assignments this season. This change finds Carson, the freshman coach for the past two years, switching places with Ed Kensler. During his reign over the frosh Carson has turned in an excellent record of 7-2-1 losing only to State and Wake Forest in that time.

ALL THE WORK that went into the formation of a lacrosse team here at Carolina is finally bearing fruit. The latest blosson came out over a week ago when the Tar Heel stick squad knocked off Duke for the second straight time. Despite the fact that the Blue Devil aggregation was not composed completely of varsity players, the 6-2 victory cannot be denied. There is no doubt about one fact, however, a Carolina win over the Duke varsity would really be embarrassing to the West Durham lacrosse fans.

Although there is little likelihood of such an event taking place this season, it may become a reality next year. The Blue Devil varsity is losing left and right this campaign and a defeat at the hands of the Heels would literally be "the end." If the Carolina team can get ACC approval at the upcoming league meeting and a regular schedule before next spring the arch rivals will meet with sticks in hand.

We have said before that you would get your chance to form an opinion of lacrosse when the team plays here. Now it is official and tomorrow is the day. The battle will pit the Tar Heel team against the Virginia freshman with Fetzer Field as the site of the slaughter. After viewing lacrosse for a few minutes a spectator who is new to the game might get the idea that there are no rules and anything goes. For the most part this is true but tomorow we will try to review a couple of the basic principles in hopes of giving at least some idea of what's coming off.

THE BASEBALL GAMES over the weekend produced their share of goats and stars. In the star department the honors go to pitchers Ben Hammett and Wayne Young who gave up but seven hits and no earned runs in the combined total of 11 and 2/3 innings they worked. The other catagory features the base running of Vaughn Bryson and Art Kilpatrick in the Clemson game.

Kilpatrick's goof, an attempted steal of second in the ninth inning when the Tigers were ahead 2-1, has officially been attributed to a visual hallucination of the hit and run sign. His reason for going in standing up has not been decided yet.

Bryson, on the other hand, tried to steal third in the fifth frame after Clemson catcher Bob Dempsey dropped a third strike pitch to Harold Workman. Dempsey promptly turned the situation into a double play as he fired to first to get Workman with the relay then going to third to erase Bryson. The Carolina first baseman never had a chance. Like Kilpatrick's sliding, the reason for trying the play in the first place hasn't been figured out.

Tar Heels Seek Revenge On Duke Today

Carolina Tries To Reach .500 Mark In ACC Play

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Taking a 3-4 Atlantic Coast Conference record with them, the Carolina baseballers travel over to Durham this afternoon in hopes of getting even with Duke for the 3-2 defeat that the Blue Devils pinned on them at Emerson Stadium.

The Tar Heels are currently in fifth place in the ACC standings having one more win to their credit than do the Blue Devils. Duke has suffered from rainouts and has played but six games, losing four of those.

Carolina Coach Walter Rabb is planning to send ace lefthander Ben Hammett to the mound to oppose the Devils. Hammett, who got beat by Clemson 2-1 in his last outing, has a 3-1 won-lost mark and a 1.88 earned run average.

Kalish For Duke

The Duke hurler is likely to be southpaw Ron Kalish who go credit for the victory over the Heels when he went the full nine innings, allowing Carolina two runs on seven hits.

While the Tar Heels were beating South Carolina 4-1 Saturday, the Blue Devils were taking it on the chin 6-2 from Maryland. Against the Terps, Duke was leading 2-1 going into the bottom of the eighth only to have their opponents rally for five runs to win going away. The Blue Devils beat State 7-6 yesterday.

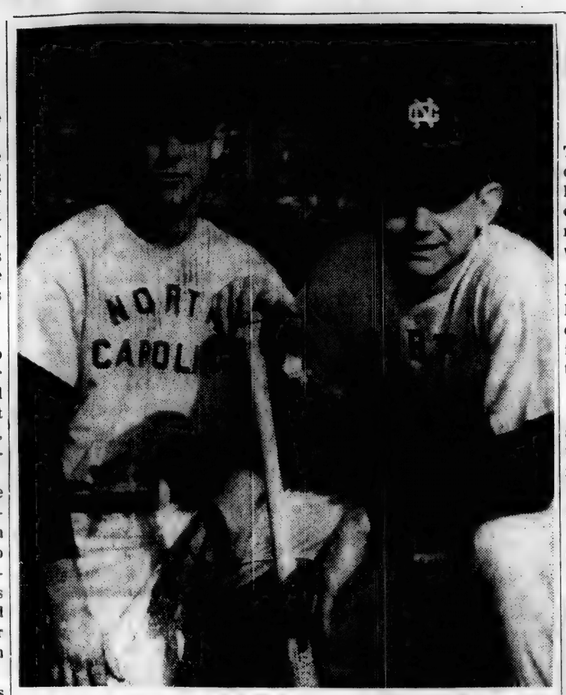
In their previous meeting Duke shortstop John Frye provided his team with victory by belting one of Ben Harding's pitches into the left field hedge for a two run homer. Although Harding allowed but six hits over the nine inning period, the one gopher ball sent him down to his second defeat.

Carolina Lineup

Rabb will start the same lineup that he has used in the past four games. In the infield Carolina will go with Vaughn Bryson (.200) at first, Larry Craver (.240) at second, Ferg Norton (.290) at third and Harold Workman (.236) at shortstop.

The Tar Heels will have a chance to platoon at one position in the outfield depending on who Duke Coach Ace Parker sends to the mound. Two of the three spots will go to co-captain Johnny Burgwyn, the team's leading hitter at .351, and Gerald Griffin who is now batting .226 after being below the .200 mark for much of the season.

After the Duke game the Tar Heels will get a couple of days rest before traveling north this weekend to square off with league-leading Maryland on Friday and third-placed Virginia on Saturday.



OUTFIELD REGULARS — Co-Captain Johnny Burgwyn along with Gerald Griffin will be two of the three starting outfielders today when the Tar Heels take on Duke at Durham. Burgwyn is currently Carolina's leading hitter at .351.

GREENSBORO—(AP)—Wake Forest scpohomore outfield Jay Franklin, a speed merchant with a deadly batting eye, slipped slightly during the past week but still managed to hang on to the Atlantic Coast Conference batting leadership by a substantial margin.

Franklin's average "fell" from .536 to .500, but his closest challenger is still quite a distant behind, Frank Copper of Maryland's ACC-leading Terps is the No. 2 man for the 2nd week in a row, and his batting average is .420, a slight drop from .444 a week ago.

Neal Eason of N. C. State, sixth last week, jumped to third with a .375 average, replacing south Carolina's Ken Rosefield, who fell from third at. 400 to 10th at .333.

Dick Reitz, the Maryland pitching ace who also swings a wicked bat, came from nowhere to fourth place in the batting race with a .370 average. Don Brown of the Terps is fifth at .361, giving Maryland three of the ACC's first five batters.

Franklin, with 18 hits in 36 times at bat, does not figure into the slugging races in the conference, however, according to latest ACC service bureau compilations. Pat Clarke of Maryland, a .339 batter, is first in home runs with three, Clemson's Doug Hoffman, a .339 batter, is No. 1 in triples with five and Copper, Clarke and John Burgwyn of North Carolina, a .351 batter, are tied for the lead in doubles with four each.

Larry Bagwell and Zack Burnette of Clemson share first place in runs batted in, each with 14, Hoffman and Rosefield have a dozen each. Dick Suggs and Ty Cline of Clemson share the stolen base lead with five each.

Frosh Tangle With Duke This Afternoon

By J. C. UNDERWOOD

Carolina's yearling baseballers, all alone at the top of the Big Four freshman standings with a 3-1 slate, risk their lofty position today against Duke's Blue Imps at Emerson Stadium.

Only a surprising 9-3 loss to the State Wolflets mars the Tar Baby record within the conference. They defeated Duke once and Wake Forest twice, with the latest win coming in Winston-Salem a week ago when they beat the Deaclets 6-2 on Ron Miller's two home runs and five RBI's.

Dellolio Tops Batters

The frosh batting statistics to date show four men batting over .300 with shortstop Len Dellolio the leader at a healthy .363 clip. E. C. Haithcock sports a .350 average followed by Larry Neal with .316 and Paul Swing with .308. These four plus the following should compose today's lineup: Ron Miller (.240), Whitey Wade (.222), James Helton (.187), and Pete Farrior (.167).

Miller and Dellolio are the runs-batted-in leaders with five apiece while Neal is way out in front in runs scored department with nine.

Pitchers Stingy With Runs

Today's pitcher for the Tar Babies should come from the trio of Jerry Carpenter, Nick Warren, and Dave Murr. Carpenter heads the staff with two wins and no losses and a fine 1.12 earned-run average. Warren is 1-0 with an ERA of 2.19, while Murr has split two decisions and given up 2.77 earned runs per contest.

Coach Pat Earey's charges face the Blue Imps again on Thursday in Durham and return home Saturday in a revenge match with State.

ALL CAMPUS SOFTBALL TEAM

The members of the all-campus softball team were chosen yesterday to play in the Big Four Sports Day contest at Duke. They are: 1b, Mike Greenday (Kap Sig); 2b, Larry Fredrick (Kap Sig); shortstop, Dan Roberts (Law Sch); 3b, Art Schwerzel (Chi Psi), c, Al Daniels (Kap Sig); lf, Harvey Salz (Pi Lamb); cf, Sonny Folckomer (Phi Gam); rf, Danny Lotz (Cobb). Pitchers are Dick Lynch (AK Psi) and Howard Light (Law Sch). Others who may see action include Lenny Beck (Parker) and Reginald Johnson (Kap Sig).

Kentucky Derby Trial

By JOHN CHANDLER

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—The Derby Trial Stakes, always an important elimination race leading up to the Kentucky Derby, was split in two divisions for Tuesday's 22nd running after the names of 16 horses were dropped into the entry box.

The management of Churchill Downs, where the $125,000-added Derby will be run Saturday, decided on the split of eight in each section for the first time in the stakes' history.

Finnegan Standout

The Far West's Finnegan is the standout in the first division, while the East's First Landing is favored in the second.

Each division will have $15,000-added money.

The fact that 16 have entered the one-mile Derby Trial, and eight or nine more are possible starters in Saturday's mile and one quarter run for the roses, indicate that confusion is rampant.

The Trial will eliminate some, but not as many as would have dropped out had it been just one race.

Arcaro Rides First Landing

First Landing, the 1958 champion 2-year-old owned by Christopher T. Chenery and ridden by Eddie Arcaro, was listed as the even-money choice in the second division.

Under the allowance conditions, Finnega and First Landing both carry 122 pounds. In the Derby all starters pack 126.

Mrs. Jacques Braunstein's Royal Orbit, 116, second in the Santa Anita Derby, was listed at 7-2, and Bayard Sharp's Troilus, 122, was quoted at 9-2 in Finnegan's division.

IFC Names Date For Rush; 2nd Semester Date Also Set

By A. PRINGLE PIPKIN

The Interfraternity Council set tentative dates for fall rush and set up a secondary formal rush period for the beginning of the second semester, Monday night at a special meeting.

The primary fall rush period will begin Sept. 27 and will be over around Oct. 2. The exact date of the final day of fall rush will be determined at the next meeting after IFC members have had a chance to discuss the matter in their chapter meetings.

The secondary formal rush period is to be conducted on the same basis as the fall rush period and will last three days. No student including transfers will be able to pledge a fraternity until he has gone through one formal rush.

The secondary rush period is expected to give those freshman who do not pledge in thef all a better chance to pledge afra ternity later than presently exists.

The IFC Scholarship Committee, chaired by Ben Geer Keyes, is presently working on rules to improve fraternity scholarship.

The first proposal from the committee states that "any student pledging a fraternity who does not make a 'C' average by the end of two semesters will be disaffiliated from his fraternity until he has made a 'C' average."

Disaffiliation means that "the student will note at his meals at the fraternity, live at the fraternity, pay any fraternity bills, participate in intramurals for the fraternity, or have any active part whatsoever in the fraternity."

This measure will in no way effect the present "bull pledges." Its enforcement will be centrally administered.

This proposal will be discussed at the IFC meeting after the chapters have had a chancet o discuss it. Additional rules are also expected to be presented by the Scholarship Committee.

The Andrew Bershak Scholarship, given to a non-fraternity man, was awarded to freshman Shelton Peck of Durham. The scholarship is worth $500 per year for four years.

Three other men presently hold this scholarship; $2,000 each year is given by 24 social the fraternities. The scholarship is a memorial to Andrew Bershak and was instituted in 1938.

The basis of selection is high scholastic rank, character, qualities of leadership and financal need.

Final Issue Of Bulletin Published By Med Sch.

The NC School of Medicine is now distributing the final issue of this school year of the Bulletin, which is published four times annually.

This issue carries individual photographs of each student who will receive an M.D. degree next month. A brief writeup appears with each photograph telling where the student will intern and giving other information concerning the students.

The Builctin is published by the School of Medicine in cooperation with the Whitehead Medical Society and the Medical Foundation of North Carolina.

In the current issue, Dr. W. Reece Berryhill discusses the Advisory Budget Commission's recommendations for the next biennium and the effect on the University and the UNC Medical Center.

Another item of interest contained in the publication is that of all North Carolinians entering medical schools in this state last year, over one-half of them entered the UNC School of Medicine.

Dr. Claude L. Yarbro, instructor in biochemistry and nutrition, has contributed an article on the importance of maintaining a strong teaching program for the training of non-medical students, but teaching that is related to the field of medicine.

Another article deals with the new addition in the children's section of N. C. Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Cherry Parker of the UNC School of Nursing is the author of an article on Dr. Thomas Beeman of Union County. Dr. Beeman departed from the usual treatment of fever in his day, 1833-1903, and urged his patients to eat. Engraved on his tombstone is "I Fed Fever."

Articles concerning two of the alumni are contained in this issue. These are Dr. T. J. Taylor Roanoke Rapids and Dr. David L. Pressly of Statesville. Articles on two faculty members also are published These concern Dr. Loren G. MacKinney nad Dr. John H. Schwab.

Alumni Activity Hits Peak

Activity among UNC alumni groups hit a high peak last week with meetings in 10 communities in five states.

Chancellor William B. Aycock and Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders attended meetings of alumni in Jacksonville, St. Petersburg and Tampa, Fla., last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings with large attendance at each.

Vice President W. D. Carmichael Jr. and Charles M. Shaffer, director of development, were at the alumni meetings in Chattanooga and Nashville, Tenn., on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Dr. Henry T. Clark Jr., administrator of the Division of Health Affairs, spoke at alumni gatherings in Roanoke, Va., on Tuesday and in Kingsport, Tenn., on Thursday.

Tom Bost Jr., Edgar Thomas, Roy Holsten, and Frank McGuire were guests at an alumni gathering on Wednesday night at Danville, Va.

On Tuesday night Dean Alexander Heard of the Graduate School and Prof. Lawrence Slifkin of the Physics Department attended an alumni gathering at Clinton.

On Sunday afternoon in Atlanta, UNC alumni there held a reception at the home of Ernest H. Abernethy honoring students from that area who will be freshmen here in September.

Meetings scheduled to be held this week include the annual Alumni Assembly here on Tuesday, and group meetings on Wednesday in Greensboro and Southern Pines.

THE WEAKER SEX? — That's Susie Corden in the center proving that she can out do Bill Monell and Wally Graham in the noble art of pushups in Sound and Fury's 1959 production, "Oh, Hellas!", opening Friday and continuing through Saturday in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are currently on sale for 50¢ at Y-Court and Graham Memorial.

Battle Of Sexes To Be Set In Sound And Fury's "Oh Hellas"

The battle royal between the sexes takes place Friday and Saturday nights when Sound and Fury's production of "Oh, Hellas!" appears in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

The script has already been written by Lew Hardee and Carl Bridgers, and the stage has been set by producer Al Salley, the warriors have been deployed by director Joel Fleishman, and the battle is about to start.

The story follows much of the line of Aristopthanes' comic drama" Lysistrata," however the added music, dancing, and modern dialogue tend to bring interest instead of tedium.

According to the story, the Athenian men seem to like war better than they like sex, and the beginning of the play announces war with Sparta over the most minor of pretexts.

All the men go off to war, and the women band together with a plot to try to get their men back. According to the plot, all the women are to give up all love making.

The play stars Jane Newsom, Al Miller, Nancy Aubrey, Bill Monell, Susie Corden and Frank Beaver in the lead roles.

Who wins the battle, Athens or Sparta? Who wins the battle, the men or the women? Do the women really give up all love making?

The answers can be had by seeing "Oh Hellas!" Tickets are currently on sale at Graham Memorial and Y-Court. The price of admission for the two hour production is 50 cents.

Edwards And Brown Win Tight Races

Dan Brown (SP) and Phil Edwards (IND) came out on top in the re-election for the two 1-year seats of the Legislature from Dorm Men's III it was announced late last night.

Brown received 105 votes and Edwards 123.

They defeated Roy Goodman (SP) (87 votes), Vince Mulier (UP) 71 votes) and Ronnie Millican (UP) (53 votes).

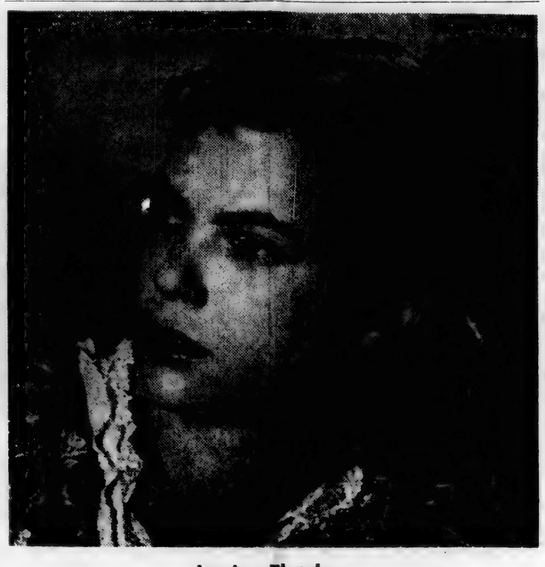
The Student Council called for the re-election after hearing of a case involving an infraction of the Election Law.

The turning point of Phil Edward's win came in Winston Dorm. Out of 109 possible votes in this dorm, 83 were cast in Edwards' favor.



Louise Fletcher

Aspiring Actress Is "Discovered"

By RONALD CABOT

The meteoric rise of former UNC Playmaker Louise Fletcher should rekindle the ambition of any presently aspiring college actress.

Louise came to the University in 1955 as a drama major. She starred in Playmaker productions "The Rainmaker," "Bridgadoon" and "Showboat." In 1956, she received the Mask Award.

Perhaps if she had not been spotted by director John Frankenheimer, she would still be a medical secretary. Because, when she left Carolina in June of 1957 she had no idea that she could ever succeed as an actress and, being a practical and thoughtful young woman, turned her ambition into a more reasonable channel .

But the spotlight found her when Frankenheimer saw her in a bit part on a Playhouse 90 presentation. She had got the part through an actor friend, Lee Phillips.

Frankenheimer explained: "She caught my interest immediately. She has a certain magnetism which somehow shines out in a crowd."

Now Miss Fletcher has had parts in such TV shows as "Yancy Derringer," "Bat Masterson," "Lawman" and "Maverick."

One producer described her as "the most instinctive actress I've seen in 25 years."

Miss Fletcher explained this "quality" in a recent issue of TV Guide as the result of being brought up by deaf parents who taught her how much could be said without the use of words. "And I've found that if I'm thinking the right thoughts the scene usually comes out right."

Miss Fletcher said that what a person thinks is expressed more sharply through facial expression than by actual words.

The young TV actress is a slim, pensive and intelligent girl with large, expressive eyes and a face which can portary all degrees on the emotional scale ranging from agony to ecstasy.

It will be interesting to follow the career of another University graduate who "made good."

Freshman Hank Patterson Is Head Of Univeristy Party

By JOSIE MORRIS

Hank Patterson was elected chairman of the University Farty last night by a vote of acclamation.

In accepting this post Patterson announced that certain offices — file clerk chairman of the membership committee and four other members of the executive board— are open and that anyone interested in these positions should contact him at the Phi Gamma Delta House. "The time of interviews will be announced later," he said.

Pope Shuford was elected vice-chairman, also by acclamation. In the race for secretary, Sharon Sullivan topped Virginia Vann by a 14-5 vote.

Bob Sevier was elected treasurer by acclamation and Jasper Reynolds won over Louis Starr by a 16-3 count for sergeant-at-arms. Patterson suceeds John Minter in the chairmanship post.

The newly-elected chairman, a rising sophomore from Manhasset, New York, stressed that the purpose of this great institution of the right of expression, initiative and self government."

Patterson is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, past chairman of the Elections Board and was on the University Party Executive Board.

In other business Bob Sevier made a resolution that no campaign expenses were paid by the party, but by the individual candidates.

Cooper Ready To Meet To Negotiate Strike

HENDERSON, N. C. April 28 (AP) — President John D. Cooper of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills said Tuesday, "I don't know what we could negotiate, but I'll meet with them in an effort to find out."

Cooper said this when asked for comment on a plea from Gov. Hodges for Union and Management to resume negotiations for a settlement of the 25-week-old strike which erupted into large scale violence last week.

Hodges sent wires to Cooper and Boyd Payton, Carolinas director of the Textile Workers Union of America, after Cooper had notified the Governor he was delaying the start of a third shift. Authorities had feared start of the third shift which had been scheduled for Wednesday night would spark further violence.

Officers reported, meanwhile, that things were quiet on the picket lines at the mills' two plants at the 7 a.m. opening Tuesday and at the 3 p.m. shift chance.

Hodges told Cooper he was asking Federal Mediator Yates Heafner to "ask parties to get together to reach agreement of issue of remaining jobs."

The Governor wired Payton he hoped "you will take every possible step to resolve differences before third shift begins. Meanwhile, State will use all efforts to stop violence and it expects the full cooperation of all parties." Payton was not immediately available for comment.

Cooper said he had been in contact with Heafner since receiving the wire. He added that he would not be able to participate in negotiations Wednesday because of a death in the family but would be available Thursday. He said he hopes to announce by Friday when he will begin the third shift which he postponed at the request of the Governor and Henderson Mayor Carroll Singleton.

Hodges last week asked Cooper

Sigma Chi Derby Held Tomorrow In Stadium

For the coeds entered in the secret event of the Sigma Chi Derby on Thursday, there won't be any live animals involved. So, no more riding donkeys or milking goats as in past derbies.

The 15th Annual Derby sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity will feature six "events" in Kenan Stadium at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, preceded by a parade at 2 p.m. in downtown Chapel Hill.

After the Derby, another contest with coeds tossing silver dollars will be held at the rock wall across from Kemp's, who is sponsoring this event.

In addition to thevar ious contests, doir prizes will be given in Kenan Stadium. No admission will be charged.

The events of the Derby will include a Grand National relay race, a hit the Geek contest, race to the flesh, skit contest and the Miss Modern Venus contest.

Each contest, except for Miss Modern Venus, will be judged by Sigma Chis. The Miss Modern Venus contest will be judged by Dean Smith, basketballco ach; Joe Augcstine of Stevens-Shepherd and Claude George of the School of Business Administration.

For the winner of the Miss Modern Venus contest, a bathing suit and trophy will be presented her. The winner of Kemp's silver dollar throwing contest will get 10 free long playing record albums for her sorority, dorm floor or Chapel Hill Club. The dollar contest champion will also win 10 gallons of ice cream from the Dairy Bar for her date.

The 15th Annual Derby here is being coordinated by Sigma Chis Jack Thompson and Kent Walker. Master of ceremonies during the Derby will be Fred Swearingen. Sigma Chi president is Dennis McCoy.

Pharmacy School Elect

In the recent Pharmacy School elections, new officers for 1959-1960 included: Whit Moose, president; Jim Hickmon, vice president, and Nancy Faison, secretary treasurer.

Election results for the student branches NCPA-APha were: Charles Himes, president; Hugh Clark, vice president; Helen Dunlap, secretary; Ben Daughtry, treasurer; Jack Horn, assistant to the president, and Jim Sheets, executive committee member.

DON'T ARGUE! Lloyd Borstlemann and Fred Sutton seem to be arguing with an imaginary character, but they are only enacting a scene from the forthcoming Playmakers presentation of "Inherit the Wind," scheduled to appear in the Forest Theater (May 7-9th) to close their forty-first season here at Carolina.

Playmakers To Close 41st Season With Forest Theater Production

The Carolina Playmakers will close their forty-first season with an outdoor production of the recent Broadway success "Inherit the Wind." The show is scheduled for May 7-9 at 8:30 p.m. in The Forest Theatre.

"Inherit the Wind" has its genesis in the events of the famous Scopes trial of 1925, with Clarence Darrow for the defense and William Jennings Bryan for the prosecution.

Borstlemann, assistant professor of psychology at Duke University, is a veteran playmaker, having appeared with the Durham Theatre Guild; the Des Moines, Iowa, Community Playhouse; and college theatres at the University of California, U.C.L.A. and UNC. His roles for the Playmakers have included Stephano in "The Tempest," Wang in "The Good Woman of Setzuan" and Sam Leeson in "Monkey in the Moon."

Sitton, a licentiate student in dramatic art, is former director of the Myers Park High School Limelighters of Charlotte. His last assignment with the Playmakers was the direction of the fourth major production, "Mrs. McThing."

Sitton served as technical director for the Playmakers last summer, designing sets and costumes for "Sabrina Fair." He appeared last in "Oklahoma!" as Cord Elam.

Tickets for "Inherit the Wind" will be available at the Forest Theatre box office on performance evenings only. All seats are $1.50.

Seven More Forced To Sign

Another sign that Hungary is still one of the troubled areas of the world came over the Associated Press wires on Monday night. In a release from Budapest, the AP said, "Seven Hungarian Protestant Church leaders went to Parliament today and took a required oath of allegiance to the communist state.

"The churchmen, including four Bishops, took the step after leading Roman Catholic Prelates swore their allegiance to the state last week."

We wonder just what tortures and pressures these religious leaders were placed under, in order to get them to make such a gesture. We are particularly stunned by the news that the Catholic leaders "swore their allegiance to the state" after the Pope's recent decree. The leverage used on these men must be far greater than the imagination.

Starting with the 1949 trial of Cardinal Mindszenty and continuing through last week, it is obvious that there is no place for anything but Communism in Iron Curtain countries.

Lacrosse Team-Vs. Cavaliers

This afternoon will see the third game of the recently initiated campaign for the lacrosse stickmen. This is the first encounter with a team from out of state, as the University of Virginia's fine squad will be in town today.

In their first two outings, the lacrosse team defeated Duke University twice. Now, they move up the ladder of competition to try a very good team, in the Cavaliers.

As many Daily Tar Heel readers are aware, this is the first year in many that has seen UNC represented in the sport of lacrosse. Although the team is still not officially on the list of those representing this University in intercollegiate athletics, there is high hope that this lofty status may be obtained before the start of another spring campaign.

So, for a few thrills and maybe a laugh or two (directed at the Cavaliers of course) the paper urges you to go out this afternoon and support the lacrosse squad. They will appreciate this show of strength.

Go Straight To 'Oh Hellas'

Sound and Fury's annual production will be held this Friday and Saturday in Memorial Hall. Student written, student produced, student directed, and student acted, "Oh Hellas" promises from all reports to be the finest production this group has had in many years.

We urge the student body to turn out en masse this weekend for some fine entertainment. So men, let's get on the phone, call your girls, and tell them that this weekend they can go straight to "Oh Hellas."

Library Lights

We are still wondering when the Library is going to do something about the abominable lighting conditions outside the building itself.

We refer to the dangerous situation existing as one attempts to navigate the hard cement steps leading down from this edifice of knowledge. Why, oh why gentlemen, won't you please give us enough light to see what we are doing?

DENNIS PARKS

To the Picture of One
Who looks well . . Well
Loved (adored), and Well provided for.

Tell me:
Who are you to trust a mirror
To tell time, to smile?
I don't doubt, but,
Fragile how you risk glass
To tell time, to smile.

Would water, say, a lake,
Be as accurate, as coy,
To tell time, to smile?
Would you doubt a lake—
With waves, as,
Say a mirror - cracked,
To tell time, to smile?

You've never broken,
Who are you to trust a mirror
To tell time, to smile,
To be accurate, as coy,
As, say, a lake - kissing
Two moist, death-mated flies?

And, then, again
It could be you who asks,
Who am I to be so accurate
Skipping rocks across lakes,
On mirrors others trust
Others own? But not tonight.
For here, I have only your form
Gesticulating, inarticulate
As air in ice.

The House Is Bounded

Rationale being itself both the end and means of its subsistence, and ego-mind-soul also feeding on itself, the wherewithal of the delicate and grandiose, the limiting or generative words, symbols, metaphors, is a parody.

Now, when the metaphysicians, in the process of dying (which is called living) find themselves with and without, constricting or somehow loosening the self-instituted, maintained and, in fact, created noose of knowledge, the winsome, woeful and wise alike may watch, may even pay to see.

And when the curtain call resounds, when those who came to see have seen and gone, some of the winsome having become wise, some of the wise having become woeful, and perhaps some of the woeful even having enhanced their physical wraps of dermis and epidermis, the lights of the stage begin to excuse themselves, begin to yield their photonic effervescence, having reached the zenith of their efflorescence, and run as tiny chickens in an accelerated evanescence.

To which the players respond by swapping lines, trading costumes and rearranging their cues.

So when hope subsides and gloom resides, the man conspires to cease to respire and thus the circle is circumscribed; concurrently making itself into an auger which bores into the crusty, sun-baked skin of the mother of man in order that he may return to the womb, or better, wound, from which he sprang four score and ten before.

To perceive and know is thusly bounded, but to find is of quite different dimension. Mene mene tekel (but even these words required a wall on which to be written).

Could This Happen? Read

Last fall, I had to go up into Virginia on business, and coming back, I stopped in a little town called "Liggett", to get some supper. I went in the first cafe I came to and sat down at the counter. Then an ape or a gorilla or monkey of some kind came in and sat at the other end of the counter. He was wearing faded blue overalls and a tattered straw hat.

The waiter came out of the kitchen and went over to wait on the ape. "Be with you in a minute," he smiled in my direction. The ape fumbled with a menu pointed to something on it. The counterman wrote something down on a pad and then came over to me. "What'll it be, mister?" He wiped the counter off with a dirty rag.

"What is that?" I asked.

"What is what?" He looked at me curiously.

"That thing at the other end of the counter." I pointed to the ape. The ape looked over at me with somewhat the same expresson that the counterman had.

"That's Fred," he said, and put a menu in front of me. "He's an ape."

"So I see," I replied. "What is he doing in here?"

"He came in to get something to eat, I guess," said the counterman. "You from out of town?"

"Yes, I'm just passing through," I said. "I never saw an ape in a cafe before. Didn't mean to be nosy or anything."

"Oh yeah," grinned the counterman, "Being from out of town, you wouldn't know about Fred. Kinda surprised you, didn't it? I mean, seeing an ape in a cafe?"

"Yes it did," I said "Who's ape is he, and what is he doing in overalls?"

"Oh, he don't belong to nobody. He used to belong to Old Man Wardlaw, but he's dead now," said the counterman. "The old man left Fred everything he ever owned, including that big old house across the street. Fred lives there now by himself. Them overalls are his work clothes. He mows lawns and does yard work for a living. He's pretty good, too." The ape beat on the counter with his fist and motioned with his head. The counterman threw his wiping cloth under the counter and turned to me again. "You decided what you want to eat, yet?"

"Yes, I'll have the country style steak, please." I handed the menu back to him and he threw it under the counter with the wiping cloth. That explained why the menu had felt soggy.

"Country style steak is all gone," said the counterman.

"Let me have the menu back, then," I said. "No, on second thought, I'll just take whatever today's special is." I didn't want to handle that menu any more.

"Okay," said the counterman pleasantly. "Special today is chicken a la king. That's what Fred's having." He went back into the kitchen, yelled something that sounded like "Two S. O. S.," and then came back to the counter. He sat down on a stool and leaned over the counter to me.

"Tell me some more about this ape," I said.

"His name's Fred," said the counterman. "Old man Wardlaw bought him from a circus about ten or fifteen years ago. Taught him how to mow lawns and clip hedges and all that stuff. Fred's pretty good, too. He does all my yard work. Good customer too. Don't ask for credit."

"So Fred just lives by himself. That's amazing," I said, and looked over at Fred again. Fred looked back. "And he isn't dangerous? An nobody's afraid of him?"

"Fred's gentle as a lamb. Good honest hard worker," said the counterman. "Town needs more people like him."

I started to ask him something else about Fred, but just then, a little colored girl opened the door and came into the cafe. The counterman jumped up and snarled at her, "Hey, you know this is a white only place." He pointed to the door and made shooing motions with his hand. "Clear out." The colored girl turned and walked out without a word. "Can you beat that?" said the counterman, settling back on his stool. "How about that little nigger coming in here?"

The growing need for student government action to create interest in participating in student government must not be overlooked by our student government leaders. It is a necessity that the problem of campus apathy be solved if our government is to function successfully in the future. With a growing enrollment it is certain that the problems of the campus are going to become both more numerous and more complicated.

Last Thursday night the Student Legislature did not act to solve the situation. A bill introduced by Rep. Crownover requiring legislators to attend dormitory and fraternity meeting was soundly defeated. The legislators have a responsibility to the their voters to keep them informed on legislative action and future legislation being considered. The passage of Rep. Crownover's bill would be a vital step in interesting students in their government.

The legislature can also act in another way. There is a need for a committee to study the problem of campus apathy and to take action to interest people in student government. This Public Relations Committee could act as an important link of communication between the rulers and the ruled. They could get presidents of dormitories and fraternities to cooperate in a publicity campaign. There is a need for an information center where students can find out about student government. The Daily Tar Heel could be used by this committee as a means of publicizing organizations and leading personalities in student government. These ideas are all ways a Public Relations Committee could act.

Another place where campus apathy can be battled is during orientation. The orientation counselors should emphaise more the values of and opportunities in student government on this campus. Many of the students do not know about organizations and committees which they can join and work in. Many new students do not know how to get into student government and do not realize its power. The counselors have an opportunity to fight campus apathy almost before it starts.

The political parties on the campus also have an opportunity to help in the solution of this problem. They are the source of student government leaders and the foundation of political leadership. There natural rivalry can be a means of interesting students in their government. Each party should publize, with more force what they are doing, what they believe in and how a person can get into his government. There are issues on which the two parties differ, and these differences are a means of making students more aware of politics on the campus.

Another way in which campus issues can be better brought to the attention of the students is through the National Student Association. This is a group in which all the students are members, and it should be a means of communicating campus issues to the minds of all the people. Such issues as academic freedom, student freedom, and student responsibility are important to the future of this campus and are problems with which student government here is concerned.

These areas which I have mentioned are all areas in which action can be taken to create interest in student government. The future of an effective student government may well depend on the degree to which this problem is solved. It is time for our leaders in student government to act.

Anthony Wolff

"A man's country, in the modern sense, is something that arose yesterday, that it constantly changing its limits and is ideals; it is something that cannot last forever. It is the product of geographical and historical accidents. The diversities between our different nations are irrational; each of them has the same right, or want of right, to its peculiarities. A man who is just and reasonable must nowadays, so far as his imagination permits, share the patriotism of the rivals and enemies of his country, — a patriotism as inevitable and pathetic as his own. Nationality being an irrational accident, like sex or complexion, a man's allegiance to his country must be conditional, at least if he is a philosopher. His patriotism has to be subordinated to rational allegiance to such things as justice and sumanity."

The paragraph is from a 1910 lecture on Dante by the philosopher George Santayana, collected in a volume called Three Philosophical Poets (Anchor — A17. It is not included here as filler for a blank space on the page; rather, it is presented as a thought which reflects as truly upon our present age and situation as it did on the world at the turn of the century.

What Santayana is objecting to is blind allegiance to any group. Today, such blind allegiance is perhaps our greatest concern, for we have found that a democratic nation, supposedly founded on "rational allegiance to such things as justice and humanity," can come to command the same blind allegiance which we object to in dictatorships. It matters not that in a democracy our allegiance is supposedly freely given: it is nonetheless blind, because it lacks the necessary ingredient of self-awareness and constant self-criticism which make for a dynamic freedom.

Instead, the "group" — an irrational non-existent created by the abdication of responsibility by its members — is given prime status. The result, again is blind allegiance.

The same thing, obviously, is true of this campus; but, with the "group" as concentrated as it is the pressure toward blind allegiance (i.e. "school spirit") is all the more effective.

A case in point is the current move to institute compulsory social fees for women students — a move which, however well-intended, tends to limit the freedom of the individual in his allegiance to the group. Unfortunately, this is only the most recent manifestation of the general tendency.

COMMON SENSE AND NUCLEAR WARFARE. By Bertrand Russel. 92 pp. New York: Simon and Schuster. $2.50

In this pertinent essay, Lord Russel adopts just such a condiditional allegiance as Stantayana suggests. For him, all questions of allegiance are subordinated to considerations of the "race between reason and death."

In a way, this book is pathetic, because it attempts a rational solution to a problem based on irrationality. In the light of Lord Russel's "common sense," the present state of world tension is revealed as absurd. If we were truly, all of us, rational animals, the problem would not exist, for their is no rational basis to the current world situation. This being the case, Lord Russel's cry in the wilderness becomes daily more and more prophetic rather than prophylactic.

His program — such as it is — is nothing new. It amounts to "conciliation in good faith," and seems to rely for its effectiveness on human qualities which, if they existed, would have revented the problem of nuclear annihilation from arising in the first place. Thus, Lord Russel takes an admirable stand for good faith, courtesy, common sense and world government of sorts; and, less admirably, for some pragmatic territorial adjustments.

Obviously, Lord Russel, like all thinking people, is caught between an impossible idealism and the exigencies of international politics. The author being something of a paragon of rational man (with possible lapses from time to time), his essay demonstrates the magnitude of the impasse to which rationality has come. It is an object lesson in the unique ability of humanity to work itself into a box; and the fact that all the kings horses plus Lord Russel can't set it free should give us cause for concern.

LIBERAL EDUCATION & THE DEMOCRATIC IDEAL: and other essays. By A. Whitney Griswold, President of Yale University. 136 pp. New Haven: Yale University Press. Yale Paperbound (Y-1) $.95.

As one of America's most sound and articulate educational philosophers, President Griswold is in league with Santayana and Lord Russel (and Jefferson, among notable others) to promote the employment of rationality in human affairs.

Specifically, President Griswold is concerned with a reaffirmation of the value of a liberal education for a democracy. In this sense of the term, liberal education is not the soft stuff composed of vocational education and mass entertainment into which it has presently decayed. It is, rather, the training which prepares an individual to participate as an individual in a society. Its value is based on the premise that "Man Thinking . . . is the citizen performing the function appointed for all citizens in a civilized state, a function without which there would be no civilized state."

Today this is arch heresy. We have forgotten, to our great loss, that this attitude was the fertile foundation of the Republic, on which the whole structure depends. Having forgotten this precept, we are now forced into the precarious pose of trying to stand on shifting ground against a set of troubles.

If, however, we return to our philosophical origins for strength, as President Griswold leads us to do here, then we may regain our footing. In Santayana's phrase, we can renew a "rational allegiance."

Panama "Invaded" By Cubans

PANAMA, April 28 —(AP)— Two bearded officers of the Cuban revolutionary army sailed down the coast in a motor launch today to persuade a band of invaders from Cuba to lay down their arms.

The officers represented only a small part of the response president Ernesto De La Guardia's government received to an international distress call.

The government of this strategic Caribbean nation flanking the Panama Canal charges Panamanian revolutionaries are hiring soldiers in Cuba and have already sent some of them here on an invasion to topple De La Guardia's Government.

The organization of American States (OAS), meeting in Washington, voted to approve special action to halt the invasion. The United States is supplying Panama's 3,000-man National Guard with small arms under the U. S. Mutual Security Pact, which takes in OAS members.

(Sen. George Smathers (D-Fla.) said in Washington that President De La Guardia had told him in a telephone conversation that the situation in Panama was "enormously serious." The president was said to have expressed the opinion, however, that his government could hold out if the fighting is restricted to the mountains and jungles and does not break out in the cities.)

The two Cuban officers, Capt. Armando Torres and Lt. Fernando Ruiz, arrieved here before dawn and headed toward the rebels' last reported position near Nombre De Dios.

That isolated coastal town lies 50 miles from the capital and only 20 miles from Colon, the Caribbean terminus of the Panama Canal.

Torres and Ruiz went off alone on their dangerous mission to meet the trigger-happy invaders. They carried a Cuban Flag and planned to take it ashore.

Miss Fonteyn's husband, Roberto Arias, was named as the leader of the revolt. Arias, the son of an ex-president and former ambassador to London, slipped ashore 10 days ago with a small band and eluded troops for six days. Then he took refuge in the Brazilian embassy, where he remains.

There was mounting indignation in this capital as a result of the invasion. Spokesmen for both the administration and opposition parties in the national assembly backed the government in its moves to defend the country.

The Panamanian Government has not accused Prime Minister Fidel Cestro's Cuban Government of supporting the invasion despite the large number of Cubans involved.

Panama joined other American representatives at the Washington meeting of the OAS in commending Cuban efforts to block the invasion. Cuba joined in the unanimous vote by the 21 OAS nations condemning the landing.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro in a news conference broadcast from a plane in flight from Houston, Tex., to South America today harshly denounced Cuban invaders of Panama. Castro is en route to an inter-American conference in Buenos Aires.

The bearded Cuban revolutionary leader had just completed a North American good will visit and had been met by his brother Raul Castro for urgent secret conferences at Houston.

Castro and his government people have repeatedly disclaimed any responsibility for the Cubans who landed — apparently as mercenaries — in an alleged plot against the Panama Government.

Castro held his air-borne news conference on the Houston-Trinidad lap of his long journey to Argentina.

He declared participation of Cubans in the Panama venture was against Cuban principles of non-intervention and directly against orders issued by him and Maj. Raul Castro, Commander of the Cuban Armed Forces.

"This incident," he said, "is embarrassing and inopportune . . . it is onerous for us, a negation of our policies . . . it is better . . . it puts us in a disagreeable situation. It has no justification."

Senate Overrides Veto: Passes Rural Electrification Loans

WASHINGTON, April 28 (AP) — The Senate, with Democrats in the saddle, voted today to override President Eisenhower's veto of a bill that would strip away Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson's power over rural electrification loans.

The 64-29 count—two votes more than the required two-thirds majority—was a stinging rebuff to Eisenhower. Only a few hours earlier, he had told Republican Congressional leaders he hoped his veto of yesterday would be sustained.

Fifty-eight Democrats and six Republicans, all but one from Mid-west Farm States, voted to override. Siding with Eisenhower were 23 Republicans and a single Democrat—Sen. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio.

Asked for comment, the White House Press Secretary, James C. Hagerty, said: "There is another house, isn't there?"

The House still must act, and a two-thirds vote there will be needed to pass the REA bill over Eisenhower's veto. There was no clear indication what the House will do.

In more than six years in the White House, Eisenhower never has seen any of his vetoes overturned. In all, he has rejected 138 bills.

Last August, the Senate voted to override Eisenhower's veto of a bill involving wage rates at a New Hampshire Navy Yard. But the House sustained the veto by 53 votes.

This time, Democratic leaders—with big majorities in both House and Senate—were making a concerted effort to slap down Eisenhower's veto.

Republicans accused the Democrats of political motives and said their action was aimed at making Benson a whipping boy.

Sen. George Aiken (R-Vt), a senior member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said a vote to override "will be interpreted by the country simply as malice toward the secretary."

"It won't hurt Secretary Benson at all," Aiken told the Senate. "It probably will enhance his standing in the eyes of the public. But what this bill will do is hurt the REA program."

A vote to override will create suspicion that supporters of the bill want to "get even with the secretary" rather than to extend light and power to rural are as, Aiken said.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn), who sponsored the bill, charged that Benson had violated an agreement with Congress by placing a supervisor—a personal appointee of Benson's—over the REA administrator.

The measure would take from Benson and his successors the authority to approve or reject loans for rural electrification and rural telephone loans. That power would be returned to the head of the rural electrification administration, which otherwise would remain subject to the Agriculture Secretary's supervision.

Democrats who pushed through the legislation contended Benson had been unsympathetic to the rural electrification-telephone program.

One Democrat who argued against overriding was Sen. Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico—a former secretary of agriculture in the Truman administration. He said the secretary's ability to aid REA would be reduced by stripping him of authority over loans.

But Anderson did not take part in the roll call vote on overriding. He announced he had a pair with two other Democratic senators who would have voted "yes" if they had been present.

Soviets Willing To Check

GENEVA, April 28 (AP) — The Soviet Union said tonight it will cooperate in a veto-free system of spot checking the sites of suspected nuclear explosions if the three Atomic Powers fix the number of such checks in advance.

Seymon Tsarapkin, chief Soviet delegate to the conference here on a treaty to ban nuclear tests, told newsmen the Soviet proposal offered a chance to break the deadlock in the six-month-old talks.

The Soviets have been insiting on a veto over inspection arrangements for a test ban. The United States and Britain have declared that an inspection system is worthless unless it has no loopholes and is free from governmental interference.

The idea of a limited number of spot checks was brought up by the Russians yesterday amid speculation the move was ultimately aimed at driving a wedge between the U. S. and Britain.

The two Western Powers have offered to explore the idea but have given Tsarapkin a list of questions dealing with its application. Tsarapkin said he will answer them in closed sessions.

President Eisenhower has said publicly that U. S. experts have doubts about the wisdom of a limited inspection.

The British favored studying such a plan. Now both Western delegations have declared they intend to explore the idea fully. But they also have stressed that there is no split between them and that their policy will depend on what a final analysis of the plan reveals.

Tsarapkin met with correspindents at their request in the villa if the Russian mission after a 45-minute session of the conference.

He said the sending of mobile teams to make spot checks on suspected blasts would not be subject to a decision of the planned seven-nation control commission. It was in that body that the Soviet Union originally demanded a veto over inspection and other control arrangements.

Each of the three Atomic Powers would have a quota.

both to defer start of the third shift and to call off second shift operations which began on April 20. Cooper, however, declined to stop the second shift.

Last week's intensive violence broke out after a settlement negotiated by Gov. Hodges on April 27 broke down. Union officials refused to ratify the agreement after they learned that only a small percentage of more than 900 jobs in the mills were available for returning strikers.

On April 22, Cooper revealed at a conference in the Governor's office that he had filled all except 222 jobs with non-strikers prior to April 17 agreement. This brought a charge from Hodges that Cooper had mislead him. He said he was under the impression that most second and third shift jobs would be available for returning strikers.

In saying he didn't see anything on which to negotiate, Cooper said, "They've turned down everything I've offered." He said he had advised strikers whose jobs are still unfilled "to come in and claim them by 3 p.m. yesterday, and only a few showed up. So, I'm going to hire someone for those jobs."

Committee Surveys

During the past month, the Human Relations Committee of the Y has been conducting a campus wide survey to determine student's opinions on the question, "Should the Negro students in the university be allowed to attend the Chapel Hill theaters and eat in the town restaurants?"

1,200 students have voiced an opinion and the committee is presently totaling the results. Students who have not been contacted but wish to register their opinion may do so now at the Y office. All opinions must be registered by Friday at 4:30 p.m.

GMAB Gives Lawn Party; Site Is Davie Poplar

Last weekend the IDC had its lawn party there, and now another lawn party is being planned for the same place.

Graham Memorial Activities Board announced Tuesday its plans for a lawn concert May 16 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Sponsored by the House Committee, there will be a combo under the Davie Poplar to provide a study break from exams. Although the combo has not been named for the May 16 event, Dick Lambeth, director of the lawn concert, said that the Shades of Sigma Nu would sing during the afternoon.

Christian Fellowship Conference To Be Held

The annual Spring Conference of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship will be held Saturday and Sunday at the YMCA Camp in Greensboro.

The Rev. George Nichols of Greenville Presbyterian Church will deliver an address on "Our Christian Faith."

Groups form Duke, State College, UNC and Woman's College will be attending. Features of the conference include singing, sports, discussion groups and Bible studies.

The Carolina group will meet in front of Lenoir Hall where it will leave for Greensboro at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Appointment To Be Made To Fill Council Vacancy

Of the three coed positions on the Student Council, one is appointed by the president of the student body, one by the Women's Residence Council and another by the council chairman.

Erwin Fuller, chairman of the council, said Tuesday that coeds may apply for the one position he appoints by making application in the student government office by Friday. Interviews with applicants will be held next week.

The coeds on the council sit with the Student Council when cases of constitutionality are involved.

MEDICAL STAFF CONFERENCE

Dr. Frederick E. Vultee of the Medical College of Virginia will be guests speaker at the Combined Staff Conference of the UNC School of Medicine today at 4 o'clock in the Clinic Auditorium.

Dr. Vultee, associate professor of physical medicine and rehabilitation, will speak on" Recent Advances in Artificial Limb Research — A Study of Human Engineering."

All interested persons have been invited to attend this lecture.

POPULATION PROBLEM

Dr. Karl Sax, noted Harvard biologist, will speak on "The Population Explosion" at a Zoology Seminar Thursday at 4:45 p.m. in Room 105, Winston Hall.

Dr. Sax is widely known for his research in cytology, genetics, and horticulture, and he is the present president of the Genetics Society of America.

For several years Dr. Sax has been interested in the problem represented by the accelerating rate of human population increase. Many biologists feel, as does Dr. Sax, that this is the most urgent and difficult problem facing civilization.

His interest in this problem has led to the publication of two books: "Standing Room Only" and "The Population Explosion." In addition he is active in the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts and is the current president of this organization.

ENGLISH LECTURE

The English Club at UNC will hear Dr. Robert B. Voitle of the English Department staff speak Friday night at 7:30 in the Wilson Library Assembly Room.

The public has been invited to hear Voitle's talk on "Intellectual History As an Aid to the Student of Literature."

Coeds Get Late Minutes

Coeds will be given a grace period of 10 accumulative late minutes during the academic year before being campused, beginning with the fall semester.

Kay Boortz, WRC chairman, said this new regulation, passed recently by the Women's Residence Council, will allow for time miscalculations. The current rule provides for a one night's campus the first time a coed is even 30 seconds late.

The new bill does not, however, permit coeds more than one period of accumulative minutes. After the first 10 minutes, coeds will be campused for any lateness, even under 10 minutes.

The rule of five campuses resulting in a Women's Council offense will remain the same under the new regulation. A file, which will contain the number of minutes against each girl, will be kept at each dorm's desk.

Hammett Pitches Carolina To 2-1 Victory Over Duke

DURHAM, N. C., April 28 — (AP) — Lefty Ben Hammett handcuffed Duke's punchless Blue Devils (on three hits) here Tuesday, as Carolina nipped Duke by 2-1.

Hammett faced only 30 batters, three over the minimum, and struck out eight Blue Devils while walking only one.

Heels Now 10-5

North Carolina thus evented its Atlantic Coast Conference record at 4-4 while Duke lost its sixth loop contest in seven outings. The Tar Heels are 10-5 overall for the season while the Blue Devils stand just the opposite at 5-10.

The winners pushed across single runs in the fourth and sixth frames to take a 2-1 lead, nipped a Duke rally after one score in the bottom of that inning, and then held on to give Hammett his fourth win in five games. Kalish is now 3-2.

Hollers Scores

In the fourth, the Tar Heels' Russ Hollers opened by reaching first thanks to fielding error by shortstop John Frye. Al Baldwin advanced Hollers to second with a sacrifice, and then Gerald Griffin plated Hollers with a blooping single over third base.

Griffin opened the Carolina sixth with a single, stole second, and scored the final Tar Heel run when Larry Carver lashed a drive over second base.

In the bottom of the sixth, Duke's Victor Lippincott walked, was sacrificed to second by Kalish, and came home when shortstop John Frye poled a long double to right field. Frye went to third when Hollers bobbled the ball. Mark Brownstein grounded out and Pete Maynard popped out to leave Frye stranded on third.

Co-Ed Tennis Day

Tennis Day, Saturday April 25, proved to be a great success as six schools brought teams to participate in the events. The schools represented were: Women's College, Duke, Catawba, Salem, Peace, and UNC.

Woman's College won the honors of the day with their victories in both tournaments. Betty Brown of W. C. won the Singles with decisive victories in all of her matches, and defeating Terry Tracy of Duke in the finals 6-2; 6-2. Rankin and Wilkinson of W. C. beat Horne and Hunter of UNC in the finals to win the Doubles Tournament, 9-7; 6-1.

Prissy Wyrick and Carolyn Vaught played for Carolina in the Singles Tournament. Wyrick drew Betty Brown after winning her first match, and lost to the tournament winner. Vaught drew a bye for the first round and then met Tracy, losing to the other finalist. Horner and Hunter represented UNC in the other finalist. Horner and Hunter represented UNC in the Doubles, beating their first opponents from Peace 6-0; 6-0. The next match against Catawba was a well played endurance battle, with UNC arising the victor, 7-9; 7-5; 11-9. In the finals Horner and Hunter played the first set to 9-7 before losing, and then physical exhaustion assisted W. C. in the final victory.

This was the Second Annual Tennis Day here at Carolina for women, and exhibited some great tennis and skilled players. The event will be continued annually for the WAA Tennis Club.

DUKE BASKETBALL COACH

DURHAM (AP) — Duke athletic director E. M. Cacerson said Tuesday he has "no firm recommendation" to make at this time in the matter of a new head basketball coach for the university.

Cameron reported to Dr. Charles E. Jordan, chairman of the athletic council, that he has talked with 15 of the 135 applicants for the post.

CALCUTTA POOLS

NEW YORK — (AP) — A proposal before the U. S. Golf Assn. may strike a death blow to big golf tournaments with Calcutta pools, such as the Tournament of Champions last weekend at Las Vegas, Nev.

Joe Dey, executive director of the USGA, said Tuesday. "It's a matter for the executive committee."

Unbeaten Lacrosse Team To Battle Va. Frosh Here

By DAVE WIBLE

Undefeated in two starts, Carolina's lacrosse club will meet a strong Virginia freshman squad on Fetzer Field this afternoon at 3:30.

It wil be the first opportunity for the home fans to see te Heels in action this year. Twice the club has traveled to Duke and beaten its Jayvee team.

The Virginia squad will be some top-notched competition for the local club. Fielding an excellent attack, it has been called one of the best yearling squads the school has ever had.

On several occasions they have defeated their own varsity. The varsity came down to Duke several weeks ago and gave the Blue Devils a sound trouncing.

No matter how tough the Cavaliers look, the Tar Heels are looking foreward to this game. Striving for recognition as a varsity sport next year the teams wants to show the school and athletic officials how well it has progressed in the few weeks it has been organized.

The strength of the club is centered around its defense unit of Captain Frank Riggs, Will Browne and Buddy Gould along with goalie Al Walters. This unit was especially impressive against Duke last week.

Walters let only two shots get by him that game and one was just plain luck. The defense men kept the ball well clear of the Duke attack area during most of the game even when Carolina had a man or two in the penalty box.

On the ttack for Carolina will be the well coordinated unit of Spense Everett, Joe Alexander and Les Cutorius. Everett leads the scoring with four goals. Alexander has three and Sutorius two. All have assists credited to them.

The workhorses of the squad, the mid-fielders, will be Buddy Hathans, Cliff Pannell and Frank St. Richards. Having the run of the field, this unit plays both defense and offense. Virginia will probably have alternating units in order to keep a fresh unit in all te time. The depth-shy Heels will have to depend most on these three to play against the alternating Virginians.

The Tar Heels next ocntest will again be here when they play Duke next Wednesday.

STARTING ON DEFENSE — When the Carolina lacrosse team takes on the Virginia freshmen this afternoon at Fetzer Field one of the three defensemen for the Tar Heels will be sophomore Frank Riggs. The Carolina squad is unbeaten in two starts.

Several Basic Lacrosse Rules

Here are a few basic rules of lacrosse for those who have never seen the game played.

Each squad has ten players, a goalie, three defensemen, three midfielders nad three attackmen.

Each squad must kep three men on its attack side of the midfield line and four men on the defense side. The other three men-the midfielders - play both attack and defense.

Around the goal is a nine foot circle called the "crease." No one is allowed in there but the goalie. When he gets the ball, such as by blocking a shot, he must get out of the crease in four seconds.

Anytime the ball goes out of bounds it changes hands except when it does so on an attempted shot. In that case it is given to the man nearest the ball when it goes out.

No body contact is allowed except in theare a within fifteen feet of the ball. Then, the only limit to contact is that a man cannot be hit from behind (clipped) or hit in the head with a stick.

The ball may be passed, carried, and batted but it may not be touched by a player's hand.

In case of a foul, the referee may put a player in a penalty box from one to three minutes and his team will have to play minus a man.

Imps Nip Frosh 7-5 In Eleventh

By J. C. UNDERWOOD

First-baseman Bobby Rankin rapped out his fifth hit of the day in the eleventh inning with the bases full to carry Duke's Blue Imps to a 7-5 win over the Carolina freshmen here yesterday.

The Tar Babies had spotted Duke a four run lead in the first three innings and were behind 4-1 till the sixth when they knocked out four hits for three runs. Len Dellolio started things with his second double of the game. Pete Farrior followed with a single up the middle and took second when the throw-in failed to nab Dellolio. Pete then went to third on E. C. Haithcock's groundout and scored on a 390 foot sacrifice fly by James Helton. It appeared the scoring had ended, but Whitey Wade cracked a double to right to keep things going and Jerry Carpenter, who had relieved Nick Warren on the mound to begin the sixth, came through with a game-tying single to center.

Carpenter was pitching magnificent no-hit ball untill he walked Fader with two out in the ninth. Reynolds then greeted him with a solid slash all the way to the hedge in left that scored Fader easily. Dellolio relayed the ball in quickly to Wade at the plate for the final out as Reynolds tried to reach home on the hit.

The bottom of the ninth saw the Tar Babies refuse to give in when, after Larry Neal grounded out, big Ron Miller sent a booming three-base smash to the rightfield hedge. Len Dellolio promptly slapped a liner over third to send the game into extra innings.

Nettters Face Duke For ACC Lead

By JOHN JUSTICE

Rackets will be flashing here today at 3 o'clock, when the Tar Heel netters take on the Blue Devils of Duke University. Both teams are undefeated in Atlantic Coast Conference action, and today's match will most likely determine the league champion.

Duke's squad, coached by Whit Cobb, is coasting along on a three match winning streak, having downed George Washington, Maryland, and Virginia in succession. The Dukes' overall record is 8 wins and four losses.

Heels Have 7 Straight

Coach Don Skakle's courtmen have not lost a match in the last seven, after having dropped three of the first four at the beginning of the season. If the Heels do get by the Blue Devils and go on to win the league crown, it will be the fourth time in five years that Carolina has won it.

Playing the number one for Duke will be Joe Gaston, a sophomore. Gaston lost to Virginia's top player, Ray York, as did Geoff Black, the Tar Heel ace from Quebec. However, Gaston beat Chuck Abelson of Maryland, to whom Black has lost.

As for comparative team scores, which can not be depended upon in measuring the ability of a team, both Carolina and Duke downed Maryland by the score of 8-1. Against Virginia, the Tar Heels won 8-1, and the racket squad from Duke came out on top, 6-3.

Keys And Sylvia

Ben Keys and Bruce Sylvia will both be going for their eleventh win of the year. The last time Keys lost was to Illinois, and Sylvia tasted defeat only against Clemson's fine star, Mohammed Nasim, who defeated UNC's Steve Bank last year.

BRUCE SYLVIA

Faculty-Student Golf

The pairings for the Faculty-Student Golf Tournament, which has been under way since April 25 and will last until May 9, are: Phil Windham and Keith Collins, Harold Langenderfer and Douglas Murray, Dick Jamerson and Jim Roberts, Roddey Ligon and Charlie Schrader, Ralph Dunlap and Curtis Hathaway, E. A. Brecht and Daley Goff, J. B. Hill and Phil Blazer, Roy Hallmand McRae Turlington. The individuals are: Jim Vance, James Butler, Walt Wilson, Stan Black, Bill Beasley, Al Eskridge, Joe McLeod, Don Gray, Barton Tuck and John Hazzard.

W.A.A. OFFICERS

Four WAA officers were filled in an election held at the WAA Council meeting Monday night. The election was by secret ballot with each member of the council having one vote. Vice President — Vickie Greulach won over Maria Morgan. Secretary — Martha Custis won over Sally McCrory. Treasurer — Prissy Wyrick won over Tootie Brown. Awards Chairman — Bobbie Brundage won over Beck Clopper.

Carrousel Tourney In Danger

CHARLOTTE — (AP) — The Charlotte Carrousel college basketball tournament is taking a year's leave of absence.

John Belk, Charlotte merchant who originiated the December tournament four years ago, said Tuesday the event will not be held this year but definitely will be revived next year.

He had planned to stage a four-team tournament this year after going with eight teams the first four years.

St. Francis of Loretto, Pa., winner last season. DePaul, Boston University and Belmont Abbey had been considered for the 1959 renewal. The schools have been notified of the decision to take a year's break.

Seven undergraduate women and one honorary member were tapped into Carolina's highest honorary organization for women, the Order of the Valkyries, in a secret pre-dawn ceremony this morning.

JUDGE SHARP . . . "one whose life has exemplified honor and personal integrity through the cause of justice. Since she received her Law Degree from this University in 1927, she has become the only woman to hold a special Superior Court Judge's post in North Carolina. Recognized throughout the state as a scholar, lawyer, judge and administrator, Judge Sharp and her unique accomplishments represent a high level of achievement for womanhood."

MISS McGAVRAN . . . "One whose quiet leadership, unassuming manner, and tireless efforts in all her responsibilities, have brought her recognition from many. While maintaining scholastic excellence, she has served diligently and efficiently in the YWCA, on the Carolina Women's Council and in the Student Party.

"Her personal interest in helping 'own girls to become an integral part of Carolina has strengthened the sense of a University community. Miss McGavran has given willingly of her time and service to the University and to her fellow students."

MISS MAGNUSON . . . "One who has shown in her dedication to the highest standards of scholarship, to the profession of nursing, and to the welfare of her fellow students, an understanding and maturity beyond her years. As a participant in student affairs and student nurse activitie on the state and national level, she has represented in an efficient manner her university and her school of nursing.

"Her quiet humility and dignified grace combine with a spirit of thoughtfulness and warmth to radiate in a personality which endears her to those with whom she works and which is an inspiration to her classmates."

MISS MARTIN . . . "One whose interest in people has contributed to the growth of her fellow students, and whose enthusiastic spirit has been an inspiration to those around her.

"She has worked continuously and effectively in helping to establish her sorority on campus. In her work with Orientation she has helped to communicate the meaning of Carolina. Through her active concern, she has stimulated wider interest in the program of the YWCA. Her spirit in her relationships with others, and her dedication to high ideals warrant recognition."

TV Director To Speak Here

JOHN FRANKENHEIMER

John Frankenheimer, noted director of "Playhouse 90" productions and other television shows, will speak on "Popular Misconceptions of Television" here Thursday, May 14, at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Frankenheimer, who is being brought here under the auspices of the Carolina Forum, has been nominated for an "emmy" award for his direction of two separate shows on "Playhouse 90." The emmies," which are television's equivalent to the "Oscars," will be presented May 6.

The sponsoring Carolina Forum brings significant speakers from every field of endeavor to the campus in an effort to present new ideas to the student and University community.

Frankenheimer will be the first and only presentation of the Forum this semester.

After his speech in Hill Hall, a reception honoring him and his wife will be held in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

The 29-year-old director staged television's biggest dramatic show, Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," on March 12 and 19. The two-part, three-hours Hemingway presentation is one high point in a career which included acting and direction in the stock company of the Highland Playhouse, Falmouth, Mass.

Frankenheimer was in the cast of the American Theater Wing's Washington production of "The Moon Is Blue." He later joined the CBS television network in 1953 as assistant director of "Person To Person," "You Are There" and "See It Now." After directing a "Mama" series, "You Are There" and "Danger," he became co-director for "Climax!"

For his direction of "Deal a Blow," he won the Christopher Award.

For "Playhouse 90" Frankenheimer has directed "Forbidden Area," "The Comedian," "The Ninth Day," "The Last Tycoon," "The Fabulous Irishman," "A Sound of Different Drummers," "A Town Has Turned To Dust," "Days of Wine and Roses" and "Old Man."

Last Thursday, he directed "The Browning Version," an adaptation of Terence Rattigan's play on the Dupont Show of the Month.

Parents' Day Sunday; Big Turnout Expected

Carolina's ninth annual Parent's Day, Sunday, will be filled with activities for the campus visitors.

Church services at 11 a.m. (mass will be celebrated at 10:45 at the Catholic Church) will be followed by lunch from 12 until 2 p.m. Alpha Phi Omega, UNC's service fraternity, will maintain information booths in front of the Morehead Building and at the Old Well.

From 2 to 4 all dormitories, fraternities and sororities will be open to visitors. The parents may also see the Air Force ROTC pass in review on Fetzer Field at 2 p.m. After the review the cadets will receive their parents in a reception in the Air Science lounge.

At the Naval Armory the NROTC will be displaying arms and equipment. There will be a Zoology Museum exhibit in Wilson Hall and a Geology-Anthropology Exhibit at Person Hall. The Usual exhibits will be in the library. The Radio-Television-Motion Pictures Department will be open for inspection in Swain Hall.

Exhibits will also be held in the chemistry and physics buildings. The Playmakers Museum will be open in 101 Saunders. Consolidated University offices will be open for inspection and the Morehead Planetarium will present three shows during the afternoon of their present feature, "Color in the Sky."

At 3:30 there will be a faculty reception and a glee club concert under Davie Poplar. Refreshments will be served. In the event of rain the reception will be held in Graham Memorial.

Vice President William Carmichael will give an address after the reception at 4:30 p.m. A band Concert will follow his address. If it rains, this will be held in Hill Hall.

Students may have their parents attend the Supper Forums held at the Chapel Hill Churches with them.

The last event of the evening will be a presentation of "Oh, Hellas!" at 8 p.m.

The event is the major yearly service project of APO.

Philanthropics Defeat Bill

By HOBART STEELE

The Philanthropic Literary Society overwhelmingly defeated a resolution advocating freedom from religion at its regular Tuesday night meeting.

The resolution was based on the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

The resolution contended that references to God should be stricken from all money, documents and ceremonies of the government and that oaths should contain no reference to God.

It further stated that "Blue Laws" be abolished and there be no deference from the military draft because of religious beliefs and that no discrimination be held in favor of those holding religious beliefs.

Rep. Dave Matthews, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, introduced the bill and spoke in favor of the several articles contained therein.

A proposed amendment to the bill was defeated as Rep. Warren Jackson rose in opposition to the bill in its entirety. Jackson said that the inscription on money "in God we trust" is a statement of faith rather than that of religious discrimination.

"America," said Jackson, "was founded on an ancient religious heritage and we should continue in the ways of the precident which has been set."

Matthews stated in rebuttal that because something is traditional there is no reason that it cannot be done away with.

MOTHER OF THE YEAR

Alderman Dorm Hostess Is Mother Of The Year

Mrs. J. C. Clamp, hostess in Alderman Dormitory, is the Campus Mother of the Year for 1959.

She was selected Saturday by a panel of judges, who revealed their choice this week. The letter nominating Mrs. Clamp commented that "her time is unceasingly devoted to the best interest of her girls."

Last year Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, hostess in Spencer Dorm, was selected as the outstading mother on campus.

Two other local mothers of the year are being honored this week by civic clubs in the community. Mrs. Jessie Gouger, Chapel Hill Mother of the Year; Mrs. Lloyd Senter, Carrboro Mother of the Year, and Mrs. Clamp were guests of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday night, the Rotary Club Wednesday night and will be honored by the Lions Club tonight.

The local Merchants Association, which holds the three contests annually, will hold a banquet in honor of the new mothers of the year at the Carolina Inn May 4. Each woman will receive a silver tray with her name and "Mother of 1959" engraved on it.

They will also be presented with a portrait by Lavergne Studio, silver medallions and theater tickets.

Mrs. Clamp has been hostess in Alderman for eight years. Before, she was hostess in the Chi Omega House. She is a widow and has one son.

Mrs. Gouger, a widow and the mother of two children is a third grade teacher in the Chapel Hill Elementary School.

Mrs. Senter, the mother of three sons, is a den mother and leader of a training group at the Carrboro Baptist Church.

Sound & Fury Presents Rolicking 'Oh Hellas'

Advance ticket sales have already topped last year for Sound and Fury's production of "Oh, Hellas!" opening in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. Friday for a two day run.

Due to the increased interest in the production it is currently rumored that the play will be held over an extra day through Sunday night.

If the production is a dramatic success, several people will share the most important part of the credit, and perhaps tops among these is Joel Fleishman, the play's director.

Fleishman, a law student and a graduate student in dramatic arts, has been working for approximately a month in molding a script into a working play.

Fleishman, in discussing the play, pointed out its durability. The original Aristophanes version, from which Lew Hardee and Carl Bridgers derived the idea for their script, was first produced 25 centuries ago in the Lenean Festival in Athens.

The director pointed out that perhaps the universality of its thematic content had the greatest bearing on making the play stand up through the ages.

But others have made a major contribution to the general framework of the production. Such people as Doug Warner, who almost single handedly built all the sets for the play, which are replicas of Grecian architecture, are deserving of major credit for the technical success.

Warner, who worked with John Sneden's design to bring a certain authentic Greek flavor as well as a touch of humor, is a Phi Delta Theta, and did the job on a twelve hour a day basis, assisted only in any real degree by Leslie Crutchfield.

Another important job was costuming the production so that the costumes would reflect to the audience something of 5th century Athens.

Legislature To Introduce Twelve New Bills Tonight

Twelve bills, and the possible reintroduction of a defeated one, will be before the Student Legislature tonight.

There is a possibility that the Jim Crownover (SP) bill to make meetings of legislators with constituents compulsory will be reintroduced and reconsidered.

They will meet at 7:30 in Phi Hall, 4th floor, New East.

A bill to amend the by-laws of the Legislature, introduced by Dave Jones (SP), will be on the agenda. The bill will allow legislators to move from their districts and still retain their seats.

Further revision to the by-laws is proposed in another Jones' bill to permit the Rules committee to review presidential appointments failing to pass Legislature or appointments referred to it by a majority of the governing body.

Another revision was suggested by Jack Lawing (UP) in a bill to require the request of 1/5 of the Legislature members present to have a roll call vote.

Three bills for appropriations will be considered tonight. Too authored by Jones call for allocation of $85 to the NSA delegation and $110 to the senior class, respectively. Another by Crownover would give $75 to the junior class.

The solons will hear a bill, by Crownover, to appropriate funds for the purchase of a new typewriter for the student government office.

Bills concerning a Motor Vehicle Advisory Board, the Professional Interfraternity Council, a Student Tratfic Investigation staff, the Consolidated University Student Council by-laws and a Traffic Safety Committee will also be on the agenda.

15th Sigma Chi Derby To Be Held In Kenan

The 15th Annual Sigma Chi Derby gets underway today with a parade through downtown Chapel Hill at 2 p.m. Immediately after the parade, six Derby events will be held in Kenan Stadium.

Doug Clark's Combo will lead the parade of convertibles transporting the Derby participants who represent the seven UNC sororities and the Nurses Dorm.

A major attraction of the Derby will be the Miss Modern Venus contest. A bathing suit and trophy will be presented the coed selected to succeed Gail Willingham, last year's winner. Judging this contest will be Dean Smith basketball coach; Joe Augustine of Stevens-Shepherd and Claude George of the Business Administration School.

In other events eight coeds will compete in a race to the flesh. Eight more will participate in a secret event which will be revealed this afternoon at the Derby.

Each sorority and the Nurses Dorm will present skits during the Derby. Another event will be the Grand National, a relay race.

One of the Sigma Chis, selected last night by his fraternity, will be the target of eight coeds entered in the hit the Geek contest.

One of the sororities or Nurses Dorm will be declared the winner of the Derby on the basis of the total number of points scored in the events. First, second and third place winners will get five, three and one points for their sorority or dorm. Last year's Derby winner was ADPi sorority.

Master of ceremonies will be Fred Swearingen. Derby chairman are Sigma Chis Jack Thompson and Kent Walker. Sigma Chi president is Dennis McCoy.

The Budget

A Need For Understanding

The State Affairs Committee goes into its final phase this week, as it is passing a petition around the campus for students to sign. The petition calls for a greater appropriation allotment to the University than the one recommended by the Legislators in Raleigh.

At the present time the "A" Budget has been cut some 10%, the "B" Budget and the Capital Improvements by far more. In a day of ever greater competition for faculty members surrounding schools improving their libraries, and the other two units of the Consolidated University having splendid new student unions, it is surprising that the State Assembly believes this Universtiy can continue to hold its national and regional ratings with such a pidling sum of money as they are apparently willing to give us. In fact, the "A" and "B" budget requests that the Joint Appropriations Committee is now probably going to give us are less than the original total request in the "A" Budget alone.

At a meeting of the Alumni Association on Tuesday night in the Carolina Inn, the many guests heard Chancellor Bill Aycock state that he did not believe in entering into projects or undertaking a program unless excellence was the final goal. It is clear to University administartors and anyone who is acquainted with the overall structure of this great University, that we will not be able to remain at the status quo, unless the necessary funds are restored to our original requests.

In the final analysis, it must clearly be understood by the public of the State of North Caorlina that the welfare of this University will greatly determine the overall welfare of the citizenry of this state. In a day of rising prices and great increase in costs for any business (and the University of North Carolina can be compared to a business), it can be seen that Chancellor Aycock's "excellence" costs money. It is expensive to compete with other institutions. Cold cash is required to give us an adequate library. Funds are necessary for capital improvements. It costs in capital letters — COSTS — to educate properly the young people of this state.

We challenge any citizen to show the unreasonableness of wanting to secure a good faculty, or a desire to have a decent student union or the need of enough housing units paid for by the state instead of self-liquidation, or the seeking of enough books to encourage scholarly pursuit.

We do not ask for frills. We do not ask for the extras. We do not seek anything more than the bare necessities to maintain our present level of education. And yet, the people of North Carolina and the leaders who represent them fail to visualize our needs.

Perhaps they will be able to grasp the scope of the entire situation when Carolina slips in all of these areas and aspects. When Carolina ceases to produce the outstanding men and women of this state and is unable to supply the people of this region with some degree of leadership in the many many fields, the lawmakers in Raleigh will realize it is to late.

But, they don't have to wait that long. They can ward off this disaster by careful study of the needs of this University and do something about it now. We hope they will, and further hope that the students and sons and daughters of this University will turn the pressure on in the next few weeks.

Legislative Roundup

By DAVE JONES

Tonight the Student Legislature is dealing, once again, with communications. Communications between representative and constituent.

Last week, Representative Jim Crownover (SP) introduced his "Compulsory meeting" bill. Hundreds of inches of newsprint have been expended on these pages on the subject. Tonight, reconsideration will be moved on his bill.

He has consulted with a former Speaker, a University Party legislator who voted against the bill, and he has read Don Dotson's column carefully.

It is to be hoped that the result of the bombardment of ideas and emotions will result in a resolution that will have a genuine effect on the communications problem.

"A resolution to encourage meetings of all legislators with their constituents." may very well be the title of Crownover's substitute meaure. If the measure is written in such a way as to encourage legislators to get out and meet their people; explain to them who they are and what theyar e about; and give the legislator a chance to see his duty and act on his conscience; then it will pass and not be forgotten.

Any measure that proposes a change in the rules oft he legislature or that requires written reports with penalties attached that must be administered by the Speaker or the Rules Committee must be enacted by twot hirds of the body.

Realisticly, this can not be done. There are those who are still adamant in their opposition to Crownover's proposal. Their opposition cannot be undercut by anything less than a different approach.

There is a proposed by laws revision, introduced by Representative Jack Lawing (UP), that also faces a real uphill battle.

Currently, the rules of the legislature call for a roll call vote upon the request of a single member. Lawing's proposal would make the concurrence of one fifth of those present necessary before a roll call could be called.

The roll call serves several purposes. It gives a legislator a chance to have the votes for and against a measure recorded. He can then use the possibility of being exposed to publicity as a lever to force more profound thought, particularly as to what a man's constituants might want.

Persons whose votes were recorded against a measure can call for its reconsideration. Proceedure can be slowed down by the means of a roll call, and a roll call can be used to keep members from slipping away from a session and causing it to drop below a quorum.

Most legislators consider the right to ask for a roll call a "Point of Personal Privilege," even though sometimes three or four roll calls in a row may be a little tiresome.

A by-law revisions covering presidentialap pointments has also introduced. The author felt, in view of the fact that there have been controversial appointments in the past, that some machinery set up whereby serious thought, and discussion including the candidate for confirmation could be held.

At present the President of the Student Body and his advisors are wading through some three hundred applications making choices and decisions that can be made wisely only upon the basis of personal interviews, applications and recommendations. The president has an over all picture of who wants what and who would be best for what.

This total concept is too large a thing for a group of 50 people to grasp, but it is conceivable that there might be a single appointment which is in the political spotlight, and which might cause discussion and controversy.

Then some machinery is needed for the president's appointee to be heard, explain himself and generally qualify himself to hold the job he seeks.

The Rules Committee is the one presently constituted group that most nearly fits the requirements of this task. Under the revision proposed, they would be charged with the responsibility of reviewing "by means of a hearing any presidential appointments that fail to pass the legislature, or which are referred to it by a majority of the legislature."

"I Don't Want To Seem Like An Alarmist, But—"

A Word From GMAB Prexy

ANGUS DUFF

The method of selection for GMAB chairmen and co-chairmen is based on proven ability and accomplishment in other fields, and an evidence of acceptable qualifications. Instead of using GMAB for a proving ground, as has been done in the past, merit had to be previously demonstrated this year.

Because of increased interest and more applications from fraternity and sorority members than others, GMAB this coming year is composed of chairmen from those social organizations. Because GMAB is, in the main, socially inclined, the experience of the new chairmen will be beneficial to our programming.

Perhaps the most important facet of successful activities and good programming, for quality in an individual is a sign of the willingness and ability to do an effective job. We sincerely believe next year's chairmen possess the highest quality to be found in any organization on campus. Also, they have the potential of becoming the most effective and closely-knit GMAB in the history of the student union.

Because of increased programming and planning, a larger group than this year's was necessitated, thereby accounting for the switch from chairmen to co-chairmen. We feel this wil also relieve somewhat the burden of our planned extra activities and provide double experience and a double effort from the committees.

We hope for a substantial increase in the following areas pertaining to the budget: Each individual committee, GMAB productions Board (Old SEC), and in the overall expenses of the activities board as a whole.

The reasons for this hoped-for increase are that the inadequate functions of the past years necessitate an increase in order to create more effective work. Also, the quality and quantity of next year's activities call for a stepped-up budget. Prepared by the old and new committee chairmen and co-chairmen, the budget increase is justified when taking their experience and know-how into consideration while reviewing the proposed increase.

The two main changes in the reorganization of all committees are the combination of the Special Events, Receptions and Decorations, and Polls Committees into the House Committee; and the reorganization of the old Student Entertainment Committee into what is now the GMAB Productions Board. The Office Committee and the Student Productions Committee have been renamed the Personnel and Star Series Committees, respectively.

The actual committee work will be the following, taking into consideration the revisons and changes: The Calendar Committee will increase its circulation from 3500 to 4500 monthly, there will be a reorganization of the selection of the Calendar Girl and a different back on the calendar each month.

The Current Affairs Committee will hold events of the "local" panel discussion type with or without simple refreshments and will sponsor more forums and political rallies.

The Drama Committee will have five Petite Dramatique productions instead of two.

The Film Committee will work for a wider variety of films including sports films and Million Dollar Movies.

The House Committee is, as previously mentioned, a consolidation of the Polls, Receptions, and Decorations and Special Events Committees. It will be in charge of G.M. receptions, student-faculty Coffee Hours, parties and seasonal decorations for the building, the selection of magazines and newspapers for the lounge; and to promote any area of interest not already represented in the G.M. family.

The music committee will incerase the scope of its program from 10-15 Petite Musicales.

The Personnel Committee will promote committee membership and maintain records of committee members and chairmen.

The Social Committee will expand its efforts to try equare dances nad folk dances, dance lessons (free), more weekend programs, two big weekends such as the Brubeck one, instead of a single annual program of this type.

The Tournament Committee will sponsor chess, bridge, pool and ping pong tournaments.

The Publicity Committee will work through all of the communication channels on campus, as well as attempt to get aid from the University News Bureau.

The Productions Board will coordinate programs for al Drama and Music done by GMAB, recommend chairmen of the Music, Drama and Star Series committees, receive and consider for production original student written works and select producers and directors for all stuent shows.

The Star Series committee will be in charge of physical arrangements for the Prouctions Board, Sound & Fury and the Cavalcade of Talent.

I would like to express my hope for a most successful year, both program and service-wise to the students at Carolina. A very important reason for this being the obtaining of a new union building.

However, the primary purpose of our efforts will be to make the potential GMAB the real GMAB. I hope everyone here will join with me to make GMAB realize its potentialities, that of being the center of all student activity on this campus.

Frankenheimer To Visit UNC

Frank Crowther

On Thursday, May 14th, John Frankenheimer will visit the campus for a speaking engagement sponsored by the Carolina Forum. Many readers, of course, are well familiar with Frankenheimer's work as a television director, but few are aware of the near-phenomenal rise of his career and his stature as one of the bright young directors in the medium. In fact, the motion picture industry is now feverishly vying for his services.

Frankenheimer was born in Malba, Long Island and graduated from Williams College. He was once an actor himself, having acted and directed in the stock company of the Highland Playhouse, Falmouth Mass. He was also cast in the American Theater Wing's Washington production of "The Moon Is Blue." He soon moved into broadcasting, acting and directing in radio in Washington and working at WTOP-TV in the nation's capitol.

His work was quickly noted and he moved to CBS in New York in July of 1953 as assistant director of the "Mama" series, "You Are There" and "Danger." He kept moving. In 1955 he became co-director on the now-defunct "Climax!" series and won the Christopher Award for his direction of 'Deal A Blow."

After serving in the Air Force for two years directing training films in Hollywood as a Lieutenant, Frankenheimer returned to New York and directed, if I have the facts correct, in a free lance capacity under the auspices of Talent Associates the organization which functions as his agent. It was at this time that he began his long and successful association with "Playhouse 90" and the "Dupont Show of the Month." Frankenheimer's name readily became synonymous with superb direction.

During his three years with "Playhouse 90" he somehow found time to direct a film, "The Young Strangers." At the same time, he was responsible for some memorable television productions. "Playhouse 90's" premiere production, "Forbidden Area" was a Frankenheimer project. Other equally fine dramas he directed were: "The Comedian" (which you will remember starred Mickey Rooney), "The Ninth Day," "The Last Tycoon," "A Sound of Different Drummers," "A Town Has Turned To Dust," "Old Man" and "Days of Wine and Roses."

This spring Frankenheimer probably reached the height of his career thus far with his "Playhouse 90" direction of "For Whom The Bell Tolls," and, for the "Dupont Show of the Month," Sir John Gielgud in "The Browning Version."

"For Whom The Bell Tolls" was another "first" for Frankenheimemr, being the first three-hour drama ever presented on television. Adapted from the Hemingway novel — which was made into a motion picture starring Gary Cooper and Ingrid Bergman — it featured Maria Schell, Jason Robards Jr., Maureen Stapleton, Eli Wallach and Nehemiah Persoff. Though the reviews were mixed, Hemingway, who happened to be in the United States at the time, said that it was the best graphic presentation even done of any of his work. This was an achievement in itself.

Sir John Gielgud's distinguished acting in "The Browning Version" was only the third television appearance for this actor, often referred to as the greatest performer living.

With this impressive array of shows behind him, one sits back in awe when confronted with the fact that Frankenheimer is but 29 years old, and already a legend.

His method of directing is anomalous. After thoroughly analyzing each part, Frankenheimer holds long, private discussions with each member of his cast. His rehearsals then begin early in the morning and last late into the night — seven days a week. He checks every minute detail himself, not leaving it to somebody else.

One of his most unique directorial habits is that of following his actors around like a hawk, sometimes standing inches away from them while they emote. "He kind of 'spooks' you," said one of his principals, some time back, "but he really knows what he's doing. He has a great understanding of an actor's part and, if you'll listen, you can learn quite a bit about your own trade." Many people are amazed that he knows so much and yet is so youn.

Probably one of his best compliments came from Gielud: "It's distracting to have him following me closely and sometimes moving right up alongside my face. But no actor should be surprised at distractions or chaos . . . He's very good. The only thing that keeps one young is working with some of the young people in this medium and learning from their freshness, there lack of fear of what's been done before. One doesn't want to get into a groove."

Frankenheimer told me over the phone last Monday that he had been engaged to direct the projected motion picture of Truman Capote's BREAKFAST AT TIFFANYS and another as yet undesignated film this summer. Next fall, he hopes to direct a broadway play.

His appearance at UNC will also be another milestone. This will be the first time that he has ventured to a university campus for such a speaking engagement. "I'm game if you are," he told me. One of the main themes of his speech will be the popular misconceptions of television — what the public thinks it is and what they believe goes on behind the scenes, and what really does take place during the production of an hour and a half or more of drama on television.

A most interesting evening should be in store for those who attend — Thursday, May 14th, in Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

Tar Heel Courtmen Whip Duke, 6-3 For Ninth Win

By JOHN JUSTICE

Carolina's smooth-stroking tennis team ran its ACC seasonal record to 6-0 and hurdled the chief barrier to a perfect conference record by downing the Duke netmen, 6-3 yesterday afternoon.

The match, played here, saw Marshall Happer's seven match winning streak broken by Fred Ruben, 6-0, 9-7. Happer's record now stands at 7-5.

In the top match of the day, Tar Heel captain Geoff Black got by Joe Gaston in a squeaker, 6-3, 4-6, 8-6. That match was the only one to go three sets, but the number three doubles match required the most games. Duke's Claude Jack and Leonard Graham defeated Phil Causey and Walker Lockett, 11-9, 13-11 in a match ended in almost complete darkness.

Singles—1. Black (C) defeated Gaston 6-3, 4-6, 8-6. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Katz 6-3, 11-9. 3. Keys (C) defeated Barton 6-1, 6-3. 4. Ruben (D) defeated Happer 6-0, 9-7. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Robbins 6-4, 6-2. 6. Graham (D) defeated Ricks 7-5, 6-4.

Doubles—1. Happer and Sylvia (C) defeated Gaston and Katz 9-7, 6-4. 2. Black and Keys (C) defeated Barton and Ruben 6-1, 6-0. 3. Jack and Graham (D) defeated Lockett and Causey 11-9, 13-11.

Lacrosse Team Loses 10-4 To Virginia Frosh

Carolina's lacrosse team lost its first game when the Virginia freshmen, pouring through six goals in the second quarter, won 10-4 here yesterday.

About 200 fans were on hand to see the hard hitting Tar Heels hold the Virginians scoreless a quarter, before letting them jump to a quick 6-1 half-time lead.

After the intermission the play became more equal with the Cavaliers outscoring the Tar Heels 4-3 in the final half.

Attackman Spense Everett led the Tar Heel effort with three goals. Two were unassisted and the other was a beautiful snow-bird shot after a perfect feed half-way across the field by defenseman Frank Riggs. Les Sutorius made the other Carolina goal.

Virginia goals were by Ken Marty, John Storkeson (2), John Spilman, Cal Ewing (2), High Leviseur (2), Bud Judkins and Jim Irvine.

Virginia made good use of its superior stick handling ability and despite crashing body checks by the Carolina defense kept the ball pretty well under control. Carolina goalie Al Walters had his work cut out for him and made quite a few saves.

The Tar Heel squad will again play at home next week when Duke plays here next Wednesday. Carolina has defeated Duke twice this year.

Pfeiffer Freshmen Lick Tar Babies, 11-4

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

The Pfeiffer Junior College Freshmen sent thirteen men to the plate in the eighth inning and by the time the dust had settled down seven big runs had come across to sew up an 11-4 victory over the Carolina frosh here yesterday.

Before the uprising, Roland Noblin had given the Tar Babies a 4-2 lead in the fourth when he lined a fast ball all the way to the scoreboard in deep left-center for a three-run homer.

As they did in Tuesday's battle with Duke, Coach Pat Earey's yearlings fell behind quickly in the first by committing three miscues that allowed two runs to score.

Dave Murr then locked up in a brief pitching duel with Pfeiffer starter and winner Dave Scott until the Carolina half of the fourth.

Tall Bob Wacker wast he victim of the wild melee in the eighth as a trio of grounders managed to sneak through the infield to begin the winning rally.

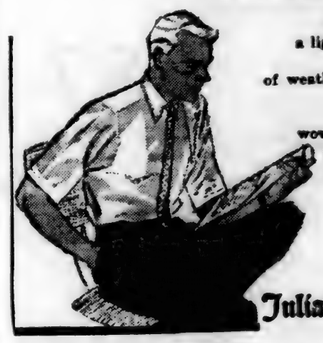
TIGERS FINALLY WIN

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers finally broke their second six-game losing steak of the season Wednesday, beating the Baltimore Orioles in a contest stopped four times by rain and finally halted after five complete innings.

WAA ARCHERY RESULTS

Alderman won the Archery Intramural Tournament with a score of 411. Tri Delta ran a close second with 300, and Pi Phi placed third and another Tri Delta team fourth. Sarah Upchurch of Alderman was the high scorer of the tournament.

HOPSACK OXFORD



As interpreted here, oxford takes on a new significance ... for imported long-staple yarns have been woven into a lightweight wonder that takes the wilt out of weather, keeps you looking as collected as you feel. Ingeniously woven with a porous open weave, air-conditioned, yet not transparent.

Senior Day Festivities Will Begin On Monday

By LEE ARBOGAST

Get ready SENIORS.

The traditional Senior Day will be held Tuesday this year.

Well-laid plans have been made, the stage is set, and everyone is in store for an extra good time.

Coeds have been granted late permission for the Senior Day activities. Permission to stay out until twelve midnight has been granted for Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights by the Dean of Women's office.

Festivities begin Monday night with free flicks for all seniors who present their ID cards.

However, Tuesday is officially Senior Day.

An important class meeting will be held at 10 a.m. in Memorial Hall. In order to be eligible for the drawings for prizes which will be held that afternoon, seniors must attend the meeting to get tickets. The election of permanent officers and Mr. and Miss Alumni will be made at the class meeting.

In the afternoon there will be all sorts of activities at the Patio, including a Bar-B-Que dinner, games, and music by Jim Talley and Nick Kearns, as well as reduced prices on the Patio's chief commodity.

On Thursday night, there will be activities at Hogan's Lake for the Class of '59.

Traditionally, seniors have been excused from classes on Senior Day. A memo to this effect has been sent by Dean James L. Godfrey to the heads of all departments. However, seniors must have excuses from their individual instructors to be absent from classes.

Social, Activity Fees Referendum Is Tuesday

A referendum on the collection of social and activity fees will be open for women dormitory residents Tuesday.

Hank Patterson, chairman of the elections board, announced that polls for the referendum will be open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in all women's dorms except Kenan. Poll time in Kenan is set for 3-7 p.m.

"I am in agreement with the collection of social and activity fees provided they are not in excess of five dollars per year."

Voters may check either "for" or "against" the referendum.

Durham Boy Gets $2,000 Scholarship

In looking for a good student most likely to carry on in the tradition of Andy Bershak, the UNC Scholarship Committee remembered the great All-American football player of the 1930's who was also a top-grade scholar.

The boy selected this year for the $2,000 Bershak Scholarship is Sheldon Peck of Durham High School, a young man who has made a 94.1 average during his high school career—and yet who has been active in extra-curricular activities in the school, while helping his mother at the family bakery. Peck will study astrophysics at UNC.

Peck was chosen as the best candidate for the Bershak Award. He will receive $500 a year towards his education at Chapel Hill, with the scholarship renewable annually for four years. The scholarship is awarded by fraternity men at the university.

Besides being an excellent student young Peck is a debater, is active in dramatics, plays in the high school band, writes for the school newspaper, has served in the student council, and is active in astronomy and rocket clubs. As further interest in a science career he is a member of the radio amateurs club.

In addition to his school work, he works regularly in the bakery which is operated by his mother, Mrs. Sylvia S. Peck, a widow.

DESIRE—Susie Cordon's desires seem not too latent, and the general of the Athenian army, Frank Beaver seems worried in Sound and Fury's production of "Oh, Hellas!" opening today and continuing tomorrow. Comic Sex Battle Begins Tonight At 8; 'Oh, Hellas!' Debuts In Memorial Hall

The day has arrived.

The Sound and Fury production of "Oh, Hellas!" opens tonight in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m., and will continue at least through tomorrow night.

Tickets are still available for opening night, although advance sales have topped all previous records, and tickets are still on sale at the Y and Graham Memorial for 50c. Tickets will be available at the door on a first come, first served basis, and if the play is held over a third night, as has been tentatively planned, tickets will be available at the three places.

The play, written by Lew Hardee and Carl Bridgers, is based on Aristophanes' comic drama "Lysistrata," and has added words and music by Bridgers and Hardee.

The play, whish is a comic battle between the sexes amidst a battle between Athens and Sparta, stars Miss Chapel Hill Jane Newsom; Al Miller, a newcomer from New Rochelle, N. Y.; Nancy Aubrey; Bill Monell; Susie Cordon; Frank Beaver; Jane Durham; and Wally Graham.

The difficult job of costuming the play in "authentic" Greek costumes was handled ably by Clara Mack, as she designed and directed a capable staff of nine in the making of these costumes.

Graham Memorial purchased over 20 new lights in order to give the 1959 Sound and Fury adequate illumination, and Rudy Waldorff, assisted by Salley and Fleishman, handled the lighting for the production.

The job of begging, borrowing, stealing, and making the props for the play went to Betty Shaw and Kate Russell, both junior art majors.

Doing the choreography for the dancers is Tony Millili, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania where he was a menber of the Mask and Wig Club.

Stage managing the production is Chuck Cushman, while the all-around handyman, serving in many different capacities, is Wilson Cooper.

Pharmacists Elect

New officers for the coming school year have been elected by the University branches of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association and the American Pharmaceutical Association.

The new officers are Charles Himes, Brevard, president; Hugh Clark, Pine Tops, vice president; Helen Dunlap, Durham, secretary; Ben Daughtry, Smithfield, treasurer; James Horn, Lawndale, assistant to the president and James Sheets of West Jefferson, member of the executive committee.

One group of officers serve both organizations.

Spring Beach Retreat

The Westminister Fellowship group will hold its spring beach retreat this weekend at Fort Caswell. Planned activities will include a worship study led by Jack Roth and evaluation led by Bob Olson.

The approximate cost for the event, including food, transportation, and sleeping facilities will be $7 for three days and $5 for two. Cars will be leaving from the Presbyterian Hut from 12 noon to 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. on Friday, and 12 noon to 1 p.m. Saturday. Anyone interested may contact Harry Smith at 6881 or Dave Garrison at 8-9146.

G. M. SLATE

Madamoselle representative, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Roland Parker 1; GMAB, 1:30-3 p.m., Grail; U. More On Parents' Day

Final plans were given Thursday for the Air Force ROTC review and the lawn concert which are scheduled for the ninth annual Parents' Day Sunday.

The AFROTC will appear in review Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock on Fetzer Field.

Immediately following the review, parents of cadets will be entertained at a tea in the AFROTC Cadet Lounge. Survival equipment from Seymour-Johnson and Pope Air Force Bases will be displayed in the lounge.

The University Concert Band, conducted by Herbert W. Fred, will present at lawn concert at Davie Poplar for Parents' Day beginning at 4:30 p.m.

The program will include the Finale from Kalinnikov's Symphony in G Minor, Cowboy Rapsody by Morton Gould, Ballet for Young Americans by Ralph Herman, other music in the popular vein and favorite marches.

A trumpet trio, The Trumpeters by Agostino, will be played by Eddie Bass, Gordon Roberts and Curtis Crotty.

Ronald Hamilton, a senior in the Music Department, will be the guest conductor.

In the event of rain on Parents' Day the concert will be cancelled.

Citizens Of Halifax County Ask Legislature To Aid UNC

SCOTLAND NECK — A group of representative citizens of Halifax County has requested the members of the General Assembly to give adequate financial support to the Consolidated University of North Carolina—even if it means an increase in taxes.

Letters to this effect have been sent to all members of the General Assembly and other state officials. These letters were mailed here Saturday.

The letters were signed by James L. Pittman of Scotland Neck. Under Pittman's signature were listed 45 additional names of persons who had voted unanimously to urge the General Assembly to cover the financial needs of the University for 1959-61 as presented by UNC President William C. Friday.

The action came as the result of a meeting held in Scotland Neck on Thursday, April 16. At that time, the group of Halifax County citizens, with the help of Dr. Henry T. Clark Jr. of the UNC administration, reviewed the financial needs of the University for the coming two years.

Following the discussion of the University's need, this group of 46 men and women voted to contact state officials and law makers and urge that funds over and above those recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission be supplied the University. The ABC's recommendations were far below the amount requested by President Friday.

The full text of the letter follow:

"I am writing to you in behalf of the Consolidated University of North Carolina as spokesman for some forty-six representative citizens of Halifax County.

"At a meeting held on April 16 in Scotland Neck, this group considered at some length the vital role which the University of North Carolina plays in the life of our State. With the help of Dr. Henry T. Clark Jr., from the University Administration, we reviewed the financial needs of the University for the 1959-61 biennium. We do not think that the recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission for 1959-61 are adequate to provide quality training for increasing numbers of North Carolina students and to hold and build strong faculties in a short-supply market.

"At the conclusion of a two-hour discussion, this group of forty-six men and women voted unanimously to urge the General Assembly to cover the financial needs of the University for 1959-61 as presented by President William Friday—even if this means an increase in taxes."

Universities Council Elects Friday Chairman

William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, has been chosen chairman of the Council of Southern Universities, an eight-member group composed of the Universities of Virginia, Texas, Vanderbilt, North Carolina and Duke, Emory, Tulane universities and Rice Institute.

Friday was chosen at a meeting just concluded in St. Petersburg, Fla. He succeeds Dean Lewis Hammond of the University of Virginia.

The Council of Southern Universities, formed in 1950 and incorporated in 1953, has a "roving commission" to engage in activities of mutual interest to the eight member institutions and the cause of higher education in the South generally.

Maxine Greenfield of Chapel Hill was named yesterday as Miss Modern Venus at the annual Sigma Chi derby. Miss Greefield is a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

DONNA PATTON KELLY

Soprano To Perform At Petite Musical

Donna Patton Kelly, soprano, will perform for the last program of the Petite Musicale series.

She will give a song recital in the lounge of Graham Memorial Sunday at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Kelly will be accompanied by Walter Golde of Chapel Hill. The program will include works by Wolf-Ferrari, Brahms, Paladilhe, Faure, Duparc, Pierne, Menotti, Dougherty, Giannini and Walter Golde.

The artist has been a soloist with the Chapel Hill Choral Club in performances of the Mozart Requiem, the Verdi Requiem and the Brahms Requiem.

Mrs. Kelly has sung the role of Pamina in the "Magic Flute" produced by the Graham Memorial Activities Board and the UNC Music Department.

She has also appeared as soloist under Paul Young of Duke University and with the UNC Glee Club and the University Chorus.

A current resident of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Kelly was the first recipient of the Institute of Opera Scholarship and studied with Walter Golde during her stay in Chapel Hill.

Golde is a Chapel Hill pianist-composer who has presented recitals in Hill Hall and in Graham Memorial. He is also a well-known voice teacher and has accompanied many of his students in programs on Les Petites Musicales in the past.

Solons Amend Bill Requiring Meetings

By DEE DANIELS

Jim Crownover's (SP) defeated bill to require meetings of legislators with their constituents was reconsidered and amended by the Student Legislature last night.

Jim Scott introduced an amendment in the form of six articles to replace those in the original bill. Scott's change would require legislators to visit each housing unit in their respective districts, and to submit individual reports of activities during the session to the Speaker of the Legislature.

The reports would be available to the campus political parties and the student body. Failure to submit one would be considered one of the unexcused absences due each representative during his term.

The solons approved the amendments and then sent the bill to the rules committee following a motion by Bob Nobles (SP) to that effect.

They also sanctioned a amended bill, authored by Jack Lawing (UP), for amending the Legislature by-laws to require the request of one legislator plus two seconds for a roll call vote.

Originally the bill called for the request of one fifth of the legislators present, but the amendment proposed by Bill Porter (SP) was approved and the bill was passed by the two-thirds vote required for changing the by-laws.

In discussion of the bill, Lawing pointed out that it would not be "taking away anybody's privilege," but would reduce the number of roll call votes, thereby making legislative meetings more expedient.

A bill for the establishment of a Motor Vehicles Advisory Board, introduced by Bob Thompson (SP), was passed. The Board will be responsible for investigating all traffic or related problems concerning the University and will make recommendations to the student body president or University officials for alleviation of such problems.

The organization of a Student Traffic Court Investigation Staff was approved in a bill presented by Ed Cox. The staff will assemble and present pertinent information concerning a case to the Student Traffice Court, issue summons to student violators to appear before the Court and be responsible for keeping records and files necessary to the committee's operation.

A bill introduced by Bob Nobles (SP) to establish a Traffic and Safety Committee was authorized also. Already established, but not recognized, the committee makes rules and regulations concerning student cars and traffic and directs proposals to the Chancellor for the expenditure of funds.

All Seniors Able To Talk Can Get Medal

All graduating seniors with oratorical talent are eligible to compete for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at 8 p.m. May 8.

The medal, the University's oldest award, is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Oration subjects are to be chosen by the participants and submitted to Dean of Awards Ernest Mackie's office by 5 p.m. May 7. The length of each oration will be about 10 minutes.

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

Seniors eligible also include those graduating at the end of the summer session.

Saturday Is Charlie's Day; Sig Eps Plan Patio Party

A softball tournament, weiner roast and patio party are all part of the plans for Sig Ep's 11th annual Charlie's Day, Saturday.

Charlie's Day is sponsored each year by Delta Chapter for all the Sigma Phi Epsilon chapters in North and South Carolina in honor of Dr. Charlie Henderson, associate professor in the Classics Department.

Dr. Henderson helped to re-establish the local chapter on campus in 1947. In the spring of 1948 the chapter started Charlie's Day in appreciation of his service.

Approximately 250 people are expected here Saturday to celebrate.

The softball tournament between the attending chapters will begin at 2 p.m. at Hogan's Lake. A trophy is given to the winning chapter each year. At 5:30 p.m. the weiner roast will start at the lake also.

The Three Deuces combo will play for the patio party which is scheduled for 7 o'clock at the Sig Ep house.

In addition to the Carolina chapter, members and their dates are expected from High Point College, Davidson, State and Atlantic Christian.

Grail Officers Named

The Order of the Grail named four new officers in its election recently.

Dick Robinson, Raleigh, was elected delegata of the Grail.

Henderson: Pros And Cons-Page 2

The Harriet-Henderson Mills, 25 Long Weeks Of Strife

Who Is Right?

Very simply there is no longer a strike in Henderson. It has been transformed into a lockout through the tireless efforts of union-busting John D. Cooper, president of the Harriet-Henderson Mills.

We do not need to be reminded that there are always two sides to a story. Nor do the readers need notification that sometimes one of the two sides is right, while the other is basically wrong. Such is the case in Henderson.

After going to Henderson, and following the proceedings in the past 25 weeks, the paper is convinced beyond any shadow of a doubt that the strikers are right. We further feel that if the situation continues at its present trend, there is little chance of the strikers winning.

John Cooper is prepared and fully able to hold out for an indefinite period of time. The policy of the union, which is being directed by Boyd Payton, is not sufficient for the strikers to triumph. Unless and until the Harriet-Henderson Mills are closed by the Governor, the "scabs" will continue to turn our the products, while the mill villagers will stand on the other side of the street, hungry, tired distraught, and RIGHT!

We say right because we feel that Cooper has misled the Governor and the workers. We say right because the strikers only wanted a renewal of their old contract. And we say right because the strikers are decent people who have been out of work for 25 weeks, while John D. Cooper continues to fail to show us any signs of compromise.

Special Page

The editor of the paper wishes to express his appreciation to Ted Crane, Ron Shumate, Peter B. Young and Charlie Webb for their fine assistance in the compiling of this special Daily Tar Heel editorial page.

These four, along with the editor, have all been in Henderson during this strike and have seen the situation as it is existing today, just a few miles from here. The editor invites comments from the students in the form of letters or columns pertaining to the Henderson situation and this page today.

Going For Broke

Peter B. Young

One hour on the Henderson picket line is probably worth one year in college. I have now spent two hours on the line at Henderson and this combined with more years in college than I like to think about, is what makes me a reasonably well-educated American in this year of our Lord 1959.

As you probably know, I am by temperament and conviction on the side of the Henderson strikers. I make no apologies for this; it is inconceivable to me that I could be anywhere else. However (and this is the point), the analysis of the strike which I am about to make is one that is basically agreed upon by many students who are not particularly sympathetic to organized labor.

The following hard FACTS seem to be agreed upon by all observers:

1. The labor movement in this state is weak in terms of membership, money, leaders and tradition.

2. The above fact is reflected in the state's "right-to-work" law, the enforcement of which by the Highway Patrol at Henderson enables Cooper to run his mill on imported "scab" labor.

3. The textile industry is chronically sick, that is, it has inherited feudal patterns of industrial organization from the very first plants of the Industrial Revolution in England. This fact has been well documented by our own Mary Gilson in her book, What's Past Is Prologue.

4. The three facts above combine to form an explosive fourth fact: in this state it is possible for a determined employer to bust a union—and John Cooper is nothing if not determined.

It is not my purpose here to argue the merits or demerits of union-busting. And, in fairness to mill owner Cooper it should be noted that he has denied several times any intent to "bust" the union. Yet actions speak louder than words, and Mr. Cooper's actions from the beginning of the strike down to the present day will admit of no other interpretation than that of wanting to abolish the union.

It is an elemental rule of politics that organizations do not negotiate the question of their existence. The union has compromised every substantative issue of the strike; it cannot compromise on the question of its existence.

The corollary here is that Cooper is the participant in the conflict who can win. Cooper can win by driving the union out, and bringing his old workers (sans union) back into the plant on their knees. The worker, on the other hand, cannot "win" because a return to the status quo ante bellum is not a victory. At best, the workers can only avoid a crushing defeat.

But even if the workers cannot "win" in the sense that Cooper can, it is nevertheless of the utmost importance that they do not lose. The tactical problem for Cooper is how to sew up the victory. The tactical problem for the union is how to avoid irreparable defeat.

Stripping the conflict of all legalities, and all questions of "right," and making the analysis in strictly military terms, the key to the situation at the South Henderson mill is the control of the road that leads up to the plant gate. As it stands now, this road is controlled by the well-armed Highway Patrol, backed up by a court injunction which keeps the workers on the sidewalk.

Twice a day (and next week perhaps three times a day) the "scabs" drive down this road under the protection of the oiled riot guns belonging to the Highway Patrol. Twice a day (and next week perhaps three times a day) the union men on the sidewalk in front of the grocery store die just a little bit.

The Governor, John Cooper, and even the leaders of the union have talked so much in recent weeks about the importance of "law and order" that they have all tended to ignore the brutal truth that "law and order" is killing the strikers twice a day (and next week perhaps three times a day).

It is painfully obvious that eventually the strikers are going to violate the injunction in some way by contesting for control of the road. If they are not to be shot down like sheep the operation will have to be handled with great delicacy and skill. One suggestion that has been made is for the strikers' wives to block the road. And Boyd Payton, reminiscing the other night over a cup of coffee, told me that several years ago in Danville he led a group of workers to lie down on the highway there.

Meanwhile, the strikers and the scabs and the Highway Patrol all know that real violence is imminent. The scabs are well-armed (as recent arrests have proved); the Highway Patrol gets more nervous with every passing day; and the workers cluster in tense little knots on the sidewalk.

John Cooper is holding all the cards except one. The one card he does not hold is the desperation that drives his former workers. One of these former workers carried a sign the other night which said: "GOING FOR BROKE." That sign is something to think about, eh Governor?

Cooper-Management Talks

Charlie Webb

(Charlie Webb is a junior from Asheville, N. C. He writes here of his hour-long visit last week with Marshall Cooper, vice president of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills in Henderson. We are pleased to have this dissenting opinion (pro-management) in contrast to the editor's announced support of the strikers.)

Last week I journeyed to Henderson with three friends and we were able to talk with the Vice-President of the Harriet-Henderson Mills, and see first-hand the evidences of the violence which has plagued that town for some weeks now.

Here, then, I will attempt to present the facts learned and impressions gained in that afternoon.

We sat and talked with Marshall Cooper for about an hour. He told us of dynamitings, rock throwing, general mob violence, and of strike breakers, highway patrolmen and many other things. He showed us pictures of shambled workers' homes, of a man struck by a rock, and of highway patrolmen trying to handle angry and violent strikers.

He gave us some facts and figures: The unions have caused the workers to lose over eleven months from their jobs due to strikes in the last seven years. In that time, the workers have paid well over $300,000 in union dues and have lost over 2½ million dollars in wages. If these facts are all correct, then can the TWUA (Textile Workers Union of America) really be helping the workers?

While we were at the Mill, the first shift got off and the second came on. This was at 3 p.m. The workers filed quickly from the mill, got in their cars, usually four or more to each car, and drove quickly out. We could see them close windows and bolt doors. We saw one man open his trunk, remove a shotgun, and place it on the seat beside him, before driving away. They drove out the gate amid hoots and cat-calls, and some curses, uttered mainly by the women standing about.

This was daytime, however. At night, as Cooper informed us, the strikers get violent. They have the cover of darkness under which to hide. Cooper told us that most of the workers coming in on the second shift (3-11 p.m.) would be carrying guns. This second shift was the group that had to spend the night in the mill earlier last week, because the extreme violence of the mob outside would not permit them to leave safely.

He said, however, that over 90% of them were back at work the next afternoon, although they could not leave the mill until 7 a.m. the next morning. Many of them had driven over an hour to get to and from the mill.

We asked Cooper, whose home was dynamited two weeks earlier, if he thought this stunt might be tried again. His reply was matter-of-factly: "Wouldn't surprise me a bit."

After leaving Cooper's office, we traveled out to the North Mill, where we saw more evidence of violence. One section of the mill did not have a pane of glass in any of its windows on the three sides which were exposed.

Cars parked inside the fence were garbed in cardboard to prevent rocks from doing further damage. Some strikers were standing by the side of the road, and we rode by with our windows up. Their glances were by no means of the more friendly type.

I received two impressions from my visit in Henderson. One was the clear determination of the Harriet-Henderson Mills' management not to give in to the unions. The other was that the TWUA is on its way out in Henderson. Marshall Cooper is under that impression. Stopping at a filling station, we talked with the attendant there. Asked his opinion of the whole thing, he said, "I'm for the working man, but I believe the unions are on the way out here." When and if the unions do go, the workers will have to vote them out. The mill cannot run them out; nor can the Mayor of Henderson or the Governor.

South Mill Rd.

Theodore Crane Jr.

At eleven p.m. in Henderson on the south mill road, you will find the trees already lined up on the lawns of the cottages, mothers holding up their small children to peer from darkened screen windows, and older children beginning to smoke at night standing by their fathers on the narrow brick sidewalk. Each man has a separate concept but all of them represent the idea of home, family and food while the mill opposite the houses, stretching the length of the block across the street lazily grumbles and waits hungrily for these men, their lunch bag sandwiches and morning coffee. The darken houses on this street are turning out thoughts and dreams in another mill, which grinds slowly from house to house, a naked gray wind, scraping steadily through the unshaven trees that seem to reach out to one another from house to house from family to family as faces move their feet slowly and easily in the soft earth, spitting carefully and joking, like the trees crouched and comfortable, as if they were waiting for the rain.

There are no street lights on the mill road. A dimly lit tunnel, it lies beneath the police flares and sky rockets, the bright searchlights at the main gates of the mill pushing the brown jackets further into the shadows. Faceless cigarettes suspended in the darkness blink on and off on the wooden porches, and the men talk quietly as if they were in church. A grocery store sells hot dogs and hand-out coffee, a man with a suspended jail sentence is surrounded by a group of small boys joking about his lost job, his feet rest easily on the ground as he sits on his son's green bicycle and everyone is too casual. Only a few of the men mention the strike or why they have become part of it, many of them chew blades of grass and talk about the base ball scores.

The crowd ripples slowly along the street, and policemen are nervous enough to kill because they can't predict this weather seething indecisively before them talking politely and waiting with the patience of a machine turned off. The strikers wait for those who are still working to come out of the mill, and they stand in front of these men, who walk quickly around them with their eyes fixed intently on the ground. Children of the strikers ask them questions, but the men hurry on silently not talking even among themselves. A small brown haired boy standing at the side of his father, his sleeves torn and his feet bare, stretching out his hand to one of these silent men offers him a piece of his jelly doughnut—here, mister, aren't you hungry? — and the other men laugh as if the tensions were momentarily forgotten.

Many people stand unhearing and insensitive, almost at attention before the state troopers spaced evenly at the edge of the road. One policeman seems worried because no one is violating a law at the moment, and he must allow them the freedom to do so. Some troopers carry tear gas guns and other weapons, but not even the little boys show interest in these. No one appears to notice. Finally, the last of those who are still working have left the mill, and the police leave in their cars slowly, as if they felt guilty about leaving so early. The strikers remain, some in small groups, many on the lawns and porches of their neighbor's houses, smoking and talking about expressions on faces, the taste of coffee, and the coolness of the night.

The men stand there, a product of the black richness of tenant farms in the southwest from which they came hoping to grow from the mill a family and a permanent home, and each man has a dream which no mill thread can pull down or understand. But a child can understand his starving mother and father, their ragged jackets and muddy faces, the whispers, their eyes gleaming like severed ends of newly clipped trees, and they are fighting in the only way they know how against forces of nature, fighting for the rain hoping to gain the strength to live—your children are waiting, Henderson, and children will grow.

Background, Analysis By Expert

Ron Shumate

(Daily Tar Heel Managing Editor Ron Shumate has been the paper's special correspondent assigned to the Henderson strike for the past several weeks. He is as well qualified to comment on the situation in Henderson as any student on this campus. Ed.)

The Henderson strike ends its twenty-fourth week today.

That's a total of 166 days—and that is a total of 24 paychecks that strikers have gone without.

Five and a half months is a long time to be out of work. The strike began a mere six weeks after classes started here at Carolina. Classes are still going; the strike is still going. And it's beginning to look as if the strike will outlast classes in both semesters.

And suppose you had gone without money from home—or from your job—since November 19, 1958. That's when the strikers drew their last paycheck. If such were the case, you would have had to subsist on, let's say, meal tickets to Lenoir Hall and an occasional pack of cigarettes. You would have had no spending money—no money to buy beer, no money to go to a flick, no money to take a weekend off and go to the beach.

It wouldn't have been fun, would it?

Well, it isn't fun in Henderson either. For in Henderson, strikers have no money, except a little pocket change they pick up occasionally doing odd jobs. And most of them have families to care for. True, the union is supplying them with food, cigarettes occasionally, is paying the strikers' doctor bills, and other bills (such as heat, lights and water) that must be paid.

It isn't fun. And neither is it pretty.

It all began as just another strike. And it began because mill president John D. Cooper Jr., wanted to tear up a 14-year-old contract to write a new one. The new contract that the mill proposed was identical to the old one—except that it included a clause that would prevent any arbitration on disputes between labor and management.

And so a story that started out as a minor one on the inside pages of papers across the state has blossomed into the "Black Orchid" of the state—and nearly every day now, makes front pages all across North Carolina, and other states as well.

The Henderson situation now hangs like an ominous dark cloud over the whole state. And it is presently saturating the people of Henderson with a downpour of hatred, bitterness and animosity that will—when and if the cloud passes over—leave Henderson a bottomless pool to be avoided by industry and peace-loving human beings.

For the damage that has been and is still being done at Henderson will leave an indelible black mark on the people of Henderson. Little children, who never before knew the meaning of such words as "scab," now use such words freely — and they probably still wonder at the meaning of some of them. And these same children are being brought up to hate some of their former playmates — because the other children are the sons and daughters of "scabs"—Henderson people who have gone back to work.

As the "scabs" come out of the mill each day, strikers on the picket lines hurl such abusive phrases at them as "Yellow scab!" "Chicken;" "You're gonna get yours;" and many, many more—some of them worse. And most of the insults are voiced by women—wives and mothers who must later turn to the upbringing of their children. But instead of teaching their children of love and affection, they teach to hate "the dirty scabs."

And when the parents are asked why they have quit coming to church on Sunday, they answer, "The union is feeding us and clothing us—and what is the church doing for us?" This was the case that one minister, whose church is in one of the mill areas, cited to me only a few weeks ago.

Spring is here now. That means many things to many people. To students here at Carolina it means a weekend trip to the beach; or taking your girl to a movie. Spring means picnics, beer blasts, parties. And to some it means baseball, as the age—old adage goes. Spring means clear nights to go to a drive-in.

And to some strikers in Henderson spring also means clear nights. But the clear nights in the mill areas of Henderson mean a better, clearer shot at a "scab" coming out of the mill late at night.

Spring in Henderson means no more standing in driving rain and bitter cold to hurl even more bitter insults at men with whom you once hunted, fished, gamled, drank and grew up with. Spring in Henderson is a time when you hit men in the head with steel nuts thrown from tremendously powerful slingshots. And probably only a few months ago these same men had helped you out of a jam; had looked out for your wife and children when you were sick.

This is spring in Henderson.

And this is as much the tragedy of the Henderson strike as the poverty of the strikers.

But, as in every case, there are sides to the story.

The strikers feel that they are right in striking. And they are.

And they feel that those who have gone back to work have betrayed the union as well as their friends. And they have.

And they feel that the "scabs" are helping Mr. Cooper destory the union and what it stands for. And they are.

The strikers very definitely have something to stand on. There are many technicalities that may be given as reasons for their strike. But the most important reasons to the strikers are not legal reasons. Their reasons for striking are purely and simply their beliefs. They believe in the union—and rightly so. They believe in trying to fight Mr. Cooper's attempt to crush the union and, as Boyd Payton put it last Thursday night, to "rub the worker' noses in the dirt."

They believe in these things; but more strongly they believe in standing up and fighting to their last breath for the things they believe to be right. And this is still another tragedy of the Henderson strike.

For when people stand up and fight for the things they believe to be right—and in this case, the things that ARE right—and they are thwarted at every turn by a grizzled old mill owner who is out to cut off the free blood—the union—of the people, this is a tragedy.

And as far as we know, the only purpose in tearing up a 14-year-old contract to write a new one, was to smash the union. Maybe Mr. Cooper has just reason for wanting to do this.

If he does, he has told no one—publicly, that is.

Before this strike began, Mr. Cooper had a reputation of being pro-labor. He used to make speeches in which he advanced unions. He has spoken many times in favor of labor.

What, then, is his reason? And there are a multitude of questions one could ask about the strike: When will it end? WILL it end? Who will end it? If it ends, who will win?

Will the scars ever be healed?

WANTED: ROOMMATE FOR wheel chair student beginning fall semester. $75.00 per month. L. S. Bennett, 2638 Kilgore Avenue, Raleigh, N. C.

UNC Interlibrary Center Has Many Book Detectives

By STAN FISHER

"If we can't find it, it can't be found, might well be the motto of the Interlibrary Center recently opened in Louis Round Wilson Library.

The Center locates books for requests all over North Carolna and for many persons and libraries out of state as part of a cooperative program between libraries.

Miss Pauline Tekesty, director of the Interlibrary Center, says, "Our most important responsibility is to obtain for our own students and faculty any material they may need that is not here in our own library."

Miss Tekesty, a relative newcomer to the Center, took the job of director last February 2 when she replaced I. T. Littleton who had been director of the Center since its installation January 15, 1958.

Before coming to the University of North Carolina Miss Tekesty was in charge of the library of Benton & Bowles, Inc., an advertising agency in New York city.

30 Requests Per Day

Two main tools are employed by the Center in filling the 15 to 30 requests it receives each day by mail alone. The first is the North Carolina Union catalog, the second a teletype service operating on a state and nation-wide basis.

The Union Catalog contains over a million cards representing every known book in major public libraries and many special libraries over the state. Each card bears the name of the books, its author and libraries over the state which have the book.

The teletypewriter service, installed in October of 1958, on the state level provides an almost instant means of communication with the State Library in Raleigh and Pack Memorial Library in Asheville, the only two other libraries in the state now possessing the service. Public libraries in Charlotte and Winston-Salem may soon install the service.

On the national level, by ringing a code number, the Center may contact the Congressional Library in Washington or many other public and special libraries over the nation that have installed the rapidly growing teletypewriter service.

The Congressional Library has a National Union Catalog with cards for almost every book in the United States. After receiving a request, the library can advise the Inter-library Center where the book requested can be found in the nation.

Truck Delivery

Another important tool of the Center is a truck which visits the libraries at Duke, State, the University and the State Library on alternate days of the week, speeding book delivery between the four cooperating libraries.

The purposes and methods used by the Center are stated in the 1st issue of "The Interlibrary Center News," monthly news bulletin of the Center. It says:

"The Center will attempt to insure maximum utility of local public library resources. Its services are based upon the principle that local libraries have the first responsibility for service to citizens of their communities, supplemented by the resources of the State Library. Therefore, it is the general policy of the Center to refer all requests from individuals and high schools to the local libraries or the State Library if there is no county-wide pattern of library service.

"Thus, we are attempting to establish a state-wide pattern of library service based on the channeling of requests, first to the municipal, county or regional library, then to the State Library, and as a last resort to the Inter-library Center where the North Carolina Union Catalog is located.

"Many times the Center will refer a request to the State Library or to another library with a special collection even if the specific title is not listed in the North Carolina Union Catalog. It is expected that there will be constant communication between the State Library and the Center in order to serve the citizens of the state."

Four Employees

Four persons are employed by the center on a full-time basis in order to fill the demand for its services.

Any person may write the Center requesting books by title and author or by subject. If the book is in a library near him, he will be advised by Center. If the book does not appear in a library near him the books, may be obtained from the University Library providing it is not needed by University faculty or students.

If the book is unavailable from the University Library and does not appear in a public library near the person making the request, the request will be handled through some other library having the book.

Miss Tekesty, director, received her Master of Library Science degree from Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio.

Prior to her employment with Benton & Bowles, Inc., she served as a branch librarian in Cleveland and Director of the U. S. Information Center in Montevidea, Uruguay.

The Interlibrary Center was established as a result of a recommendation of the committee on Cooperative Library Resources of the N. C. Library Association headed by Mr. Hoyt Galvin, Librarian of the Charlotte Public Library. The N. C. Research Library Committee, consisting of State Library and libraries at Duke University, N. C. State College, Woman's College and the University of North Carolina, played a large role in its development.

Classics Grad Student Awarded Fellowship

Robert Rivers Harris, a graduate student in classics, has been awarded a $7,200 U. S. Steel fellowship for study on the doctorate level.

Harris won the fellowship at the University here on the basis of merit after being nominated by the Classics Department faculty. He plans to teach after receiving his Ph.D. degree.

The fellowship is one of 47 awarder by the Foundation, 25 going to private institutions and 22 to public schools. Together the fellowships represent educational grants of $190,000.

Harris, 24, is from Lockport, N. Y.

A candidate for his M. A. degree in the June Commencement, Harris began his graduate studies here in January of 1958. He received his A. B. degree in June of 1957 from Niagara University.

Each fellowship over its two year tenure period is worth $7,200 inclusive of a martial supplement allotment.

Coed Council Members

Erwin Fuller, chairman of the Student Council, has reminded coeds that they may apply for a position on the council by submitting an application in the student government office today.

The coed will sit with the council for cases involving constitutionality.

Interviews with applicants will be held next week.

State Affairs Committee Is Circulating Petition

The Committee on State Affairs, chaired by Norman B. Smith, is circulating a petition this week among dormtories, fraternities, and sororities for, as Smith stated, "a last minute effort to restore the University budget to a realistic level."

Earlier this year, the Appropriations Committee of the state Legislature slashed the budget proposed by University officials. Smith's petition represents a student pressure movment to get the budget for the University without any amendments.

After students have signed the petition it will be taken in person by the Committee on State Affairs to the General Assembly in Raleigh.

On the Appropriations Committee's budget cut Smith stated, "We, as students, support almost half of the University's operating costs with money from our own pockets; the other costs are sustained by our parents and friends as North Carolia taxpayers; therefore, we are more directly concerned with our future than any other group."

The petition states in part:

"We, the undersigned, students at the University of North Carolina, unite in this petition to impress upon the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina the following convictions:

"(1) That the material, political, and spiritual soundness of any society are in large part dependent on its system of higher education.

"(2) That higher education at the University of North Carolina, which was formerly of the highest quality and commanded the respect of people everywhere, is now declining in quality due to inadequate funds.

"(3) That the projected growth of the University in the next decade is at present even less adequately provided for."

Two Bronze Bulletin Boards Given To Ackland By Seniors

Two bronze bulletin boards for Ackland Art Center will be presented the Unievrsity as the gift from the Class of 1959.

Harley Shuford, chairman of the senior class Gift Committee, said his committee had selected the bulletin boards from 22 gift suggestions. The bulletin boards will be used for announcment of exhibits in Ackland.

The two bulletin boards will be installed on either side of the front door of Ackland building within three weeks, Shuford said.

The cost of this year's senior class gift is $512 for the glass-windowed bulletin boards, $42 for letters for the boards and an additional $8 for plates on the bottom of the boards. The plates will be inscribed with: "Gift of the Class of 1959."

The gift selection was made earlier this year than usual by the senior class, Shuford said, so that the seniors would see their gift up and in use by graduation.

Also the Gift Committee had to make the early selection in time to seek an aprropriation from Student Legislature. Shuford, John Whitaker and Class President Jeff Hare were scheduled to ask for the appropriation at Thursday night's meeting of Student Legislature.

Commenting on his committee's gift selection, Shuford said the bulletin boards were appropriate, since Ackland had been dedicated this year and the boards were a part of the original plans for the building.

Other gift suggestions considered by the committee, Shuford said, were a bulletin board for the Library lobby, a corner stone for a new student union and benches for the lower quad.

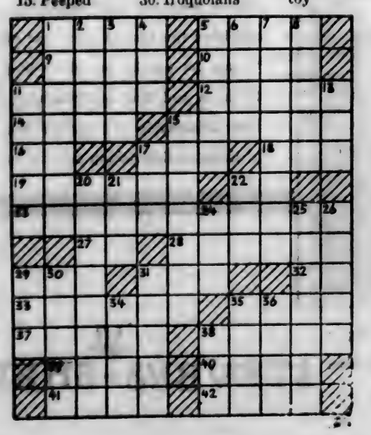
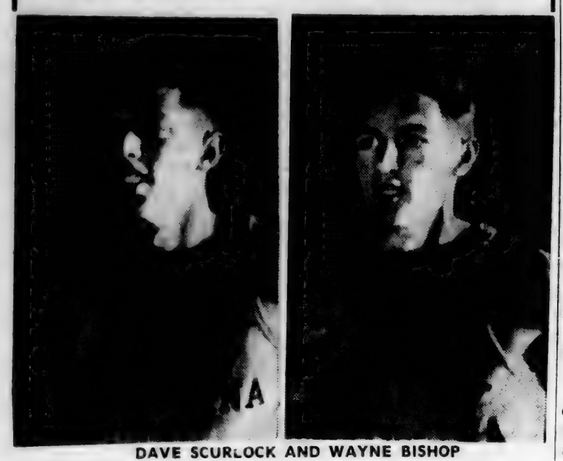
Yesterday's Answer



Scurlock, Bishop Close Out Track Career



DAVE SCURLOCK AND WAYNE BISHOP

Tomorrow marks the final time that two of Carolina's greatest track stars will perform in front of a home audience. It goes without saying that this could only mean Wayne Bishop and Dave Scurlock. With the possible exception of Jim Beatty, virtually no one has done what these two have done to build up the prestige of Tar Heel track teams. About the only thing they have not been able to do is be on a team that defeated Maryland in a dual meet.

When you have two outstanding individual stars on a team it is not unusual to see them battle each other for publicity, but such has not been the case with Bishop and Scurlock. Instead of vying for top billing, the talents of each one have complemented those of the other. It is indeed fortunate that their specialities are not the same event for this would cause trouble in more ways than one.

Strange as it may seem Bishop does not hold a single school record. Both the mile and the two mile marks are held by Jim Beatty with times of 4:06.2 and 9:01.7. Scurlock, on the other hand, owns both the Heels then the story of their accomplishments would end right here, 440 at 0:47.9 and the 880 at 1:48.2. His record time in the half mile, set two years ago, was the third fastest time for that distance recorded in 1957.

To a certain degree the picture is reversed when looking at the outdoor ACC records because Scurlock does not hold any of these. The outdoor mile belongs to Beatty but Bishop has the conference two mile record with a time of 9:19.9 Scurlock stands a good chance of getting his name on the outdoor list in the upcoming ACC meet, however, becaue he has run better times than each of the present quarter and half mile records.

In indoor competition Scurlock holds the 880 mark at 1:52.7 and is tied with John Dunkelberg of Clemson for the 600 yard dash mark. Bishop set the two mile record of 9:19.3 on the Woollen Gym floor this winter.

If track records were the sole contribution that these two have made while running for the Tar but there is more. The manner in which they have inspired other members of the team is quite something in itself. For their teammates, an immmitation of their practice routine is a feat which many strive to master. Since track is a year around activity the person who comes out day after day is one definitely devoted to the sport, and these two are.

ACC Annual Meeting Has Varied Program

By KEN ALYTA

GEENSBORO (AP) — Television policy, football receipts, post-season basketball play, recruiting and grants-in-aid limitations are major items confronting the Atlantic Coast Conference meeting here Friday.

Athletic directors, faculty chairmen and coaches huddled well into the night in a long series of closed meetings in an effort to expedite the handling of the problems when they come before the full session in the morning.

TV Policy

The ACC television policy has come under close scrutiny. Several school officials contend that of region al televising of their football and basketball games the last two has hurt attendance to a degree greater than the TV receipts have helped.

There is a feeling among some that this may be the time to suspend TV operations, perhaps for a year, to re-examine the picture.

The television committee recommendations Friday should throw further light on the general ACC stand on the issue.

Bowl Revision

Clemson College, with an eye toward the Gator Bowl football game at Jacksonville, Fla., and its smaller payoff, has offered a proposal to revise the bowl split.

Clemson would allow the school whose team competes in a post-seaon game under the ACC open bowl policy to retain $60,000 or one-half of the receipts from the bowl, whichever sum is greater.

Currently, the competing school must turn over half of its bowl take to the conference for division among the ACC and the seven other schools.

This formula was satisfactory under the now severed Orange Bowl tie, when the competing school retained more than $100,000 after the split. However, it would work a financial hardship in the case of a smaller payoff, about $85,000, as received from the Gator Bowl.

Basketball Tourneys

Basketball coaches were hard at work seeking to line up support for their plan to permit participation in the National Invitation Tournament at New York. Conference rules permit only the winner of the championship tournament, if eligible, to go on to a post-season event and that must be the NCAA tournament.

With six of eight votes needed for passage the chances of getting them at this meeting appear doubtful. The coaches ask no commitments to the NIT, just permission for a school to accept a bid if it receives one.

Several proposed amendments to the constitutions and bylaws are concerned with the related issues of recruiting and grants-in-aid. The proposal under study since last fall would limit to 120 annually the number of athletic scholarships in a school's entire sports program.

In addition to the 14 standing and special committee reports to be made, there are several matters of old busines carried over from the December meeting to be disposed of along with new items.

Patterson and London

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Floyd Patterson will defend his world heavyweight boxing title Friday night against England's Brian London, a sturdy "tuneup" foe for the champion's June date with Ingemar Johansson.

London, a lantern-jawed former British champ with over a 20-pound weight advantage, is regarded so lightly that odds against him have been quoted at 10 to 1. If he should upend Patterson it would be the biggest ring shocker since Joe Louis was knocked out by Max Schmeling in 1936.

Few expect any startling upset. However, the British bruiser could foul up Patterson's, time schedule that calls for the Johansson defense June 25 at Yankee Stadium in the champ's home town, New York. There always is the risk of a cut or a hand injury. If London should win, Johansson would be out the window in favor of a rematch.

Johansson will be at ringside, watching with intense interest.

This first world championship match ever held in Indiana figures to do remarkably good buiness, considering the stuttering start when dates, sites and promoters were shifted daily. Mel Ross, general manager of the Fairgrounds Coliseum, where the fight will be held at 9 p.m., EST, says the advance sale is over $90,000. He expects a crowd of about 10,000 to pay between $120,000 and $130,000 to watch the 15-round match.

Sabre Matches Held Tonight

By BOB PEEBLES

Tonight at 7 in Graham Memorial the campus sabre men will battle it out in their bid for the intramural crown. The round-robin tournament in which each fencer will meet all other fencers is expected to have about a dozen of the best on the campus competing. Fencing Coach Pebley Barrow gives a 24 hour deadline for entries to sign up at GM or the Intramurals office. All entrants must appear 15 minutes before the scheduled 7 o'clock fencing time.

The public is invited and helpful information will be provided for spectators to aid them in following the conduct and scoring of the bouts.

Raver Wins Foil

Carroll Raver clinched the foil crown Thursday night in a close battle with Charles Lucas. Raver and Luchs were each 12 wins for 12 bouts advancing to the last bout where they met. Raver finally winning, taking it out of a 4-4 deadlock at this meeting. Howell moved to third place in the finals taking with him the trophy for the highest non-seeded fencer. Also finishing in the finals were Dick Somers, Bill Pfefferkorn, Joe Roberts, Gus Williams, and Charles Williams in that order. These fencers all had advanced from the 1st round elimination pools.

The UNC fencing team returned Sunday from a trip to the University of Florida winning a close match with the Florida swordsmen 14-13. The Carolina team was without the services of team Captain Carroll Raver, Charles Luchs, and Guy Ellis, the 1, 2, and 3 foil fencers. The foil match was won 6-3 by the Floridians.

Tar Heels Win Epee

The determined epeemen strove valiantly to overcome the deficit, and gave Carolina a 6-3 win in that weapon to put it back on even terms. The sabremen battled it to 5-3 (Carolina) in their weapon bringing it to the last bout of the meet. Wooldridge (Fla.) defeated Lopez (UNC) in a very close decision, but Carolina had the contest 14-13. Fencing for Carolina in foil; number 1, Joe Roberts; in the number 2 slot, Clarence Simpson; with number 3, Dick Somers. For the epee fencer; number 1, Bob Peebles, Simpson at 2, and Somers at 3. In Sabre were number 1, Bob Aldridge, no. 2, Jim Proctor, and No. 3, Tex Lopez.

The epee fencers will compete in the intramurals Friday May 8 in Roland Parker Lounges 1, 2 and 3 of Graham Memorial ending the Fencing season. The team finished the season undefeated in all their outings defeating VMI, Citadel, AMA, and Florida, also winning a triple meet here with VMI and AMA.

No Varsity Recognition

However, ironically, the team has not received varsity recognition a yet. The team sent Bob Peeble in epee, Carroll Raver in foil, and Mike Collins in sabre to the NCAA Championships in Annapolis too.

The members of the team this year were: Foil, Carroll Raver (Team Captain), Charles Luchs, and Guy Ellis, with Joe Roberts as alternate. Epee, Bob Peebles, Clarence Simpson, and Bob Finley, with Herb Scott as alternate. Sabre, Mike Collins, Steve Mirman, and Dave Matthews, with Charles Williams as alternate. And team manager was Gus Williams.

Carolina Tangles With First-Place Maryland

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Today and tomorrow the Carolina baseball team will have a great chance to improve its own ACC title hopes and at the same time throw the league standings into further confusion.

This opportunity comes from the fact that the Tar Heels collide with first-place Maryland this afternoon at College Park and third-place Virginia tomorrow in Charlottesville.

Carolina will enter the games in the position of having everything to gain and nothing to lose since at the moment it has already lost four conference contests and is in fifth place. On the other hand, Maryland, who is tied with Wake Forest for the top spot at 5-2, must have victory to retain its position.

Deacons Play Also

The same goes for Virginia since the Cavaliers, at 5-3, are only one game off the pace. For both the Cavaliers and the Terps, however, the big problem arises from the fact that both have to meet Wake Forest this weekend since the Deacons and the Tar Heels will trade opponents Friday and Saturday.

Two victories for the Tar Heels would definitely put them back into contention for the flag while a pair of wins for either of the other three clubs would put them in the drivers seat for sure.

Carolina Coach Walter Rabb is going to fire both of his big guns at the opposition by sending Wayne Young to the mound against the Terps today with Ben Hammett coming back tomorrow to pitch against the Cavaliers. Young went 8 and 2/3 innings his last time out to rack up his third win in four decisions as he beat South Carolina 4-1.

Hammett Now 4-1

Hammett, who is now 4-1 for the year, has gone the route in his last three starts against N. C. State, Clemson, and Duke to cut his earned run average down below the 2.0 mark to 1.7.

It is quite possible that the Terrapins might send ace righthander Dick Reitz to the hill hoping that they can find someone else to hurl for them against Wake Forest tomorrow. Regardless of whether Reitz pitches or not, Carolina will probably see him at the plate since he is an excellent batter. A typical example of his prowess with the bat can be shown by the fact that he belted a grand slam home run to give his team a 6-2 victory over Duke.

Russell Or Busch

Bus Male's choice of a pitcher for his Cavaliers will also depend on the outcome of his battle with the Deacons today. The two most likely candidates to face the Tar Heels are righthanders Fred Russell and Herb Busch.

Rabb will probably use about the same lineup today and tomorrow that he has for the past several games with the possible exception of a change at one of the outfield positions. Such a lineup would put Vaughn Bryson, Larry Craver, Ferg Norton, and Harold Workman in the infield with Al Baldwin catching. Johnny Burgwyn and Gerald Griffin are scheduled to hold down two of the outfield pots.

State Wins Sports Day

N. C. State College edged out Carolina Wednesday in the Big Four Sports Day to take the trophy. The other two teams, Duke and Wake Forest, came in third and fourth respectively.

State took first place in four events to make up most of their points. Only once did they end up in fourth place. State's victories came in badminton, horseshoes, softball, table tennis.

Although Carolina did not take first place, they managed to take first place in three events. These were golf, handball and tennis. All three of the victories for Carolina were easily come by, but the biggest margin came in golf. The only other first place award went to Wake Forest, who won the volleyball event.

Everyone who was at the event termed it to be one of the most successful even held.

Tennis Team Travels North

The Carolina tennis team with only three matches standing between it and the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament in Durham took off yesterday for Washington, D. C. where it will meet Georgetown today and George Washington tomorrow.

Wednesday Don Skakle's crew assured itself of at least a tie for the conference crown by defeating Duke 6-3. Wake Forest, one of the weaker squads in the league, is the lone hurdle left on the Tar Heel's ACC schedule. Carolina will meet the Deacons Monday to wrap up the season.

The Tar Heel netmen are currently 9-3 for the year and will take an eight match winning streak into the competition this weekend.

Today marks the first time in several years that a Carolina tennis team has played Georgetown. Last year the Tar Heels were supposed to have played George Washington on their northern trip but the match had to be cancelled because of bad weather.

Coach Bill Shreve's Colonials are the defending Southern Conference champions and currently have an 11-2 overall record. The GW team is led by the brother combination of Jim and Jack Tarr who between them took their conference singles and doubles titles last season.

Skakle will probably use the same playing order today and tomorrow that he has developed during the last month. Captain Geoff Black will play in the number one spot followed by Bruce Sylvia and Ben Keys. Sylvia and Keys have lost but two matches between them so far.

MISS MODERN VENUS—The stunned expression on the face of Denny McCoy is due to the shining star standing next to him. CAROLINA RACING FORMS

Tarheel Derby Day Comes Early; UNC Fillies Race On Fast Track

By MARY ALICE ROWLETTE

Today is Derby Day in Kentucky, but the Sigma Chi's jumped the gun on the Bluegrass State, decreeing Thursday Derby Day at UNC—and the experts all agree that a better looking field of fillies have never paraded to the post in any race.

The 15th annual Spring Meet in Kenan Stadium opened with the Race to the Flesh. Weezie Daniel for the Chi Omegas came close to breaking a track record by stripping to a bathing suit in 2½ seconds.

Happ Hurst, Kappa Delta, was second by a hat and Janice Sutton, Alpha Delta Pi, placed third.

The next event was "Hit the Geek." Jim Fox played the part of the Geek and was hit squarely in the face, ocasionally, with chocolate pie.

The Alpha Gams had the winner in this event while the Nurses placed and Kappa Kappa Gamma showed.

The Grand National Relay in which six fillies for each stable raced running backward with blinders on, smoking a cigar, carrying a spoon with an egg in it, pushing a ping pong ball with their heads, carrying a marble between their toes and running on their hands was won by the Chi O's.

The Kappa Kappa Gammas came in second and the Tri Delts were third.

Stockings with eggs in them were slipped over the heads of the fillies for the Secret Event. Each one was given a fish and Derby fans were somewhat shocked to see them climb onto the backs of Sigma Chi's. This is probably the only race in history in which horses rode people.

The object of the race was for the fillies to break the eggs on their opponents' heads by hitting them with the fish. Eunice Simmons, running for ADPi, stepped into the winner's circle for this event. Jenny Elder for the Chi O's was second and Sue Donisthorpe for the Tri Delts was third.

The fillies, being a little nervous and excited by the race, began throwing fish into the infield following the event. Their trainers, however, soon calmed them down.

The fifth race of the afternoon were skits presented by all the stables. The Kappa Deltas won with a modern version of "Hansel and Gretel." The Chi O's placed with a presentation of a visit to UNC by two Russian diplomats and the Nurses showed.

The Miss Modern Venus beauty contest, the last event of the Derby, was won by Maxine Greenfield with Jane Parks coming in a fast second and Patty Fiores third.

The Chi Omega Stable won the honors of the afternoon by winning two events and placing second in two.

UMMMMM—That's what one of—or both—these two are no doubt thinking in the midst of the situation at hand. The two lucky people (depending on how you look at it) are Robert Ketler (he's the tall one) and Sally Pullen (l), and they are (supposedly) enacting a scene from the Carolina Playmakers forthcoming "Inherit the Wind," which will appear in the Forest Theatre, May 7-9 at 8:30 p.m.

Cheerleader Tryouts Monday

Cheerleader tryouts are scheduled for Monday at 4 p.m. in Kenan Stadium, according to newly elected head cheerleader Charlie Graham.

There will be 45 girls and nine boys demonstrating their ability to shout, dance and call cheers for sport contests next year.

Judges will select five girls and one alternate and two boys and one alternate.

Graham said that judges would be the old cheerleaders, Student Body President Charlie Gray, representatives of the football and basketball teams, Ray Jeffries, assistant to the dean of student affairs, and an impartial judge.

This year's impartial judge is Pattie Payton, a Duke University cheerleader.

In case of rain the tryouts will be in the tin can.

Class Ring Orders

Official class rings may be ordered by juniors and seniors Thursday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Y Building lobby.

Members of the Order of the Grail will assist Lee H. Blackwell of the Balfour Co. in taking orders.

Sale chairman, Jim Scott, said the last orders this academic year will be taken Thursday. Students who are unable to give orders at that time may contact Scott at 106 Lewis.

UP Interviews Are Next Week

Interviews for positions in the University Party will be held next week. The party will also be concerned with the ratification of By-laws.

Hank Patterson, chairman of the University Party, said Friday the UP Executive Committee hold interviews Wednesday from 3 to 5 p.m. and Thursday from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Grail Room for these positions:

A seat in Student Legislature from Town Women's district. The seat will be vacant after the close of the present Legislature session Thursday night. Coeds seeking this seat must have a "C" average and at least 25 hours in the last two semesters and will be a town resident next fall.

A chairman and four members of the UP Membership Committee. This committee is responsible for contacting incoming students, other prospective members and former party members to join or reaffiliate with the party and for checking GMAB activity cards in the fall.

A chairman and four other members of the Publicity Committee.

Four members of the UP Executive Board.

A University Party file clerk.

Before examinations, new UP By-laws will be up for ratification by the various dormitories, fraternities and sororities. These new By-laws were proposed at last Tuesday's meeting of the party.

For these rules to become operative, three-fourths of the dorms, fraternities and sororities must concur. Within each dorm, fraternity and sorority, three-fourths of University Party members at a special meeting must also agree to the By-laws.

Guard Bill Hits Snag; Final Vote On Monday

RALEIGH, May 1 (AP) — Legislation preparing the way for National Guardsmen to replace state highway patrolmen in strike-torn Henderson ran into delay Friday after a week of rapid progress.

Complaints of hasty action, raised in debate as the House passed the bill on second reading, carried it over to Monday night for a final House vote before it can become law.

Under it, Guard troops called out by the governor to help local officers preserve law and order, would have the same authority as a sheriff to make arrests.

Rep. A. A. Zollicoffer of Vance, whose county includes Henderson, said the measure would "do no more than allow the Guard to replace the state highway patrol" on duty at the struck plants of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills.

Sporadic violence has flared in recent months as the company resumed operation in an effort to overcome the five and a half-month-old strike by the Textile Workers Union of America.

"I do not know if the Guard will be sent in," emphasized Zollicoffer. "I know it is under consideration."

Rep. Hubert Humphrey of Guilford, a leader in stalling the measure, pictured it as full of dangers and likely a violation of the State Constitution. However, he pinned his major arguments on "the hasty procedure" in rushing the bill along its legislative course.

"Various senators have told me they have serious misgivings" over the Senate's speedy action, Humphrey said. It passed the Senate under suspended rules Tuesday morning, he recalled, less than 24 hours after its introduction by Sen. Charles Blackburn of Vance.

Despite the tense Henderson situation, Humphrey asserted, "We cannot pass major legislation on a panic basis."

Most House members who joined Humphrey in asking for delay said they did so in order to study the bill.

Supporters pointed out that under present law, Guardsmen have arrest powers only when called to duty under martial law.

They said the measure would permit the use of Guard troop in a situation less serious than one requiring martial law.

Parents Have A 'Free Run' Of All Dorms

Students have been reminded that parents and visitors will have "free run" of the dormitories, fraternities and sororities between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Sunday.

"We encourage the students to keep their own rooms, their social rooms and the dormitory halls in a neat condition during the day," said Alpha Phi Omega President Randel Etheridge.

Other friends of the University, besides parents, have been invited also. The members of the State Legislature have been asked to attend in a body. They will meet at the Morehead Sundial upon arrival.

The high point of the afternoon will be a faculty reception under Davie Poplar at 3:30. APO, the sponsoring organization, will serve refreshments at this time and the UNC Glee Club will present a concert.

At 4:30 Vice President William D. Carmichael will give a short speech followed by a band concert under the direction of Herbert Fred, UNC band director.

Amendments Considered At Monday SP Meeting

The Student Party will consider several amendments to its constitution on Monday Night. Among these is an amendment to elect its file clerk and to require the chairman to have an executive assistant.

This will be the last official meeting of the party. The next party meeting will be in the form of a party.

Several appointments that have been made by the chairman are: liaison agent with the Legislature, Dave Jones; liaison agent with the IDC, Dave Alexander. Pete Thompson was appointed as chairman of the Membership Committee.

The appointment of a file clerk will be announced at the meeting.

Class Alumni Committee Appointed By President

Jeff Hare, senior class president, has recently appointed a senior class Alumni Committee for the purpose of enrolling all seniors in the General Alumni Association.

Enrollment will begin Wednesday, May 6, and end Wednesday, May 13.

Hamp Lefler is chairman of this committee that includes Lucy Forsyth, Eunice Simmons, Doreen Greenfield, Susan Saunders, Jack Secrest, Sam Poole and Bill King.

'Oh, Hellas!' Is Held Over

Sound and Fury's production of "Oh, Hellas!" will be held over through Sunday night.

The decision was made by producer Al Salley because of the record demand for tickets, and the fact that Parent's Day occurs Sunday giving the parents a chance to see a student production.

Tickets are currently on sale for both tonight's and Sunday night's performances at Y Court and Graham Memorial and will be available at the door on a first come, first served basis.

Performances start at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall, and the price of admission to the musical-comedy written by Lew Hardee and Carl Bridger is 50 cents.

The play stars Jane Newsom, Al Miller, Nancy Aubrey, Bill Monell, Jane Durham, Wally Graham, Susie Cordon and Frank Beaver.

HELD OVER—Mary Margaret Brown is held over Al Miller's head to indicate that Sound and Fury's production of "Oh, Hellas!" will be held over through Sunday night. Performances are at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow in Memorial Hall. Tickets are 50c and on sale at Graham Memorial and Y-Court as well as at Memorial Hall door on a first come, first served basis. INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary Friday included:

Harry Wells, Mary Rawson, Alma Sprinkle, Donald Harris, James Carter, Hilary Daugherty, Wesley Smithman, Mary Acenbrack, Franklin Jones and James Early.

Playmakers To Present 'Monkey Trail' Play

Sally Pullen and Robert Ketler provide the romantic interest in The Carolina Playmakers forthcoming "Inherit the Wind," scheduled for presentation in The Forest Theatre, May 7-9 at 8:30 p.m.

"Inherit the Wind" tells the story of the famous Tennessee "Monkey Trial" in which Clarence Darrow appeared for the defense. Ketler appears in the play as Bert Cates (Scopes), a small town school teacher who introduces evolutionary principles in his classroom and precipitates the dramatic trial. Ketler is familiar to local audiences for his roles in "The Would-Be Gentleman," "Look Homeward, Angel," "What Every Woman Knows" and "The Lark."

Miss Pullen, a native of Fayetteville, plays Rachel Brown in "Inherit the Wind." Rachael, the daughter of the local minister, is torn between her feelings for Cates and the religion of her father. Miss Pullen, a transfer student from Woman's College, is the current chairman of Petite Dramatique.

Tickets for "Inherit the Wind" will be available at The Forest Theatre box office on performance evenings only. Tickets are $1.50 or by season ticket. There are no reserved seats.

Victory Village Housing Problem Receives Releif

By BOB WRIGHT

Construction on 208 new apartments in Victory Village, which began late last summer, is now six weeks ahead of schedule. An estimated 20 to 25 apartments will be ready for occupancy around the end of September.

J. S. Bennett, superintendent of University buildings and grounds, said that about half of the 32-building project will be completed in December, and the remainder by March 1960.

Rent for unfurnished apartments has been set at $60 per month for the 3-room (one bedroom) apartments and $70 for the 4-room (two bedroom) apartments. Heat and water are included in the rent, but not electricity.

The buildings will be of a brick veneer, permanent-type structure and completely fireproof. Floors will be of concrete, and covered with vinyl tile.

The design of the buildings will vary according to the number of apartments per building. Each building will contain four, six or eight apartments.

J. E. Wadsworth, University housing officer, said that furniture will be rented, if desired, on the same basis presently used in Victory Village.

Bennett explained the proposed rent is higher than the present Victory Village housing rent of from $15 to $35 per month was partly because of the better construction of the new apartments and the high cost of repaying the $1,676,410.50 Federal loan received last year. He said that about $40 of every $60 received in rent would be used for repaying the loan.

The completion of the housing project may not entirely eliminate the housing shortage. Twelve barracks, containing 96 apartments, in Victory Village have been condemned and may have to be torn down, Bennett said.

Press Clubbers Club Softball

The UNC Press Club will have its annual ball game on next Friday afternoon.

All members of the Press Club attending will be charged 75 cents each for food costs.

"The money and a slip of paper with the name of the member planning to attend must be turned into Mrs. Susan Pittman in the journalism office by noon Thursday," said Neil Murphy, member planning the picnic.

The game will be held at Hogan's Lake.

Press Club President Ann Frye has encouraged all Press Club members to attend this function. The last event of the year is to be the annual banquet at 6:30 p.m. May 11 at Howard Johnson's Restaurant on the Chapel Hill-Durham boulevard.

Tickets for the banquet can be obtained for $1.75 from the School of Journalism office, Ann Frye, Parker Maddrey or Neil Murphy.

Poplarville, Mississippi

It may be a very long time before the lynch mob which put Poplarville, Miss., on the map is found. It may be a long time before the body of Negro M. C. Parker is discovered. And it may be a long time before this type of mob violence is blotted off the American scene.

It is doubtful that the FBI and the Mississippi State Highway Patrol can quickly supply the names of the culprits. It is probable that Parker's body has been dumped into a swamp or bayou in neighboring Louisiana. And it is fairly clear that there will remain the chance in some area, of a similar type of incident for years to come.

But someday, somewhere at sometime, one member of the group of hooded abductors will crack. He may breakdown at anytime. And when this happens and the cards are on the table, it will take an awful force to keep these people from getting their's.

Decent law-abiding citizens are awaiting that day with eagerness. We are patient, yet we will also be persistent.

Time is on our side.

Go The Heck To "Oh Hellas"

Tonight is the second night of "Oh Hellas." In case you haven't seen this superb production, we give it the highest of recommendations. It is a good sign to see students giving a show of this high caliber and fine humor.

So, go man, go straight to "Oh Hellas."

More Henderson

With all of the concern over the violence in the Henderson strike, one question and aspect over the entire fiasco has continued to be overlooked. That question is: What effect will this strike (or lockout, your preference) have on the program of Governor Hodges to entice new industries to move south to the land of promise.

The answer is very simple. Obviously any plants that were planning to move to this state, are now giving rather strong reconsideration. In fact, several industries which had been on their way to North Carolina have withdrawn their prior intentions hastily. And because this trend will in all probability continue, this strike is of importance to the entire future of this state. It cannot be confined to the boundaries of Vance County and the Governor's plush office in the State Capital.

It transcends all of these, reaching into the ultimate economy of every citizen. This, is one of the main reasons why it is imperative that it end quickly.

For, the future urbanization and industrialization of this state depends on a hasty conclusion to a most unfortunate 25-week incident.

Mosquitoes—Cockroaches

Editor, Sir:

It recently came to the attention of my committee that a bill was introduced in Student Legislature to do something about the mosquito problem on campus.

Well, I don't know what problems those durned mosquitoes have been having, but, whatever they are, they ain't nothing compared to the problems us cockroaches have.

Cockroaches are the smallest minority group on campus, but has anyone been trying to protect us? NO! All people do is step on us.

Can you imagine what it means to live in constant fear of being stepped on? Believe me, it's a hard life and something should be done!

Also, I have heard rumors that some Roach Paste may be introduced into our living quarters so as to permanently eliminate us. But do any of those legislators pass bills to do something about the cockroach problem? NO!

It's discrimination, that's what it is and I would like to inform you that unless something is done in a great big hurry we, cockroaches may revolt!

Archy, Chairman
Cockroach Ways and Means Committee

Legislature

To the Editor:

Those legislators who voted against the Crownover Bill, which would make meetings of all legislators with their constituencies compulsory, have been unjustly condemned.

The intentions of the bill are good (increasing legislator, constituency relationship); but by making the means toward attaining that end compulsory, the entire concept of mature Student Government is degraded. By voting against the measure, I was not trying to avoid meetings with my constituency, (I represent only one housing unit, thus I would only be required to "certify" that I had visited said unit "twice each session") but was attempting to express higher principles; namely, that such an act admits that the Student Legislature is an unrepresentative and dictatorial body, demonstrates that the body is made up of immature representatives who in no way understand the nature of their office, and is an affront to any legislator who, as a representative, takes his job seriously.

There are some matters that cannot be handled with effectiveness by a legislative body. The relationship between a legislator and his constituency is one of these. The problems in this bill are ones that should be considered by the individual legislator and his own constituency.

It is a sad commentary on Student Government when representatives, who by definition are supposed to represent, must be required to do so by statue. If the compulsory intent of the measure is removed and it is presented in the form of a resolution, I will be more than happy to help restore The Editor's and Representative Crownover's faith in the Student Legislature, by voting for it.

Thanks To Whom

Editor:

We wish to thank a person, who is unknown to us, for a service rendered, of which he may not even be aware.

Last night a deep sonorous whistle brought us from the world of drudgery to the world of loveliness, as a man paused somewhere near our dorm and filled the night with melody. He brought to us a serenity which is not often achieved in a moment, something of what Hardy must have felt when he wrote the last lines of "The Darkling Thrush."

"So little cause for carolings
Of such ecstatic sound
That I could think there trembled through
His happy good-night air
Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew
And I was unaware."

Notes From An Intra-

Continental Expatriate

EDITOR:

Paper has been much improved since I unfortunately left Chapel Hill for an ex (tended) stay with the philistines. However, I return to find you being criticized for improvements. (At least one in number.)

Have in front of me paper, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, of April 16. Wish to comment. Poem, MY ANGEL, magnificent. Editorial, A FINE WRITER concerning Dennis Parks is trite but true. Will be great service to the university if a publication receiving student funds does what CAROLINA QUARTERLY doesn't do; that is continue to force-feed the state-educated provincials with excitement who inhabit (not LIVE in) Chapel Hill. HOWEVER, AM SLIGHTLY CONFUSED BY SERIES OF WORDS ENTITLED AXIOMS. WHO SAYS THIS NATION, RIGHT? WHO SAYS RUSSIANS, RIGHT? WHO SAYS COMMIES, WINNING? LOOK, PROTECTOR OF THE FLAG, NO-ONE IS WINNING THIS DAMN THING! WE'RE ALL GOING TO GIVE BIRTH TO (OR FATHER) "LOVELY MAHATTAN ORIGINAL MUTATIONS WORN EXQUISITELY BY THE CHARMING WIFE OF IKE." (WHO EVER DECIDED THAT THE "first lady" WAS A LADY?) IF WE LAST LONG ENOUGH TO FATHER OR MOTHER ANYTHING THAT IS. WE SHALL ALL PROBABLY BE ATOMIZED WHILE READING AN ARTICLE IN TIME ABOUT HOW TO RAISE PLANTS BY HANGING SAINT AGATHA (PATRON SAINT, CAULIFLOWER HYBRIDYZERS) MEDALS AROUND OUR COLLECTIVE NECKS.

WELL, so anyway on April 18th I discover that the distinguished compatriot of GOLIATH, Al Alexander isn't exactly human or literate. Well, he can hope for executive position. People in rarified atmosphere usually have secretaries who with coaching can occasionally blunder throug.. ABBY VAN BUREN's column, "ADVICE TO THE SUB-NEUROTIC." I mean if you can find out how to deal with perversion, gaucheries, juvenile delinquents, and bastards by having your secretary read to you, why bother to attempt HUMANity by reading poetry, "the supreme fiction." ALSO, Mr. Alexander, please explain your use of "like" in the last sentence of your letter. REALLY, young man! If you must be beat and assail us with such disgusting words as "digested" & "garbage," don't do so at breakfast-time. I almost didn't get my pernod omelet down. (pour 1½ ozs. pernod fils into frying pan; break one egg; throw egg at Tony Wolfe; drink pernod.) YOU SEE, I CAN'T TAKE BOURGEOISIE CATERWAULING AT SUCH A SENSITIVE TIME OF DAY NEXT TIME YOU WISH TO MAKE A PUBLIC PRONOUNCMENT OF YOUR POOR TASTE PLEASE SEND A NEWSLETTER AT 10:00 A.M. WHEN I AM STILL MERCIFULLY ESCONCED IN MY FEATHER LINED WOMB merci.

TOPIC THREE OR SO FORTH . This morning I awoke to the sweet strains of "FLOW SWIFTLY SWEET." However, the title which you affixed to it was "Long Epistle on Quarterly." Most of the taurine excrement lay about in the third paragraph: to wit . . . . . JOHN K. TICE says that neither the ordinary philistine nor the philistine labeled aesthete would have brought SPECTRUM were it not for lovely obscene publicity (as for JOHN BROOKS, I never mention complete fools in correspondence, it isn't charitable). MIGHT INTEREST TICE TO KNOW THAT AT LEAST ¾ OF THE FIRST PRINTIN OF spectrum WAS SOLD OUT BEFORE FOOL'S ORACLE SPAKE. (Don't you sometimes wish that people would mention what was inside the Quarterly, Tice?) Also, M. Tice, this campus is not "any other university or college campus." 'TIS US, MAN.

ALSO WISH TO MENTION RUMORED FOUNDING OF A NEO-FASCIST PARTY ON THE CAMPUS. This would lead I'm sure to the most magnificent heaven for the ordinary student—he would have no decisions to make at all. As if the administration isn't fascist enough already. I shall quote administration member of a certain case now hovering behind the news; he said "If the student council can find no evidence (IN THE PEJORATIVE SENSE), the university will be obliged to take steps." Sounds vaguely like a witch hunt doesn't it?

Savior of our souls, come down off that dog-wood tree and fix things, MAN!

FANTASMically,
PARKER HODGES

Harper's Bizarre

On Tuesday morning Josephine ate her usual breakfast. After reading the paper she dressed in her normal working clothes: a tight skirt, a tighter sweater, seamless stockings and high heels. Then she carefully applied her makeup—lipstick, rouge, just a touch of eyebrow pencil—and one of the better perfumes. Brushing her recently curled hair she thought to her reflection, "Not bad for twenty-four." She left her apartment and drove to work.

She was there early, an hour earlier than usual, but the janitor had opened the door to her office. He was in the hall as she came in.

"Good morning, John. I thought I'd get some work done before the others came." She smiled at him and passed.

At her desk she busied herelf with some of yesterday's unfinished dictation. Suddenly she realized that the janitor was there. She started.

"That's sure a nice lookin' sweater," he said. He leaned over the desk toward her. "And you sure do smell good."

"John. Get out of here!" she cried.

"Yes ma'am. And a nice dress. Stand up and let me see you good. Yes ma'am." He moved around the desk toward her.

"John. Don't! Please DON'T!"

"Yes ma'am, you sure do look . . . now don't run away." He caught her by her arm. "Yes ma'am . . . don't yell. If you do, I'll cut you." A knife blade flashed in his hand.

Forty minutes later another secretary found her slumped in a corner. She had yelled, but she was still alive.

The law caught John. Two weeks later his case came up in court. It was a short trial. Three months later John was electrocuted in the death-house of the state penitentiary.

The morning after the execution Josephine ate her usual breakfast. After reading the paper she dressed in her normal working clothes: a tight skirt, a tighter sweater, seamless stockings and high heels. Then she carefully applied her makeup— lipstick, rouge, just a touch of eyebrow pencil—and one of the better perfumes. Brushing her recently curled hair she thought to her reflection, "Not bad . . .".

Recent Election

Editor:

Now that the elections are passed I hope that the new chairman of the Elections Board will not allow such blunders to occur as the one which cost Roy Goodman his legislative seat.

In the second election held in Dorm' Men's III Goodman, who had been the victor in the first election, was defeated. It is a pity that he had to suffer for an infraction of the law and that the Elections Board had allowed this infraction to occur.

Although the Student Council and the Elections Board stated they did not doubt his honesty, still the implication was there, and unfortunately the voters of his district were pressured by the story that seem to incriminate him for something that did not occur.

Here's hoping that the new Elections Board will make sure that the rights of their candidates are safeguarded and that the Elections Board fulfills their duties as specified by the Election Laws.

Mostly Shades Of Gray----

Neither Black Nor White,

Norman Smith

More than a month had gone by. It was a Friday night like the last time, and the five of them were in the room talking. Inconclusive it is this talk—much of it senseless. Attempts at being skeptical or philosophical, I suppose. Always the big things, ultimate concern, basic presuppositions, and the rest of it. Partially the academic atmosphere and partially a rebellion against patterns of home, community, and church are at the root of it. These discussions are forgotten later as the old paths are cleaved to, taken up are the practicalities of making a living and raising a family and in spare time maybe contributing something in the way of civic service. So come to a dormitory room late on a Friday night to hear these things, if indeed they really are worth hearing.

"This fellow who was on one of the Philippine Islands," one of them began to change the subject, "as a prisoner of the Japs during the war was telling me of his relations with the guards. The Japanese there were friendly to the few Americans and Britishers whom they held. He remembers how once he stopped to rest while on a march to a new work location. One of the guards sat beside him on the teak log and began to talk about the progress of the war. He said that the Imperial forces had landed on the West Coast and had established a perimeter there some months ago. They would be in Washington within two weeks he said."

"Then there was France under the First Empire," said the history major. "There were losses in Russia, and in Spain, finally in Austria and Prussia over a three year period before the fall of the Empire in 1814. In the government press (which were the only newspapers) there were only accounts of victories until it bcame evident that Paris would fall. It's somewhat of an exaggeration to say that the people didn't know anything about the defeats, but it is certain that only a few of the higher officers of the Empire knew how close was disaster."

"I know what you all are getting at," said Brent who was somewhat looked down upon because his cynicism hadn't quite metamorphised into the sublime pessimism that the rest of them had been able to assume (more or less hosestly). "The examples you cite are from totalitarian regimes. How can you suggest that we don't know everything with a free press, an elective legislative assembly that has free debate, and two political parties whose adherants are given to outspoken criticism?"

This time the graduate student spoke up. "Free press, sure free press, but they have to know something before they can print it. For the most part they don't try to find out things they aren't handed in press releases; they feel a responsibility to the nation not to pry and endanger our security. Those who do pry usually don't find out much because this part of our security system—keeping things out of the papers—works admirably well. Why it was just recently taken off security listings that crossbows were used as weapons in some special tactics in the Pacific during World War II! And how about our legislative assembly? Obviously, information that is in the security files can't come up in open Congressional debates. Where it is mentioned is in closed committee hearings, but I wouldn't be too surprised but what very little of real importance is said there. Legislative prerogative is a thing of the past; it was quite recently that some government official kept a member of the House of Representatives from joining a Congressional inspection team at an atomic test site for "security" reasons. The political parties—well, the same thing —"

"And who knows what conditions really are," Joe interrupted in his shrill voice as his forehead puckered beneath an unkept shock of already greying hair. "No one knows, really. Responsibility is so split up and scattered about; there is security here and lack of communication there, and then there are others—as there are in all bureaucracies—who just don't give a damn as long as they get that pretty blue paycheck. Typical is the check full of meaningless IBM holes arranged in meaningless patterns, signed not by human hands but by a machine gun-like staccatoing printing press, killed if it is folded or wrinkled or spindled, all deducted and withheld as quick as the wink of an eye. Typical it is of the whole state."

Night breezes were stealing in, maybe from the Shenadoah or maybe from the sea, rattling little piles of shed dogwood petals along in the gutters below, whispering to them that the mugginess was being blown away and that there would be a clear day on the morrow, or was it whispering rather that it was blowing in hellish thunderheads with pelting hail and lashing rain?

"Who knows the real story?"

"Do we? Does anyone?"

Inconclusive this sort of questioning is. Without answers they quietly picked up sweaters and books and half empty Schlitz cans and went home.

Legislature Passes Seven Bills; Three Are Defeated, One Withdraw

By DAVE JONES

Final action was taken on all but two of the bills under consideration by the student legislature Thursday night. Seven bills were passed, three defeated, and one was withdrawn by the author.

Representative Jack Lawing's (SP) bill to require a one-fifth concurrence before a roll call vote could be taken was amended by Representative Bill Porter (SP) from the floor. Porter's amendment would require two seconds on a request for roll call votes.

This amendment was a compromise measure. It would not allow flagrant abuses of the roll call privilege, yet make the procedure to ask for one simple. The amendment was accepted, and the bill passed. Its provisions will go into effect upon the signature of the student body president.

An appropriation for the senior class introduced by Representative Dave Jones (SP) on behalf of Jeff Hare, class president, was passed without dissenting discussion. The senior class had been requested to appear before the Legislature at this time by the Bob Carter budget and ask for their appropriation.

Three bills on the Traffic Advisory Commission were considered and all three were passed. They included machinery for setting up a Traffic Advisory Board, Student Traffic Court Investigation Staff and a University Traffic Safety Committee. The bills were discussed two weeks in commmittee, and only minor changes were made. They were introduced by Representatives Bob Nobles, Ed Cox and Bob Thompson (all SP).

Rep. Bob Thompson spoke on behalf of his bill to have the constitution of the Professional Interfraternity Council approved. He explained the work that had gone into it, and recommended its approval. It was accepted without opposition.

Representative Swag Grimsley (SP) spoke on behalf of the new constitution introduced by him on behalf of the Consolidated Student Council. Tom Long, CUSE president, had addressed the body the week before, and debate was brief. The bill passed without opposition.

Returned to committee were two bills concerning rules of the Legislature.

Representative Jim Crownover's (SP) bill to encourage legislators to meet with their constituents was reconsidered, and Representative Jim Scott (SP) introduced a long set of articles to replace completely the previous provisions of the bill.

Bob Nobles moved that the bill with its new provisions be returned to committee for a week. After the motion passed, Speaker Grigg assigned the bill to the Rules Committee.

Rep. Dave Jones requested that his bill to allow legislators who move to keep their seats be returned to the Rules Committee for another week. He said in discussion that he felt that it could be made a better bill by another week's deliberation. His request was accepted by the body.

Tar Heels Trip Maryland, 2-1

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—(AP)—Winning pitcher Wayne Young tripled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning Friday for North Carolina's 2-1 baseball victory over Maryland.

Young's three-bagger to centerfield scored Vaughn Bryson, who had singled following Al Baldwin's ground-ball home run down the first base line.

The defeat knocked Maryland out of a first place tie in the Atlantic Coach Conference with Wake Forest.

The Tar Heels applied the dramatic ending to a tight game which saw Young best Maryland's ace, Rick Reitz. Young won his fourth game compared to one loss and it was Reitz's second loss after he had won six in a row.

The battle of the big right-handers featured six scoreless innings before the Terps tallied in the seventh.

Carolina will meet Virginia today.

Frosh In Two Against State

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Baseball fans who like to make an afternoon of it will get their chance here this afternoon when the Carolina freshmen face the N. C. State Wolflets in a double-header beginning at 1:30.

This comes under the category of a "big" one in the Big Four race since a double victory by either team will launch the lucky winner far ahead of the others in the quest for the title.

The Tar Babies have other reasons for wanting this one since the State yearlings handed them their first Big Four loss in Raleigh on April 18. The score was 9-3.

Record Deceiving

Carolina will carry a mediocre 4-4 overall record into the twin-bill although their more important Big Four record is 3-2. Though the record against outside competition is only 1-3, it is a deceiving one since frosh mentor Pat Earey often uses these games to test some of his bench material.

On several occasions Earey has yanked his starting pitcher with a sizeable lead in favor of a relief man needing the experience that only comes in the stick of the action.

Gabriel Main Attraction

The Wolflets bring a well-balanced squad to Chapel Hill with perhaps the greatest asset being one Roman Gabriel who manages to include baseball, football, and basketball in his curriculum. Gabriel, who went all the way on the mound for State in the win over the Tar Babies, will undoubtedly pitch in one game and probably hold down first base in the other.

Shortstop Len Dellolio's .400 plus batting average leads the Chapel Hill nine and he will be in the infield along with Paul Swing at second, Larry Neal on third, Pete Farrior (who is enjoying a mild hitting streak after a slow start on first, and Whitey Wade behind the plate.

Ron Miller and E. C. Haithcock will roam the outfield though the third starter is uncertain. It will most probably be James Helton or Roland Noblin, who celebrated his first starting chance last Wednesday with a three-run homer against Pfeiffer Junior College's freshmen.

Jerry Carpenter, Nick Warern, or Dave Murr will be employed as starting chunkers for the frosh.

Duke-Carolina

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 1, (AP) — The annual Duke - Carolina football game, originally scheduled for Duke Stadium on Saturday, November 21, will be played instead on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, November 26.

Announcement of the switch was made jointly today by Athletic Directors E. M. Cameron of Duke and C. P. Erickson of Carolina.

A search of the record books reveals that there has been one other Duke - Carolina game on Thanksgiving Day and that was the first one, back in 1888, and was played in Raleigh. Duke (then Trinity) won it, 16-0 and it is in the records as the first "modern" (as differing from the rugby style of play) in southern history.

This fall's meeting will be the 46th meeting of the two teams, including the disputed game in the fall of 1889 which both teams claimed by a forfeit.

LYNDON DeBORDE

LAST TIME OUT—One of the eight Carolina seniors who finishes out his track career today against Duke is hurdler Lyndon DeBorde. DeBorde's best time for the high hurdles is :14.4.

Patterson KO's Brian London

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, fighting in quick savage bursts of body punches, chopped down Britain's Brian London and knocked him out with a left hook to the head in 51 seconds of the 11th round of a title fight Friday night.

London was on deck for a five-count when the bell sounded ending the 10th after absorbing a heavy right-hand punch to the head from the champion.

Sensing that the end was near in this "tuneup" for his June 25 bout with Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, the champ came out for the kill in the 11th.

BULLETIN

The Carolina tennis team won its ninth straight match of the season yesterday by defeating Georgetown University of Washington, D. C. 5-4. The victory gives the Tar Heel netters a 10-3 overall record for the year. Carolina will wind up the two-day northern tour today when it takes on George Washington University.

Golf Clinic

The Women's Physical Education Department announces that a golf clinic by two of the top women golf professionals will be held at Finley Golf Course of the University of North Carolina on May 12 beginning at 2:00. The clinic is open to the public without charge. The "pros" are Beverly Hanson and Joyce Ziske, both of whom are members of the MacGregor Sporting Goods Company Advisory Staff of golf champions.

Miss Hanson is a native of North Dakota who now lives in Indio, California. She is described as an "energetic journalist, rancher, golfer," and in 1958 she topped all 1958 Ladies Professional Golf Association players with winnings of $12,639.55! Her average of 74.92 strokes per round for 84 rounds won for her the coveted Vare Trophy. She was the 1950 National Women's Amateur Champion, a member of the 1950 Curtis Cup Team, and has won many other tournaments including the Texas Open, Palm Springs Invitational, Ladies' PGA, and the Women's Western Open.

Miss Ziske is a native of Wisconsin, and has been playing tournament golf since 1949 when she won the Wisconsin Junior Consolation competition.

Track Team Hosts Blue Devils Today

By BING SOMERS

The UNC track team, sporting a shiny 4-1 record with wins over State, Clemson, South Carolina, and Virginia and Wake Forest (triangular meet), faces the equally strong Blue Devils of Duke this afternoon in what should be one of the finest dual meets held in the South this year.

This is the last home meet of the year for the Tar Heels, and that old, perhaps overworked intangible called nostalgia will be present as no less than nine Carolina trackmen appear on Fetzer Field for the last time. They are Captain Wayne Bishop, Ed Brawley, Alex Coffin, Lyndon DeBorde, Danny Droze, John Fox, Dave Scurlock, Charlie Sewers, and John Sylvester.

Should Be Close

But sentiment must take a back seat to action today. These two old rivals are about as close in comparative strength as two teams can get, so close, in fact, that the outcome may hinge on the winner of the final event of the meet, the one mile relay.

Both are liberally sprinkled with individual stars of truly high calibre. Carolina has Scurlock (1:48.2 half, 47.9 quarter, 1:51 indoor half—the list goes on and on); Bishop (9:11.9 two mile, 4:13 mile); DeBorde (14.4 on the high hurdles); Ray Stanley (over 23' in the broad jump, 211' in the javelin); Cowles Liipfert (4:17 mile); and Sylvester (48 plus on the quarter).

Duke Stars

Duke can counter with big Cary Weisiger, who ran a blistering 4:10 mile in this same meet last year as a sophomore; little Jerry Nourse (4:16 in the mile and 9:24 in the two mile); Jim Bocher (a 6'4½" high jumper); Jack Linden (22.8 in the low hurdles); Jon Elder (a 9.9 hundred), and Dave Pitkethly (around 9:25 in the two mile).

Their best performer, however, is probably a skinny, tough little runner named Tom Bazemore, who looks like he just stepped from behind a plow. He owns a 1:51.8 half, a 4:21 mile, and has run around 48 on the quarter.

Both teams have others who will share some of the afternoon's glory, (Fraser Smith in the discus and Ward Sims in the pole vault for Carolina), but the above are the ones to really look for.

Top Races

Several really top flight duels should be wagered during the meet—Scurlock and Bazemore in the quarter and half; Bishop, Liipfert, Weisiger, and Nourse in the mile; and Bishop, Nourse, and Pitkethly in the two mile.

Wake Forest Wins, 5-2

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., May 1 (AP) — Wake Forest moved into first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball race Friday by defeating Virginia 5-2. It was the first home loss in nine games for the Cavaliers.

Wake Forest had to come from behind to defeat the Cavaliers, who have won 6 of 10 conference games. Virginia's overall record now is 8-4.

Virginia opened the scoring in the first inning when Billy Timberlake walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch. He scored on a single by Reece Whitley.

Jimmy Harrell, who relieved starter Jerry Galehouse, held Virginia to four hits over the last seven innings and struck out nine Cavaliers to pick up the win.

Fred Russell was tagged with the loss, also in relief.

Curtain will rise at 8 p.m. on the final night of a three night run in Memorial Hall of the Lew Hardee and Carl Bridgers adaptation of Aristophanes comic drama, "Lysistrata."

Tickets are still available at Graham Memorial and at the door of Memorial Hall for this final night's production. The price of admission is 50 cents.

The play stars Miss Chapel Hill Jane Newsom, Al Miller, Nancy Aubrey, Billy Monell, Susie Cordon, Frank Beaver, Jane Durham, and Wally Graham.

The production is produced by Al Salley and directed by Joel Fleishman.

Conducting the orchestra is Gene Strassler, graduate music student.

Set design was done by John Sneden and executed by Doug Warner, while make-up and lighting are in the charge of Barbara Lewis and Rudy Waldorff respectively.

Kate Russell and Betty Shaw were responsible for the properties in the production.

Three Point Program Proposed By Speaker

Freedom of speech and of the press is in danger because newspapers and other news media have not done a good job of "enlightening the public" about the role of the press in maintaining freedom, it was declared here today by Joseph Costa, chief photographer for King Features Syndicate.

Addressing the Southern Short Course in Press Photography Costa said there is a "clear and present danger to freedom of the press, and unless the public regains its respect and full confidence in and for news media, a demand for some supervision of the press will inevitable result."

Costa said, "news media cannot afford to assume they are impervious to ethical criticisms or that they are not in need of an enlightened, progressive public relations program."

The speaker pointed out that newspapers and TV and radio have been vehicles for vastly successful public relations programs for others. "But they have failed to use these techniques for their own welfare."

Costa advocated a three part program:

1. To do some "soul-searching" regarding conduct of working members of the press, including photographers.

2. To exchange ideas and experiences with related professional people—to show what the common goal of freedom should be sought.

3. To engage in a public relations program to find out public attitudes of the public towards the press and to engage in "educational projects" to acquaint the public with objectives of freedom.

"The Newspaper is truly freedom's textbook," said Costa. As a textbook of the ever moving and changing scene, it offers a lifetime adult education at virtually no cost. It also supplements the formal education of children of all ages."

Reception In Grimes Dorm

A reception for parents here today for Parent's Day is being held in Grimes Dormitory between 2 and 3 p.m.

Two coeds will serve refreshments to visitors.

Students living in dorms where no reception has been planned have been especially invited to bring their parents to the Grimes Dorm reception.

UNC Is Participating In Army Space Program

The University is participating in the U. S. Army's long-range missile and space programs, it was disclosed today by Brig. Gen. J. A. Barclay, commander, Army Ballistic Missile Agency.

The University is investigating causes of brittleness in ceramics at a cost of $30,000.

The Philadelphia Ordnance District administers the contract for the Missile Agency. Dr. Wernher von Braun directs the Agency's development programs.

G. M. SLATE

Cosmo. Club, 4-6 p.m., Rendezvous; Donna Kelly, 8 p.m. main lounge.

Senior Day Is Tuesday; Parties, Elections. Bar-B-Que Featured

By LEE ARBOGAST

The time is almost here! Are you ready?

The seniors are!

For Tuesday is Senior Day. And are the members of the Class of '59 ever the lucky ones.

Tomorrow night things get under way with free flicks. Andy Gutierrez, the manager of the Varsity Theatre, is offering two showings of "Green Mansions" for seniors. But don't forget to take ID cards. Coeds may stay out 'til 12!

Senior day, May 5. That's going to be the day to end all days.

Look out Chapel Hill!

A senior class meeting will begin he day at 10 a.m. in Memorial Hall. All sorts of juicy tidbits will come forth at this meeting, including the issuing of tickets, which might be the winning ones Tuesday afternoon.

The election of the permanent class officers and Mr. Alumni and Miss Alumna will also be made at this meeting.

Around 3:30 p.m. things will move out to The Patio. And will activities ever be going on out there!

To start there will be all sorts of games, including badminton, horseshoes, beer-baseball, a golf chip-contest (with prizes for the winners), and a cassino-run. Throughout the afternoon there will be drawings for various prizes donated by merchant, including Dave's College Shop in Durham, and Town & Campus.

Around five, the talent show will get under way. Jim Talley will serve as MC and there will be five acts.

After the talent show, a Bar-B-Que supper from Watt's Restaurant will be served.

Tuesday night, Nick Kerns will entertain from eight 'till twelve. Patio prices will also be reduced - five cents per can!

Don't give up the ship - there is still more to come!

Wednesday begins the Alumni drive.

And the crowning blow comes Thursday. Hogan's Lake has been reserved for the Class of '59. Even though formal activities don't begin until eight that night, the lake will be open all afternoon to seniors for cook-outs, picnics, and what-all. Willy Hargraves will head the BYO Senior Party Thursday night, playing from 8 'till 11. Coeds, as a final celebration, have until 12 to persuade their dates to take them in.

So get ready you seniors. You've a great treat in store for you.

YMCA Fills Three Posts

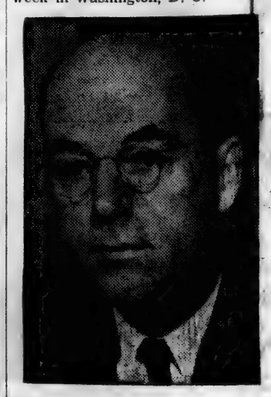
Jack Raper, YMCA president, and his executive council announced Friday the appointments to three YMCA cabinet posts.

After two weeks of interviews Raper named Leonidas Capetanos and Chuck Mixon co-chairmen of the Freshmen Forum program. Morris Godfrey as publicity chairmen and Tony Salinger as head of the Human Relations Committee.

Rising sophomores, both Capetanos and Mixon have been active in this year's Freshman Forum. The forum, which developed largely as an outgrowth of Freshman Camp, has functioned this year to confront freshmen with an opportunity to explore such areas as jazz, poetry and art in weekly supper discussion meetings.

Chamber Of Commerce Host To UNC Advisor

A University of North Carolina representative, Dr. Rex S. Winslow, was a special guest of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce at the organization's 47th annual meeting this week in Washington, D. C.



Dr. Winslow, who directs adult education programs in the School of Business Administration, was invited along with officials of five other universities which conduct advanced management institutes for Chamber executives.

Another Chapel Hillian was also an honor guest at the annual national recognition awards dinner Monday night at the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

Bob Cox, residing this year in Tulsa, Okla. while national Jaycees president, attended the event which was highlighted by awards to seven prominent persons, including UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, actress Helen Hayes and Sen. Harry Byrd.

Dr. Winslow has also served as an advisor in Business Economics at the School of Business Administration here at the University of North Carolina and is still serving in that capacity.

Oxford Professor To Teach Here

Charles Leslie Wrenn, Rawlinson and Bosworth Professor of Anglo-Saxon and O'Donnell Lecturer in Celtic Studies at Oxford University, and a Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford will be visiting professor of English in the UNC second summer session.

Professor Wrenn will teach a course in Chaucer and will offer a seminar on Middle English Literature for advanced graduate students during the July 15-August 20 term.

Professor Wrenn, a native of Essex, England, received a first-class honors B. A. degree from Oxford in 1917, followed by an M.A. in 1920. From 1917 to 1930, Professor Wrenn taught English at the Universities of Durham and Leeds (England) and at the Universities of Madras and Dacca (India).

In 1930, he returned to Oxford as a lecturer in English Language, an appointment which was followed by one to professor of English Language and Literature in King's College, University of London. During his tenure in the London chair, in 1939-1946, Professor Wrenn served that University as dean of its Faculty of Arts and as chairman of the Council of its School of Slavonic Studies.

Since his return to the Oxford University faculty in 1946, as Rawlinson and Bosworth Professor, Professor Wrenn has been chairman of its Board of Faculty of English (1949-1951) and a visiting professor at the Universities of Florida, Chicago, and Cincinnati during a visit to America in 1957.

Professor Wrenn is the author of many books and articles in the fields of English Philology, Old and Middle English Literature, English Renaissance studies, English Archaeology, and Slavic Philology and Literature.

He is a past president and present permanent vice-president of the Philological Society (England), a past first president of the International Association of University Professors of English, and a former director of the British Council's Summer Schools for Advanced Foreign Teachers of English.

Petite Musicale Final; Soprano Kelly Performs

Donna Patton Kelly, soprano, will perform for the last program of the Petite Musicale series tonight at a recital in the lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Kelly will be accompanied by Walter Golde of Chapel Hill. The program will include works by Wolf-Ferrari, Brahms, Paladilhe, Faure, Duparc, Pierne, Menotti, Dougherty, Giannini and Walter Golde.

The artist has been a soloist with the Chapel Hill Choral Club in performances of the Mozart Requiem, the Verdi Requiem and the Brahms Requiem.

Mrs. Kelly has sung the role of Donna Anna in Mozart's Don Giovanni produced by the Graham Memorial Activities Board and the UNC Music Department.

She has also appeared as soloist under Paul Young of Duke University and with the UNC Glee Club and the University Chorus.

A current resident of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Kelly was the first recipient of the Institute of Opera Scholarship and studied with Walter Golde during her stay in Chapel Hill.

Golde is a Chapel Hill pianist-composer who has presented recitals in Hill Hall and in Graham Memorial. He is also a well-known voice teacher and has accompanied many of his students in programs on Les Petites Musicales in the past.

Two Students Convicted

Two Carolina students and a Marine private have been convicted and given 18 month sentences after being charged with check forgery last month.

Joseph Friedberg, a senior from Great Neck, N. Y., and Frederick G. Renneckar, a sophomore from Port Allegheney, Pa., were arrested early in April along with Pvt. John A. Fox of Camp Lejune and New York City.

They had been released on $300 bail. Renneckar had admitted writing two checks which bore the name of UNC football player, Ed Furjanic.

Tuesday Evening Series To Close With Symphony

The 1958-59 Tuesday Evening Series will end on May 12.

On that date, the UNC Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Prof. Earl Slocum will give a concert at 8 p.m.

Featured on the program will be Mozart's Piano Concerto in C Major with Lilian P. Pruett as guest soloist, and Howard Hanson's Symphony No. 2.

Welcome Parents!

By NEIL MURPHY

The University's ninth annual parent's day is being held today under the sponsorship of Carolina's Rho chapter of Alpha Phi Omega.

Students' parents will begin arriving this morning for a full afternoon of activities. Vice President William D. Carmchael will highlight the days' activities with an address at 4:30 p.m. under Davie Poplar.

Nearly every phase of University life will be open to the inspection of the visitors. Open house in dormitories, fraternities and sororities will begin at 2 and last until 4 p.m.

Many departments will observe functions especially prepared for the parents at this time. The Chemistry Department will present laboratory demonstrations in Venable Hall. Tours of the Arboretum will be conducted by members of the Biology Department.

The Air Force ROTC will pass in review on Fetzer field at 2 p.m. Following the review will be a drill team exhibition at 2:30. At 2:45 there will be a display of flying equipment from the USAF in the AFROTC Buildings. Also at this time there will be a reception of cadet's parents in the cadet lounge.

An exhibition of arms and equipment followed by a reception will be held in the Navel Armory also.

Also in the 2 to 4 period there will be an exhibit in the Zoology Museum located in Wilson Hall. The Geology-Anthropology exhibit will be in Person Hall. The Radio-Television-Motion Pictures Department will be open for inspection in Swain Hall. The Physics Department plans a reception in Phillips Hall. In 101 Saunders, the Playmakers Museum will be open.

The Consolidated University Offices will be open for inspection in the Old Institute of Government Building.

There will be three showings of "Color in the Sky" at the Morehead Planetarium during the afternoon and evening.

Last year from one thousand to fifteen hundred persons attended parents day and saw the United Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps perform.

At 3:30 p.m. there will be a faculty reception and Glee Club Concert held on the lawn under Davie Poplar. This event will be held in Graham Memorial Student Union in the event of rain. Refreshments will be served by Alpha Phi Omega at this time.

Vice-President William D. Carmichael will give a short address at 4:30 and he will be followed by a band concert.

The Sound and Fury production, "Oh Hellas," has been held over 'till Sunday night and will open at 8 p.m.

Parent's Day is sponsored by the only fraternity at UNC devoted solely to service, Alpha Phi Omega. APO is composed of college men who have had some former affiliation with the Boy Scouts of America and desire to render service while attending college. It is the largest greek letter organization in the United States.

APO President Randel Etheridge has invited "constructive comments" on parent's day to be sent to the APO room in the basement of Smith Dorm.

Larry Hayer, a senior from Kannapolis, has been APO chairman of Parent's Day for the last two years.

NROTC Instructor Promoted

Captain Carl Tiedeman, USN, Commanding Officer of the NROTC Unit, is shown pinning shoulder boards on Lieutenant Commander H. R. Humphrey, Supply Corps, USN, signifying his promotion to that rank. LCDR Humphrey has served in the capacity of supply instructor and supply officer at the unit since May of 1956. During this period he has resided with his wife and three daughters at Powell Street, near the Chapel Hill Airport.

Professor To Tour Far East

Dr. Marvin E. Chapin, professor and head of the Department of Oral Surgery, School of Dentistry, will leave May 11, for the Phillipine Islands and will then tour the Far East as a civilian consultant to the Surgeon General, United States Air Force .

Dr. Chapin will attend the Annual Meeting of the Phillipine Dental Association in Manila, and will also appear on the program.

Following this meeting, he will spend approximately one month visiting Air Force Dental Installations in Okinawa, Ryukuys Islands Japan, and Hawaii. Dr. Chapin will perform consultant visits at these facilities in the Pacific Air Force Area, and provide lecture sessions, teaching seminars, and conduct oral surgery clinics for the dental personnel. He will also co-ordinate oral surgery activities with the various chiefs of the dental services.

Application Deadline For Council Extended

Erwin Fuller, student council chairman, announced Saturday that the deadline for applicants for the co-ed vacancy on the Council had been extended through Friday, May 7 .

The coed would sit on the Council in cases involving the constitutionality of executive and/or legislative action. Three co-eds sit on constitutionality cases — one appointed by the president of the student body, one appointed by the WRC chairman, and one selected by the chairman of the Student Council.

Fuller stated that application forms would be available in the student government offices throughout the coming week. Interviews will be held with individual applicants during the week of May 11-15. Applicants will be notified of the time and place of their interview.

The chairman expressed disappointment that so few women had applied for the position this week. However, he noted that few people were aware of the vacancy.

Katie Steward, Toy Johnson, and Mary Todd Baker have served as female Council members this year.

Senior Class To Elect Five Officers

The senior class Nominations Committee is currently working on a list of 12 boys and three girls as the nominees for permanent officers of the senior class to be elected Tuesday.

John Owens, chairman of the committee, said the criteria on which the nominations are based are capacity for class leadership, recognition of this capacity, best representative of the class and ability to maintain the tradition of the class.

On Senior Day Tuesday seniors will elect these officers: president, first vice president, second vice president secretary and treasurer.

The Class of 1959's Mr. and Miss Alumni will also be selected Tuesday. This honor, a senior class tradition, is based on quality of achievement by the boy and girl.

Elections will be held by secret ballot Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Memorial Hall. The results of the balloting will be revealed at 3 p.m. the same day.

Rising senior class officers will serve as poll tenders, poll ushers and vote counters.

Return Questionaires!

In the survey of leisure interests and leisure pursuits, Elsie Prevatte, graduate student conducting the survey, said that more than one-third of the questionaires have not been returned.

Each student who received a questionnaire represents 10 per cent of the undergraduate student body; therefore, it is important that the forms be filled out and returned, Miss Prevatte said.

House - Roof - Foundation

Reports are current that a special House subcommittee has decided against recommending that tests be given veteran teachers as part of a rating system.

Well, that's good news. Such tests would have been worse than a waste of time, in that they'd not be of value in rating the experienced teachers, but actually might low rate some of the very best of the teachers now in the ranks.

The committee is reported to be on the much surer and sounder grounds of recommending that such subject matter tests be used to judge how much new teachers may have learned in college. Thus such tests would test not only the prospective teacher, but also the institution.

Many educators feel that such testing should be done well before the would be teacher has finished college. Some suggest that the testing take place after a student has had two and a half years of college. That would give an idea as to the student's prospects before the student does any practice teaching.

If the tests were to be given before any practice teaching is done, there would be little doubt that the State Department of Public Instruction could see to it that private teacher-training institutions participate if they are not now giving such tests. For, the practice teaching is done under Department regulations, and the tests could be made a prerequisite for such practice teaching.

This development on the testing problem, coming on the heels of the Senate resolution advocating a raise for teachers, indicates that the legislators are making headway in the movement to provide fairly adequate pay raises for teachers. The Senate pay-raise resolution was signed by 25 men, exactly half the Senate. And, word is that a similar resolution is winning many signers in the House.

Once the legislators make up their minds to provide adequately for all education, the big job of this session will be done.

The big thing which the legislators must remember in making provision for education is that all education must be provided for. It would be senseless to provide for good foundation education in the public schools, without providing for equally good higher education in our colleges.

A house without a foundation won't stand. But, a house without a roof can't be lived in, either, regardless of how good its foundation, may be.

'Oh Hellas'

From all reports the Sound and Fury production of "Oh Hellas" is living up to its billing. We hear such adjectives as colorful, humorous and sexy being attached to the show. As a matter of fact, we even went last night and had a magnificent time. And, Tony Wolff liked it too.

So, if you get the message, we're just trying to tell you that this is a must for your evening's entertainment, as tonight is the last night of its three day run.

We strongly suggest that you go the hell to "Oh Heckas," we mean go the heck to "Oh Hellas."

Failures Of The World

The following is a letter from a formerly well-known writer to Malcolm Cowley and which the latter included in his essay, THE LITERARY SITUATION. It stands as an interesting document of a writer in frustration and discouraged to the point of exhaustion.

"I sing the failures of the world, those who wanted-to-be but never-became. The Hemingways and Faulkners do not need my song because the glory of the world is theirs. Neither do the Kafkas and Stendhals need it any longer; the songs of others rose over their graves. I sing of the forever obscure, the failures in perpetum, through the eventual doom. I sing of girls with thick ankles who wanted to be ballet dancers, of potentially great singers who had a permanent frog in their throat. I do not sing of evaders like Casanova who all after did escape from the Leads, but of the countless others who never got away, of those who found a pin in the corner of their cell, and who, after thirty years of digging with the pin, broke out into the open to see a guard waiting for them.

"I am trying to think of the most obscure person who ever lived, let's say a Chinese child who stood in the hot afternoon of July 9, 1546, and watched a lizard crawling over the very same spot where four centuries later a Chinese soldier was killed with a bullet from a rifle made in Bridgeport USA. I imagine this child at that moment of his, and during this moment of mine I sing of him. I think of all the jobs never gotten, letters never received, books never published, paintings never sold, telephone rings never heard, hopes never fulfilled, dreams never realized; I have a song for all of them, while I breathe the air that doesn't surround them and see the earth that doesn't cover them. I think of muscles unflexed, conception unconceived, high resolves unresolved; I not only think of them, I feel them, I experience them, and being past the mood of frustration I sublimate them into a song. But even that is a failure, a flop; it deserves the bird, a tomato in the face. I have no voice. I don't sing very well."

Georgia Letter

From "The Technique," Georgia Institute of Technology:

To the Editor:

I am one of those professors who requires seniors taking my courses to attend class.

Much of what students ought to get from a course is derived from the impact of classroom experience. In my courses on government and constitutional law, for example, we deal with numerous controversial issues, and what goes on in the classroom should be something more than a mere recitation of facts. It should be a presentation, exchange and discussion of ideas.

The cold facts are in the book. If the teacher is just going to be a fact giver, then there is little point in having him around. Teachers should begin where the book leaves off, and they should occupy a realm especially reserved for the spoken word.

Unfortunately, neither I nor my colleagues always succeed in making the class room as profitable and dynamic a place as it ought to be. But if we succeed, students may get a great deal that simply cannot be measured in any examination.

No one denies for a moment that some non-attending students can pass examinations with flying colors. But most examinations are dull tools for measuring what students get out of the classroom part of the course, particularly social science courses. Nobody knows this better than the students themselves, and teachers are also acutely aware of it.

A non-attending student may pass examinations with grade of "A," yet not have received that which he might have gotten had he been present in class. Examinations have their severe limitations.

It a teacher is trying to offer students something during class periods which is beyond the reach of an examination, then I firmly hold that he is justified in making the attendance record a part of the grading process.

Looking Back By Senior

P. W. Carlton

When at last a graduatiing senior emerges triumphant from the flurry of finals and grades, pencils and blue books and attempts to take stock of his situation, he suddenly finds himself in the rather ignominious positoin of out-going ex-student. He is a "has been," so to speak, no longer connected with the university. This is upsetting. The senior feels a bit guilty at being on campus at all.

His feelings are mixed. There is, to be sure, a glow of triumph at having achieved the baccalaureate degree, but the feeling of relief at being "through" is not so evident as is a rending, sighing loneliness at being separated from the place he has grown to love. The shock of having his roots cut away at one fell June swoop is, to say the least, disconcerting.

He wonders where he'll be next June, what he'll be doing, why? These thoughts, conducive to suicide, prompt the graduate to leave his little covert under Joyner eaves, with its wonderful view of the tennis courts, and to set forth upon a walk through campus. Of course, it is a time for introspection and retrospection.

The senior recalls wonderful evenings spent lounging along these brick walks in lower quad. He hears again the sounds of singing as boisterous lower classmen sound off in a rousing version of "Ray Jeffrey's body lies mouldrin' in the grave", and more quietly, "In the evening by the moonlight. The sounds reflect from the brick faces of the dorms and float gently across the arboretum.

A smile lights our friend's face as he remembers evenings beneath the trees, on the benches, or in the paths, his physiological set altered by the presence of female companionship. The night sounds, crickets, leaves whispering, the little water course tinkling, the crunch of sand beneath feet. Occasionally a face is visible in the glow of a cigarette lighter. Little wisps of conversation and quiet laughter filter through the branches. Nature listens and learns on spring nights in the arboretum.

The stately pile of the botany building looms ahead. The senior peers almost fondly at the second floor, fixating upon a certain window from which he has morosely watched many spring afternoons slip by. He imagines his binocular microscope crouching there on its pedestal, beckoning slyly for the student to explore the little world below. No more of that, not now, ruminates the lone figure below and passes on.

The ghosts appear with startling regularity now. A geology professor materializes and lectures nasally upon a topic discontinued in 1957. The senior blinks the apparition away and hears the voices of his highly inebriated classmates as they salute the Carr women while enroute from Tempo.

"Hello there Carr, come on out girls, all that boo and we can't get in."

Of course the inevitable compus cop appears and quiet resumes. The doomed man passes in Y court, peering at the blank faces of Gerrard and Old West across the street. Rank upon rank of ethereal visitors clamber for attention, lounging on bences, gibbering in groups, slouching against door frames, reclining upon the fossilized marine animales which comprise the rear steps of South building. The classes of '56, '57, '58 are all there, leering and chuckling, carrying on their usual intercourse with ever present girls who assume the coed slouch and hang out their listerine grins, empty but agreeably polite. The senior wonders where they all are now, what they're doing, how they feel. Dejected, he plods off toward Silent Sam.

Dear old Sam, the object of student wrath and indignity for better than 100 years, stands stolidly upon his tarnished pedestal, scrupulously refusing to meet the eyes of passers by, unruffled by his new coats of blue or green or red paint and by the lingerie displays which frequently dorn his rifle barrel. No sound has he made in the history of the school, much to the chagrin of some few saintly coeds who wished to prove a point. Sam offers no fatherly advice, so our doomed man salutes gravely, then ambles lamely on; but soon he will no longer wear "the nighted look of death".

For Carolina, with its many buildings and people and happenings, is not a physical entity. Rather it is an idea, a concept of the individual, meaning something different to everyone that graduates here. Carolina has existed and will always exist in the minds of thousands of individuals, carried by its sons to the four corners of this strife-torn earth. No one ever really has to leave Carolina, nor can it leave us, for thoughts are as eternal as the one supreme mind which fashioned our transient bodies and unconquerable souls. In a world of changing values, it is indeed with gratitude that we, the class of 1959, can look to our memories of UNC as a constant, a beacon from which to set our course for better things.

Music Review

The University Chorus, conducted by Wilton Mason, gave its Spring concert in Hill Hall, Tuesday evening. The program reflected the good taste of Dr. Mason. The opening pieces Vexilla regis and O sacrum convivium of Pergolesi, sung a capella by the Chorus, were interpreted with feeling. However, one could have asked for a more full bass section to give body and depth to the performance. Good dynamic contrast was evident in the Thomson Alleluia, particularly in the parallel harmonies of the women's parts. Of the entire program, this was the most enthusiastically rendered selection.

The Faure Requiem was the focal point of the concert. Here particular mention can be made of the soloists, the conductor, and of the accompanist, all of whom had an enthusiasm greater than that of the chorus itself. Rebecca Carnes sang with warmth. Joel Carter performed the bass-baritone solos with full and rich tone; and, as always, it is a pleasure to hear him perform. Glenn Watkins took the role of accompanist in the work, blending completely with chorus and soloists, never distinctly overemphasizing the part which was assigned to the organ. Wilton Mason conducted the group with energy, good taste, and thoroughly reliable and thoughtful musicianship. Of no part was he unaware as he cued in the organist, the soloists, and the chorus.

The concert gave evidence of hard work on the part of all of the performers. And, as a whole, it had extremely moving moments particularly in the Alleluia of Thomson, and in the Kyrie, the Libera me, and the in Paradisum of the Faure Requiem.

Spectrum?

Letter to the editor of our very own Tar Heel:

There seems to be, among "world affairs" at Carolina, something of a rumble between two campus booklets. This is no cause for alarm, as human beings have a tendency to quibble, but what is the matter of consequence? Possibly the question is out of order, since quibbling may be an end in itelf. Name-calling can be fun—it sometimes leads to war and other thrilling things—but it can also become rather a bore, especially if we run out of new and dynamic names. I think it is wise to avoid boredom. Boredom could lead to apathy, and everybody knows that's bad.

I don't see an overwhelming amount of virtue in goading the Quarterly and the Spectrum to self-justification. The material they print should be able to do that. Since they apparently don't wish to affiliate or be identified with one another, let them exist as two individual magazines. Let the people come, and buy one of each, and say "how nice," or something like that. On the other hand, if we want to take sides—competitive resourcefulness is next to godliness—let the people sit down and write beautiful things to submit to the magazine of their choice.

Gracious, it's almost slanderous, some of the quips I have seen (and even heard) about the two editors and their fellow-workers.

SOUND AND FURY: "OH, HELLAS!"

For those who take the long view, and look on Sound and Fury as a continuing feature of Carolina life, this is a time for loud hosannas. After two, lean years, when the Sound and Fury productions seemed impossibly childish exercises in house party humor, we are being treated to a full-fledged play. (Held over through tonight.)

Authors Lew J. Hardee and Carl Bridgers owe an obvious debt to Aristophanes, and their apology to him in small print on the posters around campus only fair. They have borrowed the plot of Yysistrata, taking choice scenes from the popular translations with only slight alteration if any. It is certainly not harsh criticism to note that the book of "Oh, Hellas!" is best when it sticks closest to its source. The Myrrhina-Kinesias bedroom-type farce and the choral chastity oath stand out as examples.

When Messrs. Hardee and Bridgers strike off on their own they often lose their way, and the comedy becomes rather labored and sometimes simple-minded. With the ancient Greek as their guide, it is hard to understand why the authors allowed the play to stray as much as they did. Lysistrata is time-tested stuff, and since the local adaptors were willing to let Aristophanes prevail to the extent that they did (even to the extent of blindly adopting a line about "flaying a skinned dog" without heeding the fact that the reference is to a lost play by a minor B.C. playwright), they might well have followed his example in construction and comedy technique.

As it is, however, the play is burdened with several rather static and unnecessary scenes. Unfortunately, two of them come at the very beginning, and everything that follows, including a good deal of joyous humor, suffers from the lame opening.

The show picks up somewhere around the middle of the first act, when it finally comes up with Aristophanes' prologue. From then on things are generally better, rising to hilarious heights in the Aristophanic scenes, and slowing down a bit in the original sections.

A student production of a major effort such as "Oh, Hellas!" must necessarily spread the talent pretty thin and hope to make up for the lack with enthusiasm. For the most part, they succeed, with the aid of several, performances which add to the general enthusiasm some talent and poise.

First, Sue Corden as Lampito, queen of Spartan women, built like an Amazon and able and willing to subdue all men in sight (en masse!) She comes across with enough gusto to bring Aristophanes' humor to life.

Jane Newsome's Lysistrata is most fetching, although it could be stronger. She has poise and voice enough, however, to compensate for the slightness of her characterization.

The running love-game between Calonika (Nancy Aubrey) and Demetrious (Bill Monell) is consistently amusing. Miss Aubrey's characterization is excellent and appealing, and Mr. Monell brings to the show its only good male voice and a great deal of poise.

The best single scene in the show — the teasing seduction of Kinesias by Myrrhina — features Jane Durham and Wally Graham in some excellent foolery.

Otherwise, enthusiasm has to suffice, and in many places it does. There are times, however, as in the first scenes, where the scarcity of talent and the lack of material combine to produce some embarrasing moments.

Joel Fleischman's direction is particularly notable in the blocking of the crowd scenes. The songs are blocked less successfully, perhaps because the crude amplification in Memorial Hall creates impossible difficulties. Many of the comic devices — Lampito's setting-up exercises and Kinesias' flying rush for the mattress, for example — are most ingenious.

To add still more wonders to the list it is only necessary to mention Lew Hardee's music (conducted with aplomb by Gene Strassler). Several of the melodies would suffice in any league. The lyrics, by Carl Bridgers, are often not up to their accompaniment.

A nice parody of the caryatides on the porch of the Erechtheum in John Sneden's major set occasions the first well-deserved laugh of the evening. Throughout, his flexible designs set the light key of the show without sacrificing all the monumental symmetry of Greek architecture. Clara Mack's costumes are fetching on the fetching girls who wore them, with one major exception: the girls have a hard enough time being sexy in the dance numbers, and the conservatism of the brief outfits only make it more ludicrous. The men's costumes are good, though somewhat monotonous.

Unfortunately, Tony Millili's choreography is obscured by the dismal attempts at ballet. Perhaps such ambitious stuff should be omitted from future productions, at least until there are people able to carry it off. There's nothing worse than inept ballet.

Whatever the faults of this production, one factor suffices to extenuate them all: "Oh, Hellas!" raises Sound and Fury to the level of genuine adult theatre, and sets up a standard which can be improved upon in future years. Everyone connected with this production deserves credit for the initial breakthrough. Future students who involve themselves in the excitement of Sound and Fury productions will have this to look back on as the beginning of a tradition and a beginning for real progress. "Oh, Hellas!" . . . oh, hope! (Such bathos from a supposedly cynical critic is due to the novelty of this sort of ingenuity and worthwhile enthusiasm on this campus).

State Assembly Will Have Busy Week With Many Items To Cover

By NOEL YANCEY

RALEIGH, May 2 (AP) — Next week promises to be the busiest so far of North Carolina's General Assembly.

Among the highlights will be:

1. Senate debate and action on minimum wage legislation. Observers expect the bill—already approved by the House—to pass, making North Carolina the first southern state with a minimum wage law.

2. A report from Revenue Commissioner James S. Currie on April income tax collections, and, possibly revised estimates on how much money the state can expect to collect from present taxes during the next two fiscal years. This will be the signal for the appropriations committee to get down to cases on a budget for the next biennium.

3. A rip-snorting debate in the House on the subject of highway commission reorganization. Administration leaders are expected to fight hard to defeat a bill to increase highway commission membership from 7 to 14.

The debate is expected to start Monday night when the lawmakers return from a weekend at home. The scene will be the House chamber and the subject will be a bill to clothe National Guardsmen with the arrest powers of peace officers when they are called out by the governor. The bill would make it possible to send guardsmen to replace highway patrolmen on strike duty at Henderson without placing the area under martial law.

The guard bill was introduced last Monday night and won speedy approval in the senate. However, it produced a lengthy debate in the House Friday before it passed second reading by a lopsided margin. Unless there is a big change in sentiment, the bill will be exacted.

Monday or Tuesday should bring a report from Revenue Commission James S. Curie on April tax collections. Legislators will look it over eagerly for income tax collection figures. Currie has hinted that the report will be encouraging but no sensation. House Appropriations Chairman Clyde Harris already has predicted it will be possible to raise the estimates of tax collections for the next two fiscal years above the level used by the governor and advisory budget commission when they prepared their budget recommendations. If the revenue estimates can be raised 10 million dollars, for example, it would be possible to increase appropriations above the budget recommendations by that amount without increasing taxes.

Unless the program is changed, the senate will act on the minimum wage bill Wednesday and the House will debate highway commission reorganization Thursday.

As passed by the House, Commissioner of Labor Frank Crane says, the minimum wage bill would increase the wages of 55,000 Tar Heel retail and Service Industry workers by an average of 15 cents per hour—$6 per week and $300 a year. Crane said it would add 16½ million dollars a year to the total purchasing power of these workers.

When the senate takes up the measure, it is sure to receive amendments to remove this or that group of workers from the bill's coverage. Whether they will pass remains to be seen.

The House, will take up a bill by Rep. Walter Jones of Pitt to increase highway commission membership. Instead of the present 7 at large-members, there would be 14 members—one from each of the highway engineering divisions under Jones' proposal. The highway commission was reduced from 14 to 7 members two years ago at the governor's urging, and his backers are expected to fight the Jones bill—as they did when it won approval by the house roads committee 10 days ago by a one-vote margin.

Legislative Committees also are expected to have a busy week. The joint education committees will hold a hearing Wednesday on the "incentive" plan. The plan is aimed at increasing financial support of the schools by dividing 10 million dollars of state money among counties which match it in accordance with their ability.

Journalistic Grant Given To Women Here

The Roberts Fellowship, a national award for graduate study in johrnalism by a nurse, has been won by Mrs. Frances Cherry Parker of the University.

Mrs. Parker is an instructor of community nursing in the UNC School of Nursing and a part-time student of journalism at UNC. She combines these duties with her responsibilities as a wife and mother, finding time also to write and edit articles.

As a Roberts Fellow, she plans to discontinue her teaching duties during 1959-60 and to take a full schedule of courses at UNC beginning in September. She will work for a master's degree in journalism, with a minor in sociology.

The fellowship was established by the American Journal of Nursing Company in 1950 in honor of the Journal's late editor emeritus, Mary M. Roberts. Qualified nurses who receive it spend the year developing skill in writing so that they will be equipped to interpret nursing to nurses, prospective nurses and the general public.

The award provides all tuition fees at the chosen institution, plus a $3,000 grant to cover the winner's living expenses during the study year, and, at the end of that year, a three to six month internship on the company's editorial staff.

Mrs. Parker was chosen on the basis of a manuscript which she submitted to a judges panel from throughout the nation. Her article, "What I learned From Mrs. O," was based on a series of interviews with a psychiatric patient, and describes what Mrs. Parker learned about mental illness and about interviewing in the nursing field.

A native of Elkton, Ky., Mrs. Parker was graduated from the St. Thomas School of Nursing in Nashville, Tenn. and received her B. S. in public health nursing from UNC.

FRANCES CHERRY PARKER

Her nursing career has included positions at Bowling Green, Ky., City Hospital; St. Joseph's in Pontiac, Mich.; Saratoga General in Detroit; and in industrial nursing in North Carolina. She is a member of the N. C. State Nurses' Assn. and the N. C. League for Nurses.

She has contributed articles to a number of North Carolina newspapers, as well as to the American Journal of Nursing, Nursing Outlook, Nursing World, R. N., Community Health, Tri-State Safety Journal, and several other publications.

Her husband, Fred Parker, is a part-time instructor in transportation courses in the UNC School of Business Administration while doing graduate work.

Judges for the 1959 fellowship were Mrs. Purcelle Peck Smith of California, a former editor of Public Health Nursing; Miss Helen W. Munson, librarian at Hartford, Conn. Hospital School of Nursing; Miss Kathleen Leahy of the Univerity of Washington; and two prominent writers, Mari Sandoz and Welbourn Kelley.

Math, Science Teachers To Meet Here, July

High school mathematics and science teachers from 12 states, mainly in the southeast, will participate in a summer institute which the National Science Foundation is sponsoring here.

Forty-two North Carolinians were included among the 80 stipend recipients according to the institute co-directors, Prof. Edward A. Cameron and Prof. Victor A. Greulach.

Known officially as the NSF Summer Institute for High School Science and Mathematics Teachers, the program gives the teachers fresh contact with the newest developments in the fields of mathematics, biological science or physical science.

They also earn graduate credit which may be used toward a master's degree, and benefit from the exchange of ideas with teachers from other localities and states.

The institute begins June 8 and continues through July 17. Participants receive stipends of $450, plus living allowances for dependents and a travel allowance. They are exempt from all tuition and fees.

Chamber Of Commerce To Convene Soon

Chamber of Commerce executives from 23 states and the District of Columbia will spend the week of May 17-23 at the University as part of a three-year advanced management study.

Known as the Chamber of Commerce Academy of Organization Management, the program is sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Only Michigan State University offers a similar program, that is being conducted during the fall.

Fifty-one men will come to Chapel Hill for their yearly in-residence week. The lone North Carolinian is William B. Little, executive vice president of the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce.

The group will be housed at the Carolina Inn and will attend six hours of classes daily at Carroll Hall, with UNC faculty members serving as study leaders.

A kick-off dinner at the Inn on Sunday, May 17, is the opening event. An evaluation session on Saturday, May 23, will end the academy program.

Six areas of study incorporated in each year of the academy program concern management, behavioral sciences, institutions, research and analysis communications and the dynamics of urban growth.

Tar Heels Cream Cavaliers, 15-3

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — North Carolina exploded for 13 runs in the last two innings here Saturday to turn a close baseball game into a rout and overwhelm Virginia, 15-3.

The victory, North Carolina's 12th of the season, gave the Tar Heels a 6-4 Atlantic Coast Conference record. Virginia now is 5-5 in the conference and 8-5 over-all.

Eight of North Carolina's 11 hits were packed into the final two innings including a bases-loaded triple by pitcher Johnnie Stott in the seven-run eighth frame and another three-run triple by Vaughn Bryson in the six-run ninth.

Until errors — they committed eight all told — and Tar Heels bats sent pitcher Herb Busch to cover in the eighth inning, Virginia had held a 3-2 lead.

Stott, who held Virginia scoreless over the last five innings with a three-hit, five-strikeout performance, was the winning pitcher.

Norman Fired

DETROIT (AP) — Bill Norman was fired Saturday as manager of the Detroit Tigers and Jimmy Dykes was named to succeed him.

Norman's dismissal came immediately after his team lost 15-3 to the Washington Senators. It was Detroit's third straight loss and the 15th in 17 games this season.

Norman, 48, had the job less than one year. He took over last June 10, when Jack Tighe was fired in Boston with his team in last place.

Duke Takes Track Meet, 68½-62½; Scurlock And Stanley Win Twice

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Duke track team piled up enough of a reserve to withstand Carolina's victory in the one mile relay and came out on top of the Tar Heel 68½-62½ in the final meet of the season at Fetzer Field.

The point spread in the meet was always close and for awhile it looked like the Tar Heels would be able to win the test if they came in first in the relay since that final event is worth 10 points.

Scurlock Wins Two

Carolina's Dave Scurlock put on quite a show for the fans by being a winner in every event he entered. The senior from Greensboro who was running in his last dual meet took first places in both the 440 and 880 and anchored the victorious mile relay team.

Wayne Bishop, the Tar Heels other senior standout, won his specialty, the two mile, by edging out Jerry Nourse of Duke by inches. The pair ran stride for stride all the way and were actually clocked in the same time at the finish line.

Stanley Scores 11

As usual Ray Stanley led the Tar Heels in the field events as he won both the javelin and the broad jump and took third in the discus.

In the battle for pole vault honors Ward Sims of Carolina and Duke's Bill Yancy had to settle for first place between them as both could do 12½ feet but neither could make it over the bar when it was placed six inches higher.

Carolina's other first place was taken in the 120 yard high hurdles where senior Lyndon DeBorde turned in a sparkling time of :14.3 to win from Jack Linden. DeBorde was also second in the low hurdles.

The Tar Heels, who finish the ACC schedule with a 5-2 record, achieved the only complete sweep of the day in the broad jump as Stanley, Bob Eubanks, and Sims came in one, two, three.

CLEMSON LOSES

RALEIGH, May 2 (AP) — North Carolina State capitalized on sloppy Clemson fielding Saturday to hand the Tigers a 9-2 Atlantic Coast Conference baseball defeat and seriously jolt their changes for the loop title.

Clemson, in the midst of a three-way scramble for the top rung with Maryland and Wake Forest, now has lost two to the Wolfpack, a pesky denizen of the second division.

HORSESHOE WINNERS

The winners on the horseshoes event were Avery from the Dormitory division, Sig Nu from the Fraternity White division, DKE from the Fraternity Blue division and Peacocks from the Graduate division.

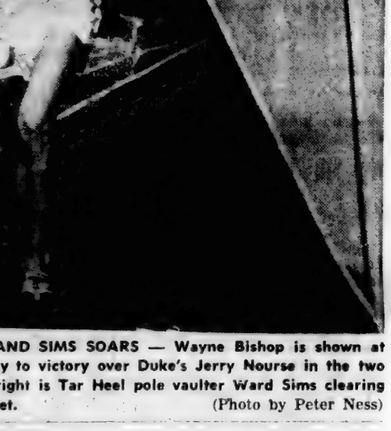
Saturday's Answer



Who will ever forget that time? The whole town turned out . . . well, maybe not the whole town . . . to see little Bobby Collegebound off to the University. There he was in his hand-stained bucks . . . pleatless khakis . . . and his varsity sweater. (Badminton 1, 2, 3, 4.) Sonja . . . ah, Sonja, his homeroom sweetheart, sobbed quietly. Sonja had heard stories about the co-eds. She was worried.

As the Toonerville local pulled in, another small cry was heard. It was Bobby's mother. Who will look after him? Who will warm his milk and care for his shirts? Then came the unforgettable reply. Bobby, head high, shoulders back, answered . . . "I will! I will wash my shirts." Ah, smart boy. He'll make the grade. Gone was the callow adolescence . . . for Bobby Collegebound had bought Van Heusen "Vantage" Shirts with his allowance. No longer need he be tied to Mother's apron.

His all cotton Van Heusen "Vantage" Shirts need not be ironed. Bobby Collegebound could wash his Van Heusen "Vantage" Shirts himself . . . and in a matter of hours they would be ready to wear. Day after day . . . far from home . . . Bobby would sparkle at college in his Van Heusen "Vantage" all cotton, wash and wear, no-iron shirts.

"Now," Sonja cried hysterically . . . "I've lost him forever. With all that free time in those handsome shirts, he'll be the target of every girl on campus. If only I had passed bookkeeping I could have gone, too."

As the train pulled away, Bobby's mother faced east and said . . . "Thank you, Van Heusen "Vantage," for being like a mother to my son!"

Senior Day Activities Today; Party At Patio Begins At 3

By LEE ARBOGAST

Today is the day for all the seniors to enjoy themselves, for today is Senior Day.

Things got started with free flicks last night. Members of the class of '59 enjoyed themselves at two showings of "Green Mansions," thanks to the kindness of Andy Guitierrez, manager of the Varsity Theatre.

And today is the big day. All seniors with the permission of their instructors are excused from regular classes. Official activities get under way with a class meeting in Memorial Hall at 10:00 this morning.

Jeff Hare, class president, has stressed how important it is for all members of the class to be present at this meeting. For one thing, the permanent class officers will be elected, as will be Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna. Another important feature will be an explanation of the Alumni Drive by Mr. J. Maryon Saunders, Alumni Secretary for the University. Tickets for the afternoon drawings will also be given out at the meeting.

After the class meeting, festivities will be transferred to the Patio; here, all sorts of entertainment and fun are in store. There will be games, such as badminton, horseshoes, beer-baseball, and a golf chipping contest, with prizes. Eric Roper annd Don Millan have even ordered "equipment" from Reno for the casion-run.

Care to test your skill and/or luck, pardner? Throughout the afternoon there will be drawings for various prizes donated by Town & Campus and The College Shop.

Jim Talley will MC the talent show which will begina round five o'clock and feature The Shades and The Circle Nine. Humor, melodies, and lots of surprises are in the offing—fun for all.

Someone will be getting hungry along about this time, so, thanks to Sarah Arnold and the Senior Social Committee, there will be a delicious bar-b-que supper from Watts Restaurant for the seniors around six.

Nick Kearnes will provide the entertainment for the evening. Starting around eight. Nick and his combo will be going strong. And it will even be economical to be there—after all, how often are the prices on the Patio's chief commodity reduced, five cents a can??? Enjoy yourselves 'til 12, coeds.

Unfortunately, Wednesday morning, seniors will have to try to go to regular classes. And yet senior activities will still be going on, for Wednesday is the beginning of soliciting for the Alumni Fund. This really is important to the class, the individual members of the class, and to the University as a whole. Members of the Class of '59 cannot be urged strongly enough to join and support their University.

Thursday will be another regular school day, but things will begin jumping again that night. Hogan's Lake, "the scenic part of the territory," will be open for members of the senior class. The BYO party will officially get under way at eight when Willy Hargraves and his combo begin entertaining. As a last fling, coeds will once more get to stay out 'til midnight.

Things will be fun. Don't forget that important class meeting at ten this morning in Memorial Hall. See you there.

SENIOR DAY SCHEDULE

10 a.m.—Senior Class Meeting, Memorial Hall
3 p.m.—Senior Class Party, Patio—games, fun
5 p.m.—Talent show with Jim Talley—Patio
6 p.m.—Bar-B-Que supper, Patio
8 p.m.—Nick Kerns combo, Patio
12 a.m.—Senior coeds must be in living quarters

Raper Names 4

In naming YWCA cabinet members for the coming year, Jack Raper, YMCA president, announced that four of the newly appointed committee heads are Ed Crow, Y-Night; Vince Mulieri, U. N. Educational Committee; Jack Boswell, Foreign Student Committee, and Don Miller, Buildings Committee.

Crow, a junior, has worked with the Y's "Calvacade of Talent" show during his three years at the University. His committee will be responsible for the talent show and for the combination picnic and entertainment programs which the Y sponsors each spring.

The U. N. Educational Committee sponsors U. N. seminars to New York, the U. N. Model Assembly in Chapel Hill and other educational activity for the United Nations. Mulieri, a junior, took an active part in planning this year's Model Assembly.

The committee headed by Boswell, another junior, will seek to aid foreing students in their adjustment to the University and the community by providing classes in English, arranging opportunities for visits in American homes and taking other steps to help orient the foreign student to his new environment. Miller, a freshman, will handle the assignment of office space in the Y building.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Cynthia Stokley, Thomas Fraley, Joseph McKenzie, Howard Mayo, Chandler Van Orman, Louis Brown, Wesley Smithman, Franklin Jones, William Owens and James Early.

Students In Science Study Here

Ten top science students in southeastern colleges and universities will have an opportunity for a summer's research in chemistry or physics here, it was announced Thursday.

The National Science Foundation has awarded a $23,700 grant to the Division of the Natural Sciences for an undergraduate research program during the summer months and a similar program during the winter.

Dr. F. Nash Collier Jr., associate professor of chemitry, will direct the program. The Division of Natural Sciences is headed by Dr. Everett D. Palmatier, chairman of the Physics Department.

Application forms have been mailed to department heads at a large number of southern institutions. Qualified students will return their completed applications, postmarked no later than May 18.

Ring Sale Goof!

A mistake was made in Saturday's Daily Heel concerning the sale of class rings. Instead of Thursday, May 7, the sale will take place on Tuesday, May 12.

Members of the Order of the Grail will assist Lee H. Blackwell of the Balfour Co. in taking orders. Anyone in the class of '60 or previous classes may order.

Sale chairman Jim Scott said the last orders this academic year will be taken Tuesday. Students who are unable to give orders at that time may contact Scott at 106 Lewis.

Send Message To Your Mom Via Radio Club

Don't mail a card for Mother's day, send it via the UNC Amateur Radio Club.

As a part of their permanent messages service to the campus, the club is running a "special" on Mother's Day messages this week. Anyone wishing to send a message is asked to place it in one of the Radio Club message boxes located in the Y and at Graham Memorial or telephone 3916 after 6:30 p.m.

Each message should contain the name and address of the receiver, the message in brief and the signature and address of the sender. The service is free.

During April the number of messages reached a total of 131 as compared to 63 and 24 messages for the two previous months which the club station has not been on the air.

Not included in this total are the numerous "phone patches" or calls in which the telephone line is connected to the transmitting and receiving equipment.

Student Party Passes Nine Bylaw Revisions

The Student Party made final eight revisions of its bylaws in its meeting Monday night.

The Constitutional Revision Committee, chaired by Bill Whichard, made all but one of the recommendations.

The party chairman will henceforth appoint a single executive assistant to help him fulfill his duties. The secretary will be required to prepare copies of Advisory Board and party meeting minutes for both the chairman and vice chairman.

The treasurer will submit monthly written financial reports to the party. In the future the file clerk will be elected. It was announced that Betty Phillips has been appointed to this position for the coming year, under the former bylaws.

The membership of the SP Advisory Board, the party policymaking body, was increased by two members to be elected in the fall. The Advisory Board will have power to request oral reports from the chairmen of standing and special committees, rather than having weekly written reports required.

In the interest of more efficient campaign management, the party decided to have four coordinators, rather than the two customary in the past. There will be an overall campaign coordinator, a "Big Four" coordinator, a legislative coordinator, and a special coordinator.

The party passed an amendment to the bylaws proposed by Tom Cordle providing for the reimbursement of party officers for expenditures connected with the party.

There was some discussion of a proposed amendment concerning the establishment of a joint membership and publicity committee. After it was specified that the committee handle no elections publicity, the amendment passed its first reading.

The bill calling for an additional $85 appropriation to the National Students Association for a tenth delegate to the national convention, which failed by two votes in the Legislature, was discussed at some length.

It was announced by social chairman Martha Morgan that the Student Party will have a pizza party at La Pizza next week, following a short meeting in Roland Parker Lounge at 7:30 p.m. All party members have been urged to attend.

Senior Orator Will Receive Mangum Medal

The annual Willie P. Mangum Medal, the University's oldest award, will be presented to the outstanding senior orator Friday at 8 p.m., according to Dave Matthews, Mangum Medal Committee chairman.

The Mangum Medal is an oratorical award given under the auspices of the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society.

Seniors wishing to enter competition for the Medal may still do so. Deadline for entrants is Thursday at 5 p.m., by which time oration topics should have been submitted to Dean Mackie's office.

Each contestant is expected to deliver an oration of about ten minutes ten minutes length. Last year's orations included such topics as: "I Speak for Democracy," "How to Become B.M.O.C. or 13 East Steps Toward Failure" and "The Effects of McCarthyism in America." Winner of last year's Medal was Carl Barrington.

All graduating seniors, including those graduating at the end of summer school, are eligible to compete. The contest is to be held at 8 p.m. Friday in Di Hall, 3rd floor, New West. It will be judged by members of the faculty, representing the economics, history and English departments..

The Mangum Medal was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

AFROTC Presents 3 Awards

Two Cadet of the Month Awards and one Military Achievement Award were presented to outstanding AFROTC Cadets during drills on April 30.

Receiving the Cadet of the Month award were Cadets William M. Richardson and William J. Smith, both freshmen.

Lewis D. Saunders, a junior business major, was presented the Military Achievement Award. Saunders is Commander of the Arnold Air Society.

The Cadet of the Month Award is given to the cadet who is most outstanding on the basis of performance, interest and appearance.

PiKAs Elect Officers

Following its elections Wednesday night, Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity named Dick Robinson as president.

Don Hearn was selected as vice president; Tom Efrid, treasurer, and Bucky Lineburger, social chairman.

Robinson appointed Tom Smith as secretary.

These officers will serve until December.

G. M. SLATE

Correction

The Daily Tar Heel would like to correct a story which was printed on Sunday morning. The paper said that two University students had been convicted in a check forgery case and sentenced to 18 months.

In reality, the bill of indictment read worthless checks and not check forgery. The sentence was 18 months suspended.

We regret this error.—Editor

Social Fee Vote Today

Coeds will vote today on whether or not social and activity fees will be levied next year.

If a special referendum is passed by two-thirds of coeds voting, the Women's Residence Council will request the administration to authorize the collection of the fees, not exceeding $5 per year, from all dorm residents.

The polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today in all coed dorms. In Kenan, the hours for balloting will be from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The legality of the collection of scoial and activity fees by each coed dorm was challenged earlied this year. A ruling by the Student Council held that the collection of fees by dorms was unconstitutional.

In action taken by Student Legislature two weeks ago, a bill was passed calling for the referendum.

On the ballot, the referendum states: "I am in agreement with the collection of social and activity fees provided they are not in excess of $5 per year." Coeds will vote either "yes" or "no."

The collection of fees through this year has been $3 from each dorm resident eachse mester.

Pulitzer Prizes; Drama Goes To 'J.B.'

NEW YORK, May 4—(AP)—The 1959 Pulitzer Prize for fiction was awarded today to "The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters," by Robert Lewis Taylor.

The drama award went to "J.B." by Archibald MacLeish.

The gold medal for meritorious public service in journalism was awarded to the Utica, N. Y., Observer-Dispatch and Utica Daily Press for their campaign against local vice, gambling and corruption.

The international reporting prize went to Joseph Martin and Philip Sanatora of the New York Daily News, for their account of the downfall of the Batista regime in Cuba.

Other Awards

The other journalism awards were:

National reporting — Howard Van Smith of the Miami, Fla., News, for his account of the cleanup of a Florida migrant labor camp.

Local reporting—Miss Mary Lou Werner of the Washington, D. C., Evening Star, for a story at edition time; John Harold Brislin of the Scranton, Pa., Tribune and the Scrantonian, for a story involving no deadline.

Editorial writing—Ralph McGill of the Atlanta, Ga., Constitution.

Cartoons—William H. (Bill) Mauldin of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

News Photography — William Seaman of the Minneapolis Star.

Literary Prizes

Besides the drama and fiction prizes, these literary awards were made:

History — "The Republican Era: 1869-1901," by Leonard D. White, with the assistance of Miss Jean Schneider.

Biography — "Woodrow Wilson, American Prophet," by Arthur Walworth.

Poetry — "Selected Poems, 1928-1958," by Stanley Kunitz.

The Pulitzer Prize for music went to John La Montaine for his "Concerto For Piano and Orchestra."

The editorial award to McGill was based on the body of his work during 1958. Specifically cited was an editorial "One Church, One School . . . ." which appeared on Oct. 13. The citation also referred to "his long, courageous and effective editorial leadership." The specific editorial referred to the bombing of a synogogue in Atlanta, Ga., and a high school in Clinton, Tenn., as the work of "rabid, mad dog minds."

Mauldin Wins Second

Mauldin received the cartoon award, his second Pulitzer Prize, for a drawing published Oct. 30 after Boris Pasternak was forced to give up the Nobel Prize for Literature. Its title was "I Won The Nobel Prize for Literature. What Was Your Crime?

Seaman's prize-winning photograph appeared May 17 and showed a dead child lying on a street. It's caption was "Too Late—The Doctor Walked Away."

The gold medal for public service went to the Utica newspapers for "their successful campaign against corruption, gambling and vice in their home city and the achievement of sweeping civic reforms in the face of political pressure and threats of violence."

"By their stalwart leadership of the forces of good government, these newspapers upheld the best traditions of a free press."

Senior Class Picks Officers, Mr. Alumnus, Miss Alumna

The election of five permanent senior class officers, Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna will be held at the senior class meeting this morning at 10 o'clock.

John Owens, chairman of the class Nominations Committee, released the names of 12 men and 3 coeds nominated for the class offices. Five other men and five coeds have been nominated for Mr. Alumnus and Miss Alumna.

From the list of 12 men, four will be elected as president, first vice president, second vice president and treasurer. (Any additional nominations from the floor will be accepted.)

In a block beside the names of the 12 men, seniors will vote using the numbers: 1, 2, 3 and 4. The 4 will be placed in a box beside the senior's candidate for president; 3, for the first vice presidential choice; 2, second vice president, and 1, treasurer.

The candidate with the greatest total number from the balloting will be president. The other officers will be indicated by the next high total numbers.

Nominees for these four offices include the following: Wayne Bishop, John Brooks, Bob Carter, Rudy Edwards, Don Furtado, Herman Godwin, Al Goldsmith, Jeff Hare, Hamp Lefler, Jim Long, Danny Lotz and Tucker Yates.

Just a simple check will indicate the senior's choice for permanent secretary. Candidates for this office are Nancy Adams, Katie Stewart and Paddy Wall.

One choice for Mr. Alumnus and for Miss Alumna will be made from these candidates presented by the Nominations Committee: Wayne Bishop, Don Furtado, Herman Godwin, Al Goldsmith and Danny Lotz, and Nancy Adams, Katie Stewart, Paddy Wall, Doug Kellam and Dee Dee DeVere.

Graduation Invitations May Be Picked Up Today

Graduation invitations may be picked up by seniors today and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on second floor of the Y Building.

The Order of the Grail, which is in charge of the distribution of invitations, has a limited number of extra invitations which will be sold today and Wednesday.

"INHERIT THE WIND" — Shown above are Lloyd Borstelmann, Douglas McDermott and Fred Sitton in The Carolina Playmakers forthcoming production of "Inherit the Wind" scheduled for The Forest Theatre, May 7-9 at 8:30 p.m. "Inherit the Wind" tells the dramatic story of the famous "Scopes Trial" of 1925. Borstelmann appears as Drummond (Clarence Darrow in the original court proceedings) and Sitton plays the role of Brady (William Jennings Bryan). Tickets for "Inherit the Wind" are $1.50. They will be available at The Forest Theatre box office on performance evenings only.

FILL'ER UP — Linda Biser serves punch to thirsty parents during Alpha Phi Omega's ninth annual Parents' Day held yesterday. Nearly 1,500 parents and visitors sat under Davie Poplar to hear Vice President William D. Carmichael tell of University traditions and aims. Military reviews, open houses in the various students residences, UNC glee club and band concerts, exhibits and displays highlighted the day. "Thank heaven it's over!" said APO Parents' Day chairman Larry Hayer. Hayer has been chairman of the fraternity's major service project for the past two years. No-No-No!

The first item of business which must be cleared up concerning the voting which will be going on in women's dormitories today is that this is not a referendum. It is being called a referendum by all concerned, yet the passage of a referendum can be accomplished by a simple majority of over one half. Yet today's "referendum" strangely requires a two thirds vote for it to be considered passed. Therefore, it is plain that we are faced with a special election, not a referendum. But, all of this is neither here nor there. The issue at hand is whether this special election should pass or fail. We say that women students should defeat it.

According to Miss Kay Boortz, chairman of the Women's Residence Council, the social fee which will be collected from women students if this election passes will be used for the following 15 items:

1. social events
2. Yack contest
3. flowers for illness
4. cards for illness
5. dormitory parties
6. coffee breaks during exams
7. house mother gifts for Christmas and Mother's Day
8. maid's gifts
9. dorm president's gift at end of year
10. graduate counselor's gift at the end of year
11. Homecoming decorations
12. Beat Dook Parade
13. Valkyries entrance
14. Christmas tree
15. newspaper subscriptions for the dorms.

We feel that it is quite possible that some, if not a large portion of the girls concerned, will dislike perhaps their house-mother, their dorm president, counselor or maid. Why should they be forced to contribute to a gift for her? Or suppose, as in some actual cases, the maids have been receiving nice little gifts from individuals. Why then, must the girl still contribute to a gift for the maid at the end of the year?

And what about cards and flowers for illness? Really, this is the sweetest gesture of all. But it is only meaningful if it comes from interested and concerned individuals. If we were latent and prostrate in the Infirmary, we certainly couldn't care less if a bouquet of flowers arrived from the dorm, signed by the social chairman in the name of all of the girls in the residence. We would rather have one little weed, or perhaps a sprig of clover coming from a person or people who were interested enough to go out of their way to cheer us up, than the standard gesture from and in the name of people, most of whom don't even know we are ill.

There isn't one single item mentioned in these social fees that couldn't and shouldn't be paid for out of private solicitation in the dormitories. If the dorm wants to do something, then let it collect among those interested. But, let's not tack a fee on people who have no interest in any or all of these functions.

And what about sorority girls living in the dorms? Must they pay both a sorority and dorm social fee. If so, why?

It is the same question as athletic passbooks. No person can or should be compelled to pay for an activity or to support something in which he or she doesn't believe.

It is somewhat unfortunate that the new editor seems to have renewed his predecessors running fight with the Women's Residence Council. But, this new WRC and its officers will continue to be the target of editorial barrage until and unless they begin to have more of a regard for our minorities. When they realize that a freshman coed is the same as a senior coed, and an unmade bed is not a felony, and card playing on Sunday on the sundecks doesn't constitute a sacrilege, then this group will realize its potential and true function. Yet, as long as the WRC continues to have a maternalistic outlook, and passes little rules and regulations such as those just mentioned, we must out of concern be in opposition. We will have to keep reminding the WRC that this isn't Salem, Mass., in the 1680's but rather a great college community which prides itself on individual freedom and initiative.

To Anthony Wolf:

In the late nineties the following lines used to be chanted by college students studying the works of George Eliot:

"We're onto you Mary,
You airy old fairy
But why did you change your name?"
With apologies for a feeble parody,
"We're onto you Tony,
You brilliant young phony,
But why do you mis-spell names?
Since you don't give a darn
Good spelling to larn
To the Bad Place with Anthony Wolf!"

Letter On Referendum

Editor:

Even though I am not a girl, I think that I can speak on the referendum concerning the social fees for women, because I think that the basic question here is one of constitutionality. Even if two-thirds of the girls on campus want the social fee to be collected, which I doubt, and even if the administration agrees to collect the fee after the girls vote on it, the fee is still unconstitutional.

The University has no legal right to collect the fee. The University by law cannot collect a SOCIAL fee. At the present time, the University does collect an activities fee; strictly speaking, this is illegal too. First and foremost, the University is here to offer to its students an education and not primarily to teach them how to "become adjusted to living in a larger society."

If a girl wants to learn how to adjust—if a girl wants to learn how to socialize, she can join a sorority. We already have Graham Memorial, and if this is not enough, we should try to get a bigger student union, and not try to collect more fees.

I see no need for social fee. It may be true that some kind of fee is needed, but a social fee is not the answer. If the girls want to send flowers to the sick, all well and good. But they could collect a fee of some kind for this purpose ahead of time, and not call it a social fee.

There are many girls who live in the dorms who are members of a sorority, who will, if the fee is collected, have to pay a social fee for both their sorority and their dorm. This seems entirely out of place to me.

A girl joins a sorority to have a place where she can go for a party. A girl joins a sorority for what the many call "UNITY." A girl joins a sorority just because it is a sorority. So stop kidding yourselves, girls—you cannot make a sorority out of a dorm, no matter how much social fee you charge.

However, all other arguments aside, the fact still remains that the University cannot legally collect social fees. To do so would be a gross misunderstanding by the administration of its purpose for being here.

Donald Black

In Election Vote Yes

Editor:

As a group interested in the dormitory life of women students, Carolina Women's Council unanimously endorses the passage of the referendum to provide social and activity fees for the residents of the women's dormitories.

We feel that these fees have proved beneficial in the past and can continue to do so in the future. It is not impossible to enumerate the advantages a social fee offers to the dormitory resident. One of the main advantages is the elimination of frequent solicition for activity funds in the dormitories. Another is the provision that such a fund offers for efficient handling of social obligations to women residents in the event of illness and similar situations. Third and all important is the provision that such a fund offers for social life per se. The importance of recreative outlets for students can not be underestimated.

A uniform social and activities fee is an expedient and convenient way to provide for these needs. It is the hope of the Carolina Women's Council that each woman resident will consider these phases of the issue in making her ultimate decision.

Growth

Size At The University

Editor:

The question of size at the University has come up ever since the University was founded, with Old East as its sole building. To relieve the crowded situation of as many as six people to a room, Old South was started as a combination dormitory and class room. Because of lack of money, Old South was sixteen years abuilding.

The enrollment increased from less than one hundred in the seventeen hundred and nineties to 450 just before the Civil War. Old West, New West, and New East were built to accommodate the 450 students.

The cry of "Wolf" was raised each time the enrollment increased — to 800, a 1000, 2,000, 3,000, 5,000, 7,000 — "The University is getting too large."

Where would the former editor of the Tar Heel, and other thousands like him be today, if the enrollment had been frozen at, say 450 in the 1850's. The enrollment at the University is small compared with the enrollment of many other state universities.

The purpose of the University of today is to train the youth of North Carolina to do the complicated work in a complicated society. The old Latin school which trained people only for law, teaching, and the ministry is no longer adequate for this day and time. The youths who wish to take other than the liberal arts courses feel that they have as much right to be trained at the University as the liberal arts candidates. They pay taxes and they want to come to Chapel Hill.

There has always been a difference of opinion on the size and complexity of the University. President Venable made this commentary, back in 1900s, on the small virsus the large college:

"The very heart and soul of an educational institution lies in its teaching force and I hopefully look forward to the time when in our ideal University the excellent faculty of the present time shall have grown into a large body of strong, trained men, eminent scholars, skillful investigators, inspiring teachers. To come in contact with such men and to feel their influence will be in itself an education, and in order to preserve this personal touch and to render possible the highest development of the individual the faculty must be a large one — constantly added to as the number of students grows, so that while no student may know, possibly, all of the faculty, each student shall know his own teachers and feel that they know and understand him and are ready to direct and aid in his self-development. There is some talk these days of the greater advantages of the small college. It is easy to see that the question is rather one of small classes and that the small college with its over-worked professors and poor equipment can offer little to compare with the fine equipment, high-priced teachers, and small classes of the greater university. — So I have no fear of loss of efficiency and power from the growth at the University that is to be.

President Venable thought the University should direct the intellectual activities of the State and leave other organized activities (trade schools?) to other institutions.

He was opposed to the consolidated University. He thought that the article of the first Constitution of the State that provided "that all useful learning shall be duly encouraged and promoted in one or more universities" could be better executed under three heads than under one.

Much can be done to make the University a home-away-from-home for every student who enrolls here. This is now limited almost exclusively to the fraternity men. The first need is for attractive living rooms in each dormitory where the student may entertain his family and friends. After a long alass, steps are being taken in this direction. The second need is for a student union.

But the University needs most of all courting parlours, that is, small reception rooms in each dormitory for dating couples. At present there is absolutely nowhere that young lovers can do their petting and necking except in automobiles or out in public. Young people are going to fall in love, and, willy nilly, are going to pet, public or no public, but since it is rather disgustng for other people to have to watch this public love making, provision should be made where the couples can have some privacy. That means courting parlors, with some older person, or hostess, around, but not too much in evidence. The churches, also, could help with this problem, since they already have the accomodations. It is not necessary to have paid hostesses. Volunteer hostesses could fill a big need here as the USO hostesses did during the war.

As for radicals at the University, a few are needed as a kind of thorn in the sides of the conservatives, who might be too contented with the status quo. Radicals nearly always over-step the bounds and defeat their own ends. Because of this, there is not much chance of the radicals taking over at the University.

The Rights Of Minorities

Editor:

Thank you, Miss Boortz, for your informative letter, however, I was very aware of the nature of the bill which I spoke against. As I said in my letter, a limited segment of the campus does not have the right to set a mandatory tax on that segment when its members belong to it through no choice of their own--THE FACT THAT THEY ARE WOMEN. Regardless of how the referendum is going to come out or how it is going to be run, the legislature should have killed the bill, not on the ground that there is anything wrong with social activities, BUT ON THE PRINCIPLE THAT A FINANCIAL IMPOSITION OF THIS NATURE IS NOT RIGHT, REGARDLESS OF WHO IMPOSES IT, HOW THEY IMPOSE IT, OR WHEREVER ELSE IT IS DONE.

Consider also that some people come to the State's University for the primary purpose of obtaining an education. Obviously the University does not feel that a mandatory dormitory social program must necessarily be a part of that education. A student has a right, therefore, to live in the University's dormitories without being harassed by a mandatory social fee. If some of the students want to join social organizations and social activities, that is fine. If dormitory residents want to organize social activities, that is fine. BUT NOT ONE OR ALL OF YOU HAVE ANY RIGHT TO MAKE ANY INDIVIDUAL SUPPORT OR PARTICIPATE IN A SOCIAL PROGRAM.

I have heard a lot of talk lately about "double-standards" at Carolina and about the desire of some of the women to be treated more like adults, or at least a little less like children. I am all for them. Of all the things I am proud of as a student at this University, it is my freedom of which I am most proud. Without this freedom the rest suffers and there is no true test of what is gained. Unfortunately the women here do not enjoy this degree of freedom. They are told "you must do this" and "you must do that." True, we are all told to do a number of things, but the tradition of our Nation and of the great universities which have grown and survived with our nation has been to keep the "you must's" at the minimum so that the individual can search freely rather than be guided as one among so many sheep. Plato made the observation that, "The direction in which education starts a man will determine his future life." Don't you think that one good start would be to let people make their own decisions as often as possible?

Don't make the mistake of blaming the administration and the Dean of Women for all of the "double standard." I have never heard of them going to much pain to make all of the women support a social program. I can think of a few other equally petty contrivances which victimize the women here through the untiring efforts of their own elected leaders.

Not only is a vote against the social fee a vote for the rights of the minority. It is a vote against the "double standard" and for a better University.

Don Dotson

P.S.

Since I wrote this letter the legislature has changed the bill to require two-thirds instead of a majority to pass the referendum and to collect the fee in a different manner. This move in no way affects the reasons why the bill should be defeated. This is like saying that a third more votes can make more right. This is not a referendum on fractions and percentages. Every reason I have presented still stands. The bill should be defeated.

Message From WRC Chairman

To the Women Dormitory Residents:

Today is the day that you express your desire to the Women's Residence Council concerning social and activity fees. Before you mark "Yes" or "No" on your ballot it is of the utmost necessity that you understand the exact meaning behind your vote.

The bill passed by the Student Legislature made the following provisions:

Article I. The Administration be requested by the Women's Residence Council to authorize the collection of a social and activity fee from all dormitory residents.

Article II. This request can only be made by the Women's Residence Council upon the passage by the majority of the voting women dormitory residents in a referendum on the following question:

"I am in agreement with the collection of social and activity fees provided they are not in excess of $5 per year."

An amendment was added stating that a 2/3 majority be required because the W.R.C. felt that the simple majority which belongs to a referendum would not be adequate support for the request.

If the referendum is passed the W.R.C. is obligated to formally request the administration to collect the fee. It would then be collected as a part of the room rent as is the men's fee and would go into one fund in the Student Activities Fund office. The money would revert back to the dormitories in direct proportion to the number of residents.

There are several advantages to collection in this manner. First, girls would not be immediately plagued to pay the fee upon entering the dorm. Second, instead of each dorm having an account costing them separately, money will be saved by maintaining a single account.

Note that the $5 PER YEAR, $2.50 PER SEMESTER amount stated is already $1 lower than previously. Women's Residence Council will seriously consider whether or not this amount can be further lowered. The amount cannot under any circumstances exceed the stated amount without another vote of those concerned.

We have been concerned with the problem of social ant activity fees for some time and feel that we have finally come up with the solotion. We would not have asked for this referendom if we did not feel that the dormitories need these fees in order to coordinate dormitory activities. We urge you to think of the complications which will arise without a fee such as frequent requests for contributions and the lack of ready source of funds for some immediate need.

Of course, you must remember that even with a fund it cannot be successful unless you back the projects taken on by your dormitory and accept your share of the responsibility. It is up to each of you to elect a good treasurer to manage your money. It is up to you to elect a good social chairman and it is up to you to speak for the benefits which you desire from this fund. If you do speak for your wants and act as an integral part of your dormitory community there are maximum benefits to be gained from these fees.

WE URGE YOU TO CONSIDER BOTH THE PRO AND CON OF THE SUBJECT AND MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL WE URGE YOU TO VOTE. WE WANT TO HEAR YOUR VOICE AND WE WILL STAND BEHIND YOUR WISHES.

Sincerely, Kay Booortz
Women's Residence Council

Tennis Team Captures ACC Title By Defeating Wake Forest, 9-0

WINSTON-SALEM — The Carolina tennis team wrapped up its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference championship here yesterday with a 9-0 whitewashing of Wake Forest.

For the Tar Heels the victory marked their seventh win in conference play without a loss and their 12th win of the season against three setbacks.

The match with the Deacon was the last test on the schedule for the Tar Heel net crew with only the ACC tournament left on the slate.

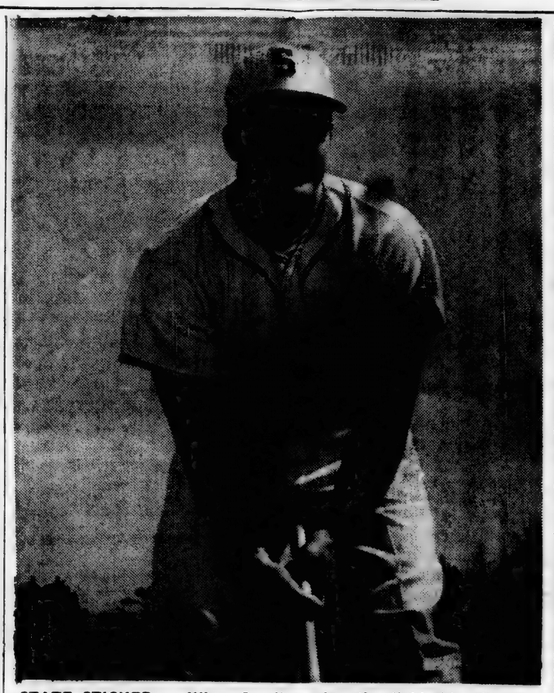
In the surprise match of the day Carolina capt. Geoff Black whipped Wake Forest's Bill Cullen 6-4, 6-4. For Cullen, the defeat marked the first time this year that he has been downed in conference play and only the second time against all competition.

Sophomore Bruce Sylvia, playing in the number two spot, licked H. V. Nelson 6-1, 6-3 for his 14th singles win of the campaign. Sylvia has lost but one singles match all year long, that to Mohammed Nasim of Clemson.

The Tar Heels got two complete shutouts in the doubles where Black and Ben Keys won 6-0, 6-0 from Jim McCain and Kieffer Gaddis while Phil Causey and Walker Lockett were doing the same to Howard Shook and Jerry Mitchell.

The Summary

Singles — 1. Black (C) defeated Cullen 6-4, 6-4. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Nelson 6-1, 6-3. 3. Keys (C) defeated McClain 6-2, 6-3. 4. Happer (C) defeated Gaddis 6-1, 6-1. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Shook 6-3, 6-4. 6 R.icks (C) defeated Mitchell 6-0, 6-3.



STATE STICKER — When Carolina takes the field this afternoon at 3 o'clock one of the men it is sure to face will be State centerfielder Don Hafer. In the first meeting between the two clubs Hafer got two of the five Wolfpack hits.

Golfers Shoot For Eighth Victory Against Deacons

By J. R. BROWN

Carolina's golfers host a strong Wake Forest golf team this afternoon at Finley Golf Course. The Deacs are currently tied with Duke for first place in the A.C.C. with a 5-1 record. They are 11-1 for the season. The Heels bring a 7-3 mark into the match. All three losses were at the hands of A.C.C. teams.

The linksmen returned home Sunday after playing in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament in Athens, Ga. They finished in eighth place, four strokes behind the seventh place Wake Forest squad.

The lineup for the match will be the same as in the past few meets. Ed Justa will play number one man E.d made a fine showing in the Southern, as did his playing partner Bob Galloway who holds down the number two spot. Don McMillan, who also played very well in the tournament at Athens, will play number three. Hugh Goodman, Paul Erhardt, and Dave Sloan complete the starting six.

Wake Forest boasts two fine golfers in Phil Weichman and Ronnie Thomas. Both are sub-par strokers, especially under competition. Along with those two men they have Tommy Helms, Tom Taylor, Doug King, and Yates Williams. All together this crew spells trouble for the Heels. A very close match is foreseen.

Clemson comes to Chapel Hill on Thursday. The Tigers hold the lone victory over Wake Forest. Follow the Clemson match, the annual A.C.C. tournament will be held here with the Heels acting as host.

Frosh Tracksters Win

Carolina's freshman track team avenged last week's lost to Duke yesterday by overpowering the Blue Devil frosh 84-47.

Tar Heels Seek Seventh ACC Win

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Right back in the thick of things after their weekend victories over Maryland and Virginia, the Tar Heels will tackle State this afternoon at Emerson Stadium in the start of a frantic drive to try and overhaul Wake Forest before the season ends.

Although Carolina's 6-4 conference record is not impressive, it is good enough to put them in third place behind the Deacons and Clemson. In the all important lost column, however, the Tar Heels are two games behind Wake Forest but since the Tigers have dropped five contests they are already out of the race.

At this point in the season the "ifs" start playing a major part. If the Heels are to tie Wake they must have another ACC team lick the Deacons and then turn the trick themselves.

Reitz Bows

In defeating Maryand 2-1 last Friday the Tar Heels beat one of the best pitchers in the league in Dick Reitz. Carolina hurler Wayne Young once again found himself in the same position of not only having to pitch the game but also bat in the winning run.

Young, who is now 4-1 on the season, has been named by Coach Walter Rabb to start today's game against the Wolfpack. The junior righthander has allowed but one run in the last seventeen and a fraction innings he has hurled to cut his ERA down to 2.4.

The Wolfpack will enter this afternoon's contest with a 4-7 conference record. Surprisingly enough, the Pack, which is currently in seventh place, owns two wins over Clemson. The latest, a 9-2 victory knocked the Tigers out of a shot for the title.

Overby Likely Starter

State Coach Vic Sorrell will most likely make lefthander Jim Overby his choice to begin the game. When Carolina defeated State 5-2 on April 18 Overby hurled six innings in relief of Wilson Carruthers limiting the Tar Heels to two runs on five hits during that period.

Rabb should open with an infield of Vaughn Bryson (.220) at first, Larry Craver (.267) at second, Ferg Norton (.250) at third, and Harold Workman (.217) at shortstop with Al Baldwn (.324) doing the catching.

GEORGE WASHINGTON TENNIS

Singles — 1. Black (C) defeated Jim Tarr 3-6, 6-2, 6-1. 2. Sylvia (C) defeated Jack Tarr 6-4, 6-3. 3. Leibowitz (GW) defeated Keys 6-4, 6-4. 4. Happer (C) defeated Whitehead 7-5, 7-5. 5. Lockett (C) defeated Silverstone 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. 6. Garrison (GW) defeated Ricks 6-1, 6-0.

Doubles — 1. Sylvia and Happer (C) defeated Tarr and Tarr 3-6, 12-10, 9-7.

REV. PAUL HENRY

Theologist Will Speak In Carroll Hall Tonight

World-renowned scholar the Rev. Paul Henry, S. J., professor of theology at the University of Paris, will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in a public lecture in Carroll Hall.

The third of the William Gaston series, under sponsorship of the UNC Newman Club, Father Henry will speak on "Platonic Trends in Western Thought and Mysticim."

Father Henry will trace the influence of Platonic thought on such mystical writers of the West as St. Augustine and St. John of the Cross. Father Henry has delivered this lecture at Harvard and Oxford.

A native of Louvain, Belgium, Father Henry has become known or his scholarship and for his dramatic power on the lecture platform.

He holds degrees in philosophy, theology and sacred scripture from he University of Paris, the Gregorian University and Biblical institute of Rome.

Father Henry's scholastic fame is based principally upon his editorship with Profesor Schwyzer of Lucerne, Switzerlnad, of the manuscripts of the chief neo-Platonist philosopher, Plotinus, who lived and taught during the third century A.D.

In addition, Father Henry has written "The Vision at Ostia in the Life of St. Augustine" and "The Place of Plotinus in the History of Thought," an introduction to the revised McKenna translation of Plotinus.

Forthcoming in 1960 will be his "The Christian Idea of God and Its Development," which consists of his 1955 lectures at Oxford University.

At Duke University he is currently visiting professor in philosophy, a post which he has had also at the univerities of Pennsylvania, Fordham, Oxford and Louvain. He has spoken also at Cambridge, Liverpool, Kiel, Bonn, Heidelberg, Rome, Columbia, Harvard and St. Louis.

More On Grad Invites

Seniors may secure their graduation invitations today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the second floor of Y Building.

The invitations are being distributed by members of the Order of the Grail, which will be selling a limited number of extra invitations.

Lynch Victim Shot To Death

POPLARVILLE, Miss., May 5 — (AP) — A coroner's jury today ruled Negro lynch victim Mack Charle Parker was shot and killed "by person or persons unknown."

The shirt-sleeved, six-man jury ruled:

"Death apparently was caused by two one-quarter inch high speed projectiles which entered the victim's body."

An FBI agent indicated earlier Parker's body had two holes, one in the side and the other near the breastbone.

Agent Joseph M. Myers said there were no signs of any fractures or holes in Parker's skull.

Myers said there was a hole in Parker's right side about the fifth rib and another at his breastbone. Both penetrations went through the body.

Myers also testified Parker had a fractured rib but gave no indication whether it was a result of a beating or possibly from being shot.

FBI agent J. E. Smith testified Parker's top layer of skin was missing when the body was pulled from the Pearl River near Bogalusa, La., yesterday. He added, however, there was enough skin on some fingers with which to make a comparison of Parker's fingerprints.

Godwin, Wall Get Top Posts In Permanent Senior Class

Herman Godwin and Paddy Sue Wall were given two top posts in the permanent class of '59 by seniors in their elections today.

In a meeting in Memorial Hall Tuesday morning seniors voted Godwin permanent class president and Mr. Alumnus. Miss Wall was elected permanent class secretary and Miss Alumna.

Godwin is past delegata of the Order of the Grail. Orientation Chairman 1958, Order of the Golden Fleece, Order of the Old Well, Phi Beta Kappa and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity president.

Miss Wall was secretary of the 1958-59 student body, member of the Valkryes, Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and the winner of the Jane C. Gray Award in 1958 as outstanding junior girl.

Other results of the election announced Tuesday afternoon at the Patio were Al Goldsmith, first vice president; Don Furtado, second vice president and Jeff Hare, treasurer.

Al Goldsmith is a member of the Order of the Golden Fleece, past president of the Order of the Old Well and past chairman of the Carolina Symposium. He is a member of Chi Phi fraternity.

Furtado was president of the 1958-59 student body, vice president of the 1957-58 student body, president of his sophomore class, and a member of the Order of the Old Well and the Order of the Golden Fleece. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Hare was presient of the senior class this year, a student legislator and a member of the Order of the Old Well and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Former Football Coach Contributed To Sports

During his years at Carolina, the late William McKinnon Fetzer made many contributions to sports.

The popular former coach died Sunday in a Durham Hospital. Several UNC faculty members went to Concord for the funeral Tuesday.

Before coming to the University, Mr. Fetzer coached at Fishbourne and Staunton military academies in Virginia, at N. C. State College and at Davidson College, his alma mater.

From 1921 to 1925 Mr. Fetzer, with his brother, Robert A. Fetzer, as co-coach, compiled an excellent football record at UNC. During a period of five seasons they attained 30 wins, 12 losses and 4 ties.

The Fetzer brothers operated Camp Sapphire in Brevard for many years. This was one of the first boys camps in the state.

Mr. Fetzer lived for many years in retirement in Chapel Hill. He was well-liked by both his neighbors and former students.

Survivors include his son, Capt. W. M. Fetzer Jr. of the Air Force, and his brother, Robert A. Fetzer, of Chapel Hill, for whom Fetzer Field on the Carolina Campus is named.

UP Committee To Interview

Interviews for a University Party Legislature seat and other party offices will be held today from 3 to 5 p.m. and Thursday from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial.

The interviews will be held by present members of the UP Executive Committee. An appointment is not necessary.

A legislative seat will be vacated in the Town Women's district after the close of the present legislative session Thursday night. Requirements needed to fill this position are a "C" average and at least 25 hours in the last two semesters and town residence next fall.

A chairman and four other member are needed on the UP Membership Committee. Hank Patterson, chairman of the UP, said this committee will "be responsible for contacting incoming students, other prospective members, and former party members; and checking GMAB activity cards in the fall."

The Publicity Committee and the Executive Board of the UP each need four members. A file clerk is also needed.

Five Seniors Elected To Journalism Society

Five seniors in the UNC School of Journalism have been elected to Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism honor society. They will be initiated at the Press Club Awards Banquet May 11.

Those elected are Joan M. Brock, Burlington; Ann Frye, Hickory; T. Parker Maddrey, Seaboard; Paul F. Rule, South Norfolk, Va.; and Donald L. Shaw, Waynesville.

Excellence in scholarship is the prime criteria for the selections, only the top 10 per cent of the class being eligible for the honor.

Referendum Bulletin

A special referendum giving power to the Women's Residence Council to request social fees passed by the necessary 2/3's last night, as the votes totaled 286 for and 113 against out of 399 votes cast.

IDC Will Appoint Committees Tonight

Appointments to Interdormitory Council committees will be made at tonight's IDC meeting at 7 o'clock in Phi Hall, New West.

The IDC will also consider proposals for an amendment to the by-law of the IDC Court and for a coordinator to work with the Orientation Committee.

Otto Funderburk, president of IDC, will make appointments to the following committees: Rules Committee, Social Committee, Dorm Improvements Committee, Dorm Elections Committee, Contests Committee and Intramurals Committee.

Editorial Conference Will Meet Here Soon

The Manchester Guardian's American correspondent, Max Freedman, will be the main speaker at the 10th annual N. C. Editorial Writers Conference here May 22-23.

Freedman's address will be preceded by a "North Carolina Night" program featuring Representative Watts Hill, Attorney General Malcolm Seawell, John Larkins and others. "North Carolina Looks Ahead" is the title of their panel pow-wow. They will answer questions put to them by the newspapermen.

The annual critique of newspaper editorial pages will have the opinions of "outside consumers"—Frances Gray Patton, Professor Loren MacKinney of UNC, and Prof. Lenoir Wright of Woman's College in Greensboro. Prof. Walter Spearman of the School of Journalism will preside at the critique panel.

Newspapers of the state will submit their editorial pages for the criticism of the panelists.

Cecil Prince, associate editor of the Charlotte News, is chairman of the N. C. Editorial Writers Conference, and Holley Mack Bell of the Greensboro Daily News is program chairman. Walter Spearman of UNC is in charge of the editorial page critique.

Kappa Sig Chooses Outstanding Pledges

Kean Degnon and Allen Daniels were chosen as the most outstanding pledges by the Kappa Sigma fraternity for the 1958-59 school year.

Daniels, from Goldsboro, was president of his pledge class, recreational director of the Y Freshman Camps, member of the IDC, GMAB, and UP. Next year he will be head manager of the football team and treasurer of the YMCA.

Degnon, from Daytona Beach, Fla., is a member of the NROTC, UP and chapter activities.

New Initiates In PAT

Last week Phi Alpha Theta, a national honor society recognizing excellence in the study of history, initiated six new members.

Others admitted, but not present for the installation, were Alton E. James Jr., junior, and Andrew A. Vanore Jr., senior.

The ceremonies were led by the honorary president, William Brigman, a graduate student in political science.

Women Counselors Will Meet Tonight

Special instruction of counselors and additional information for manuals will be on the final program for Women's Orientation counselors tonight at 8:30 in the Library Assembly Room.

Mrs. Pattie B. McIntyre,, librarian, will instruct the counselors for the Library tours which they will conduct during Orientation Week.

Coordinator Belinda Foy requested that all counselors please bring their manuals to the meeting in order to insert some additional information.

Party Board Passes Bills; Supports NSA

A resolution supporting the NSA and the legislative bill asking for an additional delegate to the NSA conference was unanimously adopted by the Student Party Advisory Board Tuesday afternoon.

The resolution, introduced by Bill Norton, called for the support of all Student Party legislators when the bill comes up for a vote again.

The bill received bi-partisan support outside the Legislature; however, it failed by two votes Thursday night. Student Body President Charlie Gray had spoken for it at the Finance Committee meeting, and Student Party Chairman Dewey Sheffield had expressed an interest in it. The Chairman of the University Party, Hank Patterson, voted for its passage.

Ten legislators had been absent from Thursday night's session, and the Student Party Advisory Board said that of the SP's among these members there would be enough support to insure passage of the measure should reconsideration be called for.

In addition to calling for the extra delegate, the resolution expressed support of NSA and recognition of its value to the campus.

Academic Ruling Passed By IFC

By A. PRINGLE PIPKIN

The Interfraternity Council passed legislation which will allow a pledge only two semesters in which to make his "C" average before he must disaffiliate.

New fraternity scholarship regulations which have been passed by the Faculty Council were read to the IFC by Assistant Dean of Student Affairs Sam Magill at the meeting Monday night.

New Regulations

The new regulations require.

1. At the end of the fall semester of 1959 at least 60 per cent of the actives of a fraternity must have a "C" average,

2. At the end of the spring semester at least 70 per cent of the actives must have a "C" average.

3. At the end of the fall semester of 1960 and thenceforth at least 80 per cent of the actives must have a "C" average.

The first failure to maintain this standard will result in an official reprimand and warning; the second violation will result in loss of rushing privileges in the following semester and until the grades have been brought up to the standard.

"C" Average Not Accumulative

The "C" average is for each semester, not an accumulative average. The "C" average for initiation will be maintained.

Work done by individuals during summer school will have no effect on the semesterly computation to determine if a fraternity can meet the academic standards.

These regulations were drawn up by the standing faculty committee on fraternities and sororities.

"The faculty committee (on fraternities and sororities) is not out to ruin fraternities; by in large the faculty does not wish to see fraternities destroyed but to see them justify their existence on grounds other than purely social," Magill explained.

Deferred Rush Defeated

It was revealed that the deferred rushing sub-committee of the committee on fraternities and sororities recommended that rush be deferred for one year, but this proposal was defeated when brought before the full committee.

Magill said the committee decided that rush was not the sole factor affecting scholarship and that the fraternities should have a chance to improve their grades.

The IFC regulation concerning "bull pledges" will have no affect on the present "bull pledges."

Disaffiliation

After a pledge has been disaffiliated from one fraternity he can not join any fraternity until he has made his "C" average.

Disaffiliation means that "the student will not eat his meals at the fraternity, pay many fraternity bills, participate in intramurals for the fraternity or have any active part whatsoever in the fraternity."

The IFC also voted to have pledge day on Friday, Oct. 2. The next IFC meeting will be this coming Monday.

More Cabinet

Jack Raper, YMCA president, has announced five further appointments to the YMCA cabinet for the coming year.

The newly named chairmen are Edwin Taff, International Relations Committee; John Snyder, Public Relations Committee; George Seastrom, Raleigh Visitation Committee; Wendell Manuel, Gravely Sanitorium and Memorial Hospital Committee; and Don Black, Conference Committee.

Taff, a sophomore, will be in charge of the committee which sponsors speakers, formums, discussions and literature in the area of international understanding. The Public Affairs Committee, under Snyder, will plan for speakers, formus and other programs on public affairs. This year the committee brought news commentator Edward P. Morgan to the campus.

The committee headed by Seastrom, a freshman, will organize recreation and entertainment for the patients at Dix Hill Hospital in Raleigh. Manuel, another freshman, will head a committee providing similar service for the patients at Gravely Sanitorium and Memorial Hospital.

Black's committee will sponsor weekend conferences for students throughout the year.

Dream Girl Of Theta Chi

Jo Ann Simmons is the 1959 Dream Girl of the Alpha Eta chapter of Theta Chi fraternity.

She was honored at the annual Dream Girl Dance at the Chapel Hill Country Club Saturday night.

Miss Simmons is from Pollocksville and is pinned to Roger Koonce, Theta Chi vice president. She is a sophomore in the School of Nursing.

Awards were presented at the dance to the outstanding pledge, Frank Coffey; outstanding senior, Randy Maddux; pledge scholarship, Bill Dawes; intramurals contribution, Bill Ott; and outstanding contribution to the fraternity during the year, J. C. Byrd.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

John Daily Lyon, Cynthis Stokley, Nancy Wills, Thomas Fraley, Joe McKinsey, Pravir Roy, Howard Mayo, Lewis Brown, Archie Glenn, Westley Smithman, Franklin Jones, William Owens and James Early.

One-Act Play Is Featured In Spectrum

A one-act play "Moselle and the Laurel Bush," by George Hill, a graduate student in the UNC drama department, is featured in the second issue of Spectrum which went on sale Monday.

On the whole the magazine includes a greater variety of full page art work and more illustrations than in the first issue.

Editor Ted Crane, in commenting on Spectrum, said, "The magazine Spectrum is now well established and to judge from recent sales, well supported by the student body.

"At present we need staff members for the coming year, and persons interested in working with Spectrum should contact the editor or any member of the staff by next Thursday, May 14. Although the topics of sex and religion treated in the various poems of this issue have been severely criticized, I look forward to the continued success of the magazine in the years to come."

Students will be able to purchase Spectrum at Y Court today and Thursday at the regular price of 35 cents. The magazine may also be bought at the Intimate Bookshop, Jeff's and Sutton's drugstore. Copies of Spectrum will not be sold next week.

MORE "INHERIT THE WIND" — "Yer ancestors was worms," says Howard, played by Jock Lauterer, as he taunts Patricia Simmons in the role of Melinda in The Carolina Playmakers outdoor presentation of "Inherit the Wind," opening Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in The Forest Theatre for a three-performance run. The story of the Scopes evolution trial, "Inherit the Wind" features a cast of 50 students and local residents. Tickets for the show are $1.50. They will be available at The Forest Theatre box office on performance evenings only. (U.N.C. Photo Lab)

Student Solons Tight On Purse

Last Thursday night, the Student Legislature took action on two blils worthy of comment. Both were defeated for reasons beyond our comprehension. The first was to provide an additional $85.00 to the fund to send Carolina delagates to the National Student Association Congress in Evanston, Ill. The second was an appropriation of $78.00 to the Junior Class for a Junior Day.

On the first it seems a bit illogical that a school which has supplied the NSA with two national presidents and scores of lesser officers, and currently has two officers for the Carolinas-Virginia region should suddenly decide that to send a full delagation to the Congress is an unnecessary expenditure. It seems that this is a further manifestation of grumblings on the part of students who are not acquainted with the NSA program, and who consider that it does them little good. If the organization is good enough for a couple of hundred schools around the country, its certainly good enough for Carolina.

As it currently stands, Carolina will send nine delagates to the two week Congress in late August and early September. A full delagation for this University would have called for twelve. Even with the $85.00, we could only have had ten. With the situation as it stands, we are, in all probability, going to send seven people automatically, these being the Big Four, assistant to the president, editor of the paper and the yet unnamed NSA coordinator. This is only right; yet, there is a need for more. There should be five more positions open to interested and qualified students, instead of two.

In a time when NSA's prestige is at a low point on this campus, we must be fully represented, so the delagates can return home and tell their constituents the true story behind NSA, that it is not pink, that it is not at all subversive, but in reality a potentially powerful organization which can be of service either directly or indirectly to every student on this campus.

As for the bill to appropriate $78.00 to the Junior Class, there is little doubt that it deserved to pass. Junior Class President Wade Smith and his officers have done a commendable job throughout the tenure of their office. The scholarship program which they have founded along with the freshmen and sophomores will be truly unique when it goes into operation next year. Possibly the hesitency on the part of the class officers to announce the nature of the program was a handicap to the junior's efforts to secure funds. Yet, as we know full well, Smith and the junior officers have certainly fulfilled one half of their pre-election objectives. They have done something for the University. And now, they simply ask for a chance to do something for their class.

It is a shame for the Student Legislature to be somewhat unaware of their efforts, and the efforts of the officers of the other three classes to accomplish something worthwhile this year. We will never object to the Student Legislature keeping a close eye on finances. But, when a group comes before that body with a good purpose and a record of accomplishment and is denied a piddling $78.00, we think that they are a little too tight with the purse strings.

Adding it up, the student solons, by saving a mere $163.00 the other night, lost far more in good programming and activities for groups that are worthy of more than a monetary slap in the face.

Carolina Caucus

Norman Estes Smith

One of the members of the Student Legislature has mentioned to me the reason why he voted against Rep. Crownover's bill to require legislators to attend dorm and fraternity meetings. The reason he gave was that his consituents did not want to be bothered by him telling what the legislature is doing because they do not care about the issues involved in the bills before the legislature or the actions taken by the legislature. Since he represents them then he stated he should vote against a bill which would be against their wishes. This is contrary to a basic obligation of an elected representative in a democracy; the obligation to lead.

Representative student government does not mean to follow the attitude of the majority of students on this campus. Many students on this campus do not care whether student government exists or not, and a very sizeable group are completely apathetic toward student government. Should our campus government be "of the apathetic, for the apathetic, and by the apathetic?" No, rules of this type can only lead to the destruction of student government becaue the future of student government depends on interest. There are specfic serious problems facing this campus which can only be solved by interest and participation of students and not by the "who cares" attitude. The future of this university and the happiness of the students here depends on their solution.

What then does representative government mean? It means what it meant to those who campaigned for its adoption: government action in the best interests of all the people and not in the interests of a particular group. Student leaders have the responsibility to decide issues in the best interests of students and in the best interests of the university as a whole. It is certainly in the best interests of the students to know about student government since the future of this university and its students depends on the decisions they make at election time and the participation of them in student government. It is the responsibility of every student to know about his government and the responsibility of every elected student representative to keep his constituents informed on campus issues and the actions of a body of which he is a member representing them. It is a representatives obligation to lead not follow.

Dissatisfied Dorm Resident

To the Editor:

We were interested to read the article in the DTH of April 28 concerning the dormitory resident counselors. The idealistic picture painted in this article is not quite ture to life The treatment our resident counselor gives our hall is far short of the description, and we would like to protest the waste of money involved in such a counselor.

It is realized that many of these student helpers are performing with ability in their capacity. However, we feel that there is a need for some kind of board which would oversee and investigate the students' feelings about the job their dormitory counselor is doing.

The "resident" counelor on our hall definitely does not spend twenty hours a week to help the students. The only time he is ever observed is when he is yelling at some shenanigans which his negligence in his capacity has been partially responsible for. As the situation now stands, few students on this floor would ever take any problems to this "advisor," as he has never won our respect or friendship.

It is realized that some of these fellows are doing commendably in their task of giving wise counsel to the student, and that many of them could not attend school without the money from their job. However, we feel that it would be better for those who do not fit into the job to find other employment, rather than receive $1200 they do not deserve from the fund-starved university. This will prevent any loafing on the part of the counselors; and the students will not have to struggle alone with their problems because of such "silent Sams."

Disatisfied Dorm Residents

"If He Ain't Running, He's Sure Doing Some Fancy Riding"

Neither Black Nor White

But Mostly Shades Of Gray

Norman B. Smith

There once was a man who lived in a forest. (It is not important who the man was because he could be men and it doesn't matter when because it could be was and is and will be, nor does it make any difference about the forest because it could be this sphere, though with rockets and cameras — the fuel gatherers are getting desperate now and are looking for a new forest which they will never find — they have found it really isn't a sphere, nor an ellipsoid, but sort of an irregular pineapple-shaped monstrosity it is said.) As far back as he could remember he had lived in the forest and he had always been alone. At one edge of the forest there were jagged, unscalable cliffs and at the other edge of the forest there was a bottomless abyss, but the man didn't know about these things yet. He was much too young to remember when he had been drawn out of the pit, led to the middle of the forest, and abandoned.

The forest had been cold for along, long time. He must have learned to use fire shortly after the warmth left else he would have soon frozen. To feed his fire he at first picked up dead branches nearby from the forest floor, for it was a virgin forest and there were fallen trees about. After many years he had burned all the dead branches and also the dead tree trunks in all the forest, except for those that lay past the dragon's path that made a circle just within the rim of the forest (although he didn't know that beyond the circle lay the end of the forest and the cliff and the abyss lay beyond that).

Just as the fire was about to die because all the available fuel had been burned, the man discovered that by using a sharp stone he could cut down some of the smaller trees (living ones) and could get the lower limbs off the larger trees, if he hacked at them and scraped on them enough. Sometime, probably when the fire began to die out a second time, (the chronology isn't exact) he learned how to climb the large trees and cut branches off them all the way to the very top.

Before the fire almost died out a third time, the man discovered that by lashing a heavy sharp-edged rock with honeysuckle vines to a stout stick he could fell the larger trees, so for many more years he was able to keep his fire going that way. Then, as the fire was ready to die a fourth time, the man learned to tie a different shaped stone to a longer stick and grub soil out from around the stumps so they and the roots could be burned as well. This was exceedingly hard for the ground was frozen and he had to thaw it first.

You have noticed by now how much harder it was for the man to keep his fire going, how much more ingenuity he had to employ and how much more he had to physically exert himself to stay alive. It must be remembered, too, that the man was getting older all this time and that his capacity for work had been decreasing. He was reminded of this when the weather changed and the sap ran up the trees each year, and he thought about it a great deal when he would sit down to rest, although there came a time when he hardly had a moment in which to rest. And as once the warm had changed to cold now the cold was changing to bitter cold so that it took much more wood to keep the fire hot enough for the man to stay alive.

Then one day it happened: the last of the wood was gone; even the charcoal had been burned. But one thing remained and that was to cross the dragon path. The man did cross the dread (That was one of the few things he had been born with: fear of the dragon path.) dragon path expecting that at any minute a great punishment would be sent down on him from the heavens, but nothing at all came.

The trees beyond the dragon path lasted for only a short while, however. He was full of hope at first, but then he saw the cliffs. In desperation he fled madly back across where the forest had been, seeing the fruits (which were piles of ashes) of is lifetime extend out from him in all directions as he ran. He finally came to the other end of the forest, crossed the dragon path without fear this time, and ferociously began to cut the trees there. Soon he had a new fire going ignited by the torch he had brough with him from across the forest.

Now there was no hope left in him because he felt that there were cliffs on this side, too. As he staggered past the hole where the last stump of the last stump of the last tree had been dug out, he looked for the cliffs and came to the very brim of the abyss before he realized what was there. He stood for a moment aching with fatigue, shivering with cold, dispairing with old age, and then he purposely fell forward. Nothing more is known of him. (It is only fair to tell you that the real story stops before the man got to the cliffs, a short while after he had crossed the dragon's path the first time. But if you don't believe the rest of it comes true, run back where the forest was and look for the pattern. I could have told you to ask the dragon if it is true, but nobody believes in dragons anymore.)

Harper's Bizarre

Too much has already been said about the late (great) "Sound & Fury" production — some good, some bad, all of it anti-climactic. What we have to say is not intended to cast a bad light on Oh Hellas. It could have happened at any production.

But it did happen in Memorial Hall, Sunday night.

A good friend of ours (and here friendship reaches its highest peak —he shall remain anonymous) literally ruined the life of what could have been a fine upstanding citizen: he took a child, hardly a year old, backstage.

It was obviously a man-child, for his eyes lighted up the moment he sighted the chorus girls. Already a woman-killer, he smiled impishly, and the chorines ran squealing to hold him. He was bussed repeatedly about the head and neck, and (poor soul) he loved it. He would keep one eye on his current admirer, but he would be winking at the next girl in line. He was saved from total and immediate degeneration only by the stage manager, who shooed the beauties into the dressing room.

The child, smeared with lipstick and grease paint, might have escaped merely girl-crazy, but our friend (foul corrupter!) kept him in the wings for the first act.

From the opening curtain the child's eyes sparkled as the cast filed onto and off of the stage. Occasionally he would frown if a singer hit a sour note, and his was the most agonized grimmace if someone fluffed a line.

His ruination was complete. By the third scene he was bouncing to the orchestra's beat and casting reproachful glances at laggard stage hands. He would sit back, take a deep sniff of the odors coming from the dressing room, and sigh with contentment.

When the first act curtain fell, our friend hoisted his charge to his shoulder to leave. But the harm had been done. The child had been stricken with grease-paintitis. He upstaged our friend and gave the entire company a look which obviously meant, "I shall return." And he will. Alas!

Humor & 'Oh Hellas'

Editor:

Open letter to all those who enjoyed the wit and humor of Sound & Fury's production of "Oh Hellas":

Humor as original and entertaining as that seen in this production can be found, free of charge, gracing the walls of any well-frequented public men's room. A paucity of literary skill and imagination ofttimes creates a necessity for a plethora of smut. The Greeks had a word for it, and unfortunately Hardee and Bridges seem to think it was a four letter word.

Compulsion poses two questions: (1) Is the intellectual giant necessarily bound to the limits which his society forms for its members? and (2) Does society have the right to take the life of any one of its members? Its answer to the former is an emphatic "no." And to the latter? Again, through the words of famed defense attorney Clarence Darrow (fiction and film call him Wilkie), "no". The points in question concern two brilliant young law students, Artie Straus (Bradford Dillman) and Judd Steiner (Dean Stockwell), who have committed a vicious act of violence: the kidnapping and brutal murder of 14 year old Paulie Kessler. Their motivation? To achieve the perfect crime as a part of exploring "all the possibilities of human experience."

Taken from Meyer Levin's bestselling fictionalization of the notorious Leopold-Loeb murder case ("the crime of the century"), and more directly from Levin's Broadway version of his book, Compulsion is actually a two part affair: the first half of the movie is an intense, immensely exciting detiectve story, which moves at nerve-wraking pace; the second half is concerned with the murder trial, in which, through Darrow's brilliant tour de force, the defendants are lucky enough to escape the death penalty — each gets life plus 99 years. For most, this penalty seemed more lax than could be reasonably expected. Yet, Darrow's eloquent plea for the abolition of capital punishment was good enough for the judge; and so the villains are allowed to live.

Orson Wells in "Compulsion"

The two young men make for most interesting characterizations. Linked by a homosexual alliance and an intellectual communion, they vow to create together for themselves a world of Nietzschean ideals. Already law students in their late teens, they have everything that makes for the "superman" sort of individual; each is a perfect example of the remarkably prodigious mind. However, the two are significantly unalike: Strauss forceful, sadistic, and altogether without feeling; Steiner is on the other hand, sensitive, incapable of individual action. As cold blooded Straus, Bradford Dillman is uncomfortably convincing. Every sadistic grin, every heartless glance is chilling. He is at once all calculating, all sly, every bit a devilish villain. But it is Dean Stockwell as Steiner who, in a far more subtle and demanding role, demonstrates a laudable capacity to see far into the emotional make-up of the character he portrays. Without speaking a word his stoney facial expression can denote a variety of emotions, is able to suggest much of the depth of his disastrous situation.

Orson Wells' Darrow-Wilkie is a top notch interpretation: he seems to understand the lawyer's every word, and he makes the most of a truly difficult role. Diane Varsi, in a brief but impressive portrayal as the young girl who shows Steiner understanding and sympathy, is sensitive enough. The movie also benefits from a good supporting cast, and E. G. Marshall, whose reputation as a first rate charactor actor has long been firmly established, is particularly fine as the prosecuting attorney. In short, the acting is excellent.

The film's main problem lies in its attempts at the philosophical conclusion. The trouble is not that the philosophy is out of place here, but that it is indicative of that sort of logical reasoning which, upon examination, comes much too close to emotionalism. The boys are caught because Steiner's glasses were found near the body. Is it fate or what? "God has nothing to do with it," says disbeliever Steiner. "Well, who did?" replies a speculative Darrow-Wilkie, and the film abruptly comes to a close. And, in employing such a means for exit, many of the real concerns of the film are lost in the rather pat concluson.

But Compulsion is always surprisingly intelligent, engrossing picture. It never dwells on the sensational, which would ordinarily be quite a temptation. And the mood is well caught throughout: every lighting effect, every camera device is used to create the proper atmosphere, one of depression and dissonance. The actors are every bit what they should be, and they work together with a sure awareness of each other. Few complants can be made about the script: it is exact and eloquent, taut and full of meaning. But, most of the credit must go to actors Stockwell and Dillman. They comprehend what is necessarily a highly complicated and abstruse relationship, give solid elucidations to an overwhelmingly complex and tragic study.

(Note: The figure of lawyer Darrow reappears this week in the Playmakers' production of the Broadway success Inherit the Wnd, which deals with the famed "monkey trial.")

THE MORAL DECISION: Right and Wrong in the Light of American Law. By Edmond Cahn. 342 pp. A Midland Book (MB 15). Bloomington: Indiana University Press. $1.75 (paper).

Although Mr. Cahn does not specifically consider the Leopold-Loeb case, his entire book is concerned with the same sorts of ehtical, philosophical questions with which Darrow bolstered his famous defense.

Mr. Cahn is purposely non-legal in his treatment here. His aim — and a laudable one it is — is to reveal the moral foundation of American law.

Such a treatment necessarily pursues only a limited number of problems to any depth; but at least the often-obscured basic problem of legal philosophy is raised.

'School Week' Coming; Teachers Will Attend

Arnold Perry, dean of the UNC School of Education has announced that "School Week" will be held June 9-11 here.

Teachers and administrators from throughout the state have been invited to attend. Dean Perry indicated that in view of the generally heightened interest in education on the part of non-profesional educator, the program will be open to the public.

will be "Meeting the Challenge of Talented Youth." Meetings will be held in the auditorium of Carroll Hall.

Speakers for the occasion will be Robert J. Havighurst, professor of education, University of Chicago, and Thelma Gwinn Thurstone, UNC professor of education. Each of these speakers is qualified to discuss problems involved in the education of gifted children and youth.

Professor Havighurst took his Ph.D. degree in chemistry and taught and conducted research in this area for several years. Then, becoming interested in problems of education, he changed his field of work to that of education. He is author or co-author of seven books.

Strike Scene Is Quiet; Senate To Investigate

HENDERSON, N. C., May 5 (AP)—It was quiet on the picket lines Tuesday, but developments came elsewhere in connction with the drawnout Henderson textile strike.

In Washington, Sen. Sam J. Erwin Jr. (D-NC) announced the Senate Rackets Committee will start hearings within the next three or four weeks on violence which has flared out of the Henderson labor dispute.

In Vance County Superior Court at Henderson, selection of a jury went slowly for trial of a case growing out of a picket line incident. A 50-member venire was exchausted and court officials began questioning a 20-man group to seat a jury to try Leonard Barham, a striker charged with assault and property damage.

Judge Raymond Mallard, presiding for the special three-week term of court, demonstrated his intention of preserving order by slapping $10 contempt of court fines on nine men for conversing loudly in an anteroom.

One of the nine was Luther Jackson, president of the Textile Workers Union of America local at one of the struck Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills. Another was a local policeman, Hamlin Lloyd.

Meanwhile, the strike situation was reflected to a degree in Henderson's municipal election to choose a mayor and four aldermen.

James Harold Ranes, a former policeman and son of another union local official, ran as a write-in candidate against Mayor Carroll Singleton. Ranes resigned from the city police department a few week ago and got in the race. His father is Charlie Ranes, a TWUA local president.

Singleton, who has figured often in efforts to curb strike violence, also was opposed by W. L. Adcox.

There was no new word on negotiations between management and union looking for a solution to the strike, now nearly six months old. It began last Nov. 17, after the company called for changes in arbitration under the contract.

The Senate Rackets Committee made its decision to hold hearings on Henderson strike violence at a closed meeting. Sen. Ervin said he would expect the inquiry to "look into the whole situation—the strike, the cause of the strike, and the violence."

Barham is one of a number of defendants a waiting trial on charges growing out of strike violence. The special three-week term of court, which opened Monday, was called in an effort to clear the docket.

However, slow progres in selecthow many cases could be disposed ing the first jury made it uncertain of. Former Solicitor W. Jack Hooks of Lillington, is prosecuting the cases. He was called in when solicitor W. H. S. Burgwyn, whose district includes Vance County, had to be in court elsewhere in the district.

Russians See UNC Books This Summer

Russian citizens will get a chance this summer to see first hand "what America reads," and 15 of the books that they will be examining at a Moscow display will be from the UNC Press.

Included in the six-week American National Exhibition, the exhibition, the exchange is being prepared by the American book publishing industry at the request of the U. S. Government. Some 10,000 volumes will be sent.

Opens July 4

When the book display portion of the exhibition opens on July 4 at Moscow's Sokolniki Park, Russians will see the range and diversity of U. S. book publishing and the ways books reach people at home, through bookstores and in libraries.

"Man in His Theatre," by former UNC drama head Samuel Selden, is one of 15 works which the UNC Press has been asked to supply. Two copies are being sent of the Selden book and also of the best-selling "Bridge To The Sun" by Gwen Terasaki.

Street's Book

"The New Revolution in the Cotton Economy," by James H. Street, also was requested, and three copies are to be included in the exhibit.

The other UNC Press contributions reflect wide variety in subjects, including history, political science, architecture and scholarly language studies.

They include "Chretian, Troyes and The Grail," written by UNC Prof. U. T. Holmes and Sister M. Amelia Klenke, O. P., published this year; and "Problems of Democracy in Latin America," by former Ecuadorian president Galo Plaza, who has lectured at Chapel Hill.

Southern Winner

Another book being sent is an award winner in Southern books competition: "The Early Architecture of Georgia" by Frederick D. Nichils and Frances Benjamin Johnston.

Other selections: "American Indian and White Relations to 1830," by William N. Fenton; "Separate and Unequal," by Louis R. Harlan; "The Early Empires of Central Asia," by W. M. McGovern; "Herman Hesse and his Critics," by Joseph Mileck; and "Sources and Analogues of the 'Nouvelles Recreations et Joyeux Devis' of Bonaventure des Periers," by J. Woodrow Hassell.

Russian Exhibit

While the Russians are studying American intellectual, technical and cultural life through the printed page, Americans will also have an opportunity to learn more about the USSR. A Russian exhibit will be held at the Coliseum in New York City as part of the cultural exchange.

Books for the Moscow exhibit were selected by a 15-member panel representing libraries, museum, the book trade and various institutions. Book publishing executives form the committee to actually arrange the book exhibit, which is coordinated by the American Book Publishers Council.

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

MONEY TALKS and nothing can better prove this point than one news item which came out of last weekend's Atlantic Coast Conference meeting in Greensboro. This little story is none other than the announcement that the Duke-Carolina football game, originally scheduled for Saturday November 21, has been shoved back a couple of days to Thanksgiving in order that all the country can have the privilege of looking at it on televison. Why is this being done? Simply because both schools are head over heels in love with the thought of getting the money which would come from a telecast.

Now we have nothing against televising the game, especially if the Tar Heels slaughter the Blue Devils, but we do think it is a shame that most of the student bodies of both schools won't be in the stands for the kickoff and after all what good is a Duke-Carolina game without the respective cheering sections. The students are the ones that support the team, it's their team, but this year the flavor of student backing will be lost because of a thick dressing of greenback sauce.

★ ★ ★

WHY WON'T THE STUDENTS get to see the game? Natch, the holidays, anybody would stay in dear old Chapel Hill over Turkey Day just to see a football game is crazy. This is not to say that the scholars here and in West Durham don't want to watch Duke and Carolina battle; they would love to but not on Thanksgiving afternoon. We certainly cannot blame anyone for wanting to go home over the holidays, we like the idea ourselves. Asking a student to choose between a day of freedom and a game of football, even Duke-Carolina football, really isn't fair because going home wins out all the time.

There can be little doubt about the fact that the extra cash will make up for what loss there is in the number of live spectators. Actually if the contest is just produced before several officials and a couple of sports writers it will probably still make more money than if it was held on the scheduled date. The citizens of Durham will undoubtedly turn out for the game along with the other faithful who can tackle turkey and pigskins equally well at the same time.

The ridiculous part about the whole affair is that the reason for the switch, the television offer, cannot be officially announced until the first of July. At this time all the particulars, including just how much money is involved, a fact which everyone on the inside already knows, will finally be brought out in the open. One thing we do not know is whether or not there will be a blackout of the game here in North Carolina. A yes or no reply to this question could have a definite effect on ticket sales for the game.

IT CERTAINLY IS too bad that entire mess could not have been settled long before the schedule was announced. This way it looks like the two athletic departments are going out of their way to pick up some extra money, and that's exactly what is happening. To say the least, it is certainly going to be interesting to see what comes of this little game of check and change.

Just one of the many repercussions that this switch is going to cause will be the fate of the annual charity game between the freshman teams of the two schools. No doubt the frosh players will come out ahead since they won't have to stay here and perform but will the same be true of the charity. We sincerely hope that our dismal outlook for November, 26, is wrong and that many of the fans from both camps will turn out, but if the students are not among them, then, in our opinion, the real Carolina-Duke spirit will not be in attendance, and that's something money can't buy.

Tar Heels Edge State, 3-2 Behind Young

Burgwyn's Two-Run Homer Gives Carolina The Win

Carolina co-captain Johnny Burgwyn laced a 3-1 pitch served up by N. C. State's Jim Overby high into the right field hedge in the sixth inning of yesterday's game at Emerson Stadium to spark the Tar Heels to a 3-2 victory over the Wolfpack.

Burgwyn's homer, which came with Ferg Norton on third, climaxed the inning in which Carolina did all of its scoring.

The runs produced in that one frame were enough for Tar Heel hurler Wayne Young who racked up his fifth win of the season in six decisions.

Carolina Now 7-4

The win over the Wolfpack gave Carolina a 7-4 record and kept them within reaching distance of league-leading Wake Forest. The Tar Heels are now 13-5 on the year.

State opened the scoring with a single in the fourth inning. Pack first baseman Stacy Wells smacked one of Young's pitches deep into right for a triple and scored when Carolina catcher Al Baldwin dropped the relay in an attempt to nab Wells at the plate. Up until Wells' hit State had been set down without a base knock by Young.

Big Sixth

The Tar Heels, who had loaded the bases without scoring in the third, finally got to Overby in the sixth for their three runs, Russ Hollers led off the frame with a single and after Baldwin struck out, Norton drove a triple to left to tie up the game. At this juncture Burgwyn sent the Wolfpack lefthander to the showers with his homer.

The Wolfpack jumped back into the game in the eighth inning to cut the Carolina lead to one when Don Hafer and Wells put together back to back doubles to produce another run.

Carolina will play Duke Thursday in Durham in a game which will not count in the ACC standings before taking on Virginia and Maryland at home this weekend.

Lacrosse Team Meets Duke To Close Out The Season

By DAVE WIBLE

The Carolina lacrosse club will end a short but succesful seaon this afternoon when it plays Duke at 4 p.m. on Fetzer Field.

It will be Carolina' third meeting with a Duke team. In two previous games against a combination freshman-jayvee team, Carolina won 7-4 and 6-2. In the only other game, the Tar Heels lost to the Virginia freshmen 10-4.

Since Duke's varsity season is over it is very probable that its starting unit will play here today. Up to now the Duke coach has had to save his top men for their scheduled games.

Today's game should be a close one. Duke is weak as far as good lacrosse goes and should be on the inexperienced Tar Heels' level. The Blue Devils lost to both Army and Maryland by about 15 goals and to Virginia by about ten. The Tar Heels lost by six to the Virginia Freshmen who are supposed to be almost as good as their varsity.

In the Virginia game seven of the goals scored against the Tar Heels were by the starting midfield unit which is made up of three all-American high school players. In order to beef up the Carolina midfield, the teams captain, Frank Riggs, has been moved to midfield from defense. Joe Davies, a freshman fullback playing lacrosse for his first season, ha also been moved up to the starting mid-field squad.

So the Tar Heel midfield unit, which has needed depth all season, should be up to par now. With Riggs and Davies will be Cliff Pannell. The second unit which rotates with the first every four minutes, will be Buddy Mathans, John Richards and Don Gates.

Replacing Riggs on defense will be big Jim LeCompete another footballer who is playing for his first season. With him will be Will Browne and Buddy Gould. The goalie will be Al Walters.

On attack the Tar Heels will be led by Spence Everett who is the teams leading scorer, with Les Sutorius and Joe Alexander.

Epee Friday

This Friday night promises another interesting evening with the campus epee men battling it out for their crown. Carrol Raver, last year's winner, is competing along with Bob Peebles, Clarence Simpson, and Bob Finley from the fencing team. Coach Pebly Barrow expects several others of the campus best to be on hand. The bouts will start at 7:00 p.m. in Graham Memorial, admission is free and it should provide a different and entertaining evening for any spectators or fans attending.

Golfers Hand Deacs Second Defeat, 16-11

CHAPEL HILL, May 5 (AP) — Four players broke par in Finley course here Tuesday as North Carolina upset Wake Forest, 16-11.

It was the Deacons' second loss of the season against 11 victories. Their other defeat was by Clemson.

Ronnie Thomas of the losers was medalist with a brilliant five-under-par 67. North Carolina's Paul Earhardt had a 70. Phil Wiechman of Wake Forest and Don McMillan of UNC had 71.

It was Wake Forest' last meet before the ACC tournament here Friday and Saturday. UNC, with a record of 9-3 and 3-3 in the ACC, meets Clemson here Thursday.

Durham High School defeated the UNC freshmen, 15-12. Pete Green of UNC was medalist with a 70.

Varsity Summary

Phil Wiechman, WF, beat Ed Justa, 3-0; Ronnie Thoma, WF, beat Bob Gallaway, 3-0; Best ball, WF, 3-0.

Don McMillan, UNC, defeated Tommy Helms, 2-1; Hugh Goodman, UNC, beat Tom Taylor, 3-0; Best Ball, UNC, 3-0.

Paul Earhardt, UNC, defeated Doug King, 3-0; David Sloan, UNC, beat Bill Green, 2-1; Best ball, UNC, 3-0.

Deacons Lose

DURHAM, N. C., May 5 (AP) — Duke's cellar-dwelling Blue Devils handed Wake Forest's league-leading Demon Deacons' ace title hopes a stiff jolt here Tuesday when they defeated the Deacs by 8-4.

The defeat left Wake Forest with a 7-3 loop mark while Duke is now 3-8.

Duke spotted the Deacons a one-run lead in the Wake Forest first when Jack Phillips tripled to score a tally, but came back in the third with a two-run outburst to go ahead 2-1.

The Deacons went back ahead by 3-2 in the fourth with two tallies thanks to two Duke errors and a triple by Buster Ledford who came on home to score when the throw from the outfield was wild.

But two-run Blue Devil rallies in the fourth, fifth and eighth innings sealed the first win for Duke in its last five games.

Duke starter Ron Kalish was the winner, evening his record at 4-4 for the year. He had to have help in the ninth from Lefty Bob Byers who came on after Kalish had walked the first two batters. Byers struck out two Deacons and got the third on an easy ground out to end the game.

SENATORS WIN

Chicago (AP) — Home runs by Jim Lemon, Bib Allison and Harmon Killebrew were part of a 13-hit bombardment the Washington Senators triggered against five Chicago White Sox pitchers Tuesday for an 8-3 victory.

Billy Pierce, seeking his fourth victory, was victimized in the first three innings and absorbed his second defeat. He yielded three runs on five hits, including Lemon's No. 1 homer in the third that scored Killebrew ahead of him.

From then on the 2,087 sweltering Comiskey Park fans watched Bob Shaw, Rudolfo Arias Turk Lown and Claude Raymond try to nail down Washington's bats without avail.

Bills To Foster Cooperation, Amend Legislature's By-Laws Come Before Solons Tonight

A bill to encourage meetings of legislators and constituents and a bill to amend the Student Legislature by-laws will come up at the Legislature meeting tonight.

The solons will meet at 7:30 in Phi Hall, 4th floor, New East.

The Jim Crownover (SP) bill originally required each legislator to attend meetings in the various housing units in his district.

The bill was defeated, but reconsidered and amended at the last Legislature meeting.

The amended bill encourages meetings of all legislators with their constituents.

Each legislator would then be required to submit a written report concerning his activities to the speaker of the Legislature not later than two weeks prior to spring elections.

A bill, introduced by Dave Jones (SP), to amend the Legislature by-laws would permit legislators moving from their districts during a session to retain their seats for the two weeks following disqualification.

The intent of the bill is to allow time for the vacancies to be filled without diminishing the number of people in the Legislature.

Another Jones bill, which was defeated last week, to increase the 1959-60 appropriation to the NSA delegation by $85, possibly will be brought up again tonight, according to Jones.

Concerning the bill, Dewey Sheffield, Student Party chairman, said yesterday, "I am very much in favor of the NSA bill and I urge legislators to take constructive action and pass it."

American Histories Series Edited By UNC Professor

Meridian Books, Inc., of New York, has announced the publication in September of the first volume of a new series of documentary American histories, under the general editorship of George F. Scheer, of Chapel Hill.

The first work to appear will be "The Confederacy: A Documentary History," edited by Albert D. Kirwan, of the University of Kentucky.

Other volumes in the series, to be called "Meridian Documents of American History Series," will include a general history of the United States to 1865, by Hugh T. Lefler of the University of North Carolina, in spring 1960; a companion history of the United States from 1865 to the present, by Frank W. Klingberg, also of the University of North Carolina, in spring 1960.

A history of American diplomacy, by Robert A. Divine, the University of Texas, in spring 1960; an American constitutional history, by Louis A. Pollak, Yale University Law School in fall 1960; a two-volume American intellectual history, by Alan Heimert, Harvard University, in spring 1961.

A two-volume history of American society, by George F. Scheer, editor of the series, in fall 1961; and four other titles now being planned, to be published in 1962 and 1963.

The basic purpose of the "Meridian Documents of American History Series," according to the publisher's announcement, is to make available in an attractive and inexpensive format, with brief, interpretive, unifying commentaries, the principal documents of American history.

Doctor Paid Tribute By 160 Friends

More than 160 fraternity brothers, wives, special guests, and friends have paid tribute to Dr. Roger E. Sturdevant for his contributions through the years to the Xi Psi Phi dental fraternity.

The affair was sponsored by the Beta Beta Chapter of Xi Psi Phi at the Carolina Inn over the weekend. Dr. Sturdevant has been associated with local chapters since 1914 when he was initiated into Psi Chapter at the University, and finally by his efforts to organize and foster the Beta Beta Chapter here.

As the guest of honor, Dr. Sturdevant presented the senior students of the fraternity with their pins signifying graduation. He also presented the seniors' wives a charm pendant bearing the fraternity seal.

The testimonial speech was presented by Dr. Robert J. Shankle, who has been associated with Dr. Sturdevant both as a student and fellow educator at Emory and UNC. Dr. Shankle is now a member of the operative staff of which Dr. Sturdevant is the present head of the department. Dr. Shankle's association with the guest of honor gave him ample background for a presentation which included many "parables" of Dr. Sturdevant.

SENIORS!

Today is the last day for seniors to pick up their graduation invitations.

Some 100 orders are still remaining upstairs in the Y Building. These may be picked up beteyeen 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. today.

Postmaster J. Paul Cheek of Chapel Hill said that the large invitations will require eight cents postage. Four cents is sufficient for the small invitations weighing less than one ounce.

Negro Named To Board: Pastor Leads Ballots

CHAPEL HILL — The Rev. J. R. Manley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, led the ticket in yesterdays voting for the Chapel Hill Board of Education to become the first Negro ever named to the local school board.

Named to the other two seats were Dean Henry Brandis Jr. and Grey Culbreth. In all, six sought the three school board posts. Manley received 1,125 votes in leading the field.

Named to the Town Board of Aldermen were Sandy McClamroch, F. E. (Gene) Strowd and Roland Giduz. Obie Davis, a member of the board for the past 20 years, was defeated in his bid for re-election.

Two other candidates were elected without oppostion. They were O. K. Cornwell, mayor of Chapel Hill, and William T. Stewart, judge of Recorder's Court.

French Government Grants 2 Scholarships

A French Government grant to UNC has provided two scholarships awarded this week to students in the Department of Romance Languages.

Two Seniors Win Awards For Outstanding Work

Donald Furtado

Anne Frye

Ernest H. Abernethy Prize, John J. Parker Award Given

Two UNC seniors have won coveted awards for work in the field of student government and student publications.

They are Ann Frye of Hickory and Donald A. Furtado of Garner. Miss Frye is the 1959 recipient of the Ernest H. Abernethy Prize in student publications. Furtado receives this year's John J. Parker Jr. award for unique leadership in student government.

Miss Frye, a holder of the Louis Graves scholarship in journalism, has worked on the Daily Tar Heel for two years and is presently news editor.

She was Press Club president for the past year and is a member of Kappa Tau Alpha, honorary journalism society, and the Matrix Society, honorary journalism society for women.

Miss Frye will join the news staff of the Charlotte Observer in June.

Furtado has served as student body president and vice president and as speaker of the Student Legislature. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity, the Order of the Holy Grail and Order of the Golden Fleece, the campus's two highest honorary organizations.

A member of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps, he will enter the United States Navy after graduation in June.

The Abernethy Award of a plaque and $50 cash was founded in 1942 by Ernest H. Abernethy, class of 1922, Atlanta, Ga., for the student adjudged by a committee to have done the most distintive work during the current year in the field of student publications.

Senior Day Closes With Hogan's Party

The last flings of Senior Day will be held tonight when Willy Hargraves and his combo entertain members of the class of '59 at Hogan's lake.

After the "ball" at the Patio Tuesday afternoon and night and hard, hard classes Wednesday and today, seniors need one more night of relaxation and fun before they hit the books for those finals.

So the Senior Social Committee and the Dean of Women's office are cooperating. Tonight is that night.

The Lake and grounds will be open all day for members of the class to sun, swim, fish, cook supper, and what-all.

Official activities will get under way around 8 o'clock when Willy Hargraves shows up. There will be music, jokes, fun, dancing and more music. And all this can be enjoyed by coeds and their dates until midnight.

Philanthropics Down Henderson Resolution

By HOBART STEELE

A resolution that John Cooper, president of the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills, should rehire striking workers in place of the strike-breakers now employed was defeated by the Philanthropic Literary Society at its regular meeting Tuesday Night.

Rep. Stan Black introduced the bill and spoke for its adoption. Black said Cooper forced the strike by failing to renew a 14-year-old arbitration clause in the union contract. He said that the violence present in Henderson was due to Cooper's refusal to bargain in good faith, in that he hired only a few of the striking workers back.

Rep. John Brooks protested the resolution, saying that the right to arbitration was not basic for labor unions and that only 10 per cent of American unions have such argeements.

Brooks further stated that management had a right to omit a portion of an agreement which it believed unfair to them. Management's money and that of many stockholders is involved in the operation of a business he said, and the fundamental duty of a manager is to his stockholders.

Coed Fines Discarded In WRC Action Tuesday

All coed dormitory fines were discarded in action taken Tuesday night by the Women's Residence Council.

The council also elected Jean Crewes chairman of the summer school WRC. She is a member of the council and president of the Nursing Dormitory.

The council considered all girls for the office who are now residents on campus and who will attend both summer sesions.

Under the new dormitory rule instead of fines, girls will receive up to three warnings for soft drink bottles found in the rooms, unmade beds and food not in tins. After the third warning the girl will receive a campus effective one week from the day of the next offence. This does not count as one of the five offences toward Women's Honor Council.

Kay Boortz, chairman of the Women's Residence Council, announced the appointment Tuesday of Carolyn Sikes to serve on the Student Council for next year.

Interviews Continue For UP Positions

Hank Patterson, University Party chairman, has reminded UP members that the Executive Committee will continue interviews from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Grail Room for these party positions:

A seat in Student Legislature from Town Women's district. The seat will be vacant after the close of the present Legislature session tonight. Coeds seeking this seat must have a "C" average and at least 25 hours in the last two semesters and will be a town resident next fall.

A chairman and four members of the UP Membership Committee. This committee is responsible for contacting incoming students, other prospective members and former party members to join or reaffiliate with the party and for checking GMAB activity cards in the fall.

A chairman and four other members of the Publicity Committee.

Playmakers Present 'Inherit The Wind' Tonight At 8:30 In The Forest Theater

Pictured above are Robert Ketler as Cates and Salley Pullen as Rachel in a scene from the forthcoming Playmakers production of "Inherit the Wind" to be presented in the Forest Theater at 8:30 tonight.

The Carolina Playmakers present their final offering of the 1958-59 season, "Inherit the Wind," tonight through Saturday in The Forest Theatre at 8:30.

The dramatization of the famous Tennesee evolution trial features Lloyd Borstelmann, Fred Sitton, John Sneden, Douglass Whitehill, Robert Ketler and Sally Pullen in the leading roles.

Also in the cast are Pat Simmons, Jock Lauterer, Bill Hannah, William Bailey, Margaret Starnes, Wayne Garber, Hunter Tillman, Carl Killingsworth, Carl Justice, Tommy Thomas, Darwin Solomon, Joel Gibbons, Gene Lanier, Betty Rhodes, Myra Lauterer, Herbert Drinnon, Ed Lively, James Tedder and James Poteat.

The direction of the large cast is handled by Thomas M. Patterson, associate professor of dramatic art, assisted by Craven Mackie and Sally Greene.

The complex settings of the courtroom and the street of a Southern town are designed by John Stockard, graduate assistant in the department of dramatic art. Lighting is by Jim Armacost; costumes, by Irene Smart Rains.

There are no reserved seats for "Inherit the Wind." Tickets are available at The Forest Theatre box office, beginning at 7 o'clock on performance evenings.

Final Concert By Symphony To Be On 12th

The UNC Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Earl Slocum, will present the final concert of the Tuesday Evening Series in Hill Hall May 12 at 8 p.m.

Tuesday's program will feature Mrs. Lilian P. Pruett as guest solist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C Major, K. 503, and Howard Hanson's Symphony No. 2 (Romantic).

Mrs. Pruett, graduate assistant instructor in piano in the UNC Music Department, is a graduate of the Mozarteum in Salzburg and Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Before entering graduate school as a musicology student, she taught piano at Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield, Mass.

In Chapel Hill, Mrs. Pruett has appeared on both the Tuesday Evening Series in a solo recital and on the Petite Musical Series as harpsichordist with chamber ensembles.

Mozart's piano concerto was composed in 1786 in Vienna. Scored for strings, flute, oboes bassoons, horns, trumpets and drums, it is one of the last piano concertos written by the composer.

Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., recently received the National Music Council Citation as "Conductor of a Symphony Orchestra who has rendered outstanding service to American Music." Educator, conductor and composer, Hanson has won many awards for his compositions including the Prix de Rome, Pulitzer and Alice Ditson Award.

Tar Heel Air Force Award Goes To Air Science Professor

Col. Franklin W. Swann, air science professor here, was presented the Tar Heel Air Force Award during ceremonies this week.

Col. Swann was made a member of the honorary organization known as the Tar Heel Air Force because of his many accomplishments during his tour of duty at the University AFROCT Detachment.

He has been credited with making the local AFROTC unit one of the outstanding ones in this area.

In Chapel Hill community activities, he has been in charge of the local Little League baseball team for the past two summers.

Col. Swann leaves the University in the summer to serve a assistant air inspector for MATS Headquarters at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois.

Bleached Body

The bleached body of Negro M. C. Parker, accused rapist of a white women, has been found on the Mississippi-Louisiana border in a river. The body was so bloated, water-logged and maimed that it was impossible to determine even the race of the individual, much less positive identity until an FBI fingerprint report was made available.

And, in another part of the South, four white men have viciously and sadisticly raped a young coed at a Florida Negro College. Fortunately, the culprits in this case have been caught.

Yet, the underlying issue is not to bring those responsible for these atrorious acts of violence to justice, but to reduce and indeed, to obliterate, the sort of division between human beings that can cause such acts in he first place.

UNC Budget— Money, Money

It is expected that the Joint Appropriations Committee of the State Assembly and Senate will release sometime next week its recommendations for the next biennium's budget to be awarded to the three components of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. Much of the future of the three institutions involved depends on the report of this group. Therefore, during the course of the remaining days before learning the news of what our lawmakers will recommend be appropriated to us, we will devote a large amount of space on the editorial page to this problem, hoping that through these efforts, the voices of concerned students may be heard on this crucial issue.

"The University today stands at the crossroads. More appropriately put it stands in the middle of an intersection. It knows surely that the surge of traffic will push it on, but it is reluctant to make the decision of which way to go of its own accord.

"The questions that are most major before the University today are ones of adequacy versus purpose, fragmentation versus communal organization, number versus individuality and consolidation versus planning."

These are all questions that will in one way or another be solved by the money given to the Consolidated University. For, the funds we receive will determine the excellence or lack thereof, the growth, and the extent of planning. They will either be sufficient to carry this University to greater heights, or will leave us in the void of the status quo. They will either be sufficient to keep those good faculty members we already have and to recruit new ones of high caliber, or will drive the better onto higher paying posts at other more enticing institutions. And they will either be sufficient to purchase the books, research facilities and materials to promote scholarly pursuit of the highest order, or will repel intellectualism, progress and attainment because of a lack of the necessary tools with which to gain the knowledge to go forward.

This is the choice before the legislators in Raleigh at this moment. Their's is the problem of choosing between a great university or just another school. And with this choice will go hand and hand the future of this state. For North Carolina will lack the leaders in all of the various fields unless these funds are provided. The future of this state is in reality, the future of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

Works Of Minor Poet

Dear Sir,

Noting that your paper has recently published two selections from the works of a minor poet, I respectfully submit, in hopes of publication, the complete works of one of the most minor poets I know.

T. Buie Costen

MY SIN CONTEMPLATES ANGELS

My sin contemplates angels
As you might scan a history
My sin contemplates angels
In a manner very like
The act itself
The sin has no fists but eyes
Flat twisted oval leering
My sin contemplates angels
As you might strike your sister
My sin contemplates angels
In a manner very like
The act itself
Its soaring thought squalid
Sweat beneath flimsy wings
My sin contemplates angels
As you might stroke your hair
My sin contemplates angels
In a manner very like
The act itself
Furtive, alone, in secret
Un-natural, out of perversion
My sin contemplates angels
As you might mumble I love beer
As you might cry with rage with grief with exasperation
As you might read your work
Quiet AND by yourself
Hoping you might yet make a revision
Thoughtless, out of incapacity
Helpless, out of inability
Wordless, out of incoherence
As you might construct a poem
Impetuous, unreasoning
Unique—thoughtless, best forgotten
As you might lie awake
After hours, printing
To test our credulity
My sin contemplates angels
As you might shoot a poet
Testing your skill
On small life
As you might accept your fate
My sin contemplates angels
In the vacuum of his head
Flinging words about Confusing
My sin contemplates angels
(Only when it isn't crawling)
And is resting on my shoe sole
In a manner very like the act itself.

Hammurabi Had A Code

Gary Greer

This is the paradox of student government at Carolina: the people who one week introduce a bill giving the power to the Publications Board to appoint the editor of the Yack find it necessary to introduce legislation a couple of weeks later to make student government more "representative."

Such is exactly the case with the bill introduced in legislature providing that all representatives must visit their constituents. If the legislature votes tonight in favor of this bill, it will be a frank admission on the part of its members that they are irresponsible, that they need childish rules. It is, in short, another of those "brilliant" efforts to legislate morality or goodness or something, something which can never be instituted by law, something which can be had only by education.

To some of us old democrats, the term legislator somehow implies representation. To most everyone in these United States, the fact that a person holds an office somehow means that he is responsible to those who elected him. If such is the case, and if the present legislature is not cognizant of it, then surely it must be quite a radical group, a group which apparently has very little faith in its constituency, else it would not have ratified legislation which would have taken away the right of the people to elect the editor of the yearbook.

Gentlemen, there seems to be a slight inconsistency. It appears that at least some of the members of that august group of lawmakers are either suffering from acute suspicion of themselves or of chronic suspicion of those who elected them, of those who chose them to lead, to carry the banner of better student government.

"It's Too Nice A Suit To Alter — Just Scrunch Down And Walk Like A Cripple"

Sigma Chi

Letter On Recent Derby

To The Editor:

The editors of the Woman's Handbook might be more truthful if they inserted a statement further qualifying the "Carolina Lady". In addition to her charm and genteel manners, she also possesses a certain dazed amenability—she prefers submitting to the indignities of the Sigma Chi Derby to being bold enough to complain about them.

Rather than suggest that she really enjoys her role of patsy-for-the-afternoon, I take the attitude that she is reluctant to risk being ralled a wetblanket and all-around spoil sport. The cry of "AH, be a SPORT" has been forever removed from the athetic field: it now serves as the signal for all activities directly opposed to the teaching of country, home and MOTHER. I associate it with good old Camp Nimrod for Girls, and the be-gay-when-you-fall-off-the-horse and learn-to-love-sleeping-in-a-bed-full-of-toothpaste philosophy. This attitude may be helpful if you want to learn to ride, but I could never see that the toothpaste treatment did anything for its victim beyond creating a lifetime distrust and hatred of her tormentors.

The Sigma Chi Derby is just the same old toothpaste on a larger scale (the people involved are larger), with the change that the victims know beforehand what they are getting into. The tormentors have become crew-cut young men who plan this diversion as part of our much-touted "preparation for life." No doubt this training will be handy when they are old enough to attend the American Legion and Shriners' conventions. There is always a market for this sort of thing: the "Three Stooges" aer very popular (with the ALL-CARTOON Show set); gladitorial bouts have always been heavily attended. In the case of the Derby, the combatants double as clowns, a posture which has been quite succesful in the world of professional wrestling.

No glowing report of the good fun had by all at the derby can change the character of the events in it. The handwalking contest should not need an entrant with an injured back to convince anyone that it was dangerous as well as degrading. This year's "secret event" was something from a nightmare planned by bullies for the entertainment of sadists: six girls, teetering on the shoulders of six boys, their face covered by stockings holding eggs on their heads, swatting at each other with dead fish. The participants finished the contest bloody and smeared with egg, their hands cut and scraped by the fish scales and bones.

The Derby is a disgrace to the University as a whole, as well as to those people who participate actively in it. By participants, I mean to include the sorority members who stayed away from the derby in an effort to dissociate themselves from it. If they had reasons for their disapproval, they should have voised them in their meetings.

At least one sorority nearly didn't enter the derby this year. Another's members are considering not entering next year. They probably will enter—their junior members won't know much about the derby beforehand, and enough of these new girls will be anxious to please and not too choosy about how. Arriving at the Derby, they will find that it is too late for them to back out.

The editors of the Handbook or even of the Rushing Manual might say that the Carolina Coed is anxious to "conduct hreself as a lady at all times' but one—the time of the Sigma Chi Derby, when her conduct changes radically. Is it possible that these are her true colors?

Campus Scene: A mother having a very difficult time convincing her four-year-old son that he isn't helping anyone by taking parking tickets off parked cars (so "they won't have to pay the cops").

The main trouble with mama Henderson is labor pains.

There's so durn many pre-dawn ceremonies around this place it's a wonder anyone ever goes to bed.

An un-burning issue: library lights.

The Playmakers are scheduled to give "Inherit The Wind" this week-end in the Forest Theatre, but unless they're lucky they might have to change to "The Rains Came."

"Humphrey Predicts Democratic Convention To Be Wide Open." Congratulations on the understatement of the yar, Hugh.

The University no doubt thought it was a good thing when it made it against the rules to give a quiz less than a week before finals. But the professors have jumped on it - they pile up the quizzes in those last two days and the students wind up going through finals twice each semester.

The Student Body was had, and bad, when the boys in Woollen Gym took it upon themselves to move the Duke game to Thanksgiving next year. It doesn't seem to make much of a darn any more what the students think, as long as those dollars keep rolling in.

That most wonderful of all campus organizations, the Women's Residence Council has done it again. Now coeds will be campused if their bed is unmade three times or if coke bottles are found in their rooms. Isn't it just so sweet to have someone to look after our little girls?

Add cliches: Once there was a bride that wasn't "radiant."

When this column (?) was written, the New York Yankees were in seventh place. If possible, we would like to see them finish a strong ninth.

(I SAW)

I saw a moon:
It was shining brightly
In its blue of day;
And I took its trodden path,
Straight and level on its way,
Until at end I found
An ugly, cold, unfertile ground
That but reflected light.

I saw a sun;
It was burning brightly
In its dark of night;
And I took its steep,
Winding path of spotted light,
Until at end I found
It disappeared,
And I looked out and saw the stars.

Legislative Roundup

Dave Jones

Not all pieces of legislation proposed by the members of UNC's Student Legislature are so popular and so well constructed that they breeze through the body by a unanamous vote of acceptance.

There were three measures defeated, and two refered back to the Rules Committee by action of the body Thursday night. They were all written by Representatives Jim Crownover and myself, (both SP).

The bill to appropriate $78.00 to the Junior Class lost by a two vote margin. Wade Smith and his class officers made a serious and a noble effort to prove that class officers can do something. They held a series of meetings, planned a program and set up committees to handle next year's work as the Senior Class. These committees were to have been appointed and their work explained to them at the Junior picnic on May 12th.

Wade Smith made his first appearance before the Student Legislature Thursday night. He did a competent job of presenting his case and topped his presentation off with a clever bit of humor that drew an ovation from the body. His request was not passed. But the fact that he did a lot of work and was seriously concerned with the problems facing his class cannot be denied or voted out of existance by two legislators.

The bill to appropriate enough money to send another delegate to NSA's conference at Evanston, Ill, this summer also lost by two votes. Student Body leaders in both parties were interested in the acquisition of this additional delegate, yet anti-NSA and anti-SPENDING sentiment formed a coalition that killed it.

Student Body President Gray's reasons for wanting the extra delegate are simple: There are eight regular delegates provided for in the 1959-60 Budget; by tradition he must send the Vice President, David Grigg, the Secretary, Sue Wood, the Treasurer, Bob Bingham, the Assistant to the President Jim Crownover, DTH Editor, Davis Young, and the NSA co-ordinator (unannounced). He will go himself under a seperate appropriation. This leaves only two appointments out of the entire student body to be made by his own choice.

Gray also feels that he should send at least one student leader who is anti-NSA to the convention. He feels that certain misconceptions about NSA could be cleared up, and that the persons who formerly led the fight against NSA could possibly be active in promoting the good that its ideas can do the campus.

He wanted a total of ten people in his lelegation, and endured, what is in my opinion, undue abuse and expression of a lack confidence in his opinions by the members of the Finance Committee and certain people who spoke on the floor.

Two votes were decisive in this action too.

The bill to provide machinery to have the rules committee review controversial presidential appointments was just plain unpopular. No one, outside of the author, felt that there was any need for it, so it died by a voice vote.

The bill to allow legislators to hold their seats after moving out of their districts went back to committee. The author felt that there was so much controversial stuff coming up, that the session would be long and hot, and that there were some minor changes in wording that he wanted made in a proposed amendment so he asked to have the bill returned to committee.

The "mosquito" bill was withdrawn by the author after he had taken certain steps toward the aleviation of the problem.

Finally, this leaves the Jim Crownover - Ralph Cummings - Jim Scott bill on compulsory attendance at meetings with constituencies.

The parliamentary maneuvering on this bill was very tricky. First, the defeated bill had to be revived. This was done by a motion of reconsideration by one of the legislators who opposed it the week before.

Discussion ensued. A motion to have the bill tabled was ruled out of order.

Jim Scott (SP) then introduced a complete set of articles to replace those in the old bill. I had read those articles in Ralph Cumming's handwriting prior to the writing of the last column. I felt then that they were going from bad to worse in an impossible situation. An effort was made to show the proponents of this bill what was basically wrong with it, but to no avail.

Scott's (or Cumming's) amendments were accepted. Then a motion to send the whole thing back to committee was made and recognized.

It was argued that the proposed changes were not in the proper form, that no committee had seen them, and that the legislators hadn't had a chance to look them over.

Technically, I feel that a bill cannot be constructed like this one and be legal. It calls for a long string of rules that require certain action on the part of the legisaltors, and provides penalties that could be invoked if they do not take that action. Then in its last article it says let the Rules committee draw up changes to make the provisions a part of the by-laws.

I am afraid that this sort of thing cannot be legally done. By-laws changes must be drawn up and presented as such and passed by TWO THIRDS of the body.

If Crownover and company can't get a simple majority to pass a bad bill, I wonder where they think they are going to get TWO THIRDS to pass a worse one.

Carolina And Duke Play In Exhibition

By ELLIOTT COOPER

The Tar Heel baseballers take a day off from the frantic Atlantic Coast Conference pennant race today to meet Duke at Durham in a game which will not count in the league standings.

In their two previous meetings each club has come out with one victory to its credit. The Blue Devils won the first one 3-2 as they handed the Tar Heels their first home loss in nineteen games. Carolina avenged this defeat a little over a week ago when it edged Duke 2-1 behind lefthander Ben Hammett.

Coach Walter Rabb's team is currently in second place in the ACC with a 7-4 record while Duke is last having won only three games while dropping eight. The Blue Devils last victory, an 8-4 win over league-leading Wake Forest, on Tuesday, was a great break for the Heels as it brought them to within one game of the Deacons.

Five Game Streak

The Tar Heels enter today's play with a five game winning streak, their longest of the year. At the beginning of the year Carolina won four in a row before losing to Illinois 11-3 in the Florida State Tournament.

Rabb has picked co-captain Ben Harding to start on the mound for his team. The big lefthander, who is 1-2 on the year, was tagged with the loss in the first Duke game as he worked 7 and 2/3 innings yielding all three runs and six hits.

The Carolina hurlers have become about the stingiest in the league over the past several weeks as they have allowed but nine earned runs in the last seven games. As a group the Tar Heel pitchers have a 3.0 ERA.

Tar Heel Lineup

Despite the fact that today's game amounts to about an exhibition, Rabb is sticking to his usual lineup with possibly one switch. In the infield Carolina will open with Vaughn Bryson (.233) at first, Larry Craver (.266) at second, Ferg Norton (.271) at third, Harold Workman (.222) at short and Al Baldwin (.293) doing the catching.

Johnny Burgwyn, who's two-run homer proved to be the difference in Tuesday's win over State, has the top batting mark among the regulars at .327. He will hold down one of the three outfield positions along with Gerald Griffin (.224) and possibly Russ Hollers (.318).

Tomorrow the Tar Heels swing back into league play by hosting Virginia with Maryland coming in on Saturday. After the two games this weekend only next Tuesday's game with Wake Forest will remain on the conference schedule.

Lacrosse Team Beats Duke, 7-4

Carolina's lacrosse club finished out its season yesterday with a 7-4 win over Duke.

The victory gave the Tar Heel stick men a 3-1 season record. All three wins were over Duke. The single lost was to the Virginia freshmen.

Spence Everett and Cliff Pannell led the Carolina scoring with two goals apiece. Joe Alexander, Frank Riggs and Joe Davies all scored one.

Tar Heel attackman Les Sutorious recived credit for three assists.

Scoring for Duke were; Tice (2), Widner, and Rysnek.

The club, which is not a recogized varsity team, presented Coach Ed Kensler with a gift of appreciaton after the game.

Imps Here Today

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Duke's Blue Imps invade Emerson Stadium this afternoon in hopes of knocking Carolina's Tar Babies from their newly-acquired top spot in the freshman Big Four standings.

A double victory over the State frosh here last Saturday put the Tar Baby yearlings in the driver's seat with a fine 5-2 record. Their only losses came to the Wolflets in Raleigh and to Duke here last week, that one a rugged eleven inning affair which ended with a bases-loaded hit by Duke's Bobby Rankin.

Should the frosh be able to take this one they will then have avenged their only losses and thrust themselves into a substantial lead for the freshman title.

As usual, the lineup should contain Whitey Wade, Larry Neal Len Dellolio, Paul (P. W.) Swing, and Pete Farrior in the infield and Ron Miller, E. C. Haithcock, and Roland Noblin or James Helton in the outfield. Coach Pat Earey's hurling choice will be known at game time.

ARCHERY MEETING

Tonight there will be a meeting for all students who are interested in shooting archery. This meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Tin Can, and will be under the sponsorship of the UNC Outing Club.

ACC Tennis Tournament Starts Today At Duke

The Carolina racket men will be defending virtually everything today at Duke as the ACC Tennis Tournament gets under way. All eight conference teams have entrants in the climax of the 1959 net campaign.

Last year the Tar Heels took top honors in the singles, doubles, and team scoring. Bob Bortner captured the singles crown and later paired up with teammate Steve Bank to win the doubles.

For winning the most matches in the event, Carolina received the John F. Kenfield Memorial Award. This honor is named for the former Carolina net coach who served for more than twenty-five years and had such stars as Bitsy Grant and Vic Seixas under his tutelage.

Carolina Finishes At 12-3

Under Coach Don Skakle, who replaced Vladimir Cernik this year, the Heels won twelve matches and dropped only three. In compiling this mark the squad won seven ACC matches without a loss and coppen their last eleven matches.

Leading Carolina has been the number one man, Captain Geoff Black. Black is a possible choice for the number-one seeded position in the tournament. His chief competitors for it are Ray York of Virginia and Hill Cullen of Wake Forest.

The big winner for Carolina for the regular season was Bruce Sylvia, a sophomore playing the number two position. Sylvia won fourteen and lost only one. He has a chance of being seeded in the top eight.

Skakle Enters Eight

Skakle will have eight singles players entered in the three day event. They are Black, Sylvia, Ben Keys, Marshall Happer, Walker Lockett, Tommy Ricks, Phil Causey, and Neil Dickman.

Sylvia and Happer will undoubetly be the number one seeded doubles team. Black and Keys also will be one of the best pairs entered, and the finals of the double could very well be and all-Carolina affair.

Clemson's Tigers will have a fine pair of players in Sonny Sumner and Mohammed Nasim. Duke will be pinning its hopes on Joe Gaston and Dick Katz. Mickey Solomon, seeded eighth last year, will be back trying to gain some glory for the Wolfpack. Maryland's Chuck Abelson is sure to be seeded, also.

Oratory Medal To Be Awarded Tonight At 8

John Brooks and Curtis Gans are the only students competing for the annual Willie P. Mangum Medal at 8 o'clock tonight in Di Hall.

As of 2 p.m. Thursday Brooks and Gans were the only entrants in the contest.

Brook's topic will be "Remember," and Gans will speak on "Why One Should Not Compete for the Mangum Medal."

Judges for the event will be Prof. L. D. Ashby of the Economics Department, Prof. R. D. Higham of the History Department and Prof. N. W. Mattis of the English Department.

The medal, the University's oldest award, is presented each year by the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society in recognition of fine oratory.

Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County established the medal in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the Class of 1815.

Treasurer To Speak

Edwin S. Gill, state treasurer, will be the main speaker at the annual dinner meeting of Friends of the Library of the University of North Carolina at 6:30 tonight in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn. He will speak on "Books and Freedom."

Mr. Gill has served as state treasurer, director and collector of internal revenue, commissioner of paroles, as private secretary to the late Governor O. Max Gardner and as a member of the General Assembly. He will be introduced by President William C. Friday.

George Stephens of Asheville, president of the Friends of the Library, will preside at the dinner.

Librarian Jerrold Orne, secretary of the organization, will make an annual report which will include mention of the gifts to the library during this year.

Three New Men Appointed To Y Committee

Three new chairmen have been appointed to the YMCA Finance Committee for next year.

The new chairmen were appointed last Thursday by Alan Daniels, present treasurer of the YMCA. They are Jack Cummings, chairman of the Alumni Fund Drive; and George Grayson and Pete Longnecker, co-chairmen of the Town-Faculty Drive.

The aims of the committee according to Daniels, "will be to raise a budget of approximately $14,000 for program office and secretarial expenses of the YMCA."

The appointment marks Cumming's first YMCA activity. Grayson and Longnecker have both been active in Y work and will also serve as counselors at the Y Freshman Camp next fall.

Daniels also said, "There will be about 150 students working under the direction of the new chairmen."

Legislature Passes Last-Minute Bill Providing For Public Trials

Gray Refuses To Sign; No Reporter At Trial

By Ron Shumate

In a dramatic last-minute act, the Student Legislature last night passed a bill "to require the men's, women's and student councils to allow any defendant who desires a public trial to have one."

The action came following an earlier request by Steve Gershenson that the press be present at his Honor Council trial, which was still in session when the Daily Tar Heel went to press last night. Gershenson is on trial for allegedly cheating on a chemistry test on Tuesday, April 27.

Gershenson was reported by Ed Sugarman to the professor, Dr. J. P. Collman, who made a report to Hugh Patterson, chairman of the Men's Honor Council. Gershenson is pleading not guilty to the charges.

Gershenson's request that the press be present was made in writing to Patterson, who told this reporter that all Honor Council trials were closed to the public, and that members are sworn to secrecy. However, he admitted that Gershenson—or any other defendants—are still free to make any statements about their own trials that they so desire.

The bill was written by Jim Crownover (SP) after the session of legislature had already begun; the bill was also typed while legislature was in session. It was then introduced by Crownover under new business. Special orders were moved by Bill Miller so that immediate action could be taken on the bill.

The special orders were passed by a voice vote, and the bill passed by a unanimous vote. Reconsideration was moved by Troy Blanton (CIPP) and the motion was defeated.

The bill will go into effect as soon as it is signed by Student Body President Charlie Gray.

Before Gershenson's trial began Patterson had ruled that only one defense counsel could be present during the trial. This decision was appealed by Norman B. Smith, one of Gershenson's counselors. Curtis Gans is the other counselor for Gershenson. The appeal was passed by the Honor Council and both Smith and Gans were allowed to sit in on the trial.

The bill provided that the Men's Honor Council, the Women's Council, the Women's Honor Councils and the Student Council will be notified that the Student Legislature "hereby stipulates that in the future any defendant who desires a public trial be granted one."

It further states that all stipulations concerning secrecy and oaths of restrictive nature in the three councils by-laws are "hereby absolved in cases where the defendant desired a public trial and only when he so desired such a trial."

Reasons listed for the enactment of the bill were: That there "have been occasions in the past when certain defendants before the three major councils have desired public trials and all civil and criminal court trials are open to the public and it is a violation of the Bill of Rights and of man's inalienable rights for him not to have a public trial if he so desires."

Gershenson's' trial may be appealed and may be retried.

When the news that the legislature had passed the bill reached the "waiting room" on the second floor of Carroll Hall, a near-bedlam immediately broke loose. And as those directly and indirectly concerned with the trial waited for some word from Charlie Gray the tension and anxiety grew.

In the absence of Patterson, who had to leave, Howard Holderness, vice-chairman of the council, stated that if the trial began before the bill reached the council, the press would not be allowed to enter the council room.

The bill never made it.

Theologian And Philosopher Speaks On Christian Thought

Father Paul Henry, an eminent Jesuit theologian and philosopher told an audience in Carroll Hall Wednesday night that there was both continuity and rupture in the relationship between Platonic thought and Christian thought.

The visiting professor of philosophy at Duke University pointed out that there was much in the philosophies of the non-Christian pagan world that has been absorbed by the Christian tradition, but not without some rather important transformations, alterations and modifications. Christian thought and mysticism are deeply indebted to Platonism for the its idealism and insights into the immortality and spirituality of the soul.

On the other hand the God of Plato and the pre-Christian era has been made more approachable by the impact of Biblical revelation.

No longer is it necessary to content oneself with the negative theology of saying what God was not—with the advent of Christianity God came to man in human form and thus provided a new and more intimate approach to God.

Christianity also bridged the sharp division in Platonic thought between the spiritual and material world. For the Christian the material world was sanctified by the Incarnation, and the opposition is not between the material and the spiritual but between the "flesh" (meaning rejection of the will of God) and the spirit.

IDC President Makes Eight Appointments

The appointments included chairmen of the following committees: Jim Scott, Rules Committee; Tommy White, Social Committee; Lionel Todd, Dormitory Improvements Committee; Keith Smith, Dormitory Elections Committee; Pat Morgan, Coed Visiting Agreement Committee; Ben Taylor, Publicity Committee; Mike Childs, Contest Committee, and John Frye, Intramural Committee.

Jim Crownover, student body president-elect, announced at the IDC meeting that Joe Herndon, executive secretary of the IDC, had been appointed liaison from the council to the executive branch of student government.

Crownover also discussed some of the plans for orientation in the fall and particularly about the activities session, for which the IDC will sponsor a booth to explain the function of the council.

IDC members decided to hold required dormitory meetings during orientation for freshmen to explain especially the operations of the IDC Court.

Revisions to the IDC Court were presented at Wednesday night's meeting and will come up for a vote next week at a special session of the council.

Also at the Wednesday night meeting, new members of the IDC were sworn in who had not been previously.

Student Government Appointments Made

By EDWARD NEAL RINER

Student Body President Charlie Gray named Angus Duff summer school president and Hank Patterson secretary and treasurer at the Legislature meeting Thursday night.

These two students and the 177 others who were named to student government committees will have to be approved at a call meeting of the Legislature on Monday night.

Gray said of the following appointments, "We have worked hard in selecting these students. It is through their work that we will have a representative and responsible student government."

Editor Appointments Ruled Unconstitutional By Council

By RON SHUMATE

The appointment by the Selections Board of the Publications Board of the editor-in-chief of the Carolina Quarterly, the Carolina Handbook and/or any other student publication receiving appropriations from Student Legislature now constitutes an unconstitutional act, according to a recent ruling of the Student Council.

The case, which was heard April 30, was to test the validity of certain provisions of a bill to revise the by-laws of the Publications Board. The question the council considered read as follow: "Does the Publications Board, specifically the Selections Board of the Publications Board, have the power of appointment?"

The case was raised by Troy Blanton and William Miller. In addition to Blanton and Miller, Harold O'Tuel, chairman of the Publications Board, was present. The council heard comment from all three.

The council was unable to ascertain when and under whose auspices the Publications Board originally assumed any appointive functions. Investigation by Student Council chairman Erwin Fuller revealed that neither Student Legislature statute nor Publications Board by-laws provisions provided that the Board should select any staff official of any student publication.

The council employed the UNC student constitution in making its ruling.

In making its ruling, the council considered the article contained in the student constitution that "confers to the student legislature the authority and responsibility to make all laws governing the conduct of all elections for . . . . the editors in chief of all student publications receiving student funds."

The Council report stated that "under the existing constitutional provisions, the selection of any editor of any student publication receiving student government funds by any means other than a general election conducted by the Elections Board under the procedures established by the student legislature must be declared illegal and improper."

It was on this basis that the Council handed down the unconstitutional ruling.

The council also considered Article V, Section 3 of the student constitution. According to this article, the powers of the Publications Board include nothing other than "financial supervision." No mention is made of any other function.

The council report further stated that "Financial supervision is clearly a Publications Board power and obligation." Section 3 of Article V, states that the Publications Board and the Student Legislature "may exercise control over the editors-in-chief of the various student publications in performance of their duties as related to their staff appointments" when matters of finance are involved.

The council's ruling with respect to this particular article stated that the "mere provision that the Publications Board and the Student Legislature may exercise control over the staff appointments of various publications where matter of finance are involved does not make it a rightful power of the Publications Board to assume the function of appointing business managers."

The council further ruled that it "is of the opinion that the selection of the business managers of the various student publications would properly fall within the realm of financial supervision, were there a statute which specifically directed the Publications Board to interview applicants and to appoint, subject to the approval of the Student Legislature, the business managers of the respective student publications." Since there is no such statute, the council declared the current activities of the Publications Board in this respect "to be improper."

The two individuals, Blanton and Miller, were not, said the council, trying to be "unduly critical of the Publications Board and its activities. Indeed, the Board has fulfilled its responsibilities in a commendable manner, and the new by-laws are generally a well-conceived and long-needed guide to procedures related to publication" at UNC.

The council stated that it was the intention of those who originated the case, and is the intention of the Student Council to "corect an existing situation wherein the Publications Board had arbitrarily and illegally assumed authority and responsibility to appoint."

The council recommended to the Student Legislature that consideration be given to a revision of the Publications Board by-laws and, if necessary, consideration of appropriate revisions in the student constitution, "that the procedure of which the Student Legislature is desirous relevant to the selection of certain staff personnel for the student publications might be accomplished."

The council's statement further said that this ruling "is not to be interpreted as invalidating any action which the Publications Board may have taken in choosing publications officials for the 1959-1960 school year." However, in the event of inaction on the part of Student Legislature, the provisions of the ruling will become effective for the selection of the 1960-1961 publications officials in the spring of 1960.

The council stated that this decision "will raise anew many old problems and questions" concerning the determination of a feasible method of selecting the editors-in-chief of all student publications other than the editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Affiliation Suggestions Made

Suggestions for a mandatory affiliation plan were made at the Pan-Hellenic Council's Wednesday meeting.

Discussion of the sorority problem of affiliating transfers was led by a special committee chaired by Miss Isabelle MacLeod. Although definite plans will be voted upon at the council's next meeting, the following suggestions were made:

1. That the first six transfers will count ½ of a point in the sorority quota, and all above that will not count in the quota or
2. That all transfers will count ¼ of a point of the quota or
3. That there will be a guaranteed number of open places for new pledges regardless of the number in the quota though the quota will be maintained at a certain number.

The Pan-Hell also approved the boarding schedule for the German girl who will be here next year on a Gallinger scholarship.

During exam week sorority houses will be closed as standard procedure, the council said.

Regarding summer school, there will be no rushing during the two sessions and no false propaganda at that time.

Attention Seniors!

All seniors who have not picked up their graduation invitations may obtain them at anytime during the day in Ray Jefferies office, 206 South Building.

SP Chairman Fills Vacancy

Bob Covington was appointed to legislature by Student Party Chairman Dewey Sheffield yesterday to replace Sherman Kennedy in Dorm Men's VI.

Covington, who was sworn into legislature last night, is a junior and former president of Parker Dormitory.

Commenting on the appointment, Sheffield said, "I think Covington is the type of legislator of whom the University can be very proud."

Greatness & Bigness

One of the crucial issues confronting this University and the lawmakers in Raleigh who are diligently working on the budget for the next biennium is that of growth. To what extent should Caroina continue to enlarge? How will this growth affect the academic climate that must exist in Chapel Hill in order for us to claim a great university? And what will be the end result of increasing this University to the point where it claims an enrollment of ten or twelve or fourteen thousand students, as many local administrators are now predicting will happen in the not too distant future—10 years.

We maintain that growth is fine when it can lead to a healthier situation for this University and the State of North Carolina. But, we assert that growth for the sake of growth alone is an unfortunate occurrence. We do not object to a large number of people pursuing higher education on this campus. But, we do object to the attitude that prevails here and throughout the state that the University of North Carolina is obligated to educate and to train for positions of leadership in the future, a great many individuals who are not suited for it. Because we are a state supported university, and not a privately endowed institution such as Duke, we are forced to have on our rosters many who are not qualified or interested in seeking further knowledge.

The Chancellor of this University was heard to make a remark the other night at a dinner, in which he announced that 85% of the entering students are in the upper half of their high school graduating classes. The University prides itself on what might be termed strict admission requirements. Yet, it admits to allowing 15% of the entering freshmen to come here, after obviously demonstrating that they are not qualified candidates for a degree. It is also quite likely that a large portion of the more talented (we refer here to 85%) are also not ready to absorb the material necessary to getting the most out of this University.

And then the Chancellor goes on to inform us that he expects an increase of another 500 in the student body for the year 1959-60. This can be construed in only one way. It is growth for the sake of growth alone. It can never be classified as anything else. It is giving in to the pressures of the legislators and citizens of this state. It is saying that UNC is a state school, and therefore obligated to grow and grow and grow.

The Advisory Budget Commission, tight as it is with the academic purse, has refrained from cutting our requests for new dormitories, a cafeteria and other things which pertain to growth. These facilities will be used to furnish the items necessary for us to enlarge.

Yet, it slashes faculty salaries by unspeakable amounts, gives us a library budget that will do nothing but push us down the ladder compared to other schools and continually refuses to even think about a new student union.

It fails to make sense. We must get larger, before we can even worry about taking care of our present needs. We maintain that this University should stop and take a re-examination of itself, strive for excellence in what it already has and meet the needs of those already here, before increasing the enrollment to grandiose proportions.

Bigness does not mean greatness.

Imbibe, My Friend

O, for a draught of vintage! that hath been
Cool'd a long age in the deep-delved earth,
Tasting of Flora and the country green,
Dance, and Provencal song, and sunburnt mirth!
O for a beaker full of the warm South,
Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene,
With beaded bubbles winking at the brim,
And purple-stained mouth;
That I might drink, and leave the world unseen,
And with thee fade away into the forest dim.

'University Failed Me'

To the Editor, DTH:

Now is the time for swan songs. I read with interest Mr. Carlton's reminiscences of Carolina. I too have many of these same feelings, but I have other feelings which Mr. Carlton does not have, or did not express. I did not come to Carolina so that I might carry away pleasant memories. My purpose was another. Herein lies my problem.

My spirit is low when it should be high. I am so bored with school and its cut-and-dried subjects that my whole outlook on life has changed during the last four years. It is necessary for my mental health that I soon leave the university. I need the freshness of life so that my mind can become refreshed.

The university has failed me or I have failed the university. Do not misunderstand me. I have won scholastic honors every year. Instead of feeling proud of my "achievements," I feel a contempt for the whole system. Instead of freeing my mind, the university has apparently done its best to shackle it with rigid facts, ideas and half-truths. When I think of the university in this area, I always remember, with humor, Voltaire's description of a priest who was instructing his fellow citizens. Voltaire said to the effect that, "he divided into several parts what did not need to be divided. He methodically proved what was clear to all. He did his best to bore his fellow citizens, but his intentions were good."

Now that I am ready to graduate, I should be mentally active and ready to meet the challenge of the world. The fact is that I have less ambition now than when I entered the university. My whole being revolts everyday as this and that "truth" is crammed into my head. I have decided that there are no truths. The torture becomes almost unbearable as the end of May seems to continue to remain infinity.

Give me air, light and life! I have been under water for four years; my lungs are ready to burst; my mind is dulled from the lack of oxygen—life. June 1 appears as the sun from 100 feet down in the ocean. I must hold out a few more minutes and then my torture will be over. Life will begin again.

Did my stay in the university cause these feelings. Is it merely that I am older? I do not know. All that I know is that four years ago I was looking forward to the Great Adventure. Four years later all this has changed. Now there is no great adventure and, even if there were, I have no great desire to rush into it.

My only hope is that, with enough time outside of these rigid schedules of "fact courses." I will again feel the driving urge to study and enjoy the knowledge of the ages. During my stay here, studying slowly, but inexorably, changed from pleasure to pain. I am blaming no one—except maybe myself. Some of my teachers have indeed been noble, generous and helpful people. I will always remember them and the material sacrifices that they made just to teach me. Yet, somewhere along the way I must have deviated from the main channel. At this point I am unable to discern just how, why or when I parted with the ever onward rushing mainstream. For the benefit of all of you, I hope that my case is unique.

An End To Innocence

The following is a reprint from an essay entitled "Looking Backward: America From Europe" by Leslie Fiedler, which appears in his collection of political and cultural essays, AN END TO INNOCENCE.

"It seems to me that it has become absurd to ask whether a democratic society is worthwhile if it entails a vulgarization and leveling of taste. Such a leveling the whole world is bound to endure, with or without political guarantees of freedom; and the serious writer must envision his own work in such a context, realize that his own final meanings will arise out of a dialectical interplay between what he makes and a given world of "mass culture." Even the Stalinists, though they thunder against American jazz and cowboy suits for children, can in the end only kidnap our vulgar mythology for their own purposes. The sense of an immortality here and now, so important to American culture and parodied in Forest Lawn Cemetery, finds its Soviet counterpart in the mummification of Lenin or the touting of Bogomolets; while our faith in progress and achievement finds an ersatz in the Five Year Plans and the statistics doctored to assist belief. In its Russian form, what is possible in America has become compulsory, an unofficial rite has been made an orthodoxy. And even in our own country there have been occasional attempts to impose optimism (and eventually, one can only suppose, youth and naivete) by law.

"Yet, for us, hope has never become just official, a mere camouflage for actual exploitation, though indeed two generations of writers just before us believed so; and it was their sense of having alone penetrated our hoax of prosperity and happiness that nourished their feelings of alienation. The error of such writers was double (such errors, naturally, do not preclude good writing; being right is, thank God, optional for the writer). Not only was the American mythos real and effective, the very opposite of the hypocritical and barren materialism it seemed; but also everywhere, down to the last layer of babbittry, there existed beside this belief its complement: an unspoken realization of the guilt and terror involved in the American experience. In his sense of lonely horror, the writer was most one with everyone else.

"Precisely the uncompromising optimism of Americans makes every inevitable failure to accomplish what can only be dreamed an unredeemable torment. Among us, nothing is winked at or shrugged away; we are being eternally horrified at dope-addiction or bribery or war, at things accepted in older civilizations as the facts of life, scarcely worth a tired joke. Even tax evasion dismays us! We are forever feeling our own pulses, collecting statistics to demonstrate the plight of the Negro, the prevalence of divorce, the failure of the female organ, the decline of family Bible reading, because we feel, we know, that a little while ago it was in our power, new men in a new world (and even yet there is hope), to make all perfect. How absurd of our writers to have believed that only they were pained at the failure of love and justice in the United States! What did they think our pulp literature of violence and drunkenness and flight was trying symbolically to declare? Why did they suppose that the most widely read fiction in America asks endlessly, 'Whodunit? Where is the guilt?' "

PINEHURST . . . The Carolina Hotel in Pinehurst is probably the most popular place in North Carolina for holding spring conventions. The stately old wooden structure can take care of a larger group under one roof for all its convention activities than any other hotel in North Carolina. People like the atmosphere of the Carolina Hotel. Most of the groups meeting at the Carolina Hotel have been holding their conventions there for many years, which sometimes makes it hard for new groups to meet there, due to long-standing schedules of its old customers.

Management

Editor:

I have read with a great deal of interest the many articles that have appeared in The Daily Tar Heel in recent weeks concerning the strike at the Harriet Henderson Mills, in Henderson, N. C. From these articles one could easily jump to the conclusion that the management of the mills and Mr. J. D. Cooper in particular was entirely to blame and completely responsible for the long strike, the hardships suffered by the workers, as well as the strife and violence that have taken place.

It is understandable that when one visits the scene of a strike, sees the workers on the picket line, and realizes that these people have been out of work for six months, that all of one's sympathies would be with these workers and against the management of the mill. Such a reaction is a normal one and is based largely on emotions rather than on a clear-headed analysis of the situation.

In the May 1st issue of The Daily Tar Heel, Ron Shumate states near the end of his article, Quote "Before this strike began Mr. Cooper had a reputation of being pro-labor. He used to make speeches in which he advanced unions. He has spoken many times in favor of labor. What then is his reason?" Unquote.

Does it seem reasonable that a man who has been pro-labor, and who for 14 years has had a contract with the Union which represented the employees in his mills would without good and sufficient reasons change his position? Mr. Cooper has stated publicly his reason for wishing to change the arbitration section of the old contract was because it was abused by the union to the extent that management was unable to operate the mills efficiently. One instance which appeared in the daily papers of some weeks ago has reference to a worker who was issued a reprimand for poor attendance, the record being less than 50% attendance over a period of time. A reprimand was issued to the worker. The union put in a grievance and the case was finally taken to arbitration. The mill was reported to have lost the case and was ordered to withdraw the reprimand. One wonders why a union which is supposed to cooperate with management so that the mills can be run efficiently would support a worker who had been absent from work more than 50% of the time.

There may be more to the case than appeared in the public press, but if this is an example of the type of grievance that the union is frequently insisting upon taking to arbitration it is small wonder that the management of the Harriet-Henderson Mills would want to do something to avoid situations which disrupted the operation of the plants, and made necessary the expenditure of a great deal of time and effort preparing for such arbitrations which might have been much better spent in managing the business.

Mr. Cooper did not wish to do away with all arbitration, what he did request was a change that would permit arbitration by mutual consent of the union and management. Under these terms the union could still have used their most powerful weapon the strike weapon, if they considered the issue of sufficient importance. This arrangement if it had been put into effect, would it seems to me, have reduced the number of arbitrations of cases of little merit, which was the relief that management sought. The union would have been more inclined to drop unimportant cases that management declined to arbitrate rather than go on strike, and management on the other hand would have hesitated about declining to arbitrate cases of merit rather than to run the risk of having a strike. Does this proposed change in the contract bear any resemblance to union busting? To any fair minded person I am sure the answer would be an unqualified—No. It was only later and much later, in fact after the strike had been in effect for many weeks that the issues of the "check-off of union dues" and the "seniority of the strikers" became issues.

No one can now foresee what the final outcome of this unfortunate situation in Henderson will be. It has certainly given the State much unfavorable publicity, and may have the effect of retarding the growth of industries in our State. I feel strongly however that we should be very slow in condemning the management of the mills as being solely responsible for the present state of affairs in Henderson. The very fact that the management has had a contract with the union for 14 years is certain proof that they have made every effort to operate under a contract. It was only after years of striving to make the best of a bad situation that they finally asked for a minor change in the contract which they hoped would make it possible to operate their plants, and to get some relief from the abuse of the arbitrtaion provisions.

I think we are all too prone to overlook the bombing of employees homes, the use of dynamite, the use of firearms to intimidate the workers and at the same time endanger their very lives, the Boyd Payton hoax, the violation of the picketing injunction, all of which have been perpetrated by the unionists to gain their own selfish ends. It seems that the end justifies any means to accomplish it, in their code of tactics.

Only with the passing of time will the full effects of the Henderson situation be revealed. It may well be that by their courageous resistance to coercion, intimidation, and violence, that the management of the Harriett-Henderson Mills will have performed a greater service to the industries of the South, and to the employees who work in those industries than we can now foresee. Certainly the managements of other mills and industries will use greater care in regard to the provision of any contract which they enter into with organized labor, and the employees will carefully weigh the possible benefits against the disadvantages of joining any organization and turning over to that organization their own future security, welfare and happiness.

UP Bill Passes Board; Contacts To Be Better

A plan for University Party legislators to keep in contact with his constituents was accepted by the party's executive board Thursday.

Speaking for the board's action, Chairman Hank Patterson said the object of this plan is to keep the party members informed of their representatives work in student Legislature and to inform the representatives of issues which should be brought before the law-making body.

Patterson said U. P. legislators would be asked to post their names and where they can be reached on bulletin boards in dorms, sororities and fraternities. The party would provide proper forms.

Legislators would also be asked to either hold meetings with constituents or visit them frequently. At these meetings they will talk with them concerning their past actions and hear opinions. However, in Town Men's IV, where personal contact is difficult, other means shall be urged.

The board also suggested that each U. P. legislator be requested to turn in periodically to the executive board a report containing the efforts he had made to fulfill his obligations.

SCHULTZ IS A MANY SPLENDORED THING

Beppo Schultz, boulevardier, raconteur, connoisseur, sportsman, bon vivant, hail fellow well met—in short, typical American college man—smokes today's new Marlboros.

"Why do you smoke today's new Marlboros, hey?" a friend recently asked Beppo Schultz.

"I smoke today's new Marlboros," replied Beppo, looking up from his 2.9 litre L-head Hotchkiss drive double overhead camshaft British sports car, "because they are new."

"New?" said the friend. "What do you mean—new?"

"I mean the flavor's great, the filter's improved, the cigarette is designed for today's easier, breezier living," said Beppo.

"Like this 2.9 litre L-head Hotchkiss drive double overhead camshaft British sports car?" asked the friend.

"Exactly," said Beppo.

"She's a beauty," said the friend, looking admiringly at the car. "How long have you had her?"

"It's a male," said Beppo.

"Sorry," said the friend. "How long have you had him?"

"About a year," said Beppo.

"Have you done a lot of work on him?" asked the friend.

"Oh, have I not!" cried Beppo. "I have replaced the pushrods with a Roots type supercharger. I have replaced the torque with a synchromesh. I have replaced the tachometer with a double side draft carburetor."

"Gracious!" exclaimed the friend.

"I have replaced the hood with a bonnet," said Beppo.

"Land o' Goshen!" exclaimed the friend.

"And I have put gloves in the glove compartment," said Beppo.

"It's a male," said Beppo.

"My, you have been the busy one," said the friend. "You must be exhausted."

"Maybe a trifle," said Beppo, with a brave little smile.

"Know what I do when I'm tired?" said the friend.

"Light a Marlboro?" ventured Beppo.

"Oh, pshaw, you guessed!" said the friend, pouting.

"But it was easy," said Beppo, chuckling kindlily. "When the eyelids droop and the musculature sags and the psyche is depleted, what is more natural than to perk up with today's new Marlboro?"

"A great new smoke with better 'makin's' and a great new filter!" proclaimed the friend, his young eyes glistening.

"Changed to keep pace with today's changing world!" declared Beppo, whirling his arms in concentric circles. "A cigarette for a sunnier age, an age of greater leisure and more beckoning horizons!"

Now, tired but happy, Beppo and his friend lit Marlboros and smoked for a time in deep, silent contentment. At length the friend spoke. "He certainly is a beauty," he said.

"You mean my 2.9 litre L-head Hotchkiss drive double overhead camshaft British sports car?" asked Beppo.

"Yes," said the friend. "How fast will he go?"

"Well, I don't rightly know," said Beppo. "I can't find the starter."

Blue Devils Lose 3-1; Tar Heels Face Va. Here This Afternoon

DURHAM, N. C. May 7—(AP)—The run-producing bat of first baseman Vaughan Bryson brought North Carolina's Tar Heels a 3-1 victory over Duke's Blue Devils here Thursday afternoon. The game, the third of the season between the two clubs, does not count in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings.

The Tar Heels were able to collect only three hits, but Bryson collected two of them to account for all three runs. He tripled in the second to score Ferg Norton who had walked, and in the fifth, clouted an inside-the-park homer, Gerald Griffin scoring ahead of him to account for the winners' tallies.

Duke got seven hits, two of them by Charlie Dunlevy, but could not bunch them together for runs. The only Blue Devil score came in the sixth when Pete Maynard's hit enabled Mike Lehrhoff to come home. Lehrhoff had opened the inning with a walk and had advance to third when John Frye singled.

Carolina starter Bob Deaton picked up the first win of his college varsity career. He retired the first 14 batters to face him before Bill Taylor and Dunlevy hit two-out singles in the fifth.

He had to have help in the 8th when Duke threatened. With the bases loaded and no one out, Coach Walter Rabb brought in lefthander Ben Harding, who struck out Maynar and made Art Browning hit into a double play to end the inning.

Maryland Gets Favorite Role In ACC Track

By BING SOMERS

Carolina's varsity track team, having completed the regular season with a 5-2 record, competes with all seven other ACC schools today and tomorrow at Columbia, South Carolina, as the annual conference outdoor meet gets under way.

The Tar Heels will be led by seniors Dave Scurlock, Wayne Bishop, and Lyndon DeBorde and junior Ray Stanley, all of whom have good chances of bringing back gold medals.

Teamwise, Maryland looks to be almost a shoo-in for first place. The big fight will be for second and the top two contenders are Duke and Carolina, with host South Carolina probably destined for fourth.

Finals Tomorrow

Trials and semi-finals will be held this afternoon with the big show, the finals, coming off tomorrow.

Following is an event by event preview of the meet with the favorites:

100 yd. dash—Maryland seems to have secured patent on sprinters, has three good ones in Don Whittaker, Butch Spiegel, and Stan Pitts. Whittaker, a senior from South Dakota, has done 9.7, must rank as favorite. Virginia's Herb Reynolds and Duke's Jon Elder also bear watching.

Scurlock Gets Nod In 440

440 yd. run—ACC has host of quarter-milers who have dipped under 50 flat; several—Clemson's John Dunkelberg, SC's Buddy Mayfield, Duke's Tom Bazemore—are huddled around 48. But none can match Scurlock's head-bobbing, yard-eating kick down the stretch to the tape. He will win his third conference 440 in a row.

880 yd. run—If Dunkelberg pushes Scurlock to a blazing 440 and if Bazemore enters the half fresh, then there's is a chance, though very slight, that the little Duke runner could get him. A betting man would still be pretty safe with his money on Scurlock.

Blue Imps Get Eleven Hits To Defeat Tar Babies, 8-4

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

Righthander Bob Turner spaced nine Carolina hits and his teammates turned in fewer errors than the erratic Tar Babies as Duke's Blue Imps took an 8-4 decision here yesterday.

An error at first base opened the door for Duke in the first and the Imps jumped ahead 2-0 with the aid of one hit. It was 4-0 in the fourth when the Tar Babies finally came to life.

Larry Neal singled to start the inning and Ron Miller sent him to third with a double. Len Dellolio then drove one over short to score two and took second on the throw in. He died there, however, as Pete Farrior struck out and Jud Spainhour and Roland Noblin flied out.

Nick Warren and Dave Murr were the victims of the remainder of the Duke scoring as the Imps got one in the fifth, and one each in the seventh, eighth, and ninth.

The other Carolina markers came via Miller's single and error on the centerfielder which enabled him to circle the bases in the sixth and Spainhour's long drive to center in the ninth for a homer.

ACC Tennis Tournament Opens; Black Reaches Quarterfinals

By JOHN B. JUSTICE

DURHAM—When the smoke had cleared from yesterday's opening matches in the ACC Tennis Tournament, all eight seeded singles players were still in the running for the title. Bill Cullen, top seeded ace from Wake Forest, survived the sweltering heat, which caused many to falter, and reached the quarterfinals.

The Carolina contingent, after winning eight matches all together, was wiped out with the exception of third seeded Geoff Black, the big captain of the Tar Heels. Black also is in the quarterfinals, advancing with wins over Allan Klavens of Virginia and victories over his teammates, Ben Geer Keyes and Tommy Ricks.

One of the stars for Coach Don Skakle's racketeers even in defeat was Walker Lockett, a junior from Summit, N. J. Lockett played a 3-set mtach in the mid-afternoon sun against Chuck Abelson, third-seeded from Maryland, and lost 3-6, 3-7, 6-3. Skakle described Lockett's play as "terrific," and attributed the Tar Heel netter's defeat partly to leg cramps which hindered many of the entrants. Lockett had match point on Abelson in the second set, but could not press his advantage toward the win.

Bruce Sylvia, a sophomore from Richmond, Va. did a commendable job in his initial ACC tournament outing. After reaching the third round, Sylvia lost to Cullen, 6-4, 6-4.

Two Tar Heel aces, Ben Geer Keys and Tommy Ricks, both had the unhappy fate of falling victim to their own captain, Black. Keys was eliminated in the second round, and Ricks fell in the third.

Neil Dickman advanced to the third round before being ousted by Mickey Solomon of State, 6-2, 7-5. Marshall Happer met his downfall at the hands of Mohammed Nasim of Clemson; Happer went down 6-3, 6-0. Phil Causey, the remaining Heel netter, succembed to Duke Felt of Virginia 6-0, 6-1.

Carolina Hosts ACC Golf Play

By J. R. BROWN

Carolina's golf team plays host to the annual A.C.C. tournament here today. The event will be held at the par 72-6570 yard Finley Course with tee-off time at 9:00 a.m.

The championship (both team and individual) will be determined by 36 holes medal play and conducted under U.S.G.A. rules. The team trophy goes to the team with the lowest four combined scores. A total of 63 men will participate and will be paired up in three-somes.

The Tar Heels, who beat Clemson yesterday, bring a very commendable record into the meet. The Heels are 12-3 after yesterday's match. One of those victories was over the fine Wake Forest squad last Tuesday.

Although team records do not matter in this event, most of the coaches agree that Wake Forest, Duke, and Carolina stand the best chance of taking the laurels. Individual honors could go to anyone. However, Wake's Ron Thomas, Carolina's Ed Justa, Duke's Siderowf, and Maryland's Del Beman are favored.

Crownover Bill Defeated, Passed In Same Session

By DEE DANIELS

The controversial Jim Crownover bill achieved the distinction Thursday of being defeated and then passed by the Student Legislature.

After lengthy and earnest debate on the pros and cons of the bill which encourages legislators to meet with their constituents and requires the submission of written reports concerning such activities to the speaker of Legislature, the bill was defeated due to a lack of a two thirds majority vote. The vote was 22 for and 18 against.

Speaker David Grigg had ruled that the bill required a two thirds vote to pass on the grounds that it involved amendments to the by-laws and therefore would require the approval of the Legislature.

Gordon Street (UP) challenged the chair's decision saying that the bill itself makes no changes in the by-laws.

The body voted 20 to 18 to overrule the decision of the chair and therefore the bill passed according to the original vote of 22 to 18.

The solons also passed a bill, introduced by Dave Jones, (SP) to allow legislators moving from their districts to retain their seats for two regular meetings following their disqualification. This action will provide a period of time for the vacancies to be filled without diminishing the size of the Legislature.

A move for reconsideration of a bill, authored by Jones, to increase the 1959-60 NSA delegation appropriation by $85 was defeated.

Last Run Of Play Tonight

Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's "Inherit the Wind" will be presented by the Carolina Playmakers for the last time tonight at 8:30 in the Forest Theater.

Lloyd Borstelmann, Fred Sitton, John Sneden, Douglass Whitehill, Robert Ketler and Sally Pullen star in the leading roles of the dramatization of the famous Tennessee evolution trial.

Thomas Patterson, assistant professor of dramatic art, directs the large cast. Craven Mackie and Sally Greene will assist Patterson.

John Stockard, graduate assistant in the department of dramatic art, designed the complex settings of the courtroom and the street of a Southern town. Lighting is by Jim Armacost. Costumes were designed by Irene Smart Rains.

Tickets for "Inherit The Wind" will go on sale at the Forest Theater box office at 7 p.m.

National Honor Society Initiates B. A. Students

Seven UNC students and a Durham business leader were initiated into Beta Gamma Sigma, national scholastic honor society, here this week.

George Watts Hill Sr., Durham banker, insurance executive and civic leader, was inducted as an honorary member of the Alpha of North Carolina chapter.

Student initiates, all juniors or seniors, in the School of Business Administration are Michael O. Hill, Raleigh; Ernst B. Kemm, New York City; James G. Lane Jr., Rich Square; Malcolm H. McLean, Lumberton; Clifton D. Mann, Newport; William J. Moore, Charlotte, and Randolph E. Morrissett Jr., Greensboro.

McLean was elected chapter president. Other new officers are Clifton Mann, secretary, and Michael Hill, treasurer.

After the initiation in Carroll Hall, the society members attended a banquet at the Carolina Inn.

Dr. William M. Whyburn, vice president for graduate studies and research in the Consolidated University, talked to the group about the new electronic computer being located on the University campus.

3 Bills Passed By Solons; Others Sent To Committee

By DAVE JONES

Four bills were considered, three passed and five sent to committee at Thursday night's session of the Legislature. This brings the number of pieces of legislation considered in this assembly to 27.

Special orders brought immediate consideration to a bill written by Representative Jim Crownover (SP) requiring the Men's, Women's and Student councils to allow any defendent who so deisres to have a public trial.

Proponents of the measure pointed out that the Student Constitution states that no rights enjoyed under the U. S. or North Carolina Constitutions be abridged. They maintained that denial of the right to a free and open trial was an abridgment of a constitutionally guaranteed right.

The bill by Representative Dave Jones (SP), defeated last week, to increase the NSA appropriation by $85 was the subject of a move to reconsider.

Proponents of reconsideration stated that new information, particularly in the area of what the student body president thought about the measure, had become available. Reconsideration failed.

After the failure of the motion to reconsider a request was made from the floor to have President Gray's letter on the bill read. The letter was then read.

Under new business was the announcement of the appointment of Fred Lavery to the Carolina Athletic Council and Dave Jones to the Carolina Quarterly. These appointments were approved without objection.

Bob Covington's appointment to fill the seat vacated by Sherman Kennedy in Dorm Men's VI was announced. The appointment will be voted on next week.

Also to be voted on next week are the appointments submitted by Student Body President Charlie Gray. The session next week will be a special session because the by-laws do not call for a meeting during the last two weeks of the semester.

Under new business there were six bills introduced. The open trial bill was considered under special orders. The others will be considered next week.

Charlotte Is Toured

Members of Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity, toured 11 Charlotte businesses Monday and Tuesday as a part of the fraternity's program to get a "closer affiliation" with the commercial world.

Monroe Landreth, regional director for the fraternity, Tom Belk of Belk Brothers and Henry Heitman, professional chairman for the fraternity, planned the tour and set up the scheduled visits.

Some of the companies toured were: Belk's Buying Service, Belk's Department Store, First Union National Bank, Lance Company, Sealtest Dairies, Douglas Aircraft, Esso Standard Oil, Celanese, WBTV Radio and Television Station, Wachovia Bank and Trust Company and Douglas Municipal Airport.

Monday, the group was the guest of the First Union National Bank for lunch. During an evening dinner where they were guests of the Charlotte Alumni Club, Mayor James S. Smith, of Charlotte, welcomed the members to the city. Also present to speak to the group was the Maid of Cotton for 1959 and Ed Thomas, postmaster of Charlotte.

The Wachovia Bank and Trust Company held a luncheon for the fraternity members Tuesday in the Mecklenburg Room of the new Wachovia Bank Building. Joe Robinson, senior vice president of the Charlotte office, spoke to the group and a tour of the bank followed.

Fencers To Feast

By BOB PEEBLES

The UNC Fencing Team is having a dinner tonight at 7 o'clock in the Club Room of the Carolina Inn. The dinner, announced by team captain Carroll Raver, is being held for all members of the team and those affiliated with it.

The dinner will be the finale of an undefeated season for the Tar Heel swordsmen. The epee competition last night completed the intramurals and the season for the team.

The team was represented in the National Intercollegiates at Annapolis this spring, and compiled its undefeated record in three outings with VMI, Citadel, and Florida, and a three-way meet with VMI and AMA at Chapel Hill.

Coach Pebley Barrow is looking forward to another good season next year with all of the team returning.

Outstanding members of the team this year were: in sabre, Mike Collins, Dave Matthews and Jim Proctor; in epee, Bob Peebles, Bob Finley and Clarence Simpson; in foil, Carroll Raver, Charles Luchs and Guy Ellis.

Anyone planning to attend the dinner has been asked to contact Carroll Raver at 8-9080 or room 402 Winston Dorm.

Jack Raper, YMCA president, completed his cabinet yesterday with the appointment of Tucker Renfrow as director of the YM-YW television program and Bill Hamill as editor of the Y News Letter.

Renfrow, a junior radio and television major, will direct a television program similar to the Y sponsored "Dimensions" series. Hamill will edit a Y activities news letter.

Navy Missile Roars Aloft In 7th Flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., May 8 (AP) — Polaris, the Navy's potentially deadly submarine missile, roared aloft at blazing speed today on a seventh test flight.

The blastoff of the 28-foot rocket —which appeared to run smoothly —came at 2:28 p.m. (EST).

The two-stage Polaris, shaped like a bottle, poured out a puffy stream of smoke as it climbed.

It was the second appearance of a polaris at the cape in three weeks in the navy's accelerated and sometimes trouble-plagued program to make the misile operational by 1960.

A serpentine smoke trail in the rocket's wake split in two after about 50 seconds. This apparently was burnout of the first stage and ignition of the second.

The smoke trail continued for a minute and a half before the second stage also burned out. In the meantime, the first stage left a curleycue of smoke in the sky as it began tumbling earthward.

The solid propellant missile logged a highly successful flight April 20, overcoming a series of failures up to that time.

Y Cabinet, Officers Are Installed Monday

Installation service for the new YM-YWCA officers and cabinet members will be held Monday.

Plans include a dedication service to be held at the Chapel of the Cross and a banquet in Lenoir Hall at which Sam McGill, dean of student affairs, will speak.

Kitty Allen has been named chairman of a group working with the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh.

Sipra Bose, chairman of the International Relations Committee, announced that a Textbook Drive will be held May 13-30 to get books for Asian students. Students have been asked to contribute any textbooks published since 1945 and any standard books (such as Dickens) to this drive. Books may be placed in boxes in the dorms or brought to the Y.

Five Building Projects Costing $3½ Million

By PHIL RIGDON

Money granted to the University by the 1957 state Legislature has begun to make its mark on the campus. Five building projects costing $3,457,000 are now under way.

The addition to Phillips Hall, which will house the Univac 1105 computer, will be ready for use by February 1960. The addition covers 77,903 square feet and will contain 27 laboratories, eight classrooms, two lecture halls and a library and reading room.

The Legislature appropriated $1,260,000 to construct and equip the addition. The computer, valued at $2,500,000, was given by the National Science Foundation and the Department of Commerce. The computer will occupy 10,000 square feet, J. Arthur Branch, University business manager, said it will arrive here within two weeks.

The addition to Peabody Hall, the School of Education, will be completed by May 1960. The Legislature appropriated $865,000 for its construction. This addition will contain 15 classrooms and a combination library and reading room plus office space.

$1,150,000 was granted by the Legislature for the new pharmacy building on Pittsboro Road opposite the hospital. It will be completed in September.

Howell Hall, the present Pharmacy building, will be remodeled for use by the Journalism School. A grant of $222,000 was given by the Legislature for the remodeling. It is expected to be ready for use by September.

A new wing, costing $350,000, will be built on to the Nursing Dormitory. Two-thirds of the money was given by the North Carolina Medical Care. The remaining will be self-liquidating. The new wing will house 80 girls. Bids for the construction will be open on May 26. It will be completed in approximately 15 months.

Eight clay tennis courts are nearing completion east of Avery dormitory. Fencing for the courts will be up in about two or three weeks. The courts will be ready for use in about 30 days. The Legislature gave $20,000 to construct the courts.

Bill Davis Is Elected Chairman

Bill Davis was elected Friday afternoon to succeed Harold O'Tuel as chairman of the Publications Board.

The board is the supervising body of the finances for all University publications under student government. The board's authority extends to budget supervision and contract negotiations, but not to the actual content of the publications.

Another officer of the board is John Minter, who was re-elected chairman Friday.

Dr. Olin T. Mouzon was re-elected to a two-year term as adviser. The other adviser to the Publications Board is Kenneth Byerly, who has another year to serve of his two-year term.

Davis is also business manager of the Yackety Yack, a position he will hold next year for the second consecutive year. He was recently elected Ugliest Man on Campus.

Jury Deliberated Hour; Gray Considering Bill

The Men's Honor Council Thursday night convicted Steve Gershenson of cheating and placed him on indefinite suspension.

The jury deliberated an hour before reaching its verdict, and the council debated 15 minutes before sentencing the defendant.

The case is under appeal to the Student-Faculty Council, according to Curtis Gans and Norman B. Smith, Gershenson's counselors. The appeal is based on procedure, question of assumed guilt, questions of new and disallowed evidence and question of insufficient evidence.

Among the procedural violations that were questioned included the fact that the defendant was unable to be present at the first presentation of the prosecution. Gershenson was denied the right to face his accuser.

According to Gans, neither the defendant nor the defense counsel have seen the material evidence used against Gershenson, except in the excerpted form containing the alleged incriminating evidence.

The council denied a request made Thursday night by Student Body President Charlie Gray that the trial be held at a later time. Gray's request came following action of Student Legislature on a bill providing for public trial if a defendant requested such a trial.

Gray did not sign the bill Thursday night, and is still considering it. He stated Friday that he refused to sign the bill "mainly because hasty action often turns out to be regrettable action. I did not have time to study the effects or wording of the bill, which I intend to do before signing any piece of legislation."

Gray said that while he agrees with the principle of the bill, "there are a few provisions which, in haste, were omitted. Gray asserted that he feels these provisions are "essential to a change of this sort."

Gray concluded by saying that his statements for or against the bill will be released "after further study."

Chancellor Aycock will have to rule on the validity of the appeal of Gershenson's case. The Chancellor's ruling will determine whether or not the defendant will have a hearing before the Student-Faculty Council.

Gans said that two points of procedure will also be challenged to the Student Council on the basis of their constitutionality.

Thursday night's trial lasted about four hours and was interrupted several times due to the passing of the bill, and to the request by Gray.

On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D-Mo) today personally set May 15 as the closing date for hearings on civil rights legislation by a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

Hennings, who heads the committee, said he set the date himself because he couldn't get the subcommittee to set one. The hearings began March 18 and the most recent witness was heard on April 22.

Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas has scheduled action on civil rights legislation in this sessions of Congress. Southern opponents had been hoping to stall off any senate consideration of the issue.

New Course Being Taught

By JAMES WALLACE

A course so new that it has not yet found its way into the catalogue is being taught at the University for the first time this semester.

Titled "History of Science and Technology," the course has been introduced into the curriculum by Kenan Professor of Medieval History, Dr. Loren C. MacKinney.

Sixteen students, most of them science majors, are enrolled in this csientific excursion which begins with the ancient empires of the Near East and comes down to the Quantum Theory of the late nineteenth century.

"The history of science," Dr. MacKinneys ays, "is a comparatively new sub-diviion of historical study, having been undertaken in a serious way as recently as fifty years ago."

In fact, the discipline is so new that satisfactory textbooks are not easily obtained, and collections of readings, in English translation, are still scarce. This latter difficulty resulted in Dr. MacKinney's borrowing the one remaining copy of a set of readings from a distinguished colleague at Cornell, taking the book apart, having it duplicated by a Durham firm, re-binding the book and returning it to the author!

For the more technical—and recent—developments in the individual sciences, Dr. MacKinney calls in representatives from the various science departments at the University. Concerning the worth of the course, he hopes that "reviewing the chief events in the progress of science will serve to exand the horizons of the student by acquainting him with this increasingly important aspect of human achievement."

Dr. MacKinney is a member of the Council of the History of Science Society and is a member of several other learned societies.

Smith Award Winner Named

Jeremiah Andrew Robertson of Greensboro has been named winner of the $1,600 Marvin B. Smith Jr. Memorial Scholarship at UNC for 1959-60.

The Smith Memorial Scholarship provides $1,600 covering a four-year tenure, subject to maintenance of high standing by the recipient as a student at the University. Payments of $400 are made annually.

The scholarship was established in 1946 in memory of Marvin B. Smith Jr., Class of 1926, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Smith Sr., his sister, Alyce, and brother, Harold, of Burlington.

Since Mr. Smith had already established himself as a leading businessman in the textile industry at the time of his death, the award is made annually to an outstanding North Carolina graduating high school boy who plans to educate himself for a business career.

Awarded on the basis of scholastic ability, character and promise of success, the winner must also be partically dependent on his own efforts to secure his education.

Faculty

An administration is not the difference. A student body cannot transcend the gap. Only a faculty can make a mediocre school into a great one, or a great one into a superior one. Or, on the other hand, a mediocre one into a poor one. It is the caliber of intellects that teach at a university that makes the exception out of the rule.

The Consolidated University of North Carolina currently faces these alternatives. It can progress, regress or maintain the status quo according to who teaches. In Chapel Hill, "The University is requesting the $547,138 not recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission for faculty salary adjustments and increases for the first year of the Biennium and the $602,870 for the same purposes in the second year of the biennium. This is in addition to the $147,724 and $151,864 recommended for the two years of the biennium."

A university may safely be compared to a business, and the "friendly rivalry" between schools is often cutthroat competition. This University has attracted at least its share of scholars in the past years, but is now staring in the face, the ugly possibility of losing some of these men. Consolidated University Vice President, W. D. Carmichael Jr. has continually reiterated, throughout the course of the entire budget fight, that the three components of the Greater University are losing top flight men at an alarming rate. Department heads, deans, distinguished teachers in all fields are going on to greener (money is that color) pastures.

And, who can blame them? Any academician of prominence has in all probability spent four years on a B.A., two on a Masters, three on a Ph.D., and a few more on post doctoral or intensified research of some type. He is then perpared to enter the teaching profession on the level of higher education.

If he goes to a branch of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, he soon finds out, much to his dismay, that the pay scale doesn't even meet the cost of living increases.

He is faced with a "tight on the purse" General Assembly, and sees no forseeable change in the immediate future. So, he packs his bags, loads his family into a five-year-old car and heads off for the northeast and decent salaries, to say nothing of the non-existent sabbaticals, the absence of said item here being conspicuous to the scholarly world.

All of this doesn't paint a rosey picture. But, it is not intended to. When we "look at the record," we see a trend, and not a very pleasant one. We see the quality of a faculty not going up, but remaining either at the status quo or slipping.

In Greensboro, Raleigh and Chapel Hill this trend will continue. It can only be checked by an alert body of lawmakers in the State Capital finally realizing that the future of this state is dependent on the future of higher education, and the future of higher education is dependent on the future of our faculties.

Education is an expensive proposition. It is not an enterprise in which one can succeed without funds. The people of North Carolina must be made cognizant of our needs before it is too late.

We ask the citizens of this state and the students involved to stand up and be counted on this crucial issue.

Sports Editor

We notice with a gerat deal of pride that Daily Tar Heel Sports Editor Elliott Cooper is being reprinted around the state these days.

On Thursday, the Raleigh Times said, "Elliott Coper . . . has done a job which the daily papers of this state have failed miserably to do."

A good job by a good man.

Woodland

I walk a path through a small woodland

And reflect upon its smoothed sprouting stones

And I see the bare trees

That are at times profusely green,

Leaping upward and meeting above my head,

Hiding the blue of the sky

So that it may not be seen

Unless I climb toward their tops.

Still and alive, beautiful in light,

Ugly and mysterious in the dark

They loom above and around

My thought bewildered head

Until I run and reach the town

And see a squarely painted picture

That calms and rests my melted nerves.

People walk around me and behind me and about

Hurried on their concrete paths;

And buildings straighten toward the sky;

Wheels with wings roll by

And blow their healthy noses,

And I turn my head and look back toward the woodland and its stony path.

"Very Good, Sir—You Have Just Time To Change For The Wage Negotiating Conference"

T.R.B.

"The best TIFFANY" can do in advertising in the current New Yorker is a mass trade necklace-and-pin set selling for $1,425. Black Starr & Gorham, by contrast, appeals to the more comfortably circumstanced: there is a nice little ring number for $13,025 and a really cute hunk of ice, described as "emerald cut, tappered baguettes" for $39,500. Thrifty, too, for federal tax is included.

"Somehow this got us to thinking about the Commerce Department's latest study, 'Income Distribution by Size—1955-58.'" There seems to be a certain amount of inequality in this land of the free. If you consider national income as a pie, the lowest fifth of the population gets a thin, poorhouse slice of it—only 4.8 percent. By contrast the fortunate upper fifth gets just about half the pie—45.3 percent.

"That isn't all. If you climb higher into the wealthy classes you find that the upper five percent of Americans, according to the study, get over twenty percent of the country's big income. That's the emerald cut, tapered baguette set. How fortunate we are to live in this best of all possible worlds! Think of the glitter and luster inequality provides! The lower fifth gets something to aspire to, and the upper fifth the tapered baguette."

T. R. B. in The New Republic

Education

Education just can't stand still, even if the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission have said that it must.

During the years immediately ahead, the colleges of North Carolina must carry the biggest loads they have ever had to shoulder. Those are the loads that will come with the enrollment of the "war babies" of World War II years.

And, during those years, the manpower pool from which the colleges can draw their teachers will be the smallest in recent history. For the people who will be of an age then to enter college teaching will come from the "depression class" of babies, a class which saw an extremely small birth rate.

That means that the colleges must hold the teachers they now have if they are to have any chance of adequately caring for the terrific enrollment. It just won't be possible to secure any great number of teachers from the "depression class," since there just won't be enough people in that group.

The only way the colleges can hold their teachers is to pay them adequate salaries, or at the very least hold out to them some hope that such salaries will be forthcoming. The only people who can pay such salaries now, or hold out that hope, are the members of this legislature. The budget as it is now drawn neither authorizes such salaries nor holds out such hope.

In fact, the budget as now drawn does not even permit the Consolidated University to operate for the next two years on the present level.

The same situation holds true in the public schools. The teacher pool will be a small one during the next few years. The schools, therefore, must hold the teachers they now have if they are to be able to maintain even fairly adequate supplies of teachers during the years ahead. It is hard enough to get a good supply of teachers from an adequate man power pool, and it will be doubly hard when the pool is in short supply.

Those who would be willing to run a budgetary risk with the colleges and the public schools of North Carolina at this time are playing a game of Russian roulette with the future of North Carolina's education.

This legislature just can't take a chance like that with the future of our children and the future of our state.

This budget must be expanded to the point where it includes adequate funds for education. If that expansion requires a tax increase or new taxes, then let there be a tax increase or new taxes.

There is nothing sacred about a tax rate.

There is everything sacred about education and children.

Consolidated VIP Talks Money

This year marks the tenth time in the nineteen years that I have worked for the Women's College, State College and the University that we have come to the Legislature for our life-blood. And the job facing this Legislature is the most challenging in the past two decades.

North Carolina stands today on the threshold of its greatest era of development. This is no time to counsel our fears, and our qualifications. It is a time that calls for solid faith and high hope. It is a time for bold courage — clear thinking and positive action.

We have pulled ourselves up by our educational shoe-strings. Our people have sacrificed to the limits of their financial resources to build a great three-fold University. We can well be proud of its distinction and its achievements.

Grants from the federal government, grants from the great National Foundations, gifts from beneficient alumni and friends who have shared their God-given good fortune with us, gifts to our own institutional foundations have enabled us to keep our heads above mediocrity.

Here in North Carolina, with our neighboring University and our excellent colleges, we have assembled one of the greatest concentrations of faculty-power to be found anywhere in the world. This wealth of intelligence, experience and competence gives substance to the potential and promise of the Research Triangle.

But we must not lose too many of our distinguished faculty-folk, lest we lose our glorious opportunity.

We don't like to talk "poor mouthed;" but our State's wisdom-paced motto: "Esse quam videre" means 'Let's NOT kid ourselves" Let's face the facts—head on!

Despite our multi-faceted efforts to improve our faculty salary levels, we find ourselves in a most vulnerable competitive position.

North Carolina is a happy hunting ground for universities on the prowl for distinguished teachers and reesearchers.

It is impossible for us to match the salaries of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the other "Ivy League" universities; but we are not even keeping abreast of the good state universities—all of which got into business many years after North Carolina started the all-important work of educating our citizenry.

A comparison of the average salaries paid in the four faculty ranks in our institutions with average salaries paid by the fifteen state universities which are members of the American Association shows North Carolina near the bottom.

Almost daily we see the effects of this unfavorable competitive position. Every week one or more of our faculty members receives a more attractive offer from some other university or college.

To cite a few examples:

1. Professor A, in Dramatic Arts at Chapel Hill was offered $4,000 more than our salary by a Pacific Coast University. (He accepted the offer.)

2. Professor B, in Business Administration at Chapel Hill, was offered $3,000 more by a mid-western university.

(From funds contributed by the Business Foundation, his salary was increased $2,000 and he remained in Chapel Hill.)

3. Professor C, an Historian at the Woman's College, was offered $2,500 above his salary, plus a house to live in. (We were able to partially meet this offer and so he is still with us.)

4. Professor D, a Child Psychologist at the Woman's College was offered $2,700 above our salary. (Again, we were able to partially meet this offer and keep him.)

5. Professor E, a Nuclear Physicist at State College, was offered $4,000 more than our salary by a Southern University. (The Engineering Foundation enabled us to offer this man a $2,000 salary increase and a Distinguished Professorship and his is still at the college.)

6. Professor F, another Nuclear Physicist at State College, was offered a $1,500 salary increase by a Southern university. (The Engineering Foundation enabled us to offer him a satisfactory increase an he is still at State College).

Professor G, an agricultural Extensoist at State College, is at this very moment considering an offer of $1,500 above our salary. (If we keep this national figure, we must rely on the Agricultural Foundation.)

8. Professor H, in Animal Nutrition at State College, is being offered $2,000 more than our salary by an Eastern university. (If we keep this man we again must seek fund from the Agricultural Foundation.)

9. Professor I, a Dairy Scientist at State College, was offered $2,500 above our salary. (He accepted the offer and his departure is a great loss to North Carolina dairy and beef cattle industry.)

10. Professor J, in Education at Chapel Hill, was offered $3,500 more than our salary to go into Public School work in North Carolina. (He accepted the offer.)

This list could be multiplied several times. And in addition to the faculty members whom we have lost to more attractive offers elsewhere, there is another list of faculty positions of our own that we have not been able to fill because the salaries are too low to get people who come up to our standards.

Our Endowment and Foundation funds have enabled us to keep many of our distinguished scholars who have received offers of more money elsewhere—but we are stretching these funds mighty close to their present limits.

It is well to remember that the idea of these funds is to supplement rather than to supplant state appropriations. We must pay higher state salaries if we are to maintain our prestige and our distinction.

As Governor Hodges said in Athens, Georgia, last year in an address to the Regional Conference of Governing Boards of Higher Institutions: "In the race for accomplishment, our region is starting from farther back than most of the other regions of the nation. And I may say to all of you in the South, as I say to my fellow citizens regularly in North Carolina, we must spend in this region more money for education than we can afford."

The increased appropriation money which we are asking the General Assembly will permit us —belatedly — to tangible recognize our most distinguished teachers and researchers.

Also, it will put us in a favorable competitive position and should enable us to keep most of our distinguished faculty.

We close with a song of prayer in our hearts — a song we all love very much: "Carolina, Carolina, Heaven's blessings attend her." And we are ever mindful that Heaven helps those who help themselves.

We will continue our efforts to build Foundation support. We will continue to seek private benefactions. We will continue to develop every possible resource. But, we must continue to look to the General Assembly as the chief source of the life-blood — the basic support — for the Woman's College, for State College and for the University in Chapel Hill.

During this crucial General Assembly week in Raleigh members of the joint subcommittee on appropriations should give special attention to the precarious plight of Woman's College.

This branch of the Consolidated University of North Carolina not only has been denied modest requests for enrichment of certain aspects of its mission (B budget) ; its continuing appropriation (A budget) also has suffered the meat-ax.

Such action by the Advisory Budget Commission might have been anticipated if requests had been padded or out of line.

But instead Woman's College's budget got the pre-Budget Bureau treatment and already had been shorn of all fat (and some lean) before it reached the Advisory Budget Commission. Serious doubt existed in the minds of some friends of Woman's College whether certain budgetary items should have been placed in the B budget (new activities) instead of the A budget ((continuing level requests) Why, for example, should a recipts deficit on enrollment be considered a "new activity"?

But these decisions were made in advance of Advisory Budget Commission perusal, with W. C. administrators vrtually assured that they would not be jeopardized.

Not only were these A budget items in the B budget denied; the A budget itself was scaled down disastrously so that the institution here will be severely handicapped unless restitutions are made.

There is no room here to cite figures. They can readily be found in the red and blue budget books.

But there is room to make several observations about the mission of Woman's College.

In the first place, Woman's College has been an integral part of the Consolidated University since the early '30's. As a university unit its costs per pupil and its instructors per pupil cannot be compared with those of strictly non-university-type institutions.

The cost per pupil ratio at Woman's College (around $660) already is far beneath that of comparable institutions in South Carolina and Georgia.

In the second place, Woman's College offers the only first and second year university training for women among state-supported institutions. Women cannot get this training at Chapel Hill and few are enrolled at N. C. State College. Woman's College, as part of the university, must offer more than bare minimum instruction in undergraduate and graduate courses. Teacher training is only one important phase of its mission.

Such enrichment as W. C. already has developed must not be scaled down on the basis of comparative statistics and IBM mentality.

Woman's College is in serious trouble. The Advisory Budget Commission has failed to comprehend its mission. Unless the joint appropriations subcommittee recognizes the bone-cutting nature of presently recommended figures Woman's College will be severely handicapped. Such outstanding faculty members as it now retains will be attracted elsewhere and retrogression will set in.

In essence, Woman's College is being asked to curtail sharply its operations in a period of flood-tide enrollment and advancing horizons for education.

Such a philosophy must not prevail in Raleigh.

Junior Nurse Is Selected For Program

Willie May Davenport, member of the junior class of the UNC School of Nursing, became the first student nurse in either of the Carolinas Thursday to be selected for participation in the Navy Nurse Corps Candidate Program.

Her oath of office and acceptance of her contract with the Navy was administered by Capt. Carl Tiedman, professor of naval science and tactics and commanding officer of the UNC Naval ROTC.

The ceremony, witnessed by Miss Davenport's classmates and friends, was held in the Naval ROTC Armory here.

The Navy Nurse Corps Candidate Program is an educational scholarship type of program which gives selected college nursing students an opportunity to join the Navy while continuing their education, and on completion, be commissioned as ensign in the Nurse Corps.

The Navy enrolls annually a limited number of nursing students who are in approved collegiate schools of nursing. Those selected for this program receive $99.37 per month plus tuition fees, books, room and board throughout their senior year.

No Moth Balls For Mother!

Mom is no antique, pal, and she'll thank you for letting her know that you know it.

Facades may change a bit with the years, but you can take our word for it, mom's the same lively biddy who put your old man through the hoops not so long ago.

She'll thank you for opening the doors of youth to her. She'll be no end delighted with the sort of things that delight you, like, maybe, Passionella, Sick, Sick Sick, or a Charles Addams cartoon book.

If that's too steep a price, at least send her a youthful card. To hell with the Lavendar and Old Lace stuff, pal. Come humpety-humpety over to the old Intimate and give Mom something with life in it!

Hodges Warns Against Violence As Patrolmen Leave Henderson

RALEIGH, May 8—(AP)—Gov. Luther Hodges announced today that Highway Patrolmen on strike duty at Henderson will be removed over the weekend. Then he issued a stern warning that if violence at the strike-bound Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills again requires state assistance, "I shall immediately order National Guard units into Henderson" to act as law enforcement officers.

The governor said in a statement read at a news conference that conditions in Henderson have improved in recent days "to such and extent that the State can withdraw its special detachment of patrolmen."

It was quiet on the picket lines Friday morning and afternoon as the struck plants were set to finish another week of limited operations.

Hodges' statement came after he had conferred with Mayor C. V. Singleton and Police Chief C. C. Harris of Henderson and a representative of the Vance County sheriff's office.

He said they had advised him that "approximately 55 local law enforcement officers are available for duty in and around the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills."

"This should be an adequate number of officers to maintain law and order under existing circumstances," Hodges added.

In answer to a question from newsmen, Hodges said a guard unit had been alerted for possible strike service at Henderson. He said he did not know which unit. However, Adj. Gen. Capus Waynick indicated that the unit was all or part of the 3rd Military Police Company at Greensboro.

Hodges said he was notifying Boyd Payton, Regional Director of the Textile Workers Union of America, and the presidents of the TWUA locals involved in the long drawn-out Henderson strike of his decision to use Guardsmen if it again becomes necessary for the State to act to maintain order at Henderson.

Pharmacy Awards

The annual Awards Night will be held at the School of Pharmacy Tuesday, May 12.

The awards that will be presented will include the following: Pharmacy Faculty Award, Buxton Williams Hunter Medal in Pharmacy, School of Pharmacy Student Body Award, Lehn and Fink Gold Medal Award, Bristol Award in Pharmacy and two Merck Awards in Pharmacy.

The Rexall Award in Pharmacy Administration, Kappa Epsilon Award, Pharmacy Senate Award, M. L. Jacobs Memorial Award, Rho Chi First Year Award and the Key for Outgoing Student Body President will also be presented.

Both Sides Of Struggle Discussed

The two views of the East-West struggle will be presented during an open discussion at the Baptist Student Union's supper forum Sunday night.

Denton Lotz will present the Barthian view that the gospel transcends all systems. Another speaker, who has not yet been named, will give the opposing theological view of Reinhold Niebuhr, and American theologian, who warns European ministers to practice restraint.

The discussion will deal with Karl Barth's recent "Letter to an East German Pastor," which has aroused debate about the nature of the Communist state and the Christian responsibility to it. The letter emphasizes one view in the role of the church in the struggle between Communism and democracy.

The nature of the disagreement as to the correct policy in this struggle will be brought out in the discussion.

Time Magazine Cites Paper On Alcoholism

Of the 170 papers presented at the 113th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association in Philadelphia last week, two of the papers, both on alcoholism, have received attention in the current (May 11) issue of Time Magazine.

The writer of one of these papers was Dr. John A. Ewing of the Department of Psychiatry of the UNC School of Medicine. The other paper was by Dr. William Browne of the University of Pittsburgh.

The title of Dr. Ewing's paper is "Concurrent Group Psychotherapy of Alcoholic Patients and Their Wives." The co-authors of this work were Virginia Long, psychiatric social worker of the UNC Department of Psychiatry, and Gustave G. Wenzell, former psychologist of the department.

The magazine article pointed out three problem cases found with married alcoholics. One was the wife generally knew of her husband's drinking problems before marriage. "Marriage to an alcoholic is no accident," Dr. Ewing said. "Some women repeat it two or three times."

Another case concerned a woman who got upset when her husband became sober.

"GENTLEMAN AND SCHOLAR"
High praise, indeed, for any man! But did you know that the description comes from Robert Burns—who said it first about a dog? Here's the quote:
"His locked, lettered, brass collar Showed him the gentleman and scholar."
You'll find the couplet in Burns' "The Twa Dogs."

"THE MORNING AFTER"
This horrible time was first immortalized by George Ade in "The Sultan of Sulu." Here's the way he put it:
"But, R-E-M-O-R-S-E!
The water-wagon is the place for me;
It is no time for mirth and laughter,
The cold, gray dawn of the morning after!"

"MAN BITES DOG"
That's everybody's definition of news, and we're all indebted to John B. Bogart, city editor of the old New York Sun (1873-90) who first said:
"When a dog bites a man, that is not news, because it happens so often. But if a man bites a dog, that is news!"

Tar Heels Bump Virginia, 5-2; Meet Maryland Here Today

Hollers And Norton Homer As Hammett Wins Number 5

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Powered by the home runs blasts of Russ Hollers and Ferg Norton, Carolina knocked off Virginia 5-2 yesterday to move one step closer to Tuesday's battle with Wake Forest which could decide the ACC title.

By virtue of Today's win coupled with Maryland's 9-5 victory over Wake Forest the Tar Heels move into first place in the ACC race by halt a game over the Deacons. Carolina is now 8-4 in the conference while the Deacs are 7-4 having lost two straight.

The victory gives the Tar Heels an eight game winning streak to carry into today's contest with Maryland which will come off at 3 o'clock in Emerson Stadium.

Lefty Ben Hammett received credit for the win over the Cavaliers but it took some sharp relief work on the part of Ben Hardng to finish up the game. Hammett, who is now 5-1 for the year, went seven innings but when he walked Reece Whitley to open the eighth, Coach Walter Rabb pulled him in favor of Harding.

Harding Retire Five Straight

After yielding a single to Herb Basch, the first man he faced, Harding got tough as he set down the next five Cavalier batters to wrap up the game.

The Tar Heels rapped out eight hits off the offerings of Rodney Brown as Hollers and Al Baldwin led the way with two apiece. The visitors mustered only five base knocks and didn't collect their first one until the fourth inning.

Carolina jumped out in front with a run in the first frame and were never headed from then on. Harold Workman opened the game for the winners by getting on on a two-base error charged to centerfielder Tom Gravins. After an infield ground out by Johnny Burgwyn moved him to third, Workman scored on a single by Hollers.

Baldwin Triples

Held hitless for the next two innings the Tar Heels picked up another run in their half of the fourth as Baldwin led off with a long triple to right and came home on a sacrifice fly by Norton. Baldwin could have had himself a homer but his ball, which landed in the right-field hedge, bounced back on the playing field and was hustled back into the infield.

The Cavaliers cut the Carolina margin to one in their half of the sixth as Gravins led off with a double and scored on John Barger's single.

Hollers Poles Homer

After Hammett had retired the Cavaliers without further damage in the sixth, Hollers put the Heels right back into a two-run lead with a long shot to the right-centerfield fence. The Carolina sophomore scored standing up since Gravins had a long run to get the ball and couldn't get it in in time to make a play.

Virginia once again cut the Tar Heel margin to one in the eighth on a walk, a passed ball, and a single, but that was their final tally.

Once again Carolina rallied, however, and their two in the eighth sailed the victory away. With one out Hollers walked and, after Baldwin had fouled out, he rode home on Norton's four bagger which rolled all the way to the scoreboard in deep left center.

Terps Grab ACC Track Lead

The Terps qualified 24 men for the event, more than twice the number qualified by their closest rival, North Carolina, with 11.

Duke and South Carolina qualified eight men each; Clemson had four; North Carolina State and Virginia two each, and Wake Forest, one.

No records were set in the muggy heat on the Gamecock cinder layout, but Maryland may be headteam points scored.
ing for a record Saturday in total

The old conference record is 83½, etablished by the Terps in 1957.

In such events as the high jump and pole vault, which require no qualifying, Maryland also has favored entries.

Buddy Mayfield, a Gamecock standout in the 440, pulled a muscle on the far turn and failed to finish the race.

The meet Saturday will feature a mile-run contest involving three standouts—Billy Latham of South Carolina; Cary Weisiger of Duke, and Francis Colavito, of Maryland

The qualifiers First name had best time or distance:

440-yard run — Dave Scurlock, North Carolina; John Dunkelberg, Clemson; John Lowndes, Maryland; Tom Menaker, Duke; Wayne Smith, Maryland; Ben Seagle, North Carolina. 49.4

UNC To Host ACC Tennis Finals Today

By JOHN B. JUSTICE

The ACC tennis singles finals today will be exactly as predicted by the pre-tourney seeds. Bill Cullen of Wake Forest, number one, and Ray York, of Virginia the second choice, will match strokes and strategy at one o'clock this afternoon.

Geoff Black, Carolina's contender for the crown, was rudely upset by Mickey Solomon of North Carolina State, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. Solomon, ranked eighth, after defeating Black, the third seeded man, later lost to York in the semifinals, 6-3, 6-1.

Coach Don Skakle's ace doubles team, of Bruce Sylvia and Marshall Happer, the favorites of the tournament advanced to the semifinals by dint of wins over Berton and Ruben of Duke and Tommy Ricks and Neil Dickman of Carolina. Sylvia and Happer will go against the winner of the Black-Keys (UNC) - Cullen-Nelson (WF) match, which was tied at a set each when darkness fell.

In the other semifinal doubles match, York and Felt of Virginia will meet Gaston and Katz of Duke. The doubles match will begin at nine thirty this morning, and the finals are slated for 3 o'clock.

In the intense race for the coveted John F. Kenfield Memorial Trophy Carolina leads the pack with 15 points, followed by the Cavaliers of Virginia with 14. Duke and Clemson, with 13 points each, are tied for third.

The climactic match in the singles promises to be a very close and well-played one. Cullen has lost once in ACC action, that lone defeat at the hands of Geoff Black. York likewise has come out on bottom a single instance; however, that loss was to Cullen.

If Black and Keys win their incompleted doubles match, scheduled for 9 o'clock, at least one Carolina team will be assured of a berth in the finals.

Singles - Bill Cullen (WF) defeated Abelson (M) 6-1, 6-2. Nasim (C) defeated Gaston (D) 6-2, 6-2; York (V) defeated Sumner (C) 6-3, 3-6, 6-2; Solomon (NCS) defeated Black (UNC) 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Semi-Final Singles - Cullen defeated Nasim 6-3, 6-1; York defeated Solomon 6-3, 6-1.

Wake Forest And Duke Take ACC Golf Lead

By J. R. BROWN

Duke's Blue Devils and Wake Forest's Deacs took the lead in the sixth annual A.C.C. tournament yesterday at Finley Golf Course with a four man total of 284. Duke's Dick Siderowf stroked a four under par 68 to lead the field for individual honors. Siderowf, who putted very well, had 33-35 on the par 72 course.

Wake Forest was lead by Phil Weichman and Ron Thomas with 69 and 70 respectively. Weichman played extremely well, seldom missing the greens in regulation. Wake's team which was favored going into the meet was fairly consistent in scoring. Along with Weichman and Thomas, Tom Taylor and Tommy Helms carried 73 and 72.

Carolina's linksmen are in third place, six strokes off the lead. The Heels posted a four man total of 290. All six men fired between 72 and 74 which will put them in good position for the team trophy. Since the scores of the lowest four men out of six are used in determining the team winner, the Tar Heels have an excellent chance. The winner of the meet goes to Oregon for the N.C.A.A. tournament and the Heel squad would like to be that team.

Highlight of the day was a subpar round by Carolina's John McKee. McKee shot a 70 but his round does not count toward team score since he is not a member of the top six. His round will count for individual play, however. The scores of the top six are as follows: Ed Justa, 73; Paul Erhardt, 72; Hugh Goodman, 73; Don MacMillan, 72; Bob Galloway, 73; Walt Wilson, 74.

Following these three come Maryland (292), State (297), U.V.A. (300), Clemson (311), and South Carolina, who dropped out. Gorden Ball of Virginia shot a three under 69, and Maryland's John Owen had a 70 placing them in contention for the individual trophy. Also Duke's Jim McKenzie stroked a 70. So the battle for the trophy will be hotly contested today. Tee-off time starts at 9:00 a.m.

DEACONS LOSE

WINSTON-SALEM, May 8 (AP) — Maryland drove Wake Forest Ace Righthander Bob Plemmons from the mound in the second inning today and went on to a 9-5 victory which toppled the Deacons from first place in the torrid Atlantic Coast Conference baseball race.

The defeat left Wake Forest with a 7-4 conference mark, a full game behind the new leader North Carolina which turned back Virginia at Chapel Hill today, 5-2.

John Foster Dulles Has Pneumonia

WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP) — A mild attack of pneumonia has further weakened the condition of John Foster Dulles, seriously ill with cancer.

The 71-year-old former secretary of State suffered the attack at Walter Reed army hospital, where he has been a patient much of the time since Feb. 12.

"Secretary Dulles has contracted a mild pneumonia," the State Department said today in a medicl bulletin. "Thein itial response to antibiotics has been satisfactory and his temperature is now normal.

"He is, however, somewhat weaker."

A department press officer, Joseph Reap, said he did not know when Dulles contrcted the pneumonia. Since his temperature was reported returned to normal, he presumably was suffering from it yesterday, when he had at least three visitors.

Dulles' successor, Secretary Christian A. Herter, dropped by the hospital to say goodby before leaving in mid-afternoon for the Big Four foreign ministers' conference in Geneva. The State Department said then that as Herter left after their brief talk, Dulles called out, "Good luck, Chris."

Earlier, President Eisenhower and his friend, Washington businessman George E. Allen, had dropped in for what was described as a half-hour visit while on their way to Eisenhower's Camp David retreat near Thurmont, Md.

The most recent public photograph of Dulles showed him looking wan and thin but in apparent good spirits when Eisenhower and Sir Winston Churchill visited him at the hospital Tuesday.

Dulles was in a wheel chair then. The State Department said Dulles was able to walk, but sometimes found the wheel chair more convenient for such travel as trips to the hospital sun porch.

Dulles is fighting his second bout with cancer. Surgery proved temporarily successful in 1956 against an intestinal cancer. When a recurrence was discovered in February, doctors decided to rely on massive radiation. On April 14 they reported evidence of a cancerous growth in Dulles' lower neck. His resignation as secretary of state was announced the following day.

Ten days ago some improvement in Dulles' comfort and general condition was reported. Press Officer Reap said then: "his spirits are good and his weight is stationary. There has been a general easing of the pain."

Pianist To Be Soloist With Symphony Tuesday

Lilian P. Pruett, pianist, will be guest soloist with the University of North Carolina Symphony in a concert to be presented in Hill Hall on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

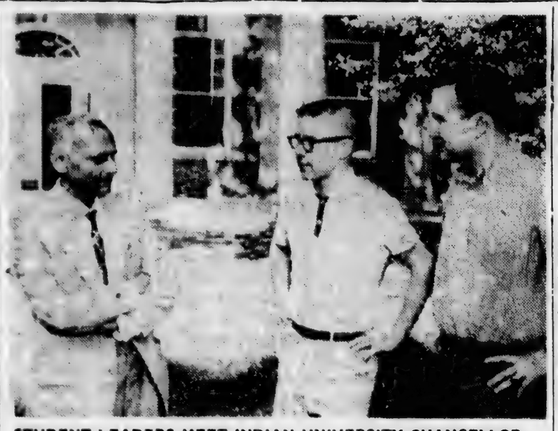
Performing Mozart's Concerto in C Major, K. 503, Mrs. Pruett and the orchestra under the baton of Earl Slocum will play the final concert of this season's Tuesday Evening Series.

Instructor in piano and graduate assistant in the UNC Music Department, Mrs. Pruett is a native of Zagreb, Yugoslavia. She studied music in Zagreb and in Salzburg, Austria, where she received a certificate in piano from the Mozarteum. In 1950 she won a scholarship to Vassar College and graduated in 1952 with a B.A. in music.

Since coming to Chapel Hill as a graduate student in musicology, Mrs. Pruett has appeared on both the Tuesday Evening Series and the Petite Musicale Series.

The University Symphony, made up of students, faculty and townspeople, will also play "Good Friday Spell" from Wagner's "Parsifal;" Symphony No. 2 (Romantic) by Howard Hanson; and "Polovetsian Dances" from Borodin's opera, "Prince Igor."

Under the direction of Professor Slocum for the past 14 years, the orchestra has performed 115 works from the symphonic literature and has accompanied the Chapel Hill Choral Club in 88 major choral works.



STUDENT LEADERS MEET INDIAN UNIVERSITY CHANCELLOR— Dr. B. N. Jha, vice chancellor of the University of Gorakhpur in India is shown being greeted by Daily Tar Heel Editor Davis B. Young and Student Body President Charlie Gray in front of Graham Memorial. He was here as part of a two month tour of American universities and colleges. Dr. Jha's son is a student at the University of Oregon.

Old Landmark Felled As Man 'Defeats' Wood

Timberrr
Hurray

These were the cries of Carolina students Friday morning about 9:55 a.m. as the last section of a big Post Oak, stripped of its limbs, came tumbling down with a muffled thud near the campus flagpole.

Workmen of the Armstrong Tree Co., working in a roped area held a guide line taught as students came milling from their 9 a.m. classes. Using an electric saw, servicemen were cutting away at the base of the 30 ft. trunk in the last phase of the felling operation.

Immediately upon seeing the situation, approximately 200 inquisitive students stopped to watch the action and expected the tree to fall any minute. The tree had grown straight up and made it necessary for the servicemen to cut almost every inch of the base before it would fall, even with men pulling on it with a rope.

Students laid their books down in curious interest of the falling operation. Even those who had 10 a.m. classes disregarded the bell when they saw the tree was just before falling. They wanted to see the grand finale which was to come moments later.

As it fell, yells of "timberrrrrrrr" and a triumphant "hurray" burst forth in unison from the 200 or more curious students. Once again mankind overcame one of nature's phenomena.

After the oak had been felled, activity resumed and sounds made from quick-stepping students hurrying to classes could be heard up and down the campus walkways.

According to Norman Armstrong of the Armstrong Tree Co., the Post Oak was dead, having suffered from a blight called Endothia which has recently been attacking North Carolina Chestnut trees.

Armstrong said also that during a re-grading of the campus 30 years ago dirt used to fill in places caused stoppage of oxgen and water to the roots of the oak. The tree had been dying slowly since that time and when the leaves didn't come out this year the decision was made to cut it down.

Improvements Begin To Improve Facilities

While interest in improving schools continues to receive much attention both locally and nationally, the University is moving ahead in providing top facilities for educating teachers.

A $660,000 addition to Peabody Hall now under construction will more than double the space available to the School of Education when it is put into use by June 1960.

Dean Arnold Perry points out that the four-story, L-shaped addition will provide critically-needed space for basic activities in teaching, library study and demonstration work.

Adequate space for special education will be available for the first time in the Education School's program. A reading clinic, special education work and audio-visual activities will be conducted in specially designed rooms.

Double use of the Peabody education library will be eliminated when the new facilities are completed. A large Curriculum Laboratory and Library is to be located on the addition's main floor, and a multi-purpose room which can be used for assemblies or conferences will be available on the ground floor.

The present Peabody structure, almost half a century old, has three floors. The addition will have four floors with 54,729 square feet of space.

Construction by Gastonia general contractor Robert H. Pinnix is progressing rapidly, and will soon hide forever "old" Peabody's exterior facing Cameron Avenue and Columbia Street.

The addition, designed by Raleigh architects F. Carter Williams, A. I. A.; Macon S. Smith and Turner G. Williams, will be joined to the old structure by first floor passageways. A split-level connection between old and new will be necessary on the upper level because ceiling heights differ.

Thinking of the future when the present Peabody structure may have to be razed, the designers have made possible an eventual U-shaped building if another wing should be added.

Construction began in January and completion is scheduled for early spring of 1960, the dean reports. Equipment will be installed and the building is expected to be in full use by the summer session next year.

Summer studies in the education field can then be expanded, and more special conferences for school personnel can be held.

G. M. SLATE

No activities are scheduled in Graham Memorial today; however, Monday's schedule is as follows:

Audit Bd., 2-4 p.m., Woodhouse; Finance Committee, 4-6 p.m., Grail; Activities session of Orientation, 4:30-5:30, Woodhouse; S. P., 7-9 p.m., Roland Parker 1 & 2; German Club, 7-9 p.m., Woodhouse; Bridge, 7-9 p.m., Rendezvous; Dance Committee, 7:15-8:15 p.m., Grail; Grail, 9 p.m., Grail; Student Athletic Council, 9-11 p.m. Woodhouse.

Picnic Time!

It's picnic time!

This time with an international taste.

The Cosmopolitan Club will spread its annual International Picnic today at the home of Dr. John Gillin.

In addition to the picnic, election of new officers take place Sunday.

Club members, their guests and students majoring in international affairs have been invited to attend. They are asked to meet at Graham Memorial at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Big Four Meet To Discuss Berlin Monday

By BRACK CURRY

GENEVA, May 9 (AP)—The foreign ministers of the United States, France and the Soviet Union flew into Geneva today expressing hope Big Four talks opening Monday can roll back the menace of war.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve De Murville expresed hope that a Summit Meeting will result from the foreign minister conference.

Secretary of State Chritian A. Herter, last of the three to arrive, made no mention of a summit meeting. He said he hoped the talks would lead to a lasting peace. The United States wants a summit meeting only if the foreign ministers make progress.

Selwyn Lloyd, British Foreign Secretary, is due in tomorrow from London and will go into a secret meeting almost at once with Herter and Couve De Murville.

"I have come to Geneva to join my British and French colleagues in discussions with the Soviet foreign minister of various aspects of the problem of a divided Germany," Herter said at the airport.

"The United States approaches these negotiations with a sincere desire to achieve positive results. We trust that our deliberations will pave the way for a final and overdue settlement which would serve to reduce international tension and be a step on the long road to establishing a just and durable peace in Europe."

Couve de Murville said the Soviet Union had provoked the crisis over Berlin and added: "the object of this conference is to find a way out of this (Berlin) crisis and to prepare the way for a summit meeting."

This indicated a possible loosening of the French position. France has backed the United States in insisting that the foreign ministers produce some positive results before there is any meeting of the heads of government.

Gromyko, the first to arrive, said his government "will make every effort for this conference to be crowned with success." He said he hoped the talks "will prepare an early convocation of a conference of the heads of government."

Brooks Wins Mangum Medal

John Brooks, president of the Philanthropic Literary Society, won the Mangum Medal for oratory in a close contest Friday night.

Brooks competed against Curtis Gans, former editor of The Daily Tar Heel, for the award.

The topic on which Brooks spoke was "Remember," a presentation of the Hungarian revolution of 1956. He told of Freedom Fighters, ordinary men and women, who struggled to establish their independence from Russian domination. Finally they were defeated, he said, by treachery and by the overwhelming might of the Red army.

Gans spoke extemporaneously about the recent trial by the Men's Honor Council of a student who had been charged with cheating. He related how the student's fundamental rights had been violated in a number of ways during the course of his trial. The student was not allowed to face his accuser, was not allowed to examine the quiz on which he was supposed to have cheated, and was treated in a completely arbitrary manner by the court.

After some deliberation by the judges, Brooks was awarded the Mangum Medal by a vote of 2 to 1.

The Mangum Medal is presented each year to the outstanding senior orator. It was established in 1878 by Misses Martin Person and Mary Mangum of Orange County in memory of their father, Willie P. Mangum, a member of the University class of 1815.

Paddy Sue Wall Is Named Irene Lee Award Winner

IRENE LEE AWARD AT UNC — Miss Paddy Sue Wall (center) is shown receiving a silver cup as 1959 winner of the Irene Lee Award. Charles M. Shaffer, director of development, presented the cup to Miss Wall as Dean of Women, Katherine K. Carmichael looks on.

Senior Girl Recipient Of Honor

The Irene F. Lee Award, given to the most outstanding senior woman student here, has been won this year by Miss Paddy Sue Wall of Winston-Salem.

A silver cup has been given Miss Wall as part of the annual award, which was established in 1955 by Mrs. Irene F. Lee of Chapel Hill, hostess and counselor at UNC's Spencer Hall from 1925 to 1948. Mrs. Lee died in 1957.

Outstanding qualities of initiative, cooperation, leadership, character, industry, perserverance, ideals, judgment, dependability and scholarship are sought in selecting the Lee Award recipient.

Presentation of the cup was made by Charles M. Shaffer, director of development at the University, in the office of Dr. Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, dean of women.

Miss Wall, a sociology major, was the recipient in her junior year of the Jane Craige Gray Award as the outstanding junior woman. Secretary of the student body during the past year, she has been active in many phases of campus life.

She has been president of the Valkyries, highest honorary for women students; vice president of Alpha Gamma Delta, social sorority; representative to the Women's Residence Council; secretary of the Board of Directors of Graham Memorial Student Union and recently elected Miss Alumna and permanent senior class secondary.

Other participation has been in orientation committee, Order of the Old Well, Yackety Yack, YWCA, Baptist Student Union, Splash Club, State Student Legislature; Cosmopolitan Club, Angel Flight, and Student Legislature at UNC. She has maintained a "high B" average in her studies.

Miss Wall is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Wall of Winston-Salem. Before entering UNC she was a student at Mars Hill College.

New Athletic Council To Meet At 9 Monday

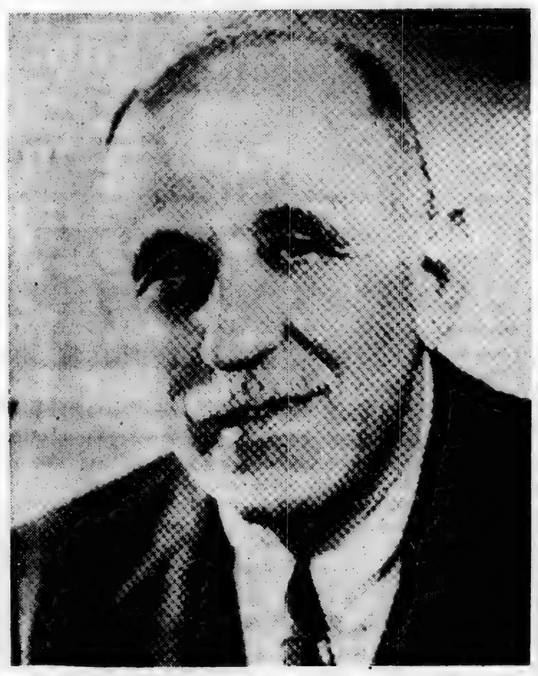
Called by Angus Duff, president of the Carolina Athletic Association, the newly established Student Carolina Athletic Council will meet Monday night at 9 o'clock in the Woodhouse Room of Graham Memorial.

According to Duff this is the first meeting of the council, and it will elect its officers at this time.

The council was established by the student Legislature "to coordinate and help plan the activities of the student representatives to the Carolina Athletic Association, and, furthermore, that they strive to publicize and represent the best interests of all Carolina students in athletic matters."

The council is composed of 13 members selected because of their positions in relation to athletics.

Medical School To Hear Pathologist Lecture



Dr Paul Klemperer of New York will give the fourth Lee B. Jenkins Lecture at the School of Medicine Wednesday, at 4 p.m. The lectures were established in memory of the late Lee B. Jenkins of Kinston.

Dr. Paul Klemperer of New York will be the fourth Lee B. Jenkins Lecturer at the School of Medicine Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Dr. Klemperer will speak on "One Hundred Years of Virchow's Cellular Pathology. The lecture is open to the public. It will be held in the Clinic Auditorium.

The Lee B. Jenkins Endowment was established in 1954 by Mrs. Jenkins in memory of her husband, a prominent civic-minded industrialist of Kinston. Since its establishment, the endowment has brought some of the country's most prominent medical scientists to Chapel Hill for lectures and consultations.

Dr. Klemperer is a native of Austria who came to America in 1921. In 1926 he was appointed pathologist to the Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York City, a post he filled until his retirement several years ago.

Since his retirement he has divided his time between the Cell Research Laboratory of the Mt Sinai Hospital, where he directs basic cellular research, and the Library of the New York Academy of Medicine, where he continues his studies of the historical background of our present concepts in medicine.

In addition to training many of the country's current pathologists he has made a number of outstanding contributions to medicine. His most noteworthy studies have been on the so-called "collagen diseases", such as rheumatic fever and rheumatoid arthritis. His basic investigations stimulated widespread interest in these diseases and have led to much better understanding of their nature and treatment.

Million Dollar Fire Begun By 10-Year-Old

BALTIMORE, May 9 (AP) — Police said a 10-year-old boy— ward of the city welfare department—has admitted starting a million-dollar fire that destroyed a large grocery warehouse early today.

The young negro boy was picked up about 4 a.m., after he had been seen at the fire for more than three hours. Officers questioned him at length at a district police station, then reported the child admitted setting the fire accidentally.

The 12-alarm blaze turned the large one-story warehouse of B. Green & Co. into a charred mass of ruined grocery stores, tumbled walls and a half-melted roof.

Police said the boy said he was looking for canned goods that might have spilled from the warehouse loading platform about 12:30 a.m. when he dropped a match into some paper. The paper ignited some loading sleds. He said he tried to extinguish the spreading blaze with sand but was unsuccessful. Then he stayed around and watched.

The boy, staying with an 80-year-old foster father, was to be charged with being a delinquent.

WC Tours!

The Theatre of the Woman's College will play here in the Chapel Hill High School auditorium, May 16, when it presents its touring play, Charlotte Chorpenning's "King Midas and the Golden Touch."

WC is the only college in the South to tour a children's play. It will have a five -day tour.

The company of 14 will be directed by Herman Middleton, WC Drama Department head. Ray Smith also of the drama faculty, is scene designer.

Members of the cast are Charlene Moskal, Columbus, Ga.; Nancy Carrier and Jane Parkins, both of Greensboro, and Maryanne Pinkernell, Flushing, N. Y., all WC students.

Also, Richard Brodeur, Bruce Johnson and Marty Jacobs, all of Greensboro.

The company will carry a complete set of scenery, Greek costumes, make-up, and lighting and sound systems.

The production is designed to appeal to the five to twelve group but because of the magical aspects it will be of interest to older groups.

Red Face Dept.

Sunburn? No, we're blushing.

In the listing of President Charlie Gray's appointments to student government posts, Al Pollard was named as being on the Traffic Court.

However, Johnny McConnell's name should have appeared on that list, not Pollard's.

Recital Is Set Today

Louise McGee, mezzo-soprano, and James Gibbs, tenor, will present a junior recital in Hill Hall Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The program is open to the public.

Both students are music majors studying voice with Dr. Joel Carter, associate professor in the University of North Carolina music department. Their program will include songs in Italian by Caccini, Scarlatti, Handel, Marcello and Gluck; in German by Schubert, Brahms, Strauss and Weber; in French by Thomas, Duparc, Debussy and Vidal; and in English by Purcell, Diers, Bacon and Persichetti.

Miss McGee, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. McGee of Greensboro, transferred to UNC last September from Duke University where she was a member of Duke Women's Chorus and the Duke Chapel Choir.

She sings in the University Chorus, the Presbyterian Church Choir, and was a member of the chorus in the recent student production of "Sound and Fury."

James Gibbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Gibbs, Asheville, was a music major at Mars Hill College before transferring to the University last Sept.

A member of the Mars Hill touring choir, he was also Baptist student music director and vice-president of the Philomathian Literary Society.

In addition to solo appearances on student recitals and with church choirs both in Asheville and Chapel Hill, Gibbs sings with the UNC Glee Club and the UNC Chorus. Most recently he sang the role of King Cepheus an original opera done by UNC students.

Mother's Day

The editor would like to take this opportunity to wish each and every mother, past, present and future the happiest of Mother's Days.

Alumni

Perhaps one reason why the Consolidated University of North Carolina is having such difficulty in obtaining the funds it needs is because the alumni are too far removed from their former campus and the students have no genuine appreciation or concept of just what a university is, could be or should be.

Having dined with a group of alumni, we know that we were rebuffed when attempting to discuss the next biennium's budget, and encouraged to voice opinions on the football and basketball teams. Now we have a long record of being in favor of winning teams, but also have an equally long record of being in favor of winning budgets.

There is little doubt in our mind that the alumni represent the greatest untapped resource available to the University. We say untapped because they generally don't appear to be fully cognizant of our problems, this comes from being removed from the Chapel Hill community. The result is, they give more to the Educational Foundation than to the Alumni Annual Giving Drive. Already this year, the former has netted about $100,000, while the latter will only have a kitty of approximately 80% of that figure.

The Chancellor has told us that vast plans are being made to take teams of administrators, faculty members and outstanding students out to meet the alumni in the various towns wherever they are. We wholeheartedly endorse such a program, as UNC graduates must recognize our problems, not only financial, but also otherwise.

And, at the same time, the students must be educated to the future potential of the University, its goals and its rough spots. No person should ever leave this University without a full knowledge of what has gone into giving him what he has received.

These again, are just two of the problems facing our administrators. They must find a solution to them. Alumni, both present and future, must be made aware that Chapel Hill is bigger and more important than Kenan Stadium alone.

NSA

The Student Legislature has done it again. They have defeated the reconsideration of a bill to send an additional delagate to the National Student Association Congress this summer, which would have upped Carolina's delegation from nine to ten, still two shy of full representation.

We have no bone of contention with any group that keeps a beedy little eye on the condition of its finances. Having appeared ourselves before hearings of the Finance Committee of Student Legislature, we are pleased with the toughness of its members in examining the needs of those soliciting funds.

But enough of this damning with faint praise. The heart of the matter is simply that the student solons by saving a mere $85 (the cost of sending another representative to Chicago for NSA) are "cutting off their nose to spite their face."

For, a delegtae who goes to an NSA function and does his job, can bring back more to this campus than $85 invested in any other place could.

We laud carefullness. We respect conservatism. We appreciate the pressures and problems of the Student Legislature. We understand financial problems.

But we are repulsed when we see a unique and outstanding organization (NSA) chopped to pieces by a group composed of many people who have never even taken the trouble to investigate the benefits derived from NSA participation.

We're still hoping to get that additional delegate to Chicago this summer, even if we have to sell pencils on the street corner.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday and examination periods and summer terms. A Dream? A Lifetime?

Fresh wind blew the smell from our backyard
Down to town unseen by all our kind,
And grandma'd sit out on the porch
To see the flag go by.
She'd click her heels, snap her jaws,
And spit clear 'cross the rail
Atop the preacher's chaste bald head,
He'd turn and look at her and say,
"Jesus sends us rain today."
Then Granny'd laugh and squeal,
And click her feet some more 'til they was sore,
And rockin' in thet chair, she'd sing.
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me, and bring My Saviour, to marry me."
Granny was a debutante,
Spry as a spring lamb,runnin' through the clover;
Singin' was her trade,
And she'd sing all day 'bout how some day
A man would come in a big black buggy,
And marry her . . .
She'd wear her white lace dress and silken slippers
On her feet and she'd ride off down to town
In that big black buggy like a lady.
Then granny'd say:
"Jest wait and see; oh my, oh gee; I'm havin' a fit
'cause my man's acomin' lickedy split."
My papa was a farmer;
He'd seen a lot of fun and life, and he said:
"God don't love nobody who sits on th' porch
All day talkin' 'bout how someday
Her man's comin' 'long to marry her,"
And he'd tell grandma that Jesus killed old ladies
Who didn't go to church every Sunday . . .
Grandma, she just laughed
And said that papa was jest plain crazy,
And that Jesus hadn't never said nuthin'
To that effect, and if he had, nobody had Tole her anything 'bout it.
One day granny cried and began to tell us that she felt so bad and ashamed
'cause there wont no flowers on grandpa's grave,
And there wont no moonbeams to light his head . . .
So granny up and died.
Lil' Annie asked me today where grandma was.
I thought a spell, and Annie was 'bout to cry
So I said:
"Your granny's settin' by a golden gate,
Arockin' in a big gold chair . . .
Why, she's clickin' her heels, Annie, an' spittin'
Down into a cloud all day,
Lookin' for that man to come up in that big,
Black buggy . . .
And then, at night, she sits there rockin', wish her
Pore old hands folded in her lap, an' she's wearin'
A pretty white lace dress and them silken slippers . . .
Yes, Annie, your grandma's jest waitin'.

"Well — Ha Ha — None Of Us Is Perfect"

In and Out

Written By In's For Outs

Frank Crowther

THE IN AND OUT BOOK by Robert Benton and Harvey Schmidt. New York: The Viking Press. $1.95.

In the Silver Anniversary issue of "Esquire" magazine there appeared the first installment of what now has been compiled in book form — namely, the world of IN and OUT. The two-part column which this reviewer compiled for the paper last February, the first French reader of IN and OUT for Paris, was inspired by that first Benton-Schmidt farce. I am very happy to see that the inscription in this book says: "Sting for libel is OUT."

Russell Lynes, who happens to be OUT, wrote an introduction that is short and to the point (which is IN). There are many explanations, he says, that could be put forth to show the necessary conditions which precipitated (an OUT word) this book, but the very fact that we love to choose up sides appears to be reason enough. We like to know who the good and bad guys are and whether we admit it or not, would love to be snobs of a sort. ("Being a real snob is OUT.")

The rules for IN and OUT are actually rather simple, but you're OUT if you have to study them. As the authors write: "A thing can be IN for three reasons: (a) Because it is so classic and great. Example: the Palace Hotel. (b) Because it is so obscure. Example: Veda Ann Borg movies. (c) Because it is so far OUT even the OUT people won't touch it. Example: Tchaikovsky. Some OUT people try to get IN by saying they like IN things but since OUT people can never be IN, they can only manage to ruin some good IN things." But this, too, is further clarified. "Out people who are sincere OUT people are automatically IN." See? (Having to explain things is OUT.)

Further examples: "All greeting cards are OUT, and if you send the bizarre sick kind you are OUT for life." "Wearing the same suit day after day is IN." "Senator Kennedy is so IN he's OUT." "The OUT word of the year: SICK" "It's OUT to say the Beat Generation is OUT but the Beat Generation is OUT."

The book is really worth the money, and you're OUT if you don't think so. Don't get caught reading it, however, for, as the authors say: "This book was written by IN people but is an OUT book."

FROM DEATH-CAMP TO EXISTENTIALISM. By Viktor E. Frankl. Boston: Beacon Press, 111 pp. $3.00.

This book is an attempt by an author-psychiatrist to demonstrate, through the analysis of his own experience, that there is a higher meaning in life. His motto for all psychotherapy and education can be found in the wisdom of Nietsche's words: "He who has a why to live for can bear almost any how."

The first three-fourths of the book is an interesting document in itself, being a record of the inhuman treatment during the second world war of prisoners in camps such as Auschwitz and Dachau. Though there have been so many works already written on these atrocities, the impact has not lost its force these 15 years after the armistice. One becomes immediately repulsed by Frankl's recollections and this reviewer found himself wishing the author would hurry up and get to his proposed therapy.

Now that I have completed the book, I realize why I became uneasy. The description of the atrophy actually exhudes a stench. The psychological torture is actually felt. This was the potency of the whole work.

As far as the author's "logotherapy" is concerned, it attepts to show that man's existential frustration, his quest for a meaning to his existence, "is as important a part in the formation of neuroses as sexual frustration (in Freud) formerly did." Dr. Frankl continues: "Logotherapy focusses on man's search for the meaning of human existence." The psychiatrist should not confuse that which is human with that which is pathological and, according to Frankl's personal convictions: ". . . the first and foremost aim of mental hygiene should be to stimulate man's will-to-meaning and to offer him concrete meaning potentialities."

'Mother Superior'

To The Editor:
Dear Mother Superior,

Allow me to acknowledge your power. If only you had an equal amount of discriminating concern and respect for students.

In order to get an education at my state university, I am compelled to live in one of its dormitories. Now you tell me that by living here I am forced to finance its social life. I must send flowers to its ill, (no matter whether I broke her arm or not), gifts to its administration (even if I hate unnecessary bureaucracy and refuse to condone it in any way); endorse all sorts of parades and beauty contests which if I wished to support I would, but do not feel that I should be forced to. Many students here live on marginal incomes and it is a cruel imposition to ask a person eating on $7.50 a week (and such I know of) to financially back a beauty contest.

Who do you think you are to set yourself up as a judge and jailor over me? I would never have been allowed to attend this university if I were not in most ways your equal, and now apparently in many ways your superior, for I am capable of governing my life adequately and pleasantly without your written rules. If these rules for women answer your needs (they certainly are far removed from mine) you have my condolences, most simple minded and weak willed individuals. What you need is an asylum, not a university.

You now have this little papoose strapped even more firmly to your back my dear, but you had better beware, because she is a growing girl and as soon as she gets the opportunity, she will cut your throat.

Madame, I remain till death your most arrogant and disobediant servant.

Side Swipes Epistle

Editor:

It is the business of women in our society to be concerned with making beds and disposing of garbage. A girl who is properly sensitive to unmade beds and sticky coke bottles deserves some protection against a sloppy roommate who isn't. This is one area in which it would be appropriate for the male students to mind their own business. I hope the writer of "Side Swipes" in Thursday's Daily Tar Heel will be rewarded by a wife who feels persecuted because she is required to make her bed and toss out the old coke bottles. It goes with burning the toast, you know!

Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, the authors of "Inherit The Wind" have built their play out of dramatic flimsy. Its central action is entirely the struggle of ideas, between a teacher's right to think and teach freely and the state's right to determine what is fit for the minds of its academic wards. The case in point, as everyone knows, is the infamous "monkey trial" which took place in Tennessee, in which an otherwise undistinguished school teacher was found guilty of teaching evolutionary theory in class.

Although the basic question involved was important then, and is still important in this day of loyalty oaths and heretic-hunting, (Arthur Miller's The Crucible is another modern play which treats some of the same themes) it is too often obscured in the play. The conflict is never really dramatized; it is argued in court. Debate is not drama; we do not go to Hamlet to hear a debate on the topic "To Be Or Not To Be." Rather, we go to see such ambiguities wrestled with by a human mind which must choose, and who must resolve the ambiguity in action. In this play, the teacher who has the choice whether to be intimidated or go to jail never really considers his position. His girl, the minister's daughter, pulls him toward easy conformity, and the lawyer, Drummond, patterned after Clarence Darrow, encourages him to let him fight his case. Cates, the school teacher, more-or-less abdicates in favor of the lawyer, and the battle moves in the space of a second from the man into the courtroom.

Justice, of course, miscarries: he is found guilty, and all of Drummond's assurance that a great moral lesson has been learned doesn't make it any easier to take. (The fact that the law being tested in the trial on which this play is modelled is still on the books in the great state of Tennessee gives the lie to Drummond's vision.) The specific case in point, Darwin vs. Genesis, is conveniently mooted at the end. No conflict there, evidently.

The real stuff of the play is the clash between the two lawyers, Drummond (Darrow) and Brady (William Jennings Bryan). If it isn't enough to build a play on, the conflict, which ends in the profound disillusionment and death of the Bible-thumping Brady, creates two demanding roles which, if played to full depth, can have tremendous dramatic effect despite the general weakness. For the rest, the authors have provided a brash young reporter, Hornbeck, patterned rather badly after H. L. Menken; and a very irrelevant love-interest in Rachel Brown. These, together with an evangelical minister and a picturesque assortment of vicious, true-believing townspeople, keep things busy.

Part of the Playmakers' difficulty, then, was the wind they inherited from the script. Still more is due to the decision to present the play in the Forest Theatre. The tendency for all the actors, almost without exception, to shout at full voice every line, every comma and period, and to affect sweeping gestures for even the most casual, even intimate movements — all this may be necessitated by the theatre. If so, that enchanting place should be saved for plays which can support such stuff. This one could not, and all the great voices and grand gestures served only to deny the possibility of the sort of subtle expression which this play needs to be truly dramatic. As it is, the expression of anguish and distress, to be visible, is a huge facial contortion without development or nuance — in short, not much expression at all.

Even when graced with the excellent sets by John Stockard, the Forest Theatre just won't do for this sort of thing. The only really successful major portrayal was Wayne Garber's Reverend Brown. Somehow, we expect preachers of his persuasion to be bull-throated, and Mr. Garber's voice well used in the prayer meeting scene.

Sally Pullen's interpretation of Sarah Brown was a different matter, exemplifying the general difficulty of any sort of honest expression in these circumstances. Miss Pullen performed most badly under the circumstances, but none of the major characters escapted with distinction. Of the two leads, Lloyd Borstellman, as Drummond, was somewhat more successful than Fred Sitton, as Brady, perhaps because it is Brady's portrayer who must express the subtler emotions and the greater range. The subtlety and the range were lost, however. It was hard to see even the shadow of the greatness which we were supposed to sense in the character, and the reporter's complaint at the end that Drummond was being sentimental in his praise of his opponent seemed justified.

As the reporter, John Sneden gave a very slick performance, but it lacked the warmth of humanity which, as the character says, makes him a critic and not a cynic. Instead, he was pretty and petulent.

Bob Ketler, in the slight role of the teacher, Cates, was one-dimensional; The fault is extenuated by the thinness of the role, as well as the demands of the theatre.

The supporting cast featured, along with the above mentioned Mr. Garber, good contributions by Douglass Whitehill as Mrs. Brady, Margaret Starnes as Mrs. Krebs, and William Bailey as Goodfellow.

James Armacost's lighting was fine in the center of the set, but actors working downstage or to the far sides were often in deep shadow or brightly lighted around the knees. Irene Smart Rain's costumes were fine. John Stockard's fine set has been noted above.

All in all, this was an unsuccessful production. It is hard to believe that it wouldn't have come off much better indoors. Director Tom Patterson has shown in that past ("Desire Under The Elms" and "Viw From The Bridge") that he is willing and able to attempt plays with emotional subtlety and honesty. Here, his direction is fine, but the absence of the familiar quality suggests that the exigencies of the script and the Forest Theatre may have prevailed against him.

Danger! Pool

The outdoor pool is currently undergoing a series of chemical treatments to prepare the water for use in the near future. Certain of the chemicals being used in this process are strong and are harmful to the eyes. Among these is copper sulfate.

For this reason students are warned that they should not make any efforts to swim in Kessing pool until it is officially declared opened.

Sculptor Exhibition

A sculptor trained at the University here is one of a number of outstanding artists who have exhibits in the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

G. Edward Higgins, a native of Gaffney, S. C., a graduate of the University in Chapel Hill and a former graduate student in the Department of Art here, is one of 66 artists whose work has been selected for "Recent Sculpture, U. S. A."

The significance of the exhibit is explained by the New York Times (magazine section) of Sunday, May 3, as follows:

"Since the war America has witnessed a phenomenal upsurge of sculpture. As startling as the constant output of new works are the unorthodox ideas they express. To explore recent trends and uncover promising talent, the Museum of Modern Art took an unusual step last year—it invited all American sculptors to submit entries for an exhibition it was planning. More than 700 artists from all over the country applied; works of sixty-six were selected by the museum. A few veteran modernists are included in the show, which opens at the museum on May 13 under the title "Recent Sculpture U.S.A.," but the accent is on avantgarde sculptors in search of new horizons."

County Accountants To Attend School Here

County accountants throughout North Carolina are invited to attend the 1959 Institute of Government School for County Accountants to be here May 10-12.

For many years the Institute of Government has been holding schools for newly elected county accountants and other county officials. Accountants serving their first term in office are particularly urged to attend the 1959 school and experienced county accountants are invited to attend and add their seasoned judgement to Institute staff instruction.

Albert Coates, director of the Institute, and David S. Evans, Assistant Director, have scheduled an intensive program of study and discussion for the accountants and plan to draw upon the experiences of those attending for classroom examples.

Nursing History Being Compiled For This State

By CHERRY PARKER

North Carolina nurses are currently casing the state for historical material on nursing. Prof. Florence K. Wilson, former dean of the Duke University School of Nursing in Durham, and now a Try-on resident, has been put in charge of locating this material.

As chairman of the Committee on Historical Resource Material for the North Carolina League for Nursing, Professor Wilson said, "Our committee is not collecting the material as yet, but we are trying to spot it. Many universities, nursing schools, doctors and private citizens have such materials and we want to locate this so that it might be used for research and reference where this is permissable.

Schools as the UNC School of Nursing which is comparatively new (started in 1951) and one of the four state collegiate nursing schools (the others being Duke, A & T, and Winston-Salem Teachers' College) are excellent historical sources for nursing. Such schools are currently making nursing history. "All nursing schools have bulletins, annual reports and other data which is valuable for future reference," Miss Wilson said.

"I'd like to emphasize," Miss Wilson commented, "that what we are doing in nursing today will be the nursing history of tomorrow. We are not only interested in what happened way back, but also in what is happening now."

Tar Heels Whip Terps, 8-2

Wayne Young Goes The Route To Pick Up His Sixth Win

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina's resurgent Tar Heels, on the brink of destruction only two weeks ago, jumped the last hurdle separating them from Tuesday's show down with Wake Forest successfully yesterday by blasting Maryland 8-2 behind Wayne Young.

For the Tar Heels, the victory marks their eighth straight win and gives them a 9-4 ACC record. On the year Carolina now stands at 16-5.

Carolina gave Young some offensive help in the form of nine hits which made the big righthander's task much easier as he went the full route to post his sixth win of the season in seven decisions.

Batting stars for the Heels were Larry Craver, Johnny Burgwyn, and Ferg Norton who each chipped in with two hits.

Without a doubt, however, the clutch play of the day was a sensational catch of a sinking liner which Burgwyn made in the top of the seventh to cut off a potential Terp rally. With two on and two out Maryland third baseman Don Santo cuffed a line shot down the left field line. The Carolina co-captain raced over and with a backhanded stab prevented two sure Terrapin runs.

The Tar Heels jumped out in front with three runs in their half of the first and as it turned out this was enough to win. Harold Workman led off with a triple, Larry Craver got a walk,. Burgwyn got a single, Al Baldwin and Norton got hit by the pitch, and Gerald Griffin drew a walk to account for the three scores.

Carolina secured two more in the sixth on a single, an error, a sacrifice, and a double by Craver.

The victors added their final pair in the eighth on three hits culminated by Norton's Texas League triple which dropped between the right and center fielders.

Duke Wins Conference Golf Crown Over Wake

CHAPEL HILL, May 9 (AP) — A record breaking performances Saturday gave Duke the team championship and Wake Forest's Ronnie Thomas the individual crown in the Atlantic Coast Conference golf tournament.

The Blue Devils finished 36 holes with a 572-total, erasing the old team mark 574 set by North Carolina in 1956.

Thomas, a 20-year-old junior from Burlington fired a 138 to break the record of 139 set by Pryde (Buzzy) Basinger of North Carolina in 1956.

Following Duke in the team listings were defending champion Wake Forest, 574; North Carolina, 578; Maryland, 582; North Carolina State, 602; Virginia, 616, and Clemson 617. Two South Carolina players withdrew and the Gamecocks did not have a team score.

Duke's Dick Siderowf, who fired a 68 to lead Friday's opening round play, was runner up for medalist honors with a 36-holem total of 139. Other Duke scorers were Bob Lindinger and Bob Zimmerman, each with 144, and Ted McKenzie with 145.

Lindinger fired a 5-under par 67 Saturday for the best round of the tournament. He tied the record set by Sonny George of Wake Forest in 1957.

Thomas, hot with his chipping and putting, shot a 68 Saturday. He fired a 70 in the opening round.

The slender education major sunk a four-foot clutch putt on the 18th green for a bogie five to give him the title. He was above the green with his third shot, but chipped on nicely and then made the winning putt.

Deadly around the greens, Thomas had eight one-putt holes and only 27 putts in all.

In 1958, he was runner up to champion Bill Thornton of North Carolina who was not in this year's field. Thomas fired a 143 that year to finish one stroke back of the leader.

He is former Carolinas juniors and state high school champion.

Black And Keys Win Conference Doubles Title

DURHAM, N. C., May 9 (AP) — Bill Cullen, ace of the Wake Forest team and now of the ACC, played precise and careful tennis Saturday to whip a game, but tired Ray York of Virginia in the finals of the 5th annual Atlantic Coast Conference tennis tournament at Duke, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

The doubles play saw the fourth-seeded team of Ben Keys and Geoff Black of Carolina defeat the Duke twosome of Joe Gaston and Dick Katz 6-4, 7-5. The victory by the Carolina pair gave the Tar Heels the John Kenfield trophy with 19 points. The Duke Blue Devils finished in a tie for second place with Virginia, each team compiling 14 points. Clemson was fourth with 13 points. Then followed North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Maryland, and South Carolina. It was the second straight year that Carolina captured the Kenfield honors.

To reach the doubles finals, Keys and Black had to win one set this morning from Wake Forest's Cullen and Nelson before defeating teammates Bruce Sylvia and Marshall Happer 6-2, 6-2. The Sylvia-Happer tandem had been seeded first in the tourney.

The Carolina pair dominated the finals as they broke service on the Blue Devils at crucial stages. Katz and Gaston, who defeated York and Felt of Virginia in the semi-finals in the morning, made a valiant comeback after trailing 5-0 in the second set before the Tar Heels succeeded in breaking Joe Gaston's service to win the second set 7-5.

Prep Star Signs

CHAPEL HILL, May 8 (AP) — Art Heyman of Oceanside, N. Y., one of the most widely sought high school basketball players in the nation, has signed a grant-in-aid to attend the University of North Carolina, Coach Frank McGuire announced Friday.

More than 50 colleges are reported to have offered basketball scholarships to Heyman, who is 6-4, weighs 185 pounds and was described by McGuire as being versatile with ability to play backcourt and up front.

Heyman was named on the first All-America high school team selected by Parade magazine. He was also picked on scholastic coach magazine's All America squad.

For each of three years, Heyman was named the "most valuable player" on the Oceanside high school team.

Carolina Third In ACC Track

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP) — Mighty Maryland won the Atlantic Coast Conference track championship for the fourth straight time here Saturday with a record total of 106½ team points.

Maryland placed first in seven of the 15 events, capturing almost half of the 225 available points.

Duke was second with 37 points, North Carolina third with 30, and South Carolina fourth with 20 points. Clemson garnered 12¾ points, Virginia got 8¾, North Carolina State had 6 and Wake Forest managed 3 points.

It was superb performance for Maryland, whose superiority had been conceded before the meet began. The conference record of 106½ points bettered by far the record of 83½ set two years ago by the fleet Terps.

But it was a Tar Heel, Dave Scurlock of North Carolina, who captured the fancy of conference track coaches and received the most votes in balloting for the Robert A. Fetzer Award, presented to the outstanding performer.

Scurlock tied the conference record of 48 seconds in the 440-yard dash and established a new record of 1.52.9 for the 800-yard run.

He also ran as anchor man on the North Carolina relay team and overcame a wide Virginia lead to give his team second place in that event.

ENTER OFTEN—HAVE FUN—AND WIN! But think carefully! This puzzle is not as easy as it looks. At first the DOWN and ACROSS clues may appear simple. There may appear to be more than one "right" answer. For example, the clue might read: "Many a coed will be given her best date's P--N." Either "I" (PIN) or "E" (PEN) would seem to fit. But only one answer is apt and logical as decided by the judging staff, and therefore correct. Read the rules carefully. ENTER AS OFTEN AS YOU WISH. Good luck!

RULES—PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

1. The College Puzzle Contest is open to college students and college faculty members except employees and their immediate families of Liggett & Myers and its advertising agencies.

2. Fill in all missing letters . . . print clearly. Use of obsolete, archaic, variant or foreign words prohibited. After you have completed the puzzle, send it along with six empty package wrappers of the same brand from L&M, Chesterfield or Oasis cigarettes (or one reasonable hand-drawn facsimile of a complete package wrapper of any one of the three brands) to: Liggett & Myers, P. O. Box 271, New York 46, N. Y. Enter as often as you wish, but be sure to enclose six package wrappers (or a facsimile) with each entry. Illegible entries will not be considered.

3. Entries must be postmarked by midnight, Friday, May 29, 1959 and received by midnight, Friday, June 5, 1959.

4. Entries will be judged by the Bruce-Richards Corporation, an independent judging organization, on the basis of logic and aptness of thought of solutions. In the event of ties, contestants will be required to complete in 25 words or less the following statement: "My favorite cigarette is (Chesterfield) (L&M) or (Oasis) because . . . .". Entries will be judged on originality, aptness of thought and interest by the Bruce-Richards Corporation. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in event of final ties. Illegible entries will not be considered. By entering all entrants agree that the decision of the judges shall be final and binding.

5. Solutions must be the original work of the contestants submitting them. All entries become the property of Liggett & Myers and none will be returned.

6. Winners will be notified by mail as soon as possible after completion of the contest.

7. This contest is subject to all Federal, State and local laws and regulations.

Pharmacy Awards Presented Tonight

Student body and scholarship awards will be presented to pharmacy seniors and some underclassmen tonight by Dean E. A. Brecht of the School of Pharmacy.

Presentations will be made during the student branch of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association meeting at 8 o'clock in Howell Hall.

Among the awards to be presented will be the Pharmacy Faculty Award, which is given annually by the faculty of the School of Pharmacy and awarded to the student in the graduating class making the highest average during the four years of study.

The Buxton Williams Hunter Medal, a gold medal offered annually, will go to the graduate who excels in campus citizenship and scholarship. Also included in the list of awards will be the School of Pharmacy Student Body Award to a member of the graduating class for character, deportment, scholarship, participation in extracurricular activities and promise of future distinction in the profession.

Other awards to be presented are the Kappa Epsilon Award and the Merck Awards. The Kappa Epsilon is a national honorary pharmaceutical sorority award presented to the woman student in the School of Pharmacy who has demonstrated qualities of leadership, character, service and scholarship. The Merck Awards are given to two graduating students for achievement in pharmacy.

LAST RING SALE

Jim Scott, chairman of the Order of the Grail's ring sale, announced that today is the last day of the ring sale for the class of 1960 and prior classes.

Lee H. Blackwell of the Balfour Co. will be in the Y lobby today, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., to take orders.

Grail Gives 5 Certificates

Five students were presented certificates Monday night by the Order of the Grail for high scholastic averages.

Wade Hampton Lefler Jr. received an award for attaining the highest average of a senior in student government.

The award for the highest average of a senior self-help student was presented to Herman Albert Margolis.

Two freshmen, Carroll Lee Gray and Kenneth Milton Wheeler, received awards for having the highest average of self-help students in their class.

The names of these students will be engraved on the plaque that hangs in the television room of Graham Memorial.

3 Awards Are Given

Dean of Awards Ernest L. Mackie has announced the recipients of the Sullivan awards, Phi Beta Kappa award, and Archibald Henderson Mathematical Medal.

Seniors Nancy Ann Adams and Rudolph Lee Edwards are winners of the Sullivan awards given in a number of southern universities and colleges to senior men and women giving the most unselfish service to the campus during their four years.

William Lewis Harrinton receives the Phi Beta Kappa award of $150 which is given annually by the local chapter to the member of the rising junior class, eligible for self-help work, who has made the highest scholastic average during his freshman and sophomore years.

The Archibald Henderson Prize in Mathematics goes to Albert Edward Deal III. The Henderson gold medal is given annually to the undergraduate student judged by the Department of Mathematics as having demonstrated a high order of mathematical ability and shown the greatest promise of originality in the field.

Director Of 'Playhouse 90 To Speak Here Thursday

John Frankenheimer, noted 29-year-old director of "Playhouse 90" who has contributed to that production's winning its 1959 Emmy Award, will speak here Thursday at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall.

Frankenheimer will speak on "Popular Misconceptions of Television."

Best Dramatic Series

Frankenheimer has directed many shows for "Playhouse 90", which won the Emmy for the best hour-or-longer dramatic series last Wednesday night. He staged television's biggest dramatic show, Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," on March 12 and 19. The two-part, three-hour Hemingway presentation is one high point in the young director's career.

Other Plays

Other plays Frankenheimer has directed for "Playhouse 90" are: "The Comedian," "The Ninth Day," "The Last Tycoon," "The Fabulous Irishman," "A Sound of Different Drummers," "A Town Has Turned to Dust," "Days of Wine and Roses" and "Old Man."

Frankenheimer's career included acting and directing in the stock company of the Highland Playhouse, Falmouth, Mass. He was in the cast of the American Theater Wing's Washington production of "The Moon is Blue." He later joined the CBS television network in 1953 as assistant director of "Person to Person," "You Are There" and "See It Now."

Christopher Award

After directing a "Mama" series, "You Are There" and "Danger," he became co-director for "Climax!" He won the Christopher Award for his direction of "Deal a Blow."

The Carolina Forum is sponsoring Frankenheimer. The Forum brings significant speakers from every field of endeavor to the campus in an effort to present new ideas to the student and university community. Frankenheimer will be the first and only presentation of the Forum this semester.

After the director's speech in Hill Hall, a reception honoring him and his wife will be held in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Asia Foundation Drive Gets Underway Soon

The International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA, headed by co-chairmen Sipra Bose and Edwin Eaff, is sponsoring a "Books for Asian Students" drive. A project of the Asia Foundation, the Book Drive extends from May 13 to May 30.

According to Dr. William Wells of the UNC English Department, over a million books and journals have been sent to schools, colleges, libraries and individuals in Asian countries, including Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, India, Japan, Korea, Laos, Pakistan, the Philippines, Thailand and Viet Nam.

"Gifts of books help to improve Asian understanding of Western culture and to correct misinformation about the West," Dr. Wells said. "Books are tools for learning in all fields of study; and they give information to citizens of Asian countries in their occupations and civic work."

The history of the "Books for Asian Students" program, since its beginning over two years ago, demonstrates a facet of American public interest in Asian affairs as well as this country's desire to share its heritage and experience with other countries.

Shipe Many Books

Through this project, the Asian Foundation has shipped more than 350,000 textbooks and journals to hundreds of Asian universities in the 15 countries which have requested such books. Most of the texts have been donated by American publishers and college student groups.

The Asian Foundation is a non-profit, non-political organization founded by private American citizens and incorporated in the State of California. In accordance with its Articles of Incorporation, the foundation strives to "make private American support available to individuals and groups in Asia who are working for the attainment of peace, independence, personal liberty, and social progress."

Reporters Admitted For The First Time

The Men's Honor Council trial of Joe Friedberg on charges of "aiding and abetting in the passing of bad checks" was adjourned last night until Thursday at which time officers from the Chapel Hill Police Department and other jurisdictions will be asked to testify as to their knowledge of the case.

Friedberg, a Senior from Great Neck, N. Y., repudiated a sworn statement given to the Chapel Hill Police Department and claimed that he pleaded guilty in civil court as the result of an arrangement with the Orange Count solicitor. The defendant pleded innocent before the Honor Colunci.

The Friedberg trial last night marked the first time that Daily Tar Heel reporters have even been admitted to an Honor Council proceeding. Although Student Body President Charlie Gray has yet to sign the "public trial" bill passed by the Legislature last week, the decision was made by Gray and Honor Council Chairman Hugh Patterson to open the Friedberg trial because of the wide publicity already given the case in the local press and because no student accuser was involved.

Friedberg himself had reqested Daily Tar Heel coverage of his trial. The defendant said: "I feel that the greatest protection I can get, a protection to which I am entitled, would be the spotlight of a free press. As a previous 'defendant' in an Honor Council proceeding, I know how important it is to take these 'trials' out from behind closed doors into the light of day."

Chief evidence presented against Friedberg last night was a sworn statement from an associate, John Anthony Fox, now a private in the U. S. Marine Corps. Fox implicated Friedberg in the passing of approximately $200 worth of bad checks.

Friedberg told the Honor Council: "Fox and I have conflicting stories, and being as how you don't know anything about Fox I think you oughta check this guy." Friedberg produced two witnesses in an effort to impeach Fox's sworn statement given to the Chapel Hill police.

In addition to Fox and Friedberg, one other UNC student was involved in the charges which were disposed of recently in Orange County court. All three participants received 18-months suspended sentences.

In an effort to bypass the welter of conflicting charges, one Honor Council member asked Friedberg if he was familiar with that section of the Honor Code requiring a student to inform campus authorities of Honor Code violations. Friedberg admitted his familiarity with that section of the Code. He also admitted his knowledge that Fox was passing bad checks, but denied that he knew, at that time, that the other UNC student was also passing bad checks. Friedberg stated: "Fox is a Marine. I would have had to turn him into the police, and I wouldn't turn anybody into the police."

Character witnesses for Friedberg testified that he was "a good guy." One witness said that the defendant loaned him five dollars for a Saturday night date when he the defendant) only had seven dollars. Another witness stated: "Joe will give you the shirt off his back. His loans are keeping a couple of guys in school right now."

Friedberg's lawyers offered a definition of the "aiding and abetting" phrase from a standard law book. The crux of the legal definition was that "there must be participation."

Chairman Patterson, while accepting the definition, and agreeing that the Honor Council would be bound by standard legal definitions, also pointed out that an Honor Council court was not the same as a criminal court, and therefore could not be bound by all the procedural rules of a regular court.

One of Friedberg's lawyers commented at the end of last night's trial: "I have heard no testimony that the defendant passed a worthless check or 'aided and abetted' anyone else to pass a worthless check. The charges shoul be dropped."

Chairman Patterson said that the Honor Council jury was capable of dropping the charges if they felt it was in order to do so.

Journalism Honorary Taps Four Students

Four journalism students were presented awards and five students were tapped into Kappa Tau Alpha, journalism honorary, at the annual awards banquet of the Press Club Monday night.

The Sigma Delta Chi certificate to the outstanding male graduate was presented to Paul F. Rule of South Norfolk, Va.

The scholarship award of Sigma Delta Chi to a senior on the basis of highest point average went to Donald L. Shaw of Waynesville.

Graves Scholarship

Hilda B. Khoury of Lebanon was awarded the Louis Graves Scholarship for the fall semester. This scholarship is valued at $150. The Quincy Sharpe Mills Scholarship, valued at $300 for two semesters, was presented to James E. Laughrun of Burnsville.

The awards were presented to the journalism students by Journalism School Dean Norval Neil Luxon, who also initiated the following seniors into Kappa Tau Alpha honor society: Joan M. Brock of Burlington, Ann Frye of Hickory, Parker Maddrey of Seaboard, Paul Rule of South Norfolk and Donald Shaw of Waynesville.

Weaver Speaks

The principal address of the banquet was given by Fred Weaver, dean of student affairs at the University. Ann Frye, president of the Press Club, presided at the banquet.

In addition to the presentation of awards, new Press Club officers were announced at the banquet. They are as follows: Neil Murphy of Blacksburg, Va., president; Charles E. Flinner of High Point, vice president; Barbara Ray Deans of Red Oak, secretary, and Edward Neal Riner of Rocky Mount, treasurer.

Legal Requirements

Legal requirements for experience credit will be explained to pharmacy and pre-pharmacy students who plan to work in drug stores this summer, Wednesday in the auditorium of Howell Hall at 7:30 p.m.

H. C. McAllister, secretary of the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy, will be the speaker and will distribute forms which must be completed for summer experience credit.

Mozart Concerto Featured In Last Of Series Tonight

Performing Mozart's Concerto in C Major, K. 503, Mrs. Lilian P. Pruett, pianist, and the UNC Symphony will perform the final concert of this season's Tuesday Evening Series under the baton of Earl Slocum.

Mrs. Pruett will be guest soloist in the concert presented tonight at 8 o'clock.

Instructor in piano and graduate assistant in the Music Department, Mrs. Pruett is a native of Zagreb, Yugoslavia. She studied music in Zagreb and in Salzburg, Austria, where she received a certificate in piano from the Mozarteum.

In 1950 she won a scholarship to Vassar College, graduating in 1952 with an A.B. in music.

Since coming to Chapel Hill as a graduate in musicology, Mrs. Pruett has appeared on both the Tuesday Evening Series and the Petite Musicale series.

The University Symphony, made up of students, faculty and townspeople, will also play "Good Friday Spell" from Wagner's "Parsifal"; Symphony No. 2 (Romantic) by Howard Hanson; and "Polovetsian Dances" from Borodin's opera, "Prince Igor."

Under the direction of Prof. Earl Slocum for the past 14 years, the orchestra has performed 115 works from the symphonic literature, and has accompanied the Chapel Hill Choral Club in 38 major choral works.

GM Lawn Concert

The Graham Memorial House Committee will sponsor a lawn concert under the Davie Popular from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The concert will feature the music of the Ambers Combo.

Arrangements have been made for Jim Talley and the Shades to entertain at intermission.

Free refreshments will be served. There will be no admission charge.

Concert Reading Of 'Ruth' Will Be Featured At Hillel

A concert reading of "Ruth" will be featured at the regular Hillel Women's meeting at Hillel House Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

"Ruth" is an adaption of the old Bible story written in dramatic verse by Marian Rosenzweig. It will be interpretated in voice and dance.

The dance interpretation will be given by Dorothy Berea Silver, a graduate of Randolph Macon Woman's College who later trained with and became a member of Martha Graham's dance company. She has danced with the American School of Ballet, Jose Limon, Sophia Maslow and Merce Cunningham.

Miss Silver has done choreography for two off-broadway shows. In the fall she played Laurie in the dream ballet sequence of the Carolina Playmakers' production of "Oklahoma."

The readers for "Ruth" are Rita Keeler and Marian Rosenzweig.

Mrs. Keeler is a graduate of Radcliffe College who worked in drama in college and studied with the Neighborhood Playhouse of New York and the Feayan School of Drama and the MacArthur Summer Players of Vermont.

Marian Rosenzweig is known for her work with the Carolina Playmakers in several productions as well as her solo original dramatic presentations that she has given in many cities of the United States and Canada.

Sigma Delta Chi Names Journalism Officers

Chuck Flinner is the new president of Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism fraternity.

Working with Flinner next year will be Ben Taylor, vice president; Jim Laughrum, secretary and Neil Murphy, treasurer.

Professional Council Has New Constitution

The expansion of the Professional Interfraternity Council under a new constitution is now under the direction and supervision of Erwin Fuller, chairman, and other officers.

The officers of the PIFC were selected last week at the final council meeting of the year.

Fuller, who has served as chairman of the council since March, is also chairman of the Student Council, chairman of the UNC Consolidated University Student Council delegation and chancellor of Delta Sigma Pi.

Fuller is also a member of the Order of the Grail, Order of the Old Well and Phi Eta Sigma.

The other officers are Whit Moose, vice chairman; Al Meade, secretary, and Charles Bennett, treasurer. Moose is president of the Pharmacy School student body and president of Kappa Psi. Meade is vice president of Alpha Kappa Psi, and Bennett is a member of Phi Delta Chi.

Additional PIFC members include Ted Bolick, Delta Sigma Pi president; Larry Wilson, Alpha Kappa Psi president, Don Deaton, Phi Delta Chi President, and Jerry Price, representative from Kappa Psi.

The PIFC is the established legislative and judicial body governing the activities of business fraternities, Alpha Kappa Psi and Delta Sigma Pi, and pharmaceutical fraternities, Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Chi. Each of these fraternities is represented on the council by its president and one other member.

The major activity of the PIFC this past year has been the drafting and adoption of a written constitution to establish the council's powers, duties and procedures. The constitution was ratified by the four professional fraternities and approved by Student Legislature.

The council has also given consideration to possible means of increasing the participation of the various professional fraternities in such campus programs and activities as student government, homecoming displays, Valkyrie Sing, Grail-Mural Jamboree and intramural competition.

Male Glee Club Gives 'Most Valuable' Award

By HOWARD WHEELER

The Men's Glee Club presented the "Most Valuable Member" award to R. V. Fulk, the club accompanist, at the club's annual service awards banquet Friday night at Watts Restaurant.

Dr. Joel J. Carter, Glee Club director, presented the award to Fulk "in appreciation for the enormous amount of work he has contributed in making this a very successful year."

Certificates of merit were also presented to approximately 25 members in recognition of faithful attendance, loyal service, cooperative attitude, and musical contributions during the 1958-59 school year. Fourteen members were also given service awards.

Don Gray, outgoing president of the club, was presented a gift by Dr. Carter in recognition of his "fine leadership devotion" to the club during the past year.

Dr. Carter himself was presented a "Blooper" award by last year's winner, Mac Campbell. The "Blooper" award is given to the member who committed the biggest goof of the year.

Nick Ellison, newly-elected president of the Glee Club, spoke of tentative plans for the coming year. "The club plans to perform at as many of the all-girl schools in this area as possible," Ellison said.

Several singing groups within the club performed for the banquet. These groups included "The Carolinians," a newly-formed quartet; The Harmones," a regular club quartet, and a trio called "The Preptones." After some persuasion, Dr. Carter sang "The Thing."

Honored guests at the banquet were Dean and Mrs. Fred Weaver, Mrs. Joel Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Klitz and Charlie Gray, student body president.

PEABODY ADDITION RISING AT UNC — Better facilities for educating teachers are under construction here and expected to be in use by June 1960. A $660,000 addition to Peabody Hall will relieve crowded conditions in the School of Education, provide facilities for special education, and offer better arrangements for educators' conferences. Built in an L-shape around the present Peabody structure, the addition will harmonize in style with the Carolina Inn which is situated across Columbia St. The main entrance will face Cameron Avenue, and the exterior will be of colonial brick with limestone trim.

McGill & Ashmore

One thing was apparent about the awarding of the 1959 Pulitzer Prizes last week. This was the second year in a row that one of the South's outstanding journalists was cited for his courageous stand in favor of law and order and the Supreme Court.

In honoring Ralph McGill, outstanding editor of the Atlanta Constitution, the board at Columbia University has once again demonstrated its concern for the rights of all people. The same was true when Harry Ashmore of the Arkansas Gazette was chosen last year for his one-man-stand against Governor Faubus. We are pleased with the selection of these men, and hope that in the future, Pulitzer Prizes will continue to be awarded to men of such high caliber and fine ideals. For, as these two men have continually pointed out, public education for all is something which must transcend the gap between the races.

Death - A Spade And A Shovel

Last Thursday night Donald Quarles, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, died in his sleep. On the following day Neil McElroy, the Secretary of Defense, took to television to issue the required statement.

For three and a half minutes McElroy stumbled from one euphemism to the next, climaxed with this magnificent and classic line: "We are all just as sorry as we can be that Don Quarles failed to wake up this morning after his night's rest."

Failed to wake up, indeed! Donald Quarles is DEAD, you simple Republican businessman jerk.

Traditionally, this country has worshipped youth and vigor and "progress," while at the same time pretending that old-age, infirmity and death are the end results of other societies, not ours. But surely Neil McElroy's comment is the ultimate debasement of the dignity and meaning and splendor of DEATH.

Now this newspaper has a long and consistent record of mourning the death of all men. All deaths are unique and, at the same time, equal. Were Nikita Kruchshev to fall over in his tracks tomorrow we would mourn him — for what he was, and wasn't. In the same spirit, we mourn the DEATH of Donald Quarles. And while it is probably permissable for Neil McElroy to assist in the hatcheting of this countrys' preparedness program, it is not permissable for him to deprive a human being named Donald Quarles of his final dignity.

Just to keep the record straight — Donald Quarles is the very same man who was recently tagged, "Mr. Missile Gap," by the syndicated columnist Joseph Alsop. We mourn Donald Quarles as a man, not as a good public servant. And when the missile gap finally eventuates in the destruction of these United States, we can just hear Quarles and Neil McElroy explaining to Saint Peter how it all happened: "The United States isn't dead — it just failed to wake up this morning."

Beat poet Allen Ginsberg once wrote: "America, when will you learn to look at yourself through the grave."

We say: America, when will you get a man who is not afraid to call a spade a shovel?

Open Letter To A Senior:

This, the catharsis.

Think not your tread on virgin ground. Yet no ground as this is holy, pounded flat by feet of years—the tramp of time's people across the great land, the sea and lands, unbroken in their lines—with shoulders bowed under just-shorn loads too much.

On this spot, ages long before this spot was named, ages since that day first this spot was known, stood the fathers, eyes back-cast in speechless wonder, knowing only hills and unseen pitfalls; mucky, miry work amid the waste and ruin: others not to stand upon this spot. There is room.

There is room for all who would, yet many fail; the roll remains uncalled as all who now are here look back above the heads of others writhing there and think, "Bad. Bad," not seeing truth, but saddened over superstitions past: past in words—"the wind bodes ill; take care today and always—"never can you say to me 'turn back' more, now I am gone—"woe betide those certain new whose lot it is to woe, to rue this day forever—"this, too much; no more can I bear—"no more could I bear, yet now I bear more; again this turn will come—"fall now, or never fall.

This spot, no more near but firm beneath the foot of him who tramped a path among the muck and ruin; him whose foot a trail blazed, unknowing, amid the waste and mire.

Unknowing foot, trail-blazer, with eyes blind to other than your own; unknowing and less to care, now upon this hallowed spot: look back, think only, "Bad. Bad."

My Beloved

You are my beloved, and I am your equal

Come and live in my tent for I have no palace

Fly with me, if you wish, to unknown lands

Come to my tent my beloved for the wine longs for the touch of our lips

The glass is empty, the music is wild. And nothing is worse than an empty glass, and wild music.

Ride with me, my beloved, for the wings of love are broken.

Desire without love, glass without wine, world without people!

What an unfortunate life?

Come to my hut, o my beloved, for my heart is full of love.

Come and share with me the wine, the love, and the dream.

You are my better dream.

You dwell in the midst of my thoughts.

Come to me, my beloved, for your world is mine, and your love is mine.

Come into my tent, and live and love forever, for love unmixed by doubt is the highest meaning of love.

Come and fill my cup for my lips are getting dry.

Come and play my music for my hands are getting weary.

The time has come for the wine, music, and love.

It's an advantage that we should drink wine, play music, and love

Our advantages are very small

Come into my tent, and enter my heart, for this is all very ravishing. AWNI HAMAD

A Poetry Lover

"Some Of You Still Seem To Have The Old-Fashioned Idea That We're Supposed To Deliver The Mail"

Quiet and Peaceful

'Losing My Identity'?

Gentlemen:

May I claim your attention for a short while?

I am a quiet soul, peaceful, and inclined to refrain from petty controversy, particularly from trumped-up controversy. But there is part of me which wants to make itself known. It wants to make the world aware of me. Having found that it is difficult to make the World as a Whole, the Public at Large, aware of me as I am, or in a way that does not prick my self-respect, I am reluctant to follow up these sudden urges, and when I do make this sort of blind self-assertion, it is jerky and ungraceful.

However, I find myself in a position where my total being is threatened. It is a complex situation; it boils down to this: I must embody my personality in some action which will establish its identity. No — not an action, this epistle is a creation — I will embody my personality, or the relevant facets, in a concrete form. This will be clear for all to see, yet it will not have the negative aspects which an aggressive act has.

A few wacts: I live at the Co-op house; I came to two or three Spectrum meetings; I submitted some attempts at poetry which were, as I had expected, not accepted. (You accuse me of "sour grapes?" Hah. Se how I manipulat and therefore destroy your personalities, with a simple suggestion, you aggressive ones.) This should make what follows quiet clear.

Last night, while walking home, I was frightened by a tree. An ordinary tree suddenly became an entity, something like a flower. Leaves, sticks, branches, and trunk merged into, or exhaled, a sudden entity: a Tree, thickly green against the black sky. I closed my eyes; it remained, on opening them again. Against the black sky this solid tree became itself — positive, undeniable. An inanimate object did this! I was threatened; I felt frail and flimsy; it towered over me to deny me and sweep me away.

Yes, I have been disturbed. And I am afraid that I will be swept along like a mere object, hence losing my identity unless I assert myself, and force my quiet soul to shout, for once, and illuminate itself as a real live object, not a flimsy piece of gauze to be blown aside. As the tree pushes itself forth against the black syk, refusing to bend to my will, so I am pushing forth this letter. Just this once, and it will be done. And I may resume my quiet repose.

Beatniks! Gentlemen. So much to-do over a group of pretentious people who cannot possibly be the people they say they are!

Let me explain. Although I am not an expert on the subject, I am acquainted (rather intimately, in fact) with several people who are undoubtedly called "beat" by some, and who are themselves acquainted with such an expert. From these people, and from the publicity in general, I have gotten the following vague ideas.

Principally, a "beat" person has withdrawn from the world because it is full of injustice, pain, atom bombs, emotions and frustrations. This, in itself, is an assertion of the self against these uncomfortable facts, but it is the assertion of the suicide. It is the last one they ever make. They retire to an obscure non-existence in New York, California, or Denver, and go to parties where one sits and contemplates the mystic syllable POT. They resign from the nasty world. Then how can these people write novels? or poems? or worse yet, manifestoes? This sort of thing is the utmost commitment one can make! Here one creates fully a world. Here one is free from industrial wastes befouling the perfume of Spring. Here one embodies one's consciousness in concrete form. How involved in the World can one get?

My only solution is that the often-bored Public has deceived itself for a moment's diversion and has paid someone to play the buffoon — or circus freak.

Here is the heart of the matter: deception and negation of the self. One who allows himself to be swept along by the Public whim, a hollow, shifting wind — one who does this is destroying his own personality, his own existence as a conscious being. He becomes non-existent, which is becoming nothing, which is Not-Becoming. He ceases to exist, and is replaced by an Approximation of Public Taste in Buffoonery. And the Public, or rather, not the Public, but the individual reader, negates his own personality by making something out of nothing just to satisfy his schoolboy's dirty mind. "How strange and perverted these people are. How much more sinful even than Hollywood or old-fashioned Bohemianism! Scandalous!"

* * *

There now, it is out. I had planned to rant and rave and fully vent my spleen — but I am little spleenful. My gesture is made; it contains the proper essence. Let those who understand read; let me retire to my quiet existence. I go in peace; let no one feel attacked — I am not antagonistic. Antagonism would be a surrender of my independence to a petty irritation. I have asserted myself and established my identity. Let those notice who will, and those despise who . . .(?) will. I will not be swept along.

16 Million Additional

There is some feeling that the Appropriations Committee chairmen will come up soon with suggestions on where to put the additional $16,000,000 in revenue which it is estimated now will be available during the coming biennium.

The answer to that question is easy: Just put that $16,000,000 plus whatever else is needed to do the mob into the educational system of North Carolina.

We cannot afford to cut our education to fit the amount of money which might be available without increasing taxes. We must provide adequately for education, then do what is necessary to get the money. And, in providing for education, we must do so all the way from the first grade through the highest levels of graduate study in our University system.

The same rule must apply to the other state services, such as hospitals, welfare, pay for all state employees.

North Carolina is on the move forward. It must not do now anything which would put it into reverse.—Raleigh Times

Darwin

SOCIAL DARWINISM IN AMERICAN THOUGHT. By Richard Hofstadter. 248 pp. New York: George Braziller, Inc. $4.

Although it's validity was denied in the Scopes Trial, Charles Darwin's evolutionary theory has had great influence in American thought ever since it was published in The Origin Of The Species one hundred years ago this year.

Darwin's theory was one which, like Copernicus', transcended its scientific tradition and became a seminal idea for modern society-at-large. Such concepts as survival of the fittest, evolution, and natural selection — however they may have been qualified by Freud and modern philosophy—are still words to conjure with in American social thought today.

In this complete revision of the book he published in 1944, Professor Hofstadter of Columbia traces the American social thought which bears the stamp, and often the terminology, of Darwin's work. Dewey, Veblem, Kropotkin, Herbert Spencer, and others are discussed and compared.

Spectrum Type Poetry

Editor:

Having been away from the "Southern Part of Heaven" over the weekend, I have only today caught up on my reading of the DTH for this past Saturday. There on the "editorial" page I found what I must in all generosity credit with being a letter to the editor. It was written by one Parker Hodges (I assume there is only one) and in part, was directly pointed at my opinion of Spectrum-type poetry.

This is to inform you that I would like to reply to Mr. Hodges, but I still haven't figured out what he said. Would you see that he is enrolled in some good remedial English class and ask him to try again in six months or so?

Harry Kirschner

THE SILENT LANGUAGE by Edward T. Hall. New York: Doubleday & Co. $3.95.

The concept of culture, as it is used in anthropology, is a difficult one to grasp. Once it is grasped, moreover, it is even more difficult to define in such a way so that its dynamic aspects are expressed. I have heard culture presented simply as being patterns of learned behavior. It is certainly this, but only if behavior is defined as meaning thought (on both the conscious and subconscious levels of the mind) as well as action. And then the full meaning of culture is only brought out in the most abstract sense so that one does not get the understanding of it from the definition.

A culture is the way of life of a group of people, and people exist on many levels of being at one and the same time, levels which are commonly thought of as being aspects of "human nature." The levels are so ingrained in any person that it is difficult for him to sit down and analyze them. If and when he does so he finds that in his analysis he needs to utilize insightful learning and empathy or emotional learning, as well as intellectual learning. Then the question immediately arises as to how one can express in a series of words that which took learning by "feeling" to understand so that the reader will realize the fully intended meaning. The question is a difficult one, and I don't think that as yet anyone has met it with complete success.

Hall has presented in THE SILENT LANGUAGE his approach to the problem of defining culture for both the layman and the anthropologist. As the director of the State Department's Point Four Training Program he faces the problem of presenting the concept of culture to people who are not necessarily interested in theorizing on culture of and for itself, but who need to know how to get along positively with the people of the culture to which they are being sent. As such they are naturally not willing to take the time that an anthropologist takes in his approach to understanding people who have different theories of life than our own.

So Hall has written a work which is centered on the difficulties which can arise between interacting cultures because of mutual misunderstanding. He is primarily interested in communication, as the title implies.

In this way his book differs in approach, but not in basic meaning, from those of most other anthropologists. It is, in my opinion, a quite valid and timely approach. He gives insight into why in our nation's dealings with other countries we seem to end up all too frequently either on the short end with those to whom we are antagonistic or at a frosty distance with those who were once our friends. While doing so, he points out that however much it may be useful for us to understand the concept of culture and utilize it, there is a tendency to resist such knowledge altogether. As he writes, "Most of our difficulties (in international relations) stem from our own ignorance. Honest and sincere men in the field continue to fail to grasp the true significance of the fact that culture controls behavior in deep and persisting ways, many of which are outside of awareness and therefore beyond conscious control of the individual. When the anthropologist stresses this point he is usually ignored, for he is challenging the deepest popular American beliefs about ourselves as well as foreigners. He leads people to see things they might not want to see."

At this time talk of war is in the air, and we are preparing to meet the Russians across the table. It always bothers us when we confront the Russians in this way because any successes which we have had resulting from such talks have been notably few. It would seem that no matter how much we may resist knowing others, and therefore ourselves, in ways in which we are not accustomed the pratical thing (and Americans pride themselves on being "pratical" would be to have a real understanding of the Russians in order to deal with them effectively. Little is known about the Russian pattern, partly because the Soviet Union is careful to be secretive, but Hall mentions one point which is quite relevant: "Our pattern calls for the fixing of the agenda informally beforehand. We do not, as a whole, feel too comfortable trying to operate in a semi-public situation, hammering out an agenda the way the Russians do. We prefer to assume that both parties want to talk about the subject, otherwise they wouldn't be there; and that they are sufficiently involved in the topic to make it worth their while. With the Russians there is some indication that, while this is true, negotiation over the separate points of the agenda signals to the other side how the opponent is going to react during the actual conference. Softness on our part in early negotiation, because we do not technically fix the agenda but agree informally about what should be taken up, is often interpreted as weakness. Or it may give the impression that we are going to give in on certain points when we aren't at all."

And so, while both we and the Russians are hoping to communicate effectively at the conference, communication has already broken down.

Hall also brings up a new concept in defining culture. While most definitions in the past have included a two-level concept of implicit and explicit culture, Hall and George Trager have worked out a three level concept which is broken down into informal, formal (corresponding to implicit and explicit), and technical. I have found this very interesting, and most usefull in dealing with an analysis of our own culture.

I do not believe, however, that this concept should be taken as the last word on culture. As I tried to make clear at the begining, the analysis is not done overnight (if it is ever completed), and writing about it is difficult in terms of understanding. Hall has done a good job. He leads the reader with a writing style that is clear and smooth, and he manages to show as well as to tell.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

This is the last column of my fifth year of writing for Philip Morris and Marlboro. I have made it a custom in the last column of each year not to be funny. I know I have also realized this aim in many other columns during the year, but that was not for lack of trying. Today I am not trying. I am not trying for two reasons: First, because you are getting ready for final exams and in your present state of shock, nothing in the world could possibly make you laugh. And second, this final column of the year is for many of us a leave-taking, and good-byes always make me too misty to be funny.

For me the year ends neither with a bang nor a whimper, but with a glow—a warm, pleasant, mellow glow—the kind of glow you will find, for example, at the end of a Philip Morris or Marlboro.

It has been in every way a gratifying experience, my five years with the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro, and I would like to take this opportunity to extend my heartfelt appreciation to these good tobacconists, to assure them that the memory of their kindness will remain ever green in my heart, and to remind them that they still owe me for the last three columns.

And in these waning days of the school year, let me address myself seriously to you, my readers. Have I trod on any toes this year? Ruffled any feelings? Jostled any sensibilities? If so, I am sorry.

Have I occasioned any laughs? Chuckles? Sniggers? Mona Lisa smiles? If so, I'm glad.

Have I persuaded any of you to try Philip Morris and Marlboro? To taste that fine flavor? To smoke that excellent tobacco? If so, you are glad.

And now the long, lazy summer lies ahead. But for me summer is never lazy. It is, in fact, the busiest time of year. Two summers ago, for instance, I was out ringing doorbells every single day, morning, noon, and night. There was a contest, you see, and the kid in my neighborhood who sold the most bluing won a pony. I am proud to report that I was the lucky winner.

Last summer I was also out ringing doorbells every single day, morning, noon, and night. I was trying to sell the pony.

This summer I am not going to be out ringing doorbells. I am going to saddle the pony and ride to Hollywood, California. What am I going to do in Hollywood, California? I am going to write a series of half-hour television comedies called THE MANY LOVES OF DOBIE GILLIS, and starting in October, 1959, your friends and mine, the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro, are going to bring you this program over the Columbia Broadcasting System every Tuesday night at 8:30. Why don't you speak to your housemother and ask her if she'll let you stay up to see it?

And now good-bye. For me it's been kicks all the way, and I hope for you it hasn't been altogether unbearable. Have a good summer. Stay well. Stay cool. Stay loose.

© 1959, Max Shulman

For us, the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro, it's been kicks too, and we would like to echo kindly old Max's parting words: Stay well. Stay cool. Stay loose.

Playmakers Personell Conduct Art Session

Summer drama study for high school students will be offered again this year in the 13th summer session of the Junior Carolina Playmakers.

Key personnel from the Carolina Playmakers will conduct the five-week dramatic art session, which is an activity of the UNC Extension Division. The director will be John W. Parker, professor of dramatic art and Carolina Playmakers business manager.

The students, limited to a maximum enrollment of 50, will get an intensive dose of such phases of theatre work as acting, voice and diction, and stagecraft.

During the session July 19 through August 22 the young dramatists will gain practical experience in acting and staging of major and experimental productions by the Junior Playmakers.

Rising junior and seniors or 1959 graduates are eligible to enroll. The State Department of Public Instruction allows one unit of dramatic art credit, an English elective, to be applied by the student toward a high school diploma.

Dr. Russell B. Graves, a visiting associate professor in dramatic art, will teach a course in introduction to the theatre. A playwright, Graves studied at Carnegie Tech and Florida State, took his Ph.D. at Western Reserve University, and has taught at Lycoming College in Williamsburg, Pa.

Fred Sitton, dramatic art instructor at Myers Park High School in Charlotte, will teach voice and diction. Among Chapel Hillians on the staff are Mrs. Louise Lamont, drama teacher, and Tommy Rezzuto, Playmakers technical director.

Mrs. Helen House of Chapel Hill will be assistant director and business manager for the high school session. Mrs. Eleanor Carter of San Antonio, Tex. and Mrs. Louise Dixon of Edenton will act again as counsellors and housemothers for the students.

High School Math Winner Is Announced

Hughes B. Hoyle III of Myers Park High School, Charlotte, has been named winner of the high school mathematics contest which had 2,610 student participants.

The winner will receive a Merit Scholarship here which covers the cost of tuition. The scholarship will be renewed each year if the student maintains satisfactory progress in the University program.

Ralph Reid of East Mecklenburg High School in Matthews was runner-up in the contest, according to the announcement by Dr. Ernest L. Mackie and L. L. Garner of the UNC Department of Mathematics.

Honorable mention was given to the following students: Michael James George, Greensboro Senior High School; Sylvia Fowler, Morganton High School; William A. Lucas II, Fayetteville Senior High School; and Roy Swaringen, Reynolds High School, Winston-Salem.

E. R. Rankin of the UNC Extension Division, secretary in charge of the academic contests, pointed out that the number of student entries for the mathematics competition topped any previous records. There were 2,610 entries from 130 N. C. high schools. Last year 2,261 students from 117 high schools participated.

The mathematics contest was open to members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Each school with participating students selected the best paper from the total submitted and sent the paper to the University where it was graded along with other top entries.

The UNC Extension Division has also conducted contests in the fields of chemistry, physics, Latin, Spanish and French. Winners in the physics contest have already been announced with other winners to be named soon.

Duff Elected Dance Head

The UNC Dance Committee elected Angus Duff chairman for the coming year at its last meeting of the current semester.

Duff, upon assuming the chairmanship, commended his predecessor, Charles Coley, and the other outgoing officers for a job well done in promoting campus-wide understanding of the functions of the committee throughout the past year.

Chairman Duff further stated that it is the duty of the Dance Committee to make and enforce rules concerning conduct at UNC dances and try all cases of violation of these rules. He stressed, however, that the committee's basic purpose is to insure good conduct at dances and concerts in accordance with the Campus Code.

The committee's other newly elected officers are Joe Oppenheimer, secretary; Rusty Sharp, committee court chairman, and Mike Smith, head doorman.

Soviet Union, West Powers Yield In Big Four Meeting

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

GENEVA, May 11—(AP)—Both the Soviet Union and the West had to yield points in order to get the Big Four meeting started today.

The West beat a Russian maneuver to extract international recognition for Communist East Germany.

But Russia established a limited right for East and West Germans to intervene in the big power debates on their country's problems.

These results highlighted 24 hours of hectic exchanges between the foreign ministers of the two great rival power blocs.

Britain's Selwyn Lloyd and Russia's Andrei Gromyko plunged right into the heart of the issues confronting the powers.

It centered on the status of the two Germanys in the conference room.

Both Russia and the West had to yield something in order to get the conference started.

Gromyko, seeking a voice and a seat for East Germany at the conference table, settled in the end for the right of the East German delegate to ask if he might speak.

In that sense Gromyko won a point. His maneuver also enables the Russians to pose as the champions of both Germanys to have a say in the conference room.

The West, resolved to confine the role of both Germanys to that of advisers, emerged from the brush with their lines intact and their position only slightly changed. Neither foreign minister Lothar Bolz of East Germany nor Heinrich Von Brentano of West Germany will be full participants at the conference and the East Germans will not be able to claim they have been recognized actually or implicitly.

But the Americans, British and French gave a little ground. As advisers, the Germans would have had no right to intervene in the debates. Now if they catch the eye of the conference chairman he will allow them to speak if there are no objections by the four main powers.

Strictly speaking this gives any of the Big Four the power to veto interventions by either German squad. But already an informal East-West understanding—a sort of gentleman's agreement — has been reached that the veto will not be used in normal circumstances.

Tar Heels Go After ACC Title Against Wake Forest Today

COOPER'S COLUMN

By ELLIOTT COOPER
SPORTS EDITOR

BETTER THAN A MONTH AGO, on Saturday, April 11 to be exact, a baseball game was supposed to have been played at Emerson Stadium between Carolina and Wake Forest. Since it rained, however, the game had to be cancelled and a new time was selected for the makeup. Now that time has come.

Four weeks ago that one particular game didn't look too big but the complexion of things has changed. In all probability the winner of today's contest between the Tar Heels and the Deacons will be the conference champion. Had the battle taken place as originally scheduled we would already know who was going to carry the ACC colors into the NCAA playoffs.

For Coach Walter Rabb's Tar Heels, this afternoon's game with the Deacons marks the finale of the regular league schedule and you certainly couldn't close out with a more important contest. Victory for Carolina would put it into NCAA elimination without any question. Should the Deacons win they would still have to lick State tomorrow before they could officially be crowned number one in the ACC.

★ ★ ★

A CAROLINA LOSS TODAY and a Wake Forest loss to State would throw the league into complete confusion since such a situation would create a three-way tie between the Tar Heels, the Deacons, and the Clemson Tigers. With exams coming on the possibility of having to play off a tie is like a bad dream that nobody wants to have to believe.

The Tar Heels have gotten into first place by a great deal of work on their own part along with some extra help from Duke and Maryland. Just a little over a week ago what Carolina was hoping for most was that another league team would knock off the Deacons giving them three loses on their record coming into today's game. Instead of securing one favor, however, the Heels got two, so rather than shoot for a tie this afternoon they will be going for the championship.

★ ★ ★

SINCE THE START of the present eight-game winning streak, the Tar Heels have begun to hit with a great deal more gusto. During the last several home contests the left-handed batters in the Carolina lineup have been belting the right field hedge with alarming regularity. In Saturday's game against Maryland, Harold Workman opened the Tar Heel half of the first with a triple that hit the top of the wire fence in right and bounded back on the playing field. Later on Al Baldwin socked the first ball that we have ever seen actually clear the hedge; the only trouble was that it was foul by some twenty feet.

All this only goes to prove one thing, the culmination of a season's work will be reached in two hours this afternoon. To say the least the Tar Heel players would like nothing better than to see a full house come out to view this crucial game. Despite the fact Carolina was fighting to reach its present position last weekend against Virginia and Maryland only about 800 people were around for the game and that's nothing but poor support on somebody's part.

No matter who wins this upcoming game we guarantee that it is going to be a good one. Both teams want it in the worst way and will certainly be out for blood. There can never be too many fans in the stands for this one.

Carolina Out To Win Ninth Straight Game

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Carolina shoots for all the marbles this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Emerson Stadium when they take on Wake Forest in a game that could determine the Atlantic Coast Conference Championship.

If the Tar Heels can whip the Deacons they will finish up their ACC schedule with a 10-4 and claim the title hands down. Wake Forest, however, is currently one-half game behind the Heels and must win both today and tomorrow against State before it can officially nail down the crown.

On the strength of their present eight-game winning streak, Carolina has moved all the way from the bottom of the conference ladder to the top. After four games the Tar Heels could show only a 1-3 record in the league, but since that time things have changed. Only Clemson has managed to down Carolina since the drive for the pennant began.

Young To Start

Carolina Coach Walter Rabb is planning to start righthander Wayne Young against the Deacons. Young has lost but one game this season, that to these very same Deacons when the teams played in Winston-Salem, while racking up six victories.

Troubled by a sore arm during the early part of the year, Young has come on fast to once again be labeled as the workhorse of the Carolina mound staff. For the junior from Mooresville, today's assignment marks the third time in a week that he has been called upon to start a game. Last Tuesday he went the full nine to beat State 3-2 and Saturday he repeated the performance to get credit for Carolina's 8-2 win over Maryland.

Harding Or Hammett

Should Young require relief during the contest Rabb will probably call on lefthanders Ben Hammett and Ben Harding. During the last ten games the Tar Heel pitchers have allowed but twelve earned runs and fifty-four hits. In the ERA department Carolina has four pitchers under the 3.0 mark with Young leading the list at 2.0.

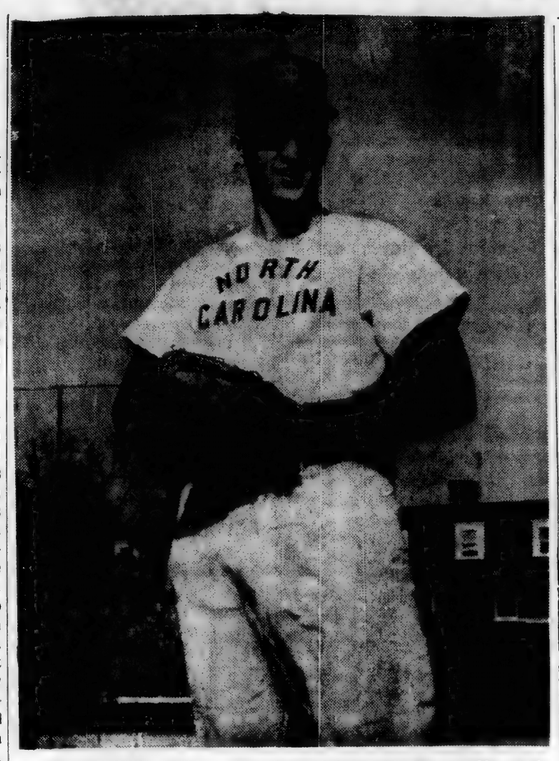
In their first meeting the Deacons bounced the Tar Heels 9-2 as they belted out sixteen hits and disposed of Young in the third frame. The winner for Wake Forest that day was sophomore Bob Plemmons and in all probability Deac Coach Ace Parker will call on him to start off today.

Two .400 Hitters

Wake Forest enters this afternoon's play with a decided edge on the Tar Heels in the individual batting department since it has a pair of men hitting better than .400 in left fielder Jack Phillips and center fielder Jay Franklin. Although Phillips' .452 is thirty-seven points above Franklin's, he has not been to bat as many times.

Offensively Carolina will lineup in the same order that was used in Saturday's game against Maryland. In the infield Rabb will start Vaughn Bryson (.250) at first, Larry Craver (.250) at second, Ferg Norton (.281) at third, and Harold Workman (.220) at shortstop, with Al Baldwin (.286) behind the plate.

Russ Hollers and Johnny Burgwyn, the leading hitters among the regulars at .315 and .313 respectively, are slated to open in the outfield along with Gerald Griffin.



SEEK SEVENTH WIN — Carolina righthander Wayne Young is the probable starting pitcher for the Tar Heels this afternoon when they tackle Wake Forest at Emerson Stadium. Over the 16⅓ innings he has hurled in varsity competition Young has as ERA of 1.4.

Golf Clinic

The Woman's Physical Education Department announces that a golf clinic by two of the top women golf professionals will be held at Finley Golf Course this afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock. The clinic is open to the public without charge. The "pros" are Beverly Hansen and Joyce Ziske, both of whom are members of the MacGregor Sporting Goods Company Advisory Staff of golf champions.

TENNIS SCHEDULE

At 4:00 Zeta Psi vs SAE in the championship finals.

Co-Rec Swimming Relays

Chi Phi and Kap Delt swam away with the honors in Thursday night's Co-Rec Swimming Relays, as they won first place by a sizeable margin.

Chi Phi-Kappa Delt took four first places out of the eight events. Among the events in which they won were the cork harvest, disrobe race, ball relay and candle relay.

In second place was the Chi Psi-Chi Omega team. They managed to cop two first place votes, among these were the medley swimming relay and the ballon relay. Third place went to the PiKA-Nurses II team. They took only one first place vote and it was in the tandem relay. The other first place vote went to the Phi Gam-Alpha Gam II team, and it was in the inner tube race. Phi Gam-Alpha Gam II also managed to take fourth place.

It was estimated that approxiamately one hundred persons took part in the event, which produced many laughs for both the participants and the viewers.

The scoring was 5 points for first place, 3 points for second, and 1 point for third place.

History Graduate Students Win The Falstaff Trophy

Potent bats and slick late-inning pitching combined to give the graduate History students a 16-15 softball win Saturday in their annual tussle with the English Department for The Falstaff Trophy. The victory also brought two cases of beer, thus depriving all concerned of their amateur standing.

Big Bill Schmidt and bigger A. J. Slavin provided the power for the history team, both boys belting solid home runs in the sixth inning. Schmidt's blast came with two men on. Schmidt also provided the sterling relief pitching that kept the English scholars in check from the sixth inning on.

The history club's second baseman, Peter B. "Ape" Young, went four for five and scored the winning run in the ninth inning. Young slid home in a cloud of dust and a hearty hi-ho silver (and all convertible currencys.)

Seahawks Beat Frosh

WILMINGTON — Roger Coon singled home Jerry Richardson in the eleventh inning to give Wilmington Junior College a 5-4 win over the Carolina freshmen here last Saturday night.

Lefty Dick Tarlow went eight innings for the frosh before giving way to Nick Warren in the ninth. Warren was touched for the defeat while Joel Gibson, the third of four Seahawk pitcners, was credited with his seventh victory.

SOFTBALL SCHEDULE

At 4:00 Fraternity Blue division championship, Fraternity White division championship.

At 5:00 Dormitory division championship, Graduate division championship.

Freshman Track Team At Duke

The Carolina freshman track team having finished the dual season with a fine 4-1 record wraps it all up today with the annual Big Four Meet held at 3:00 p.m. at Duke.

The Tar Babies, who beat State twice, Wake Forest once, and split two with Duke, have the strongest and deepest team since 1956 when such current stars as Dave Scurlock, Wayne Bishop, and Lyndon DeBorde performed as freshmen.

The outstandrng individuals are many. Perhaps the best is a strong, hard-working pole vaulter named Barry Tiedemann who has consistently cleared 13' all year and now owns the freshman record of 13' 4".

Middle-Distance Men

Three middle distance runners have been steady point winners this spring — Dennis Rash in the quarter, Dave Peltz (All-American in high school) in the half, and Scott Brent in the half — and the top performers in the mile and two mile have been Tim Burnette (4:32) and Rett Everett (9:59).

Ward Purrington is the man to watch in the sprints and Willfred Turner is the top hurdler.

In the weight events, shot putters Harvey Henry and Ken McComb, discus man Gary Frye, and javelin men Cutter Davis and Jim Whicker will be threats.

High Jump Mark

One of the best of the freshman crew is high jumper Sandy Allen who has cracked the former frosh record of 6' with a leap of 6'1 and ¾. He and Whicker are the top Tar Babies in that event and John O'Bannon is the number one broad jumper.

The mile relay team which ripper off a brisk, winning 3:24.9 in the Florida Relays will probably be made up of Purrington, Rush, Brent, and Peltz. Possible replacements are Don Jeffries, Maurice McDonald, and Tammy Leffler.

Phi Delts Get Oustanding Frat Trophy

By A. PRINGLE PIPKIN

Former Chancellor Robert B. House awarded the Robert B. House Trophy for the outstanding fraternity to Phi Delta Theta at the Interfraternity Council meeting Monday night.

The award was instituted last year. This is the second successive time that Phi Delta Theta has won the trophy. A fraternity which wins the trophy three successive times retains the trophy.

The winner is determined by consideration of a fraternity's scholarship, intramural standing, IFC participation, extra-curriculars of the members and house appearance.

The IFC amended the rush rules Monday night so that those who are disaffiliated because of failure to make a "C" average after two semesters will be classed as an "agent" of a fraternity and will not be allowed to rush during periods of silence.

These former pledges will not be allowed to break silence periods by talking to rushees about their former fraternity. If they do break silence periods, their fraternity can be charged with dirty rushing.

Summer rush rules were announced:

1. There will be no parties for future rushees in Chapel Hill or the vicinity;

2. No man who is planning to go through rush in the fall may visit a fraternity house during the summer;

3. Silence period will begin on Sept. 11.

A tabulation of the number of actives and number of activies having a "C" average last fall semester was released to the IFC.

Pi Lambda Alpha had the lowest per cent of non-"C" actives. Their per cent was 4.76. Five other fraternities had 20 per cent or less non-"C" actives.

SP Amends By-Laws

In its last meeting of the semester, the Student Party passed the last of a series of amendments to its by-laws, and wished its members a good summer, then adjourned to one of the local Pizza houses to discuss politics.

Party Chairman Dewey Sheffield said he was proud of the party's record of activity in the last year, and expressed confidence in successes for the coming year.

'A' STUDENTS — The Order of the Grail presented awards Monday night to five students with high scholastic averages. These honored were: (left to right), Wade Hampton Lefler Jr., who has the highest average of a senior in student government; Herman Albert Margolis, with the highest average of a self-help student; Kenneth Milton Wheeler and Carroll Lee Gray, with the highest average of freshman self-help students, and Donald Sanborn Redding, who has the highest average of a senior athlete. AKPsi Holds Banquet At Hotel In Durham

Last weekend Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity held its annual Spring Pledge Banquet at the Washington-Duke Hotel in Durham. Approximately 150 guests alumni and members were present.

Pledge Master Gets Award

For his work and guidance during the pledge training period, Allan Meade, vice president and pledge master, was presented an award by Richard G. Rhyne, president of the pledge class.

Gabriel Marlin Evans of High Point received the Scholarship Key for 1959. The key is given to the senior in the School of Business Administration who has the highest scholastic average for his three and three-fourths years' work.

Faculty Members Initiated

Two faculty members, Dr. Lowell D. Ashby and Dr. Paul N. Guthrie, who were initiated into the fraternity during the past year, were presented with their membership certificates.

Edward L. Jennings of Wadesboro was named Outstanding Pledge for the spring semester. He received an engraved trophy, and his name will be inscribed on an Outstanding Pledge plaque that is displayed in the chapter house.

AKPsi Sweetheart

Crowned Alpha Kappa Psi Sweetheart for 1959 was Diane Snakenburg of Wilmington. She was presented a bouquet of yellow roses and the crown by Mary Mon Key, 1958 Sweetheart.

Guest for the banquet included Dr and Mrs. Willard Graham, Dr. and Mrs. Lowell Ashby, Mr. and Mrs. Erle Peacock, President William Friday, George Watts Hill Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Marlin Evans and Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Jordan.

All Degree Candidates Will Meet Thursday

All candidates for degrees from the University have been asked to attend a meeting Thursday at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall at which the commencement procedure will be outlined.

Dr. J. C. Lyons of the Romance Languages Department, who is in charge of the meeting, yesterday urged seniors and graduate students to attend the sessions so as to avoid confusion during commencement.

Dr. Lyons advised students unable to attend the meeting to have another person get the information for them.

Graham Memorial Budget Is Estimated At $58,485

By BUDDY SPOON

Graham Memorial Student Union will operate during the 1959-60 academic year under an estimated budget of $58,485.

Howard Henry, director of Graham Memorial, said that $41,500 of an expected $58,485 income will come from student activity fees. The rest of the income will come from such services as the pool room, the poster service and the rental of equipment.

$36,760 Allocation

An allocation of $36,760 in the budget will be used in the general administration and operating expenses. Graham Memorial Activities Board will get an appropriation of $20,224.50. A surplus of $1,500.50 is left.

The Graham Memorial Student Activities Board's new budget has been increased almost $3,000. The 1959 GMAB program budget was $17,490 and the new budget is set at $20,224.50.

Two Section Budget

The GMAB program budget is divided into two sections, the "approved" and "tentative" sections, which are separately approved. The "approved" budget supports the services of GMAB which have already made definite plans while the "tentative" budget supports the services which have not made plans.

Henry Has Hope

Henry said, "with a budgeted system this small, we hope we have everything taken care of."

He also stated, "By keeping our general administrative and operating expenses at a minimum level, we have been able to project a 1959-60 program budget for the GMAB budget which is approximately $3,000 or about 18 per cent greater than last year's budget.

Officers For Summer

The Interdormitory Council will elect its summer school officers at tonight's meeting at 7 o'clock in Phi Hall.

Otto Funderburk, president of the IDC, said the officers will be selected from the IDC members and the six incumbents who will be attending summer school.

There will be also be a vote on proposed ammendments to the IDC by-laws which the IDC court made last week.

Discussion will be continued from last meeting about dormitory meetings for freshmen in conjunction with Orientation Week next fall.

7 Members Initiated Into Air Honorary

Seven new members have been initiated into the Arnold Air Society, the honorary Air Force ROTC organization for distinguished military students.

The new members are: Clyde Atkins, Gerald Bradley, Harold Byrd, Fred Harris, John Rhoades, Bert Salem and Gay Sanford.

These seven were selected from a pledge class of 35 on the basis of military achievement, scholastic endeavor and interest in the AFROTC.

After the initiation ceremony Monday night, Capt. Thomas Moore spoke to society members on his experience as a fighter pilot with the Tactical Air Command and Strategic Air Command.

Capt. Moore is a 1951 UNC graduate who returned this year as an air science instructor to freshmen.

Officiating at the final meeting of the squadron were these new officers of Arnold Air Society: Lewis Saunders, commander; Robert Fulghum, executive officer; James Frost, operations officer; Howard Pope, adjutant-recorder, and Robert Silliman, information services officer.

Irving Named To Legislature

Donna Irving was named to fill the University Party Legislature seat which will be vacted by graduating Ann Harvey.

In announcing several appointments, Hank Patterson, UP chairman, said the party Executive Board had selected Mis Irving because of her "interest in Student Government in the past demonstrated by her active participation in its activities."

Patterson also announced the new members to the UP Executive Board: John Minter, Dixie Jackson, Lou Johnson and Rick Overstreet.

Lionel Todd, George Campbell, Kathy Sellers and Jeanne Crewes were appointed UP liaisons to the Interdormitory Council, Interfraternity Council, Pan Hellenic Council and Women's Residence Council, respectively.

Donald Black was named to head the party's Membership Committee which includes Surry Roberts, Judy King, Sterling Nelli and Mary Wetzel.

CORRECTION

In an article in Tuesday's newspaper, three names were incorrectly reported or misspelled.

The winner of the Archibald Henderson Prize in Mathematics is Albert Leonard Deal III of Hickory.

William Lewis Harrington has been named the winner of the Phi Beta Kappa award of $150 which goes to a member of the rising junior class with the highest scholastic average. This person must also be eligible for self-help work.

In another article in Tuesday's paper, the name of Sigma Delta Chi's new secretary was misspelled. He is Jim Laughrun.

Executive Committee Asks More Funds For Carolina

RALEIGH, May 12 (UP) — The Executive Committee of the University of North Carolina Board of Trustees declared Tuesday the University must have substantially higher appropriations than Gov. Hodges and the advisory budget commission recommended.

At a meeting in the Governor's office, the Executive Committee adopted a resolution declaring that "the necessary functions of the consolidated University cannot be effectively carried on with less than the revised budget request of the Unversity."

The committee said the UNC request had been pared down to $3,277,600 above what the advisory budget commission had recommended.

The committee session came after the joint appropriations subcommitee Monday night had received a proposal from their joint chairmen that the University appropriation be increased $3,200,000 above budget recommendations.

Gray Challenges Frats To Improve Themselves

Student Body President Charlie Gray issued a challenge to fraternities Tuesday to improve themselves and thus avert forced deferred rush and possible abolishment.

Gray endorsed proposals recently passed by the Interfraternity Council which provide for a second semester formal rush period and for higher scholastic requirements.

In calling upon individual fraternities to consider the IFC proposals Gray said, "I am fully aware that some of these restrictions have been distasteful to many of you, but at the same time I hope you realize the necessity of such moves."

Gray acknowledged that "in the last few years the reputation of fraternities has been gradually dropping in the minds of many people." He attributed this decline of favorable opinion toward fraternities to poor scholastic averages and poor conduct during social activities.

"As a result, fraternities are faced with deferred rush and possible abolishment if the situation does not improve," he said.

Earlier this year, the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities decided against deferred rush though its sub-committee on deferred rush recommended the new rushing policy.

The committee did imply when it released its decision that fraternities would be expected to improve the grade averages.

Soon after the faculty committee report was made public, the IFC enacted several reforms, which are the ones referred to by Gray.

The IFC ruled that pledges will be allowed two semesters to make a "C" average or else be disaffiliated from the fraternity.

In building to a "C" average for all members of each fraternity, the IFC passed regulations requiring that: 1. at the end of the fall semester, 60 per cent of fraternity actives must have a "C" average; 2. at the end of the spring semester (1960), 70 per cent must have this average; and 3. at the end of the 1960 fall semester, 80 per cent must have a "C" average.

Special provisions were also made by the IFC so that a disaffiliated pledge would not be able to engage in any fraternity activities or influence rushees during the silence periods.

In his belief that "it is not too late to change people's minds and show the community the real asset the fraternities are," Gray asked the individual fraternity to initiate improvements for itself.

"I want to urge you to consider seriously the proposals of the IFC and I'm sure you will see that in the long run these proposals will go a long way in improving the standing and respect of our fraternity system," he said.

Alsop Brothers And Reality!

The Alsop brothers, that's Joseph and Stewart, have a new bok on the market entitled "The Reporter's Trade." Since it has been viewed, previewed and reviewed on the pages of this paper in the past (namely by the present editor's predecessor), we will take only a few lines of this column in which to present some of the more pertinent items pointed up by what is in all probability the greatest repotorial team ever to appear on the journalistic scene.

The Alsop brothers are most famous for their interesting columns. Yet, basically, they are not columnists. They are reporters. For, as they point out in the first few pages of this extremely enlightning work, they always try and include at least one new and interesting piece of information in each of their daily messages to their millions of American readers.

The book is mainly a collection of their columns during the past 12 years, i.e. the post-war period. As one re-reads these works, many of which he may have read in the past, he sees the cool and calculating way in which the Alsop brothers have correctly (far more often than not) forcast the important events in the years of the cold war conflict. Particularly in the realms of what they term "de fense reporting" these two journalistic giants have been most effective. To be sure, they have stepped on toes and severed sensitive nerves, but always they have stood for the best in journalism, which is giving the truth to the people though the eyes of well informed observers.

Much of what you read in "The Reporter's Trade" isn't too pleasant. But, then again neither are many of the events taking place around the globe.

So, as another reviewer once said, "If you are unafraid of looking a myriad of cold, hard, unpleasant realities in the face, the book is available, and you should be at the head of the line to buy it. And if your brother happens to have a birthday soon, buy an extra copy. He might learn something too."

Responsiblity

This should be the week that the Joint Appropriations Committee of the General Assembly and the State Senate finally comes out with its report (recomendations) for the budget for the next biennium for the Consolidated Unversity of North Carolina.

We hope the State's highest lawmakers will realize the importance of giving enough money to North Carolina's higher education system to allow it not only to maintain the status quo, but also to advance to a more cherished position. We hope that they will realize that education is not cheap, that other schools are literally "stealing" our best faculty members, that UNC needs a student union in the worst way, that libraries need money to buy book, that repairs must be made on old buildings and new ones built, and that in a time of crisis in American education it is more important than ever for this state to lead, not be led.

BUT, MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL, WE HOPE THE LEGISLATORS WILL REALIZE THEIR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE FUTURE OF THIS STATE. FOR, THE FUTURE OF THIS STATE IS ALSO THE FUTURE OF EDUCATION.

Beatnik Saga

By ANON E. MOUSE

This is a beatnik saga for our time. The story, except for names, happens to be true; but if any law enforcement officer (student or otherwise) should demand my official testimony in this matter I will claim that it was all a muy wild figment of my imagination.

The saga begins with a young man known to his friends as The Rattler. This young man used to be a student at a prominent northern college. About ten days ago, The Rattler loaded four (yes, four!) girls into his car and headed South for a party at Chapel Hill.

The girls, all coeds at the same northern school, can be described as follows: Miss A has one lung, two psychiatrists and no money; Miss B is a cripple who hobbles grotesquely around, all the time protesting that she is not really a cripple and does not need crutches or a cane; Miss C has had three (yes, three!) abortions; Miss D is a rich young society matron who studies beatniks the way biologists study bugs.

The first signs of impending disaster shower early when all the girls objected to the pungent smell of kitten dung in the cozy Chapel Hill room that had been assigned to them. The next sign of disaster and when Miss A journeyed up Franklin Street casually charging all sorts of merchandise to a non-existent Carolina coed. Miss A then stowed this loot in The Rattler's car.

Matters reached a crisis stage on Saturday afternoon when the misses B, C and D borrowed The Rattler's car to get some lunch. When they did not return after three hours, even The Rattler began to suspect that something was wrong.

The Rattler and his local friends then entered into a serious debate to decide whether or not to call the gendarmes. The problem, you see, was that there were three sticks of marijuana in the glove compartment of The Rattler's car. If the girls were stopped, and the car presumably searched, even the local cops from Squaresville would blanche at the sight of the Progressive Pall Malls. As The Rattler kept protesting: "I can't call the cops, man. They'll dig the pot, and Doomsville!"

More machiavellian counsel prevailed, and The Rattler was persuaded that it would be comparatively easy to push "the pot" off on "the chicks." The Rattler called local police and reported his car as stolen.

And then it was Saturday night—the party which had drawn the northern beatniks South was in full swing. At one o'clock in the morning The Rattler placed a phone call to his own school in the North. The young ladies, hipsters all, had returned home, and The Rattler's car was parked in front of his fraternity. The Rattler told the girls that unless they wired $100 transportation money home for himself and Miss A, he would press grand larceny charges upon his return. The girls digested this piece of news, and then made a momentous decision.

The misses B, C, and D took "the pot" and the Chapel Hill loot to the administrative authorities of their school. They also claimed that The Rattler had brought them to Chapel Hill for purposes of a sex orgy and was therefore guilty of violating the Mann Act.

When The Rattler and Miss A got back to their own school late Monday they were met by the highest university authorities and told to start packing. Both The Rattler and Miss A would have graduated this June. Wholesome, patriotic careers stretched before them.

The Rattler is going to sea on a merchant ship; Miss A is probably going to sell you-know-what in Newark. So ends a tragic (and all too typical) saga of our time.

It is a saga of beatniks who do not know the meaning of the word "cool." It is a saga of crazy, mixed-up kids who are so hungry for meaning and sense and discipline and order that they will drive 600 miles for KICKS and then turn on each other like psychopathic animals.

It is a saga that (to coin a phrase) could only happen in America.

EXPLANATION: The above in summary form shows the bouts which were scored last Friday nite (May 1st) in the sabre event at GM. Touches made by a fencer are found to the right of his name and appear under the column numbered according to the opponent against whom they were scored. Each fencer's number is to the left of his name and the numbers across the top correspond to these. Since a bout is won by scoring five touches upon the opponent the bouts won column is simply the number of five's beside a given fencer's name.

The position of finish is determined by the greater number of bouts won, but when ties in bouts won occur they are broken in favor of the fencer who received the least touches against him as found by totaling the vertical column beneath his number. Thus, for example, while both Lopez (6) and Wilkinson (4) each won four victories, the touches receievd column shows that Wilkinson was touched only 25 times while Lopez received 26 touches. In the event there ever should be a tie in both bouts and touches received, a bout is fenced; the tie being broken then in favor of the winner of the fence-off.

The '59 sabre trophy winners in this campus championship were as indicated above: Mike Collins, first place; Bob Aldridge, second place; and Wyndham Wilkinson, third place.

Commentary

Editor:

At the specific request of your Sports Ed. on May 1st to be provided with the results of our sabre competitions held last Friday nite we assembled and turned in on Saturday May 2nd the following results. Since not one word about the results of the sabre has yet appeared in print in this noble newspaper I would personally deem it a great favor that you run it on the edit page as a letter to the editor. I realize that on Thursdays the sports page is somewhat abbreviated due to the heavy amount of advertising which is carried. To be more specific two Thursdays ago the sports page amounted to a total of some 30 and a fraction column inches and last Thursday it fell to a low of 28 and a fraction. You cannot give decent coverage (as you so promised in your campaign for editor) with this kind of space for sports. I suggest you try to find a solution to the problem whether it be a six page paper on days like that or transferring some major sports items to the news section or taking some ads (heavens, what a sacrilege) on the edit page.

You could also consider a tabloid on Fri & Sat when the ads are heavy and the weekend activities likewise. You are the editor and the solution is up to you, but I assure you that there is a problem. We don't mind going to the extra trouble of writing up and reporting our sports activity which probably no other is called on to do because we realize that there are few qualified sports reporters on your staff with a knowledge and understanding of our sport, but we do ask that when we go to the trouble of doing so that our efforts not be ignored and that somehow space be provided as it is for some of the inane quibbling over the Quarterly.

Al Capone

Al Capone is just the thing to quinch the bloody thirsts of the indiscriminate moviegoer: the film offers a substantial serving of rough, sadistic thrills, delivered by the best man for the job, one of the Actor's Studio's most talented products, Rod Steiger. And Capone's life history is far better subject matter than any fictional creation could hope to contrive. Screen writers Malvin Wald and Henry Greenberg have crammed into the script every morbid detail that time would allow, and the result is a vicious documentary of little more than microscopic proportions, a "C" movie done in "B" style.

But it seems that Messrs. Wald and Greenberg have provided more than mere documentation: in the movie's opening narration, an omniscient voice informs us right out that the film has a real message, a lesson for contemporary America. And so, here is supposedly everything that makes for sure art work: the fascinating sort of stuff that real life is made of, and a commentary which will aid in making such realism meaningful.

However, the artists somehow forgot their commentary; and a gangster's life, even an important gangster's life, is hardly interesting enough to merit a nearly two-hour-long sitting. As "Scarface," Steiger of course credits the film with a successful performance. Unfortunately, his past roles have always afforded his gifts with the same sort of uninteresting characterizations to work with: by now, he ought to know the part pretty well.

However, the spirit and dress of the Twenties are adequately reproduced. And David Raksin's musical score is exciting in spots. But the merits of the production cannot make up for the film's total lack of inherent value. Capone's life might be the kind of material for historical studies; nevertheless, as cinema, there's obviously something missing.

Special Session

Now that some of the most important business of the year has been conducted by our state Legislature, it is now the time for us to consider the possibility of a special session of this governmental body to 1. Revise our outdated constitution, 2. to consider the Bell Committee report.

It is time that our lawmakers revise our constitution. The first revision that should be made is to allow the governor to be elected to two or more consecutive terms. It is time that our governors stop becoming "lame-duck" governors and that this state start paying them a decent salary of at least $25,000.00 per year.

There are some who will argue that $25,000 is too much to pay our governor, but in these days if you want quality you have to pay for it, and the governorship is no exception.

Our state should take into consideration the possibility of adopting a unicameral system very similiar to that of the state of Nebraska. While legislative revision is being studied, the legislature should give the governor veto power and also adopt and item veto power for him in appropiation legislation.

EUGENE O'NEIL AND THE TRAGIC TENSION. By Doris V. Falk. 211 pp. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press. $4.50.

Miss Falk's essay is an intelligent, ingenious and completely justifiable investigation of O'Neill's plays in the light of Jung's philosophy of Man.

Such a study as this has been indicated for at least six years, ever since Edwin A. Engel produced the first major study-in-retrospect of O'Neill's work in 1953. While it would be difficult to prove that O'Neill consciously adopted Jung's ideas for his plays, O'Neill nevertheless felt that, "Authors were psychologists . . . before psychology was invented . . . Jung is the only one . . . who interests me. Some of his suggestions I find extraordinarily illuminating . . ."

Miss Falk takes her license from this suggestion, and she proceeds to treat each of the plays as a study in human "masks." Used explicitly by O'Neill in The Great God Brown, but treated symbolically in all the plays, these masks are directly analogous to Jung's "persona": the protective identities which men assume to hide their true selves from the world and from themselves as well.

When these "persona" are rendered ineffectual through conflict with reality, a tension is created between the individual's need to "belong" — as the mask had allowed him to belong: to a social order, a power structure, a mystical union, a "type" — and his impulse toward "reality," toward self-confrontation. Stripped of false defenses, he either retreats again, into death (The Hairy Ape), childhood (Strange Interlude, Moon For The Misbegotten), insanity (The Emperor Jones, Long Day's Journey); or he accepts his freedom from the past (from which the mask is inherited, analogous to Fate, Original Sin, or Id and Superego) and accepts a life without "belonging," in which only real human love and compassion insulate man from his aloneness.

Miss Falk's essay treats the play chronologically, in an effort to how the development of O'Neill's art toward this final vision. All that can be said is that she succeeds brilliantly. Drawing intelligently on Horney and Fromm, as well as Jung, she locates a common ground for psychoanalysis, philosophy, and art, as O'Neill himself did, in the idea that ". . . if we have no Gods, (sic) or heroes to portray we have the subconscious, the mother of all gods and heroes."

HUGHIE. By Eugene O'Neill. 38 pp. New Haven: Yale University Press. $3.

O'Neill discarded the one-act form early in his career, when he found its limitations to strict for his titanic vision. Then, at the end of his career in 1940, he abruptly returned to it, projecting a series of eight one-act monologues. Hughie, completed in 1941, is the only one which survives.

Hughie is a night clerk at a rundown New York hotel. At the time of the action, Hughie has just died, and one of the regular guests, a small-time gambler and gangster's errand-boy, describes to the new clerk the same pipe-dreams of grandeur and excitement which he had shared with Hughie. The inescapable sordidness of his life — he has been a night clerk for ten years has forced the clerk to retreat into a walking unconsciousness, but the guest's persistant chatter forces him toward an awareness of his situation. He finds a new escape in the guest's dream-existence, which he finally comes to accept. The relationship between the guest and Hughie is re-established, and life goes on.

Again, O'Neill is showing the masks which people adopt to hide themselves from reality. Here, the mask becomes reality in a false world.

When the play was produced in Sweeden, a leading drama critic called it "O'Neill's finest short play." It may well be, for in none of his earlier one-act plays did he create such a palpable mood which in this play can be compared only with the brilliant evocation of a similar mood in the last act of Long Day's Journey.

A TOUCH OF THE POET. By Eugene O'Neill. 182 pp. New Haven: Yale University Press. $3.75 (cloth-bound). $.95 (paper).

This play, too, was to be part of a cycle: the history of an American family from the Revolution to the present, plagued all the way by tragedy. A Touch of the Poet is the only part of the cycle which O'Neill completed.

The protagonist, Con Melody, an Irish immigrant, fights to retain the illusion that he is of noble descent and quality. His pride is abetted by his wife, who sacrifices her own life to his Byronic self-image. His daughter, however, tries to fight her involvement in this net of self-deception by clinging to her lover. Con's mask is finally torn away, and he is broken, but the daughter is able to escape destructon because of her love.

The play is weakened by false-sounding exposition and by the insufficiency of its ending. But the characterization is brilliant, true to O'Neill's finely developed male-female-sibling archetypes; and the conflicts have all the terror of O'Neill at his best.

THE CURSE OF THE MISBEGOTTEN: A Tale of the House of O'Neill. By Croswell Bowen, with the assistance of Shane O'Neill. 384 pp. New York: McGraw-Hill. $5.

The face on the cover of this book looks like it might belong to one of O'Neill's most tortured heroes. It is O'Neill himself who stares out, his face showing suffering in repose, his eyes bottomless and penetrating — the eyes of a man who has seen everything and is not afraid.

In fact, O'Neill was always the hero of his own plays, and his art prevailed over his personal agony — as it did with anything near complete success only in the best of his plays — by pure force of his creative will.

The history of the O'Neill family is already known to those familiar with his later plays, in which it is represented with frightening fealty. Mr. Bowen has carefully filled in the details — sometimes with trying minutenes. The story is a terrifying one, however, and it is told well. When he comes to the plays, Mr. Bowen gives only the briefest plot summary and the most questionable criticism. But the major movement of O'Neill's life is excellently recorded.

4th Jenkins Lecture Today In Med School

The fourth Lee B. Jenkins Lecture will be held in the Clinic Auditorium of the UNC School of Medicine today at 4 p.m.

The guest lecturer will be Dr. Paul Klemperer of New York, who will speak on "One Hundred Years of Virchow's Cellular Pathology." The lecture is open to the public.

The Lee B. Jenkins Endowment was established in 1954 by Mrs. Jenkins in memory of her husband, a prominent civic-minded industrialist of Kinston. Since its establishment the endowment has brought some of the country's most prominent medical scientists to Chapel Hill for lectures and consultations.

Dr. Klemperer is a native of Austria who came to America in 1921. In 1926 he was appointed pathologist to the Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York City, a post he filled until his retirement several years ago. Since his retirement he has divided his time between the Cell Research Laboratory of the Mt. Sinai Hospital, where he directs basic cellular research, and the Library of the New York Academy of Medicine, where he continues his studies of the historical background of our present concepts in medicine.

In addition to training many of the country's current pathologists he has made a number of outstanding contributions to medicine, as such studies on the so-called "collagen diseases" as rheumatic fever and rheumatoid arthritis. His basic investigations stimulated interest in these diseases and have led to a better understanding of their nature and treatment.

Edit Writers To Meet Here

"America Looks Ahead" is the subject of a panel discussion at the N. C. Conference of Editorial Writers here Friday, May 22, at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

The speakers will be: Attorney General Malcolm Seawell, John Larkins, Democratic national committeeman from this state; Dallas Herring, chairman of the N. C. Board of Education; Watts Hill Jr., a state legislator. Editor Thomas J. Lassiter of the Smithfield Herald will be moderator.

The panel will be the first event on a two day's session of editorial writers from North Carolina's newspapers.

Cecil Prince of the Charlotte News is chairman of the conference. Holley Mack Bell of Greensboro is program chairman.

The sessions will continue through Saturday, May 23, with the annual critiques of editorial pages, and a speech by Max Freedman, Washington correspondent for the Manchester Guardian.

Questionnaire Return

In her Survey of Leisure Interests and Leisure Pursuits of Undergraduate Students on campus, Elsie Prevatte has reported a 100 per cent return of questionnaires from the Women's Residence Council and the Panhellenic Council.

The Interdormitory Council, she said, has an 80 per cent return from the boys' dorms.

Thus far, the Interfraternity Council has only a 42 per cent return of questionnaires. Of the 24 fraternities, only 10 have returned the information sheetts.

Miss Prevatte and Ashe Exum, IFC president, have requested that the questionnaires be returned within the next two days.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Caroline Sikes, Wodie Mikhail, Robert Brown, William Watkins, Charles Himes, Yulan Washburn, George Haddad, Johnnie Stott, David Parker, Marshall Daniel, Cecil Gayle, George Myatt, Franklin Jones, Donald Tribus and James Early.

Agency Hires

The Federal Aviation Agency in Alaska is now hiring Electronic Technicians with beginning salaries of $4490 and $4980 per year. In addition to these salaries there is a 25 per cent cost of living allowance which is non-taxable for Federal Income Tax purposes.

Persons appointed to these positions from the Continental United States are authorized transportation for themselves, their immediate families, and personal effects at Government expense.

Due to major program expansions involving the airways system, the Federal Aviation Agency expects to hire a minimum of 100 Electronic Technicians in Alaska during the next year. Opportunities for immediate employment, training and advancement are good.

Information may be obtained from L. C. Cheek, Door 113 in the Post Office. Interested people should ask for announcement No. 11-101-2 (57).

Chi Phi Fraternity Elects New Officers

Chi Phi social fraternity named Mac Blythe the chapter president for next year.

Also in its spring elections the fraternity elected Wyatt Coggins, vice president; R. V. Fulk, secretary; J. R. Brown, treasurer; Warren Jackson, historian and Tom Allred, sergeant at arms.

Baseball Co-Captain Picked As Frat Head

John Burgwyn, co-captain of the Tar Heel Baseball team, was installed as the new president of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity last week.

Burgwyn is a rising senior from Jackson, and is majoring in Industrial Relations. He has been the ATO rush chairman and is on the Interfraternity Council.

Guard Arrives

RALEIGH, May 12 (AP) — Adj. Gen. Capus Waynick reported shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday night that advance elements of a task force of National Guardsmen had arrived in Henderson.

He said the first arrivals included a detachment of military policeman and the advance guard of a task force drawn from the 2nd Battle Group of the 30th Infantry Division.

Wake Forest Hands Carolina First Loss In Nine Games, 3-1

Plemmons Defeats Tar Heels For Second Time This Year

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Bunching together seven hits in the fifth and sixth innings for three runs, Wake Forest regained first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference pennant race and all but officially rubbed out any Carolina hopes of taking the title as it defeated the Tar Heels 3-1 before a full house at Emerson Stadium.

Only a win over last-place N. C. State today separates the Deacons from taking off the ACC crown. For the Tar Heels their only hope is for a Wolfpack victory which would throw them and Clemson into a three-way tie for first with the Deacons.

Win Streak Ends

The loss brings to an end Carolina's eight-game winning streak which had brought it from the bottom of the league to the top and leaves the Tar Heels with a 9-5 ACC mark and 16-6 overall record for the year.

Deacon righthander Bob Plemmons went all the way to rack up his second win over the Heels this season. He scattered the six Carolina hits throughout the game and held his opponents to but two base knocks over the final five frames.

For Carolina the loss can be attributed to a couple of bad fielding breaks and to the fact that they left eleven men on the base paths.

Carolina Threatens

The Tar Heels threatened to drive Plemmons from the mound in the very first inning but they were not able to land the knock out punch. Harold Workman led off with a base on balls and, after Larry Craver had flied out, moved on to second when Johnny Burgwyn got a single. Plemmons then advanced each man one base with a wild pitch but that was a far as they got as Russ Hollers fouled out and Al Baldwin bounced out pitcher to first.

In the fourth the Tar Heels secured their only run, an unearned one at that, with a two-out rally. Gerald Griffin got on with a single to right, stole second, advanced to third when Deac first baseman Ron Guthrie doubled Vaughn Bryson's grounder, and scored when pitcher Wayne Young singled to left.

Deacons Score

Wake Forest wasted little time in getting back into the game as it got to Young for four singles and a sacrifice to score two times in the fifth. The Carolina hurler got a couple of bad breaks as ground balls went past both Larry Craver and Ferg Norton for scratch hits.

The Deacs picked up an insurance run in the sixth as they knocked Young out of the box with three more hits before Ben Harding came in to put down the rally.

The Tar Heels were able to get men on base in every inning but the ninth, but the lack of a timely extra-base blast left the ducks on the pond.

Total touches rec'd			21	16	7	18	12	12	18		*(trophy rec'd)

EXPLANATION: The above in summary form shows the bouts as they were scored last Friday night in the duelling sword event at GM. Touches made by a fencer are found along the line to the right of his name and appear under the column numbered according to the opponent against whom they were scored. Each fencer's number is to the left of his name and the number across the top correspond to these. Since a bout in epee is won by scoring first a total of three touches upon the opponent, the "bouts won" column is simply the number of threes beside a given fencer's name.

The position of finish is determined by the greater number of bouts won, but when ties occur in bouts won they are broken in favor of the fencer receiving the least touches against him as found by totaling the vertical column beneath his number. Thus for example, while Simpson (6) and Finley (2) each won 5 bouts, the touches received column shows that Finley received 11 touches while Simpson received 12 touches.

lb Indicates that in the bout between Somers and Peebles a double touch was scored when the score was 2-2, making the final score 3-3. In a case such as this the victory is determined by an additional touch, but the score remains 3-3. Peebles made the final decisive touch thus giving him the victory.

Tough For Bishop

While his pal and teammate, Dave Scurlock, was having one of his biggest days in winning the 820 and 440 and anchoring the winning relay team in the ACC track meet at Columbia, S. C., Tar Heel star distance runner Wayne Bishop had tough luck.

Wayne was breezing to a victory in the mile and just about ready to give the big stretch push when a competitor bumped him, resulted in him aggraving an old knee injury and having to drop out. Bishop, who has had an illustrious track career here, thus had to forfeit a final bid for glory.

Scurlock's sterling work was some balm for an otherwise day of triumph for Maryland's fantastic Terps.

Frosh Top Wolflets

RALEIGH — The Carolina freshmen upped their Big Four record to six wins in nine decisions here yesterday with a 3-2 victory over State's Wolflets.

Dave Murr and Jerry Carpenter pitcher three no-hit innings each before Nick Warren came on in the seventh and yielded the first two State safeties. Louis Holcomb struck out the last two Wolflets with the bases loaded in the ninth.

CUBS BEAT BRAVES

CHICAGO (AP) — Earl Averill, who has been an in-an-outer with an anemic .171 batting average, Tuesday hit a pinch grand slam homer with two out in the ninth inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 7-3 triumph over the Milwaukee Braves.

Lew Burdette, seeking his sixth victory, had tamed the Cubs on four hits, including Tony Taylor's first homer in the fourth, until serving two gopher balls in the decisive ninth.

ROBINSON TO FIGHT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, virtually assured that the National Boxing Assn. would return his middleweight title taken by edict May 4, Tuesday signed to defend that crown in Philadelphia against Carmen Basilio Sept. 21.

Frosh Big Four Track Results

Although no official team score was kept at yesterday's Big Four freshman track meet, Carolina's Tar Babies came up with the greatest number of places. The meet was held at Duke.

John Frankenheimer

Frankenheimer Will Speak In Hill Hall Tonight At 8

John Frankenheimer, well-known television and motion picture director, will speak here tonight in Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

The general theme of his address will be "The Positive Prospects of Television Production" and will be followed by a question and answer period wherein he will entertain questions from the audience. The speech will be open to the public.

Frankenheimer has been nationally acclaimed for his successful association with the "Playhouse 90" and "The Dupont Show of the Month" series. He also directed the motion picture titled "The Young Strangers."

Recent Achievements

His most recent achievements in the television medium were the "Playhouse 90" production of Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls"—the first three-hour show ever presented on TV—and his direction of Sir John Gielgud in an adaptation of "The Browning Version" for "The Dupont Show of the Month."

Other "Playhouse 90" shows under his direction were "The Commedian" which starred Mickey Rooney, "The Ninth Day," "The Last Tycoon," "The Fabulous Irishman," "A Sound of Different Drummers," "A Town Has Turned to Dust," "Days of Wine and Roses" which starred Piper Laurie and was nominated recently for three Emmy awards, and "Old Man," an adaptation of William Faulkner's long story.

Will Direct Film

Frankenheimer is now asociated with David Susskind's organization, "Talent Associates," and will direct a motion picture this summer based on Truman Capote's book, "Breakfast At Tiffany's." After directing yet another film late in the summer, he hopes to direct a new broadway play.

One of the most amazing phenomenons about Frankenheimer is the fact that he has attained his legendary status as one of the country's best directors at the age of 29.

Directional Habits

At one time an actor himself, he often surprises the actors that work under his direction with his knowledge of acting and production. He has a habit of following his stars around, sometimes standing just inches away from their faces.

Gielgud paid him a fine compliment when they worked together on "The Browning Version." "He's very good," said Gielgud, one of the world's most honored actors, "and the only thing that keeps one young is working with some of the young people in this medium and learning from their freshness, their lack of fear of what's been done before."

Ambitious Schedule Here

While in Chapel Hill, Frankenheimer, who will be accompanied by his wife, Carolyn, will have an ambitious schedule. After an interview on WCHL in the morning, he will participate in a kinescope recording of the "Ideas" show, a regular presentation of WUNC-TV.

There will be a press reception in Swain Hall at 4 p.m. In the evening, after a dinner in his honor at the Carolina Inn, he will deliver his address in Hill Hall and talk with students and townspeople at the reception immediately following in Graham Memorial.

Before leaving the campus Friday, he will speak to a combined meeting of writing students in Swain Hall at 10 a.m.

First Community Ambassador In Europe Is UNC Senior

By PATSY STANTON

Mary Louise Crumbley, 22-year-old senior of Charlotte, will become Charlotte's first community ambassador in Europe as a part of the nationally-conducted experiment in international living.

Selected from a field of outstanding candidates, Miss Crumbley will spend the summer living and studying in Belgium and other parts of Europe. After living with a Belgium family for several weeks, she will take a member of that family along with her when she joins other American community ambassadors for a two-week tour of Europe.

The Charlotte Junior Chamber of Commerce, local sponsor of the program, announced her selection and will sponsor a series of talks in the fall before civic and church groups on her experiences of the national experiment. In cooperation the Jaycee program, the Charlottee Observer will publish her reports.

The talented honor student in her field of radio and television was tapped in February by the Order of the Valyries for "her dedicated service to the Women's Honor Council and to her sorority," and for her "many contributions to campus activtiies and student productions."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Crumbley of 1521 Providence Dr. and a member of Kappa Delta sorority. She was the youngest women in her district to compete for the position of community ambassador in Europe.

2nd Session Of Friedberg Trial Tonight

By AL McSURELY

The second session of Joe Friedberg's trial before the Men's Honor Council will be held tonight.

This will mark the second time Daily Tar Heel reporters have been admitted to a Men's Honor Council proceeding.

Friedberg, who is being tried for "aiding and abetting in the passing of bad checks," said the coverage the Daily Tar Heel gave Monday's session was "All right," although he didn't expect such a big story.

"I opened my door to pick up my paper," he said, "and I said to myself 'I wonder how they played it?' and jeez! There it was, splashed all over the front page.

"I didn't expect anything like that."

Student Body President Charlie Gray and Honor Council Chairman Hugh Patterson okayed Friedberg's request for Daily Tar Heel coverage because there are no student accusers involved, and there has already been wide publicity concerning Friedberg's civil court trial. President Gray had favorable comments about the newspaper report. "As long as we can get objective coverage, and can protect the rights of the accusors and jurors, I don't see any reason why we shouldn't have reporters at such trials," he said.

Summer News Applications Due In Today

The Summer School Publications Board is receiving applications from interested students for the positions of editor and business manager of the Summer School News.

Applications will be taken until noon today in 206 South Building.

Both the editor and the business manager will be responsible to the Publications Board for a tabloid weekly newspaper durng the 10-week summer period. The position of editor will be a salaried job while the position of business manager will include a relatively small base salary plus commissions on advertising.

The Board will meet at 3 p.m. today in 206 South Building to interview candidates.

Fraternity Or Sorority To Receive Stereo Set

A stereophonic record player will be awarded soon to the fraternity or sorority that has saved the most empty packages of Philip Morris, Marlboro and Parliament cigarets through Friday.

Harvey Salz, who is handling the contest on this campus for the Philip Morris company, said he will check the number of packages saved between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Last year during a similar contest, Delta Delta Delta sorority was awarded a hi-fi set.

John J. Honigmann

Anthropologist Writes Book

On May 13, Harper & Brothers published "The World of Man," a new anthropology book by UNC Professor of Anthropology John J. Honigmann.

The emphasis in the text is on cultural anthropology, but physical anthropology is also covered. Dr. Honigmann has also tried to clarify the relationships between anthropology and other behavioral sciences.

The author, who is a graduate of Brooklyn College, with an M.A. and Ph. D. from Yale, has devoted space in his comprehensive survey to all areas of anthropological studies, including such oft-neglected areas as comparative ideology.

The books 971 pages include many illustrations and charts. The price is $7.50.

Concert Called Off

The University Concert Band's lawn concert on Sunday has been called off.

The concert, scheduled to be held at Davie Poplar, was to be conducted by Eddie Bass, a graduate student in the Department of Music.

Library Making Plans For Air-Conditioning

By EDWARD NEAL RINER

Students attending school here this summer will be able to study in air conditioned comfort, according to University Librarian Jerrold Orne.

"It is our aim to air condition the general assembly room this summer so that students may study there," Dr. Orne said.

Library Already Has Money

The Library already has money for the air conditioning unit, and the University engineers have approved the plan. The Library is now waiting for approval from th state Department of Administration. Dr. Orne said that its "action is iminent."

Tables and chairs will be taken from the former General College Reading Room and placed in the general assembly room. The General College Room, now the smoking room, will be cipsed during the summer; smoking will be permitted in the assembly room.

Undergrad Library Gets Paint

Also during the summer the Library will repaint and re-arrange the undergraduate library. The new arrangement for this room will be similar to the Reserve Reading Room where shelves divide the room into study areas.

Dr. Orne said that Miss Mary Lou Lucy, head of circulation, is planning the new arrangement for the Undergraduate Library and that she would accept suggestions from the students.

Would Like To Paint Smoking Room

In addition to the repainting of the undergraduate library, which has already been planned, Dr. Orne stated that the Library would like to repaint the present smoking room and the large reference —bibliography and humanities— room on the third floor. Dr. Orne disclosed that this large room, where many students study, "has never been painted since the Library was built about 40 years ago."

Cabinet Named By President

Student Body President Charlie Gray announced Wednesday the appointment of his cabinet for the coming year.

The new cabinet will consist of the following members: Joe Herndon, Bob Sevier, Cynthia Grant, Sandy Trotman, Hugh Patterson and Bob Thompson.

Gray said that Herndon's main duty will be to keep him informed of all problems arising in the dorms and of the work of the Interdormitory Council.

Legislative Liason

Sevier will be a liaison between the executive office and the fraternity areas. He will also be the president's legislative liaison.

Miss Grant will be the liaison between the women students and will keep the president informed on the happenings of the Panhellenic Council and Women's Residence Council.

As chairman of the Women's Honor Council, Miss Trotman will inform Gray of the Women's Judicial System. As chairman of the Men's Honor System, Patterson will serve a similar function as regards to the Men's Council.

Study of Campus Problems

Thompson is Chairman of the Campus Affairs Board which will be in charge of carrying out studies of the various campus problems.

The cabinet will also consist of the three other student government officers, David Grigg, Sue Wood and Bob Bingham, along with presidential assistant, Jim Crownover.

Gray said he believes he has chosen a group that can adequately represent every phase of campus life and act as a liaison between student government and the students.

Cabinet to Be Backbone

"I plan for the cabinet to be the backbone of all student government operations next year," he commented. "For this reason, I have greatly altered the composition and duties of the cabinet members."

Exams Got You Feeling Low? The Lawn Concert Is Soon

By BOB GIBBONS

Have the coming final exams got you feeling blue?

Forget your worries and have an afternoon of sheer enjoyment at a lawn concert this Saturday.

The concert, sponsored by the Graham Memorial House Committee, will be under the Davie Poplar.

The Embers, a seven-piece orchestra led by Cal Huber, will be featured.

Dave Mincey, co-chairman of the lawn concert committee with Dick Lambeth, said that a special program has been planned.

Jim Talley and the Shades will entertain during intermission.

Free refreshments will be served during the concert.

This is the final project of the year for the House Committee, which is in charge of special events. Cynthia Grant is chairman of the committee.

Tentative arrangements have been made to hold the concert in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial if weather is bad.

Mill Sale Is Talked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Textile Workers Union of America official said Wednesday that sale of the struck Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills in Henderson, N. C., reportedly is being talked about. He added that the strikers would consider it a victory if a sale were made.

Boyd E. Payton, TWUA Carolinas director, made the statement to newsmen. He was here to testify for a $1.25 minimum hourly wage law.

Payton quoted John D. Cooper, owner of the mills, as saying he'd either have his kind of contract or liquidate. The union leader also said Cooper has stated that he must get back into full production within 30 days or close the mills.

"The situation," asserted Payton, "is heading toward the mills closing." He asserted that under new ownership the strikers would have hopes of getting jobs.

The mills management reportedly is discussing sale of the plants, struck since Nov. 17, to J. P. Stevens, Payton said.

Cooper, however, declared at Henderson "there's not a word of truth" in Payton's report of sales discussions.

The mill owner said further that "I have made no announcement about starting a third shift, but I am employing people to work on it right now."

Commenting on the arrival of National Guard troops in Henderson, Cooper said, "I'm glad to see them. I hope they will be able to bring order to this community."

Payton declared, "The situation in Henderson now is that the people are not beaten. They're as determined as they were last November. There seems no hope of early settlement of the strike."

He estimated strikers had lost approximately $1,457,000 in wages by the end of the 24th week of the strike and that the company losses in production in these modernized mills would run into the millions.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is looking into charges by the union that armed strike breakers have been imported into the state, said John Edelman, Washington representative of the union.

Payton said he expects to testify at hearings the Senate rackets committee plans to hold on the strike. The date for the hearings has not been set.

Gray Will Give Decision Tonight On Public Trials

Student Body President Charlie Gray will announce to a special sesion of Student Legislature tonight whether or not be signed a bill, passed under special orders last week, providing for open trials for students who request them.

Also on the agenda for the final meeting this scholastic year of Legislature are the consideration of two bills and three resolutions, the election of two delegates to the Consolidated University Student Council and the approval or rejection of recent appointments to stulent government positions made by Gray.

The session will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Phi Hall.

Controversial Bill

The controversial bill introduced last week by Jim Crownover (SP) and passed by Legislature calls for public trials of the Men's Honor Council, Women's Honor Council, Women's Council and Student Council if the student on trial makes such a request.

Concerning this bill, Gray said he would not reveal his decision to approve or veto the measure until he appeared before Legislature tonight to state his reasons for either action.

Trial Open to Press

Though the bill would not go into effect until either Gray signed it or Legislature passed it again over his veto, the trial of student Joe Friedberg tonight has been opened to the press on his request and the permission of Hugh Patterson, chairman of the Men's Honor Council.

Legislators will also consider the bill introduced last week by Gordon Street (UP) for the Student Audit Board dealing with certain policy proposals regarding student government finances.

Other Provisions

Among other provisions in this bill is the recommendation that student organizations receiving appropriations from Legslature and another source may retain a certain percentage of any surplus at the end of the year. The percentage would be determined from the amount received from a source other than Legislature.

The other bill to be considered by Legislature tonight is one calling for the approval of the UNC Forensic Council constitution to replace an outdated document.

Recognition of Lacrosse

The student legislators will act on a resolution that Legislature encourage the recognition of lacrosse at Carolina as an official spring sport.

Another resolution before Legislature would commend the class officers for their achievements during the past academic year.

The third resolution to be considered calls for the sanction and support of a mock Democratic national convention here next May.

For nine days we have been sitting patiently deciding just what to say about two key issues confronting our Honor System and the two judicial bodies under it—the Men's and Women's Council. During the course of these nine days we have had inumerable conversations with everybody from the president of the student body and members of the student Legislature to our roommate and friends across the campus. We have encountered a wide range of opinions on the Honor System. We have listened with rapt attention while students with an outspoken faith have lauded the Honor System as the highest institution of student freedom and initiative on this campus. We have been a kind of audience to those who are in doubt, who feel that the system is good and yet needs changes. We have respected those who outwardly oppose the Honor System (and there are many), and feel that it is wrong to pit student against student. And through all of this, and our own experience as jurymen and reporters, we have endeavored to make decisions, suggest some changes and draw conclusions about the Honor System. We do not pretend to be qualified legalists or judicial oracles, but rather only claim a fundamental concern with the rights of the accused. For, this is the purpose of this editorial. We are going to back one change, which has already been well publicized, and we are going to suggest another.

We favor open trials for those defendants who so desire. We do this because we strongly feel that the accued has a right to the publicity which will result from such meetings if this is his wish. By an open trial we do not mean a gathering in Memorial Hall or the Y Court, but rather an Honor Council case, held with all of the dignity of any other Honor Council case. The lone change would be the presence of reporters from The Daily Tar Heel. These newsmen would be in the courtroom strictly at the request of the accused. This paper will never try to gain entrance into any Honor Council case in which the defendant expressly states that representatives from the press are not wanted. But, where we are asked to come in, as we have twice been requested in the last week, we will use all of the leverage and power of a free student press to gain entrance.

We have heard various arguments against admitting reporters to trials. Yet, while sympathetic to those desiring to preserve the Honor System in the best way they know how, we must disagree. We have seen no evidence either in or out of the courtroom of any of the defendants attempting to use our presence to smear the Honor Council or any members thereof. We do not feel that the printing of the accuser's name will infringe on his rights or destroy the Honor System. On the contrary, we maintain that the accuser should be willing to stand behind his accusations in public. We do not feel that by printing his or her name we will be opening up anybody for future repercussions or repraisals.

Perhaps the most disturbing thing about the entire Honor System and the way it functions on this campus is the lack of understanding of the procedure and rights of the accused that is found all around us. The Daily Tar Heel can do more for the Honor System by being allowed into trials, and by publishing the facts, than can closing trials to outsiders. We repeat that we will never force our way into a hearing where we are not wanted. BUT, if the defendant asks that the press be represented, we feel that it is both his right and our obligation to be there.

The second change concerning the Honor System will be reviewed along with the first tonight at a Student Council meeting. We feel that a basic conflict exists between the constitution of the University of North Carolina and the Constitution of the State of North Carolina. The student constitution says, "The Student Legislature shall not make any law abridging or denying the freedom of the student press or any other freedom guaranteed by the Constitution of the State of North Carolina to citizens of North Carolina."

In order to convict a student in front of an Honor Council it is only necessary to have a two-third's vote, which means that a 6-3, 7-2, 8-1 or a 9-0 verdict are all satisfactory in establishing guilt. Yet, in "all courts of record" in the State of North Carolina it is required to have a jury reach a unanimous verdict before convicting the defendant. We feel that any margin less than this leaves more than a reasonable doubt as to guilt. Therefore, we go along with the student who will challenge the present system tonight in the Student Council hearing. We ask that group to rule that a unanimous vote will be necessary from this time on; thus guaranteeing the accused another of his most basic rights.

We highly favor the continuation of the Honor System at Carolina, and hope that during the next year this paper may be of service in helping to clear up some of the present distortions about it. But we are not afraid of change, particularly change for the better. A BETTER HONOR SYSTEM IS OUR GOAL.

Legislative Roundup

Mr. Ed Cox,
Chairman, Rules Committee
UNC, Student Legislature

Dear Ed,

Under the provisions of the Crownover bill, BR-27-11, you are charged with the responsibility of drawing up revisions to make the suggestions contained in it a working and workable part of the legislature's by-laws.

I would like to suggest the following as a presentation for your committee to make to the body. I am opposed to whole idea and intend to vote against anything that is presented, but for the sake of the Legislature, I would like to offer the best that my experience can offer.

Date: September 24, 1959
Introduced by: Ed Cox,
Chairman, Rules Committee
Action:
Expiration: Permanent

A BILL TO REVSE THE BY LAWS OF THE STUDENT LEGISLATURE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA.
WHEREAS: BR-27-11 charges, under Article VI, that certain by-laws revisions be made by the Rules Committee,

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ENACTED BY THE STUDENT LEGISLATURE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA THAT:

ARTICLE I SECTION 3. ATTENDENCE be amended to include the following: SECTION 3. ATTENDENCE AND DUTIES.

* * * Article 135. Each legislator shall submit to the Speaker a written report concerning his activities in the area of visiting the living units in his district, introducing himself to his constituents; informing them on issues and proposed legislation, by using bulletin boards, meetings, newspaper columns; and informing them of his address and availability for consultation. This report must be submitted during the period beginning five weeks before the Spring election, and ending two weeks before the Spring election.

SECTION 5, UNSEATING

Paragraph 151. Non Performance of Duty. Failure to submit a written report as required in Section 3, Paragraph 135, shall be considered as an unexcused absence from a session, and shall be chargable towards unseating in the event that the report is not received two weeks before the Spring election. ***

ARTICLE II Officers OFFICERS, be amended to include:

SECTION 3 SPEAKER

Paragraph 232. Powers and Duties.

* * * The Speaker shall call for written reports from the members of the legislature in conformance with Article I, Section 3, Paragraph 135. He shall make copies of these reports available to anyone upon request. He shall give the names of legislators not submitting reports to the Rules Committee for appropriate action towards unseating.

I hope that this suggested form can be of use to you and the rules committee.

Personally, I feel that the efforts of Crownover, and Ralph Cummings will eventually come to naught. They had a good idea and then went about having it implemented in the wrong manner.

Cummings has been both a member and speaker of the Student Legislature, and should have enough of a feel for the psychology of a legislative body to know that you can not enact laws to make them more representative, or more interested in communicating with their constituents.

If the UNC Student Legislature lacks either of these qualities, then I am afraid that the blame must to a large extent lie at Cummings' doorstep. This is why I sat with my hands folded Thursday night while everyone else applauded Cumming's speech on the relationship between God and the Student Legislature.

Nevertheless, Ed, To quote from FDR, "the success or failure of this venture now lies in your hands."

Sincerely, your friend
DAVE JONES

Humphrey-Vienna Festival

Editor:

You may be aware that this summer in Vienna the leading Communist international student and youth organizations will stage their seventh biennial World Youth Festival. For some time I have followed with great concern the vigorous efforts of the Communists to gain the sympathy and, whenever possible, the support of young people in general, and of the intellectual leadership of the great emerging areas of the world in particular. The vast significance of the impending Youth Festival in this Communist effort becomes clearer every day, and the importance of an informed and vigorous reaction to it by American students can hardly be overemphasized.

It is not necessary to tell American student leaders that the United States is confronted with the gravest of challenges. It may, however, be worthwhile to emphasize theun usually important role that has been thrust on our students by the critical impact which the attitudes and activities of students elsewhere often have on the destiny of their countries. In the face of obstacles and discouragements which would have daunted a less determined and far-sighted leadership, the students of the United States have made, through their national organization the United States National Student Association, invaluable contributions to the creation and support of the Coordinating Secretariat of the International Student Conference. This organization has become a most effective forum through which the non-Communist international student community can discuss ideas, arrange personnel exchange, and extend assistance to oppressed or needy students wherever they may be. I would be remiss if I did not take this occasion to remind you of the great importance of the continued unflagging support of the American student community for this organization.

Because their participation would enhance the prestige of the Vienna Festival, the chief representative American student and youth organizations, and corresponding groups throughout the free world, have wisely decided not to participate officially in the Vienna gathering. However, mere non-participation is clearly an inadequate response to the opportunity and challenge that will be presented in Vienna.

I do not think we can afford to ignore the thousands of young people from all over the world who will be assembled there, and who will be subjected to endless propaganda directed against America and democracy. And it therefore seems very important to me that well-informed, well-briefed, enthusiastic American students be encouraged to attend the events in Vienna in their individual capacities.

In this connection, I am taking the liberty of sending you the text of some remarks I made recently in the Senate about the Festival. I would recommend that any students who may be interested in participating as individuals in these activities, contact the Independent Servce for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival, 323-24 College House Offices, Harvard Square, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts. It seems crucial to me that Americans planning to attend the Festival have as full an understanding of what will occur there, and of the world situation in general, as is possible. The Independent Service is doing a good job of providing prospective American participants with this type of information.

I hope you will inform as many as possible of the qualified students on your campus about the pitfalls and challenges which will abound at the Festival. To this end, please feel free to use the enclosed material in any way that may seem useful. I will look forward to hearing from you, should there be questions or problems that trouble you in dealing with this important situation.

'Course In Bed-Making'

Editor:

On looking into the college catalogue, I discover there is no course offered in bed-making, nor can I find courses which might teach me how to dispose of soft drink bottles. Now I suggest that something should be done about this, for after having read Miss Fitzpatrick's article, I have discovered that "it is the business of women in society to be concerned with making beds and disposing of garbage". Also I find that in this society, there are evidently women in college that are not concerned with this business, women who obviously have not developed a "proper sensitivity to unmade beds and sticky coke bottles" and it seems that charges of $.25 an unmade bed have been instigated to encourage the development of this sensitivity.

However, I hear there are some girls who actually resent this humanitarian measure, girls who do not realize that they might have to face even more drastic measures. To show what these drastic measures could be, I must momentarily disagree with Miss Fitzpatrick. She subtly suggests that in the area of bed-making, the males should mind their own business (I would be interested to know what she refers to here). How ever it seems to me, (bed-making being the business of women in society) that if one excludes men from this business, one in a sense excludes men from society, since all areas of society are intricately bound together, men being one inextricably involved area. Miss Fitzpatrick seems to implicitly realize this when she wishes such a lovely wife on the Side Swipes writer. These men, (if we may now admit them back into society) will perhaps someday be husbands of the non-bed making girls, and naturally they aren't going to put up with an unmade bed now and then.

I mean why do you think they marry us? (please supply answer logical from this discussion). If enough husbands have this trouble (which would seem to be the case from the over-all enforcement of this fee business) they may band together and impose more drastic measures than the ones instigated by our benevolent University. But then of course the University realizes that its girls are only college women who do not yet understand, that society and their prospective husbands judge their worth by their efficiency at bed-making.

There is something I don't understand however, namely, that although the University obviously realizes the omni-importance of bed-making, they charge a fee of $.25, that is money for this sin of ommission. Now I submit that money is expensive, or destructive on the finances (I know this sounds silly) to mention, since money is used on petty trivials like tuition, room rent, books and food) but if possibly the proper authorities would seriously consider the possibility of including in the curriculum a course on bed-making and the disposal of soft drink bottles, which would instruct these erring girls to the point of erudition on: why, how, and what time beds should be made and sticky coke bottles disappear — then perhaps this enlightenment would "tame the savage beast" in the women who do not see fit to concur with the present money measure, plus the fact that the benefit it would offer to prospective husbands, society and the women themselves is obviously immeasurable.

THE VISION OF TRAGEDY. By Richard B. Sewall. 178 pp. New Haven: Yale University Press $4.

In the Yale catalogue, "English 61" has nothing to distinguish it — no bold face type, no red letters. The brief note provided for its prospective electors undoubtedly says in effect: "An investigation of tragic themes in Western literature." To those who care at Yale, the course has been one of the most stimulating on that campus for twelve years. For the rest of us, whose universities do not bother with such essentials as "the vision of tragedy," this book is the only available entrance to Dr. Sewall's classroom.

The printed page, for all its benefits to man, reduces the dialectic which must go on in English 61 to something less: to a one-way exchange between author and reader. Dr. Sewall's conception and expression are both so brilliant, however, as to make The Vision of Tragedy seminal as well as pregnant. (Not to confound the metaphors.)

Much of this double-potency that metaphor again!) is because Dr. Sewall is not writing about Tragedy as much as he is about tragedies, major works which inform the generic term. Thus, the book is primarily devoted to an illumination of Tragedy as it is exemplified in Job, Oedipus Rex, Doctor Faustus, King Lear, The Scarlet Letter, Moby Dick, The Brothers Karamazov, and Absalom, Absalom!.

Such an approach does not produce any definition of Tragedy, but it aims rather at an examination of the "tragic vision," of the world as viewed "tragically" in art: "The theme of the book," says Dr. Sewall, "is the unity and vitality of the tragic vision from Job to the present."

This aptly characterizes both the book's theme and its accomplishment. The Vision of Tragedy makes it difficult to accept the fact that a course like English 61 is not in the local catalogue. In its absence, this book should become required reading for students of anything better than middle seriousness. It is "beyond the reach of the immature or brutish, the confirmed optimist or pessimist, or the merely indiffierent."

THE QUESTION OF HAMLET. By Harry Levin. 173 pp. New York: Oxford University Press. $3.75.

Dr. Levin notes with admirable humility at the beginning of his study of Hamlet that a recent sixty year period saw a new piece of Shakesperiana published on an average of every twelve days. The pace has probably increased since then, to the point where no scholar can be but dismayed and sobered at the thought of adding to the catalogue.

Although the measure of Dr. Levin's contribution will have to be taken by experienced scholars, there is little doubt that The Question of Hamlet is an exciting and significant addition to Shakespeare studies. Approaching Hamlet, the illusory world which includes the title character, as primarily significant for our understanding of the play (a consideration which, he notes, is almost traditionally ignored), Dr. Levin probes the text with the aid of three Elizabethan rhetorical devices: interrogation, doubt, and irony.

After establishing these motifs by the text (seventy question-marks in 322 lines of the Graveyard Scene), Dr. Levin procedes to an examination of the ambiguities which they indicate within the world of the play. In the process, he suggests resolutions to some of the ambiguities which have plagued other scholars. His elucidation of the "To be or not to be" speech is especially interesting.

After his brilliantly erudite performance on the play as a whole, Dr. Levin groups three encores as "Supplementary Studies." In these he concentrates on Hamlet's "antic disposition, the ethos of tragedy, and an explication of the troublesome Player's Speech. All in all, this is an excellent study, and it is worth noting that the publishers have equalled the author's careful attention to Hamlet with careful attention to fine bookmaking, as is their habit. Happy result: the book can be told by its cover.

Tar Heels Oppose Wolfpack Today

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Already owning two victories over N. C. Sttae's Wolfpack, the Tar Heels will attempt to secure a complete sweep of this year's series at Emerson Stadium this afternoon.

Today's game amounts to an exhibition since Carolina won both of the contests that went on the ACC schedule. Under these circumstances both coaches will probably let some of their regulars have a rest and give other squad members a chance to play before the close of the season.

Deaton To Pitch

Carolina Coach Walter Rabb has said that there will be certain changes in his lineup with the most notable one being the use of Bob Deaton as the starting picther. The sophomore righthander has not worked much this year, but in his last start he received credit for Carolina's 3-1 victory over Duke in a non-conference game.

The Tar Heels finished the regular conference schedule with a 9-5 record and will go into today's game sporting a 16-6 overall mark for the year.

In their last outing the Tar Heels fell before Wake Forest 3-1 and lost their chance to grab the conference championship with its trip to Gastonia for the first round of the NCAA eliminations. The Deacons defeat of Carolina cut short an eight-game winning streak, the longest racked up by a Tar Heel team since 1949.

For Carolina the biggest play of the game came in the very first inning when it failed to capitalize on Wake hurler Bob Plemmons' wildness and drive him off the mound right at the start. With men on second and third thanks to a base on balls, a single, and a wild pitch, Al Baldwin dribbled a ball back to Plemmons for what looked like an easy out.

Plemmons' Clutches

Plemmons, however, hurried his throw and the ball bounced over to first. Only Ron Guthrie's lucky scoop prevented an error which would have cost Wake Forest one run and possibly more. Guthrie made the necessary play and pulled his team and his pitcher out of quite a jam.

Against Vic Sorrell's Wolfpack, the Tar Heels have had to fight all the way before pulling out wins in each game. Carolina won the first game 5-2 as it knocked out starter Wilson Carruthers in the opening inning with three big runs. The other contest, played here a little over a week ago, was a lot closer as the Heels won 3-2 behind Wayne Young.

Most of the changes in the Carolina lineup for today will depend on who the State pitcher turns out to be. In the event that Sorrell selects a righthander, Tommy Camp will probably start in the infield. Rabb has also said that he plans to make a few changes in the outfield alinement.

Track Team Has Banquet

The UNC varsity track team, having completed the dual season with a 4-2 mark and finishing third in the conference meet last weekend at South Carolina, held its annual team banquet Tuesday night at Lenoir Hall.

Seniors Make Speeches

Presiding over the affair was team captain Wayne Bishop. Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton plus all seniors present—Bishop, Alex Coffin, Danny Droze, John Fox, Dave Scurlock, Charlie Sowers, and John Sylvester — made speeches concerning the successful year.

The presentation of four awards and the election of next year's co-captains were the highlights of the banquet. Dave Scurlock, All-American half miler from Greensboro, was presented with the E. J. Evans Memorial Award given annually to the most outstanding senior member of the track team.

Frosh Get Trophies

Three freshmen — Barry Tiedemann, Dave Peltz, and Ward Purrington—were given trophies for being voted the outstanding members of the freshman team.

Elected co-captains for next year succeeding Bishop were junior Cowles Liipfert, middle distance runner from Winston-Salem, and junior Ray Stanley, versatile broad jumper and weight man from Swannanoa. Liipfert was also elected captain of the 1959 cross country team succeeding Scurlock.

PERRY IS HANDBALL CHAMP

Joe Perry won the All-Campus Handball Singles trophy by defeating Fred Swearingen 21-14, 21-3, in the finals Monday afternoon. Perry, a Sociology graduate student, used a series of kill shots with both hands in taking the match.

It's not too late to hop on the right one—before graduation time.

Frankenheimer Lists Rewards In TV Work

By EDWARD NEAL RINER

Speaking in competition with Hill Hall's venetian blinds clanging in the breeze, John Frankenheimer told the Carolina Forum audience Thursday night of the rewards and problems of television.

The director of Playhouse 90 said, "Television programs are, have been and will continue to be programs of quality." He attributed most of the quality to the young writers, directors and actors who have made their contributions to show business through TV.

Frankenheimer emphasized that TV has opened up a new field to writers. In fact, he said, there are not enough writers with original material that TV wants. In contrast to TV's desire for the new, the 29-year-old director named "The Defiant Ones" as the only original movie that he had seen in two years.

He admitted that many movies were new except for their plots which in many cases have been done "25 times in different media."

However, TV wants new material he said in giving exmples of some of the original Playhouse 90 shows which started as ideas in network offices.

Further illustrating the quality of TV, Frankenheimer related how many succesful movie actors welcomed TV roles. He said TV was preferred by many actors of motion pictures and the stage because of its continuity, good scripts, short rehearsal time and the freshness of the completed performance as if it were opening night on stage.

The Forum speaker noted that although writers can earn 10 times more pay in picture script writing, "usually adaptation," many prefer TV scripts because they stick with their work from beginning of rehearsals to the telecast. This means, according to the director, that the writer is free to change and work with his script as he sees fit when it is being acted out.

Again referring to the quality of TV, Frankenheimer revealed that the success of "For Whom the Bells Toll," which he directed, had prompted author Ernest Hemingway to do an original TV play this year.

There is also more variety for directors in TV than "any other medium; I mean than movies—where direction is limited."

Joint Awards Day For Navy & Air Force

By ROBERT F. NEAL

The joint awards days for the Naval and Air Force Officers Training Corps got under way Thursday with approximately 200 uniformed men mustering on Fetzer Field a little after 12 noon.

After appropriate preliminary honors Chancellor William B. Aycock, the honored guest, made a brief inspection of the assembled troops. He was accompanied by Capt. Carl Tiedeman, commanding officer of the Naval ROTC unit and the professor of Naval Science, Lt. Col. Franklin W. Swann, professor of Air Science and the commanding officer of the Air Force ROTC, and Midshipman Capt. Richard G. Cashwell.

Miss Sandy Trotman, Queen of the Military Ball and a junior at the University, presented the guideon streamer to Company "A" of the Naval unit in recognition for being the best drilled company.

Naval ROTC awards went to the following Midshipmen: Capt. Richard G. Cashwell, Professor of Naval Science Award; Lt. David R. Biren, Reserve Officers Association Award; Cmdr. Walter M. Fitts, Sons of The American Revolution Medal and the Marine Corps Gazette Award; Lt. Kenneth T. Hall Jr., Best Drilled Company Award; Ens. Clifton B. Metcalf, Best Drilled Platoon Award;

Capt. Edward J. Kelly Jr., Lt. (j. g.) John T. Alexander Jr., Naval Institute Proceedings Award; Faustin E. Wirkus Jr., Rifle Markmanship Medal; Theodore C. Moore Jr., Convair Award; Howard P. Troutman, Reserve Officers Association Medal; Thoman E. Smith, Cutter Award; William E. Pope, John Bishop Markmanship Medal.

Air Force awards went to the following cadets: Lt. Col. William F. Parker, Air Force Association Medal; Maj. John A. Rhoades Jr. and Carl K. Styers, Chicago Tribune Silver Medal; Luther L. Walker and Carl S. Wood, Chicago Tribune Gold Medal; Maj. John A. Rhoades, Air Force Association Honor Unit Award; Maj. Kenneth R. Walker, Reserve Officers Association Award.

Joel E. Vickers, Reserve Officers Association Medal; James C. Burrus, American Legion Medal; Harry A. Usher, Convair Award; John H. Summey, Sons of the American Revolution Medal; Maj. Gray W. Daniel Jr., Arnold Air Society Achievement Award.

RECTOR Roberto L. Valverde, left, head of the National University of Engineering of Lima, Peru is shown here visiting Chancellor William B. Aycock. Rector Valverde was in Chapel Hill conferring with officials of the UNC School of Public Healtn.

The Department of Sanitary Engineering of the Public Health School has had a contract with the South American University for the past five years. Under this agreement, the UNC Department of Sanitary Engineering has sent faculty members to Peru and brought faculty members from the National University to Chapel Hill for advanced training.

IDC Accepts New By-Laws

The Interdormitory Council accepted the revised IDC Court by-laws at its final meeting of the year Wednesday.

A lengthy discussion preceeded the final adoption of the revised by-laws. The main issues concerned penalties which the Court may prescribe.

Larry Stacy was appointed chairman of the IDC orientation activities committee.

Al Haines was elected president of the summer school IDC. Rex Rouse is the new vice president.

The social chairman told the group about plans for the coming semester. All dorms were called on to participate in co-ed visitation hours next year.

A revision of the dorm contest points was presented. The revised point system aims at encouraging dorm group participation.

Scholarship Awarded For Hebrew Study

Robert Michael Scott has been awarded a scholarship for a one year study program for American college students at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel.

Sponsored by the American Friends of the Hebrew University, the scholarship program is awarded of a basis of interest in Hebrew and Israeli culture. It is also intended to create an understanding between American and foreign universities and life in a foreign country.

Scott is a sophomore Education-Spanish major. Originally from England, he is now from Jacksonville. This year Scott was an instructor of Hebrew at Hillel and is the recent winner of the Hillel Service award. He is a member of the G.M.A.B. polls committee and has worked with the YMCA's United Nations Education Committee.

Scott will leave the United States on July 16 aboard the S. S. Zion and will arrive in Haifa, Israel on August 1.

City Planning, Urban Renewal Lectures Here

Carl Feiss of Washington, D. C., noted authority on city planning and urban renewal, will give two illustrated lectures here this weekend. Speaking on the subject of "What are we achieving in City Rebuilding," his talks are scheduled at two o'clock on Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17, in the Morehead Faculty Lounge.

Mr. Feiss has had extensive experience in the field of city planning and urban renewal. From 1950 to 1954 he was Chief, Planning and Engineering Branch, Division of Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Washington, D. C. In 1953 he served as Staff Adviser to the President's Committee on Housing Policies and Program.

Student Council Makes Traffic Appointment, WRC Announcement

Miss Anne Rountree, an English major from Greensboro, was appointed to the Student Council last night by the council members.

Miss Rountree, this year, has served on the "Y" Night Committee and also in Sound and Fury's production of "Oh Hellas."

Next year Miss Rountree will serve on the Student Traffic Committee; she will be Rush Chairman for her sorority, Chi Omega, and will also serve on the Panhellenic Council.

Earlier Claire Hanner was appointed to the Student Council by student body President Charlie Gray. Caroline Sikes was appointed by the Women's Residence Council.

Library Hours

During exam week the Library will maintain its regular hours, but will be open on Saturday, May 23 until 10:30 p.m.

Library hours after exams are as follows: May 28, 7:45 a.m.-5 p.m.; May 29 and 30, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; May 31, 2-5 p.m. and June 1-4, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

June 5 summer hours begin 7:45 a.m.-10 p.m.

8th Dog Show Held Sunday

Dr. L. L. Vine, who is in charge of the eighth annual Chapel Hill Exchange Club Dog Show, to be held 1 p.m. Sunday, announces that arrangements are almost complete.

He has obtained Sterling Brown, a famous dog handler from New York who travels widely judging dog shows, to act as breed judge. Another well known trainer will be the obedience judge.

Dr. Vine points out that this is a show for the average dog and no previous training is necessary. However, the dog must be pure bred.

He is expecting 150 or more dogs from all over the state to be on hand for the show.

There will be door prizes given away during the afternoon including the following donated by members of the club: a case of motor oil by President George B. Spransy; two gallons of ice cream by Sam Huff; two gallons of ice cream by Julian Caston; a complete spinal X-ray by Dr. Bill Poe; 10 hamburgers by Percy Quinlan; five free movies by George Eubanks; three gallons of ice cream by Frank Ambrosio; a lawn mower tune-up by Bill Ray; one table lamp by James Neighbors; one hassock by Wallace Williams; and various items by other members.

President Spransy asks that everyone be reminded that the net proceeds from the show will be used to purchase and service hospital equipment for the "equipment bank" that is being maintained by the Exchange Club.

G. M. SLATE

Activities scheduled in Graham Memorial today are the following: GMAB, 1:30-3 p.m., Grail; G. M. Bd., 3-6 p.m., Grail; Dance, 8 p.m.-12 midnight.

West's Big 3 Powers Offer 6 Concessions

Geneva, May 14 (AP) — The Big Three Western Powers offered Russia six main concessions today in their apparently foredoomed package plan for a German and European security settlement.

Already under Soviet sniping fire as a tangle of unrelated issues, the package nevertheless shows marked adjustments in the line to which the United States, Britain and France had clung since 1955.

That was the year of a summit conference that came to naught.

There are concessions on all three topics before the foreign ministers conference — German unification, European security and Berlin.

The plan is featured by the proposal to turn East and West Berlin into a united city guaranteed by the Big Four. Such a status would last until Berlin is ready to be restored as the capital of a reunified Germany.

In a sense the project for a united Berlin looks like a pilot scheme for a united Germany. Its terms would preserve the rights of the World War II allies in the city during the transition period and the freedom of West Berliners.

This is the American-British-French answer to the demand of the Soviet Union that a demilitarized free city be created in Berlin's western sectors, where U. S. British and French troops are garrisoned.

Here are points on which the West has offered to give ground:

1. Free, all-German elections which in 1955 were to begin the unification process now would be deferred for 30 months after the Big Four sign the proposed accord. The new proposal is intended to meet Russia's contention that free elections now would be premature.

2. An all-German committee is offered on which the East German Reds, through veto rights, could not be out-voted. Its immediate task would be to develop East-West German contacts and to draft an electoral law for submission to the whole German nation in a plebiscite. The idea goes some way toward meeting Russia's project for an East-West German Confederation. There was no such proposal in 1955.

3. The West now spells out positive links between progress toward German reunion and specific European security measures in each phase of the package plan. Four years ago the Russians were left in the dark as to what precise

Delta Sigma Pi Honors 2 Outstanding Members

Delta Sigma Pi fraternity seniors were honored at its last monthly dinner meeting Wednesday night.

Edward Fowlkes II, a statistics major, was awarded the Delta Sigma Pi Scholarship Key. The Scholarship Key is presented every year to a chapter senior having the highest average in the School of Business Administration.

An award for Outstanding Brother of the Year was presented to Charles Sowers, who has been treasurer for the fraternity during the past year.

Julian Blalock received the award for Outstanding Committee Man of the Year. He headed the Outstanding Business Man of the Year Committee.

Following the dinner, Dr. John Carr, who is in charge of the Univac 1105 that is to be installed here, spoke to the group on "The Use of Computors in Business."

He pointed out that there is a growing use of computors in many types of businesses. Dr. Carr stated that these machines make decisions, and since they do not go on strikes or take coffee breaks, the only real problem is cost. He said that the use of computors in business is a new and dynamic area that will continue to expand.

Rho Chi Names Officers

Edward Lee Smithwick of Morehead City is the newly elected president of Rho Chi pharmacy honorary society.

Also elected in the society's last meeting were Robert Milton Morris of Wilmington, vice president; Nancy Margaret Faison of Rockingham, secretary-treasurer and Lu Ruth Sutton of Raleigh, historian.

Dr. H. O. Thompson is the faculty adviser.

Student Athletic Council Names Officers; Supports Lacrosse Bill

Swag Grimsley was elected chairman of the Student Athletic Council Monday night at the council's first meeting in the Woodhouse conference room at Graham Memorial.

The other officers elected by the council members were Moyer Smith, secretary, and Dave Lefler, treasurer.

The Duke-UNC football game next fall in Durham was changed to Thanksgiving day due to a "handsome" offer made by a TV network, said Grimsley.

It was also disclosed that date tickets for the South Carolina and Tennessee football games, which are played at home, were made available.

Jim Tatum made a report on establishing lacrosse on a club basis. Tatum made one of his football coaches available to coach the club. According to Tatum, "The 1959 lacrosse team had been financed by the football budget."

The recognition of lacrosse as a varsity sport was discussed and voted on. The council voted unanimously in favor of supporting the bill.

A suggestion session was held in which each member expressed his views concerning the present and future of Carolina athletics.

The suggestions that were received included: The cardboard section should travel to Duke for the Duke-UNC football game, that the members of the Marching Band be exempt from physical education during the football season; and that the Cardboard publish its stunts before or after the games so that the students who participate might know the results of their work.

In conclusion of the meeting the Council said that they would accept their share of responsibility within UNC student government.

Grimsley, in speaking for the council, said, "We feel that the council is one of the most representative bodies on campus. Every athletic activity at Carolina will be subject to our study and support. The minor sports will receive special attention, but we hope to continue to instill active and loyal support in the major sports of football, basketball, and baseball. The council will advise our CAA representatives about student desires and actively work to bring about a better balanced athletic program here at Carolina."

Hospital Issues Plea For Blood To Continue Heart Operations

By ROBERT H. BARTHOLOMEW

The increasing number of delicate heart operations that are being performed at North Carolina Memorial Hospital has created a need for additional blood donors.

A plea for more donors will be made Sunday from the pulpits of the Chapel Hill churches. Cards will be passed out to the congregations at that time asking for persons to volunteer to become donors on a stand-by basis.

The present need for stand-by donors grows out of two important factors. In certain types of heart surgery, generally called "open heart surgery," an artificial heart-lung machine is used. The use of this machine requires approximately 12 pints of fresh blood.

The second factor is that during the past nine months University students have furnished much of the blood used in these operations. During the summer months many of these donors will not be in Chapel Hill to render this service.

Hospital and School of Medicine officials have praised the student body highly for its assistance. They point out that the Interfraternity Council has been a leader in this public service program. They also have expressed their appreciation to the Chapel Hill Ministerial Association for its current effort to secure new donors.

What is now being requested of the citizens of this area is not one immediate, specific blood donation, but a pledge to donate blood when it is needed. Prospective donors are being asked to have their blood typed now, and they will be called when a need occurs.

The Hospital Blood Bank is open from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. for typing or for blood donations. Only a minute quantity of blood is taken for typing.

It is not advised that a person under the age of 18 or over 55 give blood. Those who are between the ages of 18 and 21 must have the consent of their parents. Students and other interested persons may get these consent forms from the office of the Y or at the Hospital Blood Bank.

After a person's blood has been typed, his name is then recorded as a stand-by donor. When heart surgery is to be performed, the person will then be asked to come to the Hospital Blood Bank to give blood. Generally, a two-day notice will be given to the prospective donor before he is called.

Blood from the Hospital Blood Bank can be used for all patients

Fraternities

We are fully cognizant of the problems which Carolina social fraternities are facing today. We are aware of both the good and bad points of the fraternal system as it exists. We are more than familiar with the workings of individual fraternities, their needs and their assets. We know these things because we are on the inside. And because we have this advantage, we feel that we are more justified in making comments on fraternities and the Interfraternity Council in general than would people who did not share our first hand knowledge. Yet, along with our remarks on fraternities both now and in the future, will go criticism as well as laudatory remarks. For perhaps, some of the glaring weaknesses and failures of fraternities have been a lack of genuine leadership among the Greek-letter men. This is one area that will greatly improve during the coming year, as the IFC seems to have an outstanding Executive Committee.

There has been a prevailing attitude among fraternity men that their system and way of life is untouchable by those who occupy the lofty towers in South Building. The IFC has contented itself with meager attempts to maintain the status quo. And this has hurt because it has forced the Faculty Council to take steps of its own which are very distasteful to a large majority of the fraternity men. But, in many ways they have asked for it. We realize that it is very hard to supply any type of centralized leadership to 24 separate fraternities. Yet, we hope and fully expect that Ashe Exum, the new IFC prexy, can do so if he tries. We stand behind Exum and Student Body President Charlie Gray who have said they hope fraternity men will accept the ruling from the Faculty Council concerning actives with C-averages, with as little fuss as possible.

Concerning this new rule which will require 60% of a fraternity's actives to have a C-average in the fall semester of next year, 70% in the spring and 80% from that time on we have several comments. We do not feel that this is a particularly good rule. We do however, feel it necessary. It is unfortunate that the IFC couldn't have taken such action itself, for, it might probably have gotten away with much less stringent stipulations. We offer the hope that the Faculty Council will revise the penalties to be imposed against fraternities without the required number of C members. As it currently stands, the first offense will result in a reprimand, and the second in loss of a semester's rushing privileges. In between that should be inserted a semester's social probation for the second violation, rather than the loss of rushing.

In other scholastic items pertaining to fraternities, we highly compliment the IFC for passing, on their own initiative, a regulation that a pledge must "make his grades" within two semesters in order to affiliate with a house. This is a sensible decision and should eliminate "perennial bull pledges."

We hope that Exum and his fellow workers will do away with the lethargic attitude which has long been in the IFC. We hope that each fraternity man will realize that self-complacency is not indicative of the type of leadership that fraternities should exert on this campus. We hope that the average Greek will get with his IFC representatives and demand action. We hope that fraternities have been shaken enough by these recent actions to finally acknowledge the fact that they are far from untouchable. And, we hope that readers of this editorial will know that they have read the words of a fraternity man, one who is concerned with the future of his house and of all others.

Fraternities must not be afraid to make alterations and changes. This is the way to go forward, the way that they must now go. If fraternities are to survive, if they are to remain an integral part of the Carolina tradition, they must justify their existence and make a vital contribution to the welfare of the academic community as well as to provide a social outlet.

Terry Sanford

Now that the people of North Carolina are beginning to wonder who will be North Carolina's next governor I guess that it is time that they are informed who that man will be.

The next Governor of North Carolina will be Terry Sanford, simply because he is the most qualified, the best known, and the best liked man in North Carolina today.

Sanford accepted one of the most important tasks in North Carolina, in 1954, when he agreed to pilot and manage the Senatorial campaign of the late U. S. Senator W. Kerr Scott.

Sanford is responsible for exposing the "rotten and dirty" material that was used against Scott in the last minutes of the campaign in a desperate effort to defeat him, but history did not repeat itself (1950 Smear campaign against Dr. Frank P. Graham) and Kerr Scott was elected.

Since then Sanford has been mentioned as a possible candidate, first in 1956 and now in 1960. He is going to run and he is going to be elected, and here's betting that Sanford will be one of the best Governors the Old North State has ever sired.

Sanford is a distinguished lawyer and former state senator, and I believe that his work towards his election as governor will be one of the cleanest campaigns that North Carolina has ever seen. It will not be one of lies and mud slinging, because Terry Sanford does not have to resort to these tactics, but it will be a positive, clean campaign.

All you politicians with ambitions to be governor in 1960, had best save your money and join in electing North Carolina's next Governor—Terry Sanford.

U. of Michigan

By KENNETH McELDOWNEY

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN — SEPS—A series of eight proposals on academic freedom were discussed at a recent meeting of the Student Government Council at the University of Michigan.

One proposal recommended student organizations not be required to submit membership lists to the Office of Student Affairs. Council member Al Haber, who drafted the proposals, said public distrust of certain political ideologies might discourage a student from joining a political club if he knew his name would be associated with it.

Haber also offered a proposal asking the University of Michigan to take any actions necessary to remove a censure placed on it by the American Association of University Professors. The censure was for failure to observe general principles of academic freedom and tenure.

In order to help preserve the right of the student another proposal was made to guarantee a student facing discipline the right to both public hearings and appeal of any decision. The motion also stated that a student should be able to speak in his own behalf and to hear all evidence entered in his case.

The problem of university communication with a student's parents, without his knowledge, was the subject of another proposal. It recommended that no contact be made with parents without the student's consent or at least knowledge. (Cases involving municipal officials might be exceptions.) Haber also proposed that any information given to an University of Michigan official in confidence not be revealed to any other official or person.

As a reaction to the policy that in some of the ROTC programs a student who drops out of the program also is suspended from the University of Michigan, it was suggested such students be given the right to petition to re-enter the institution.

A questioning of the University of Michigan's present policy on controversial speakers on campus was the basis of another proposal.

Haber's list of proposals concluded with the suggestion the student government publish a booklet setting forth for all University of Michigan students the principles and particulars of academic freedom. He considered this the most important of all his proposals, Haber said.

J. M. SYNGE: 1871-1909. By David H. Greene and Edward M. Stephens. 321 pp. Illustrated. New York: The Macmillan Company. $6.95.

Not until fully fifty years after his death do we at last get a detailed biography of John Millington Synge. His brother, Edward, refused to allow access to Synge's papers for twenty years. Then, when Edward died, another relation took them over, and finally produced a biography of unpublishable length. This relation was Edward M. Stephens, co-author of this book, who died before he had a chance to work on the collaboration. His tremendous manuscript and all the Synge materials were finally made available to D. H. Greene on the condition that he credit Stephens with co-authorship.

If Synge's family has complicated life of his biographers for the past fifty years, they also made things pretty uncomfortable for the playwright himself. Unwittingly, through their pretentiousness and possessiveness, their Hell-fire Protestantism intensified by persecution, and the hard, unrelenting discipline that went with it, Synge's family—particularly his mother, who raised him—fed his art and suggested its course. In this respect, Synge's career was similar to O'Neill's: not only was each work produced a victory over a shattered psyche, but the works themselves are in one sense a repeated answer to the family which frustrated him in his youth. Thus, for instance, his plays are written in Gaelic, which his mother and her class violently opposed as "vulgar," and to which Synge himself felt drawn for perhaps that very reason. Likewise, his mother's religious convictions included a complete lack of sympathy for the Irish peasant, whom she regarded as living proof of God's punishment of Original Sin. Synge's love for the Aran Islands, and his sympathetic concern in his art for the Irish peasant and his culture, may stem originally from the cold, emotionless hardness of his home.

This biography, although it is the first, is obviously thorough. Not only the bare facts of Synge's personal life, but also the revolutionary political and literary life of Ireland in his time, are clearly and fully depicted. In the future, all that can be desired for anything but the most scholarly purposes is a biography which tells something more of the "why" than the "what," and which includes more criticism of the plays. The present volume had to come first, though, and it is welcome.

THE CRITICAL WRITINGS OF JAMES JOYCE. Edited by Ellsworth Mason and Richard Ellmann. 288 pp. New York: The Viking Press. $5.

Literary criticism runs through Joyce's writings: sometimes explicit, as in the aesthetic presented in Portrait of the Artist, and the theory of Shakespeare in Ulysses; sometimes implicit, as in the parodies which appear in both Ulysses and Finnegan's Wake. On these few brilliant occurances alone rests Joyce's reputation as a critic for he wrote practically no literary criticism as such. In fact, he disliked it—disliked, particularly, the image of himself as "Mann of letters"—and he even satisfied requests that he write introductions for books by personal friends with notes praising their personal qualities.

What, then, of the collection at hand? Certainly it is of primary interest to the Joyce scholar, and not the general reader. While there are occasional items of general interest, and a few things for the literary scavenger, most of the material is valuable only as it gives some clues to its author's development. For most such purposes, Portrait of the Artist is much superior.

Much of the book is taken up with brief reviews which he did for newspapers while he was still in his early twenties. For the most part, they show only a considerable talent for the English language, but little gift for criticism. In two long pieces on Ibsen, something of the later Joyce can be seen, but not much. And so it goes, throughout the book: very occasional gems cropping up among the fifty-seven pieces.

The editors could have done the general reader a service by culling the critical fragments from the novels. As they did not do so, the best of Joyce's criticism remains uncollected, and it is back to the novels we must go in search of it.

Side Swipes

By Rusty Hammond

An old adage in the theatre says a bad dress rehearsal means a good play. If that's the case, then "Inherit the Wind" should have been tremendous. Reason? Right in the middle of the dress rehearsal, two guys on a motorcycle went roaring across the center of the stage. And that, my friend, just ain't in the script!

Seems to me like all the Women's Residence Council is, is a training camp for the DAR.

Good to see that the medieval honor council has finally been brought out of the dark ages; but the light seems to be hurting their eyes. Maybe some of that "kangaroo court" atmosphere will be done away with now.

Open letter to Chuck Erickson (UNC Athletic Director) and Eddie Cameron (Duke Athletic Director): We hope you are proud of yourselves for moving the Duke-Carolina football game back to Thanksgiving so the students can't attend. We hope you are proud of destroying the rivalry in one of this country's most traditional games. Most of all, we hope you really enjoy that extra money - WE HOPE YOU CHOKE ON IT!!!

That editorial writer is not DEAD but he should be, you simple Yankee grad-student jerk.

Apologies to everyone who reads this that there is no poem included. I guess we're in the minority on this edit page.

Please don't shout, you might wake up the Advisory Budget Commission.

What do you mean, you can't write home? It's cheaper than mailing a letter pretty soon.

Add Cliches: Once there was an effort that wasn't "undying."

Letter

Editor:

In the letter "Mother Superior" in Sunday's Daily Tar Heel, the young lady author (I presume it was a girl although she did not have courage to allow her name to be published) showed a colossal lack of good taste and good manners. If she does not wish to abide by the University regulations, she is not compelled to stay here. In fact, the University would probably be better off without her and it would leave room for some other girl who would be happy here. With the attitude that the author of the letter in question has, I doubt that an "education at my State University" would do her much good.

Also, I think you, Mr. Editor, showed very poor judgment in printing such an uncouth letter.

Interlibrary Loan Center

Editor:

The Interlibrary Loan Center, the subject of today's article, is conspicious as one of the few departments of the library where decent service is still available. Alas! the people on the outside are the beneficiaries in this area and the students and faculty of the University must continue to suffer under the weight of a library policy and organization which is not only not helpful, but in reality detrimental to scholarship.

What is the justification for the present reference system? Has any person ever attempted to do reference work in the library without cursing? Theoretically there are two separate reference services—Humanities and Social Sciences. The Humanities division functions very well considering the fact that the Social Sciences (and BA) division has appropriated a large number of its essential reference works. The Social Sciences reference staff is non existant—there is not a properly qualified reference librarian in it. Technical qualifications are not everything and might be compensated for if the staff were willing to help the student which is not the case. Can any student get a social science reference question answered at night? No! There is no reference staff at night. As a result all the students go to the Humanities room for help which they get if the Social Science room does not contain the books which are needed to answer a query. It does seem that if the people in Social Science won't, or can't, do their jobs they would at least allow someone in the library to do them. But no, the student is not to be helped—administrative organization stands in the way.

The split reference "service" is a most unfortunate policy of the library but there are other policies which cause a person to wonder if the basic objective of the library administration is to preserve or to destroy, its value as a library. This is recognized as a serious charge but examine the evidence: (1) The library does not keep the major newspapers of the world, except for a very few, for more than six months—there is no German newspaper on file in the library. The library does not subscribe to any newspaper for one-third of the nations of the world—There is no Pakistani newspaper in the library. Historians of the future will have a difficult time writing history without newspapers; (2) The library as a federal depository library is committed to preserve the documents of the federal government, yet at this moment, according to partially substantiated rumor, plans are underway to discard a considerable portion of these documents. Is there any person at the library qualified to select the documents that should be retained? What person has the foresight to know what documents will be of value? When the library of Harvard University is carefully filing away obscure pamphlets on segregation can the University of North Carolina destroy official documents of the United States government? When documents have to be justified on the basis of present usage the attitude of the person asking for such justification is easily suspected of being ignorant in the whole area. If librarians have no foresight nothing is to prevent them from using the lessons of the past; (3) It seems only reasonable that before any plan of retnention of vital materials can be determined that a definite policy of acquisitions must be decided upon. We have noted the retention of newspapers but in the area of documents a worse situation exists. The library has no discernable plan of acquisitions, except one. The library will subscribe to series of documents that require little work in processing. The library has not, for nearly a year, systematically surveyed the documents issued by the international organizations in order to secure the many valuable ones that we have not subscribed to already. The justification for this policy is twofold: efficiency and lack of interest in documents.

The lack of an acquisitions policy is also felt in the purchase of out of print books. The order department goes through such a long, detailed procedure to see if we already have a book, or if it can be secured at a lower price, that it is sold before the library sends off an order. The library then argues that orders should not be placed from catalogues.

Is there any logic behind the present Reserve system? Do not the students of the Humanities and of the Social Sciences have something in common? Is it really necessary to separate Social Science course numbered above 100 with those below 100? Pity the poor student who is so unlucky as to have five courses spread over the many areas. Is it any surprise to see the students sitting on the library steps resting when you realize that he will have to walk one and one-half miles in order to get the books for tomorrow's assignment?

There is a little note in the stacks saying that the Southern Historical Collection handles microfilm. This looks simple to someone sitting in an office who happens to have the magical key that opens the door between the SHC and the microfilm, but it is not the least simple to the poor tired student who can't go through that door but must walk up five flights of stairs and then down three more to get to the people who are to service him. The same problem exists with the Undergraduate Library and the most popular magazines. Will someone please open the doors in the stacks or put the books back in the stacks.

It is understood that the present library organization is a prelude to a future reorganized, expanded library. Is this any excuse for the present lack of organization, conflicting assignment, failure to provide decent service, and the general lack of foresight? If the library can not manage its present facilities and duties how can it even think of the future?

Hospital

except those undergoing a type of heart surgery that requires the use of the artificial heart-lung machine. Fresh blood, not over a few hours old, is required for this operation.

Blood that is stored in a blood bank has citrate added to remove the calcium in the blood. This procedure prevents the blood in storage from clotting. Citrate is made from citric acid, a common food flavoring.

The human heart and lungs have about one-half pint of blood in them, while the artificial heart-lung machine holds about 12 pints. The citrate in 12 pints of blood would be harmful to the patient, therefore fresh blood must be used in these operations.

This type of surgery requires the maximum amount of team work between surgeons, anesthesiologists, heart specialists, engineers and technical help.

It is hard to determine the exact cost of the care of patients who require the use of the heart-lung machine, but it is probably in the range of thousands of dollars. A modest home could be constructed for the price of the machine alone. Institutions, physicians and generous gifts have made these operations possible without burdening individuals with these great costs.

In this type of surgery, as the machine is turned on, the blood returning to the patient's heart is stopped and goes through the artificial heart-lung instead of the heart. A few beats of the patient's heart then empty it. At this point, the heart is stopped and opened and the surgeon repairs the defect in the interior of the heart. The patient may have been born with the defect or may have acquired it in later life.

The function of the machine is to take the blood from a vein of the patient's body, add oxygen to the blood, remove the carbon dioxide, and then pump the blood back into the patient's artery. In other words, during the operation, the machine performs the functions of the patient's heart and lungs.

This equipment was demonstrated at a recent meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of N. C. Memorial Hospital. The auxiliary's guests at the demonstration were the wives of the members of the General Assembly and the wives of the members of the Council of State.

Post Office Cracks Down On Filth

Postmaster Paul Cheek appealed for public support Thursday in the intensified war Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield has declared on the "ruthless mail order merchants in filth who are violating the homes of the nation in defiance of the national government."

Using one of the nation's most cherished privileges to carry on their smutty trade — the uncensored letter — "barons of obscenity" today are sending unordered lewd materials into our mail boxes, much of it directed to teen-age youngsters, Postmaster Cheek explained.

The materials offered for sale include filthy films and books, and dirty pictures, slides and related filth, advertised in highly objectionable circulars that are being sent indiscrimnately to homes here and all over the nation, he said.

Postmaster General Summerfield has advised the local postmaster that $500,000,000 is being taken in annually by large mail order dealers in pornography and obscenity. Postal authorities here, as well as those over the nation, receive complaints from many groups. Nationally, complaints are reported from leading clergymen, school groups, newspaper editors and alarmed parents.

During a recent 12-month period, the local postmaster was advised, postal inspectors conducted 4,000 investigations on obscene and pornographic mail and caused the arrest of 293 persons dealing in this filth. This is an increase of 45 per cent over the previous year, and an all-time high, according to the Postmaster General. Moreover, Mr. Summerfield has emphasized to local postal officials that the threat is increasing.

Indicative of the extensive operations of the filth factories that are invading the homes of the nation with their suggestive advertisements and dirty materials, Mr. Summerfield noted that within the past few weeks simultaneous raids by U. S. Marshals and Postal Inspectors in New York City resulted in seizure of 15 tons of dirty films, slides, photographs and other smut, and a mailing list, used nationally, containing 100,000 names.

Another raid in recent days yielded huge quantities of filth from the premises of a Santa Monica, California, dealer in especially objectionable films and photographs.

"No longer do dealers in smut surreptitiously serve only a few adults," the local postmaster explained. "They brazenly solicit our children, sending their material indiscriminately and without conscience into our home mail boxes.

"For example," Mr. Cheek noted, "the Postmaster General has advised me of cases where teen-agers wrote away for auto parts and received later 'sex instructions' advertisements; of new graduating classes whose names were taken from newspapers by filth merchants who circularized every member of the class; of youngsters who wrote in for model airplane catalogs, or a set of stamps, and later received materials on films portraying sex and perversion."

Complaints are also being received in increasing numbers over the nation involving solicitation from filth factories of innocent teen-age girls, housewives, and even Cub Scouts, the postmaster noted.

"The Post Office Department is diligently trying to clean up the mails," Postmaster General Summerfield explained recently to Congress, which is considering new measures to deal with this growing national threat. "But," Mr. Summerfield added, "the Post Office Department has been subjected frequently to attack and ridicule by those who hope to profit personally from unrestricted mailings, or by license—unwittingly give them assistance those who—confusing liberty with sistance."

Concessions

measure of security they would get in return for each step taken toward unification.

4. The West now offers definite security measures regardless of whether a united Germany chooses to join the Western Atlantic Alliance of the Communist Warsaw Pact or stay neutral. In 1955 nothing precise was put forward on this point. The new plan pulls in some security steps offered in 1957 during a U. N. Disarmament Conference in London. These measures would embrace the forces of all the big powers inside and outside Europe, not just in Germany. Some steps could be enforced before Germany is reunited and would stand whether an all-German government decided to stay neutral or not.

5. The West offers better safeguards in the event a United Germany chooses to join the Atlantic Pact. It would promise not to advance its forces into what is now East Germany. Thus NATO would not move its forward posts nearer to the Soviet frontier. No such pledge was offered in 1955.

6. On Berlin there is the proposition that a freely elected city council should be formed to run the affairs of the East as well as West sectors. The council would work under the supreme authority of the Big Four who, unanimously, could stop civic legislation. The city and its access route would be guaranteed by the Big Four, whose rights to maintain garrisons there would remain intact. In 1955 there were no proposals for Berlin because the Russians had not precipitated the present sort of crisis over it.

Ben Harding Homers To Give Carolina 3-2 Win Over State

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Seeing that it was getting late and that his teammates were not hitting State's John Scott, Tar Heel pitcher Ben Harding took things into his own hands in the bottom of the eleventh inning and unloaded a long home run to deep left center to give Carolina a 3-2 victory over the Wolfpack at Emerson Stadium yesterday.

The Tar Heel co-captain didn't waste any time in getting the job done either as he laced into Scott's first pitch and drove it all the way to the left-field hedge. By virtue of the homer the senior lefthander, who came on in the eighth inning in relief of Ben Hammett and Bob Deaton, evened his won-lost record at 2-2.

For the Wolfpack the loss was their third of the season to Carolina and certainly no sign of the debt of gratitude which the Tar Heels owe them for defeating Wake Forest on Wednesday.

Five Sophs Start

Carolina Coach Walter Rabb started five sophomores as most of the regulars rode the bench during the early part of the game. Deaton, who opened the game for the Tar Heels, worked five scoreless frames and held State to but three hits before being pulled so that Hammett could get a workout.

Against the big righthander the Pack was virtually helpless as they could hit nothing up in the air. Of the first fifteen outs in the game first baseman Vaughn Bryson received credit for 13 as everything was grounded out.

Tar Heels Score

The Tar Heels jumped on State hurler Jim Overby for two runs in the third and it was quite awhile before they scored again. Bryson led off the second with a single, advanced one base on a wild pitch, moved to third on Deaton's long fly to center, and scored when Harold Workman got on on an error.

Workman eventually scored himself as he stole home when State catcher Latham Smith made a throw down to second base for no reason at all thus giving the Carolina shortstop the opportunity to tally an easy run.

The Wolfpack greeted Hammett rudely in the top of the sixth as they came up with three singles to chop the Carolina lead to 2-1.

Two frames later the Pack tied things up on Don Hafer's double and Smith's single.

After their two-run third the Carolina attack lay in a dormant condition until Harding's homer sent the few remaining fans away happy. From the fourth on the Tar Heels were never able to get more than one hit per inning.

Gastonia To Be Title Game Site

By J. C. UNDERWOOD

To the delight of all Carolina baseball fans, State College went to Winston-Salem Wednesday afternoon and thrashed out a startling 9-2 victory over Wake Forest, thus leaving the Deacons, Tar Heels, and Clemson all at the top of the ACC ladder with 9-5 records.

The Wolfpack's heroics in the Twin City will necessitate a playoff to determine the league champion.

Wake Forest concluded an afternoon of hard luck when they lost a flip of the coin with Carolina immediately after the game to decide who would play Clemson in the playoff's first round.

Carolina's exhibition game with Wake in Thomasville this Saturday night has been cancelled. Therefore, league directors have established Thomasville as the site for the Wake Forest-Clemson contest with game time set for 8 o'clock that night.

The Tar Heels will then meet the winner on Monday night in Gastonia for the ACC title and the right to enter the NCAA regionals which begin June 4th.

Carolina will hold a workout tonight on Durham's Erwin Field at 7 o'clock in order to accustom itself to playing under the lights.

Coach Walter Rabb indicated that, in all probability, Harold Stowe will be the Tiger's mound choice, opposing the Deac's Bob Plemmons. Should Clemson win, the Tar Heels, according to Rabb, will face lefty Ty Cline.

A Wake Forest triumph would force Coach Gene Hooks to call on Jimmy Harrell to go against Carolina, though Bob Lawrence is a possibility.

Frosh Travel To Duke

The Carolina Freshmen baseballers journey to Durham today for a game with Duke that could decide the first place finisher in the frosh Big Four.

The Imps, fresh from a 1-0 taming of State's WolHflets in their last outing, have dropped only two Big Four decisions while the Tar Babies have lost three.

This will be the season's finale for Carolina.

Bank on the future—but don't write checks against it.

Intramural Awards Given To Best Organizations

SAE and DKE Fraternities, Joyner Dormitory and the Medical School copped the Annual Intramural Organization Championships in their divisions and were presented with the winning trophies last night at the Annual Awards Meeting in Woollen Gym.

Pearce Weaver, Milton Nelson and Duane Johnson were winners of the Kay E. Lewis Memorial Awards for the most outstanding Intramural managers. These managers received the most coveted award for their outstanding managerial work during the year. Weaver represented the DKE Fraternity, Nelson, Avery Dormitory and Johnson, the Law School.

Winning Manager's Awards went to Walter Brown of the SAE Fraternity, Maurice Rhodes of Joyner Dormitory and Claud Grigg and Carl Britt of Medical School.

The Grail Award for the Most Outstanding Participants in each division went to James Kelly (SAE), Milton Nelson (Avery) and Howard Light (Peacocks). These men compiled the largest individual point total during the year.

Walter Rabb Organizational Participation Awards went to PiKA Fraternity, Cobb Dormitory and the Law School. These organizations, under the direction of managers Frank Martin, Tom Cordle and Duane Johnson respectively, had the best participation for the year in their divisions. This award was initiated at the beginning of the 1958-59 school year to encourage more participation in Intramural Activities.

It was the last meeting of the year for the Intramural Managers. Director Walter Rabb praised the managers for their fine work and cooperation during the year.

Joe Friedberg 'Not Guilty' Council Deliberates 1 Hour

A nine-man jury Thursday night found Joe Friedberg "not guilty" of passing worthless checks and of collaborating in the passing of worthless checks.

The two-hour trial—including an hour of deliberation by the jury—was marked by a lengthy discussion of the term "collaboration." The Honor Council, headed by Hugh Patterson, defined collaboration as "to aid, encourage, support or countenance (permit) the passing of worthless checks, which is in direct conflict to the laws of our state and nation and also in conflict with the Honor Code upon which student behavior is based."

JOE FRIEDBERG

After the Honor Council's presentation of this definition, Friedberg said that by this definition he did permit the other boy to cash the worthless checks.

Later, after Danny Sheehan had testified, Friedberg stated that he didn't stop the boy who cashed the bad checks, but, at the same time, didn't permit him to do so.

Friedberg and his counselors were called in to the trial preceding Friedberg's so that they might question a local policeman, because the policeman had to leave before Friedberg's trial came up. The policeman testified that Friedberg's previous testimony that the original charge—in court in Hillsboro—had been reduced from forgery, which is a felony and involves a prison term and loss of citizenship, to passing worthless checks, which is a misdemeanor and involves a lesser sentence. Friedberg's lawyer later bore this testimony out further.

The lawyer said that he recommended to Friedberg that he (Friedberg) not plead guilty to any charges, because the lawyer felt that there was no evidence against him.

However, Friedberg did plead guilty to passing worthless checks because of his desire to protect the other defendants from losing their citizenship in case they were convicted on the felony charge: and because of the seriousness of the alternative charge of the felony.

Another witness for the defense testified that he felt that "Joe was doing the other two a favor by pleading guilty to the misdemeanor."

The boy who cashed the worthless checks had allegedly signed Friedberg's name to them. Some mention had been made, in a ride from Y-court to downtown Chapel Hill that Friedberg's name would be used on the check. However, Friedberg testified that "in showing disgust" he felt that he was disparaging the other boy from cashing the checks.

Friedberg also testified that the other boy owed him some money. No amount was named. Sheehan stated that the boy owed Friedberg 'about twice as much as he owed him." He also said that the "tone of voice" has a lot to do with what's said. He referred here to the statement made by Friedberg in the car on the way to the bank.

Another witness testified that he didn't think what Friedberg said in the car was consent for his (Friedberg's name to be used.

After the jury completed its deliberation, and the defense, the Council and the members of the Attorney General's staff were called back into the room Patterson read the jury's decision. Patterson then urged Friedberg to "use more discretion" in his actions in the future.

'Flick Time!'

It won't be long now before the books are once again taken from the shelf and wiped of their four months accumulation of dust and finally broken open. Exams are almost upon us and this, of course, means that the local theaters will bring back all the old flicks and watch the gate receipts rise to almost pre-war levels. The Daily Tar Heel will close up operations with the Tuesday morning paper. Good Luck, and happy Ables.

IFC Court Announced; Chairman Re-Elected

The IFC Court for 1959-60 was elected last Thursday night. Grey Poole was re-elected chairman and Joe Alexander was elected new clerk.

Members of this court are Steve Girard, Tate Robertson, Jim Rouse, Marshall Happer and Garrett Folger. These men are also members of the IFC.

The court handles all fraternity violations.

NC Editorial Writers Hold Conference

The program for the 10th annual N. C. Editorial Writers Conference, May 22 and 23, will include an address by George R. Herbert, president of the N. C. Research Triangle, at a luncheon meeting Saturday.

North Carolina newspaper editors also will hear Max Freedman of the Manchester Guardian, Attorney General Malcolm Seawell, Frances Gray Patton, Watts Hill, Jr. John Larkins, Dallas Herring and Professors Lenoir Wright and Loren MacKinney.

A highlight of the annual conference is the editorial critique when writing craftsmanship is appraised. This time a "committee of experts" of consumer's panel will tell "What I Read—and Don't Read—on the Editorial Page." These critics are Mrs. Patton, author of "Good Morning, Miss Dove," Kenan Professor of History MacKinney, and Prof. Wright of Woman's College, who is an English faculty member.

The opening session of the editors will be Friday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall when Seawell will join Representative Hill, N. C. National Committeeman Larkins and State Education Board Chairman Herring in a discussion, "North Carolina Looks Ahead." The panel will answer questions of the editors.

Cecil Prince of the Charlotte News is Chairman of the conference. Holley Mack Bell of the Greensboro Daily News is program chairman Walter Spearman of Chapel Hill is secretary. James B. O. Rush, executive news editor of the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel, will introduce Herbert on Saturday.

Donate Books!

The YM-YWCA is asking students to donate books to send to schools, colleges, libraries, and individuals in Asian countries.

The "Books for Asian Students" drive is a project of the Asia Foundation and is sponsored locally by the International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA.

Standard text books published after 1945 and books by such standard authors as Dickens, Hawthorne, Conrad, Faulkner, Hemingway and Steinbeck are requested.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Eugenia Forbes McArver, William Henry Watkins, Ralph Waldo Commings, Yulan McLeod Washburn, Johnnie Fredric Spott, Frank Wilkins Carper, Howard Grady McAllister, Charles Farris Himes, William Murchison Monroe, Mulcer Adron Morgan, Karl Eugene Bostian, Franklin McGehee Jones, Robert Gray Merritt, Alphonso James Early and William Carroll Jacobus Jr.

'Nutcracker Suite' Presented In Memorial Hall At 8 Tonight

Pictured above are three members of the cast of the "Nutcracker Suite" Ballet to be presented by the Area Ballet Company tonight at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. This is the first presentation of this particular ballet company on the UNC campus as well as the first presentation of the "Nutcracker Suite" here.

The "Nutcracker Suite" Ballet will be presented tonight in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. The program is sponsored by the Chapel Hill Music Club. No admission will be charged.

It will be the first appearance of the Area Ballet Company on the UNC campus. The ballet company is composed of both profesional and non-professional dancers within commuting distance of the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area.

The Area Ballet Company is under the direction of John R. Lehman of Raleigh. Lehman also did the choreography for the "Nutcracker Suite" Ballet. He is known for his dancing and teaching as well as choreography.

The "Nutcracker" Ballet was well received by an audience at the only other showing of the new ballet company's work on April 25 at the Meredith College Auditorium in Raleigh.

The Area Ballet Company is the first step toward a permanent ballet for North Carolina.

Members of the cast include dancers of all ages from Raleigh, Wake Forest, Chapel Hill, and other nearby locations.

Mrs. Barbara Bounds of Chapel Hill, a well known ballet teacher, will dance the part of Pierrette in the ballet.

Others appearing in the ballet from Chapel Hill include Beverly Morgan as Clara, Rusty Chambers as Franz, Judy Timmons as Marie Doll and Bobbii Bounds as Chocolate.

Graduating Marshals Are Eight Rising Seniors

By ROBERT F. NEAL

Eight rising seniors have been named marshals for the 165th Commencement exercises which will begin Saturday, May 30, and continue through Monday, June 1.

Wade Smith of Albemarle will be the chief marshal. The other marshals are Sophie Martin of Chapel Hill, Sandra Trotman of West Orange, N. J., Nancy Awbrey of Dalton, Ga., Jenny Elder of Siler City, Ralph Cummings of New Delhi, India, Erwin Fuller of Louisburg, and Charles Wilson of Asheville.

The chief duties of the marshals are to help organize and serve as leaders in the various phases of the commencement program.

Among the functions that the marshals will take part in will be the Baccalaurate Sermon, which will be held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in Memorial Auditorium.

Immediately following the sermon they will welcome parents and visitors at a Dutch luncheon that will be held in Lenoir Hall.

On Monday morning they will be host at the 11 o'clock luncheon to be held under the Davie Poplar and the Alumni luncheon that will be held at 12:30.

Following the buffet dinner at the planetarium at 5 o'clock they will proceed to the Bell Tower, where they will prepare to lead the candidates for different degrees to their places in Kenan Stadium.

Each year the president of the rising senior class automatically becomes the chief marshal and he in turn chooses the other seven from the junior class according to their achievements and merits.

President Charlie Gray Announces Intention To Sign 'Open Trial' Bill

By DAVE JONES

Student Body President Charlie Gray announced his intention to sign the "Open Trial" bill in an address to the Student Legislature at Thursday night's session. ....

Gray came to the session with two prepared speeches, one his veto mesage, to be used in the event that the bill did not undergo any modification by the Legislature, the other the message of acceptance, which he delivered.

The bill, as passed a week ago, merely provided that any defendent who desired a public trial could have one. It stipulated that all secrecy oaths be absolved in such a case.

Amendments as introduced by Jim Crownover (SP) provided that a reporter from The Daily Tar Heel be allowed to observe the proceedings, and print the names of only those persons who give written permission.

An amendment proposed by Dave Jones (SP) increasing the number of reporters from one to two was added to the Crownover changes. These two amendments were accepted by the body and incorporated into the bill.

These changes were considered by Gray as adequate to protect the accusers and witnesses in future trials, and eliminated his most serious objections to the original bill.

A bill by Gordon Street (UP) to provide for certain new fiscal policies, including the return of certain monies held by student government supported agencies to the general surplus, was passed over only slight objection. The bill was the result of the recent work of the Student Audit Board.

Al Walter's (UP) resolution to have lacrosse recognized as a varsity sport was passed. The bill received a boost from the report to the Legislature by Swag Grimsley (SP), chairman of the Carolina Athletic Council, when he reported that the group had also adopted the resolution.

Head Football Coach Jim Tatum had spoken in support of lacrosse at the meeting of the council Tuesday night.

The resolution commending Class officers for the past year introduced by Peyton Hawes (UP) was subjected to bitter attack. Opponents of the bill criticized the author for opposing the junior class appropriation bill and then taking a different stand on commending the officers.

The bill passed by a 21-15 vote.

The resolution sanctioning the mock Democratic convention in 1960 introduced by Bill Lamm (SP) was passed after the words "and support" were removed from the bill.

The constitution of the UNC Forensic Council as introduced by Taylor McMillan (SP) was tabled until the fall.

A bill to place the Carolina Handbook completely under Student Government was introduced under special orders by Rick Overstreet (UP). Overstreet asked for and received permission for Randy Shelton of the YMCA advisory board to speak on the bill.

Shelton expressed certain reservations about acting on the problem at this time, and the bill was tabled until fall.

Another publications bill introduced by Overstreet dealing with amendments to by-laws which were made necessary by a recent Student Council decision was not allowed immediate consideration and will come up in the first session in the fall.

All the presidential appointments, introduced last week, were approved.

Closed Judical Trials Studied By Council

Closed judicial trials and convictions of defendants by a non-unanimous jury is being studied by the Student Council.

When two students appealed the constitutionality of these laws of judicial procedure, the council decided to make a further investigation before reaching a decision.

Joe Warner, clerk of the Student Council, said Friday that the council would try to conduct as much of the investigation as possible during the remainder of this scholastic year. But it is possible that the decision of the council will not be made until next year, he said.

The question of constitutionality of the judicial procedure was brought before the council last month by Troy Blanton and Gary Greer.

Warner said, "The council after deliberation of some length in regard to the two issues felt that due to the dire need of a greater amount of legal knowledge and insight for the questions of issue of this appeal, that a decision would and should be postponed."

He said the council would seek further information from judicial documents, statutes and definitions in the constitutions of the United States, North Carolina and UNC.

Let's Have A Party! Everybody Rock & Roll

By DENNIS MADRY

Take a break . . . relax . . . and come join in the festivities!

Graham Memorial's informal lawn party has the makings of a gala occasion. And this is the day for it.

Sponsored by the Graham Memorial House Committee, the Embers Combo will start swinging at 3 p.m. and keep up the tempo until 5 p.m.

The party will be on the lawn in front of Graham Memorial from the Davie Poplar, where the combo will roost, to Silent Sam.

As the party gets underway to the music of the Embers rocking 'n' rolling across, free punch of some color and cookies of some description will be offered to the dry-parched throats of pre-exam students.

For those wanting to dance, the spacious red-faced brick walks will be available as usual.

For those wanting to dress for the occasion, the House Committee suggests informal clothes and any accessories.

Steel Strike Talk Threatens Economy

NEW YORK, May 15 (AP) — Steel wage talks that could have a strong bearing on the nation's economy got down to bedrock issues today.

"We're really in basic discussions now," said David J. McDonald, United Steelworkers president, after a two-hour bargaining session between four-man management and union teams.

R. Conrad Cooper, chief industry negotiator, said the teams had "good exploratory discussions."

But as the talks recessed until Tuesday, neither would elaborate on what was discussed.

The union announced at the beginning of the talks May 5 that it would seek substantial wage increases and shorter working hours among other proposals.

Failure to reach an agreement by June 30 when the present three-year contract expires could lead to a strike by a half million steelworkers and cut off 90 per cent of the nation's steel production.

President Eisenhower has counseled against any settlement that would spur inflation through steel price increases. The industry has proposed a one-year freeze on wages and other benefits to hold the line against inflation. The union contends wages could be increased without increasing prices.

After today's relatively brief session, McDonald was a luncheon guest of Francis Cardinal Spellman at the cardinal's residence.

The union chief told newsmen later that he and the Roman Catholic Archbishop had a pleasant talk as friends who had known each other for many years.

McDonald said he had received letters telling of "many, many masses being said in many parts of America" for the success of the steel negotiations.

McDonald will attend an AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting Monday in Washington. He said he probably will report there on how the negotiations are progressing.

In an action separate from the wage talks, the union and seven major steel companies signed an agreement under which almost 15 million dollars in supplementary unemployment benefits will be paid to union members in Ohio.

McDonald said the payments had been made possible by Ohio State legislation, after having been denied previously by the state administrator of unemployment compensation.

The payments, held in escrow meanwhile, will compensate for layoffs since Sept. 3, 1957.

Companies signing the agreement were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Jones & Laughlin, Inland, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Wheeling Steel.

McDonald also commented to newsmen that he was glad to see that steel stocks had climbed in the New York Stock Exchange.

Tryouts!

The Carolina Playmakers will hold tryouts for two original one-act plays Monday at 4 p.m. in The Playmakers Theatre.

The plays are "With Apologies, Euripides," written by Douglas McDermott and directed by Craven Mackie; and "Buck," by Tommy Rezzuto, directed by George Hill.

The two plays will be presented as part of the Commencement Program on June 1.

Carolina Playmakers Present 'Capers' At 8

The Carolina Playmakers will present "Capers" today at 8 p.m. in The Playmakers Theatre. "Capers" is an annual summary of the UNC theatrical season in parody, produced by students of the Department of Dramatic Art.

The script for "Capers" was written this year by Margaret Starnes, Robert Ketler and George Hill. The show is under the direction of Margaret Starnes. Music, incidental and otherwise, will be performed by Hunter Tillman.

The public is invited to attend, free of charge.

Henderson

Tomorrow marks six months since the start of the strike at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills in Henderson. At this point the strike seems further from settlement than at any previous time.

We are consistent in our belief that the strikers are right. And we also reiterate our strong feeling that they cannot possibly wage a successful campaign against John D. Cooper if the present trend is not reversed. Two or three weeks ago, the unions had a good chance of winning in Henderson. That was before the entrance of the National Guard. Now, with state military protection escorting the "scabs" in and out of the mill, it appears impossible, or at least highly unlikely, that Boyd Payton can lead the local textile workers to their rightful victory over Cooper. The militia is prepared to stay for an indefinite period of time, which means that strike-breakers can continue to go to and from work with only slight danger.

Henderson has all of the earmarks of the prolonged Kohler strike in Wisconsin. It is not beyond the realms of possibility that Cooper and the unions will remain apart from a settlement for as long as two or three years. If this happens, it will be a clear-cut victory for management, as the original mill workers will have to find other employment, and the mill will turn out its textile products through the efforts of Cooper's imports.

All of this is really too bad. It is too bad because the unions and the Governor have been mislead. It is too bad because John D. Cooper is succeeding in breaking the union. And it is too bad because the violence and bad publicity resulting from the separation of objectives in Henderson, must necessarily be harmful to the future industrialization of this State.

We are sorry about all of this; but most of all we are sorry that we must now concede victory to 19th century John D. Cooper.

We hope this is a permature concession.

SAC

The editor wonders how many readers noticed the circular vapor trail high in the sky over Chapel Hill on Tuesday afternoon at about 5:30 p.m. He further wonders how many people know why it was there in the middle of the perfectly blue sky.

It was a trail left by Air Force B-52's as they met above our quaint little village. The circle that these giants of the air made with their vapor indicated the spot where hypothetical bombs were being dropped.

This is a typical Air Force mission. SAC planes are constantly meeting one another at designated points all around the globe. It is quite possible that one of Tuesday's aircraft could have come from a West Coast base, while the other might have been sent in from as far away as Thule Air Force Base in Greeland.

And occasionally when these planes do come together over the Chapel Hill area, it makes one think. It makes you wonder just a little bit about everything that is going on around us in the ever-changing world. It is almost like a fantasy, as science flies high over us, leaving nothing to transcend the gap between those on the ground and those in the air. All we know is that aside from their practice bombing missions, the SAC planes carry real bombs, possibly to be used on other more real targets.

We hope they'll never have to use them.

Realization Overdue

Don Dotson

At long last some of the false veil of secrecy has been stripped from the proceedings of the honor council. Having heard the advocates of the secret inquisition expound on its merits, particularly with regard to an alleged "rehabilitative" function, it is interesting to note that the most significant things which have come to light in the past few days are abuses and abridgements of the rights and privileges of defendants!

It appears that the only thing that has been kept secret is the gross inequity of the patchwork judicial system under which we live. It is a false assumption that honor council cases have ever really been very secret, despite the number of oaths taken. Most anybody knows of a few cases that have been before the honor council and also know, or think they know, a fair number of details. With a very small effort it is possible to get more. The most striking results of this false secrecy are the rumors and half-truths which it gives rise to. This alone more than counters any "rehabilitative" effect, besides placing the innocent in a bad position merely for having appeared before the honor council.

Those defendants who have had the wisdom and courage to demand open trials are to be commended. Whether it is pleasant or unpleasant, it has been clearly demonstrated again and again that justice is not fostered in secret trials. The courage of the people recently before the honor council may mean a greater measure of justice for those who come before the council in the future.

It is high time we realize that no matter how honest and sincere the people on the honor council may be, it will never be in the interest of justice or humanitarianism to hold court behind closed doors. It is never safe to invest the court with unlimited power to punish. There is no justification for leaving important matters of procedure to the fancy of the chairman of the honor council. Action is long overdue to recognize and clearly set down the rights and privileges of the accused and insure that they are carried out through equitable and prescribed procedures. It is time for a comprehensive revision of the campus judicial system.

Quarles Letter

Dear Mr. Editorial Writer:

During a visit to lovely Chapel Hill this week, I happened to pick up a copy of the Tar Heel and in reading the mouthpiece of student thought and news of the University of North Carolina, I noted the article about Secretary of Defense McElroy's statement concerning the death of Donald A. Quarles.

As a registered Democrat from Baltimore, Md., who nevertheless feels free to vote for the best man, I was sorry to read this petulant bit of editorial comment. I was sorry because it is possible that this editorial writer hopes someday to be in a position to lead and guide the readers of some newspaper. In any event, he has a definite responsibility to do just that now, and, as a leader of rational opinion, to try to present to his youthful readers a slightly more adult and comprehending outlook on local, national and international matters than they may posess at the present time.

When Death comes to each of us, it is indeed Death. But through the ages men have been known to call it "Sleep," "Final Rest," "Passing On," "The Great Beyond" etc. etc. etc. Often men have referred to Death in terms of their own particular religious phraseology.

Your little piece was immature and in bad taste and also indicated a badly mixed up attitude for one entrusted with the privileges of speaking to a student body drawn from all parts of the USA, if not the world.

It is to be hoped that with increasing mental maturity you yourself will not be tagged a Democratic college student jerk.

"What's All The Fuss About A Little Carpeting For Senators In Washington?"

Dangers Of Atomic Fallout

'Nothing To Worry About'

Herb Harris

On the subject of nuclear fall-out which seems to be a catch word for the layman, let me quickly announce that there is little or nothing to worry about. In my humble opinion, nuclear fallout has been either a propaganda stund, or sensational writing by the Loose syndicate, i.e. our yellow journalist friends.

If an agency can stir up enough public sentiment or arouse the people for any reason, and then claim credit to the matter, then they have a credit to themselves. And fallout has evidently been just this. Naturally, we should be made aware of common danger, but Public Health type of screaming about an increase of radiation from an intensity equal to a watch dial to perhaps two watches over the last five years seems hardly worth worrying about. Watch dials do have 'deadly' radiation emitting from their faces, because the phosphor paint is mixed with radioactive substances to light them up, that is to excite the phosphor paint. This radiation is generally made up of particles called alpha rays which can be stopped in a few layers of paper, with more than adequate protection from anyone's clothing. But the last three years has seen all sorts of scare stories about fallout, even to the extent of claims that the next generation will be changed from cell permutation.

Now if anybody really investigated the matter closely, he would find that cosmic rays are continually falling about us, and in far greater numbers than fallout has ever achieved. Few people realize that over 1500 cosmic rays enter their body every minute, and evidently have been doing so since the first man. Now these cosmic rays are so strong that they pierce miles of ground with little or no diminution, so the people on top of the earth are constantly penetrated by cosmic rays. Yet no one has worried about fallout until the AEC began experimenting with nuclear devices. Now the press waits to hear a new angle which might stir up a few more people. Or else our friends in White will leap to the scene carrying Geigler counters and all the rest of their paraphernalia and raise all sorts of dust, for we all know that no one keeps his job long unless he does something along the line he was hired to do. But new mothers have not been told of cosmic rays.

If someone starts the fallout line, see if he is not selling papers or keeping a county board properly informed. The best way to catch some of these stories is to question the number of radioactive particles that fall through a square inch, and if an answer is available compare it with the rain of cosmic rays, whch fall at the rate of more than six for every square inch.

Cosmic rays are mostly Mesons, a rare know thing that does not live long, perhaps not over a millionth of a second. But before this happens they penetrate the surface of the earth, andn everyone thereon. But cosmic rays generally are so strong that we claim their energies to be well into the billions of electron volts. This means they just go, and do not see anything whether it be lead or concrete in their path. Fallout will never be above a few million—not billion—electron volts. It will never get beyond the skin regions, even if an atomic bomb goes off in Charlotte. So girls, your progeny will be safe. In the meantime all these cosmic rays are ripping through our most vital regions.

Another 2 Million

The executive committee of the UNC trustees has let the legislature and the public know that a minimum of $2,000,000 over and above all present budget recommendations must be provided if the University is to operate for the next two years just on the current level.

It is good that the trustees have served this notice. The people who have taken this stand on behalf of the University are outstanding North Carolina citizens. They are interested in this matter solely because they are interested in the future of North Carolina and in the future of her citizens. They are not people who believe in wasting any money, either public money or private money. In fact, they are not people who believe in wasting or half-using any resources of any kind, and it is that belief of fully using all resources which led them to make their recommendation that the University simply must have the additional funds.

For, without that additional $2,000,000, the University will not be able to train adequately North Carolina's most valuable resource, its young people. And, if that resource is not well or even adequately trained, the future of North Carolina is dim indeed.

The University's request is a realistic one. In fact, it is based on less than actual need, and it must be considered in that light. It simply would permit continuation of service on the present level, with no expansion in staff or research work, other than that needed to continue on the present plateau of service.

The University's request is for the bare minimum. It must be met to the last penny.

There was action by the legislature's appropriations subcommittee on another education front yesterday, the public schools. It approved allocation of additional funds for the public schools which, if used with other available funds for raising teaching pay, could permit a raise of five percent across the board.

This new allocation is a step in the right direction. A five percent raise for all teachers would be a great deal better than no raise at all. But, the legislators must take one step further and bring that raise up to at least seven and a half percent. That would bring starting pay for teachers to about $3,000 and would make it easier for school units all over the state to secure badly needed replacement teachers. The larger raise, of course, also would make it easier to hold the teachers now in the profession.

And, the legislative subcommittee must find the money needed to provide at least a modest raise for state employees other than teachers.

The finding of the additional money for the University, for the teachers and for the state employees is not an impossible task. It is a task which must be done.

Editor:

Thank you for your letter of May 4th with the tear sheet from The Daily Tar Heel.

I was interested to read the accounts of the Henderson strike—not dispassionate, perhaps, but lively reading.

As an old college newspaperman myself, I know you must be finding the editorship a highly interesting assignment.

Under the Campus Code you are bound on your responsibility as a lady (gentleman) to conduct yourself as such at all times, and further to see to it, insofar as possible, that your fellow students do likewise.—THE CAMPUS CODE

The Campus Code and the Honor Code form the foundation for student self-discipline on this campus. They are committed to memory by each student as he enters the university, and he is reminded of them constantly throughout his Carolina career.

It seems obvious that the Honor Code and the Campus Code, as they now exist, are reasonably operative: that is, there is probably no more lying, cheating, stealing, or unacceptable conduct on this campus than there is on any other similar campus, or, for that matter, in the outside world.

Many Carolina citizens are unduly proud of this record, their pride stemming frrom the misconception that adherence to the Codes as stated is due to the higher standards of honor and conduct which the Codes engender.

If this is the case, then their pride is misplaced; for not only are the Codes not liable to raise the students' standards, but they are also designed on the assumption that they will not. In other words, a student is advised that under the Honor System he is on his honor not to lie, cheat or steal. And then, after a semicolon's pause., he is advised that his "honor" is subject to the surveillance not only of his own conscience, but also of the conscience of every other student on the campus.

In short, the student is not on his honor at all, except in the least valuable sense of the word. Rather, he is asked to subject his honor —his private morality—to the standards of the group.

The considerable effectiveness of the Honor Code is due mainly to the fact that its strictures against lying, cheating and stealing are deeply ingrained in our common moral heritage. The majority which has internalized its inherited mores cannot but consider the Honor Code redundant in its first clause and oppressive in its secon; the rest will disobey it with varying degrees of success.

This is not to say that the Honor Code is entirely without value. Certainly its first clause, which puts the student on his honor, may well stimulate the student to become more conscious of his personal morality to question it, and to formulate it in his mind as a clear principle.

The second clause of the Honor Code could well be erased from the books. Not only does it discredit the first clause, but it may well thwart the aim of the Code to educate the student in greater self-reliance. By refusing the ultimate responsibility for the interpretation and enforcement of honor to the individual, and investing instead in the community, the Honor Code lessens the responsibility of the student for his own actions.

In its most valuable statement, the Honor Code should read, "Under the Honor System you are on your honor."

As it now reads, the Honor Code is ambiguous only as it clouds the sense of the word "Honor"; the Campus Code, on the other hand, is totally ambiguous.

Like the Honor Code, it contains a contradiction in terms. In its first clause it makes the student responsible for his own conduct, and in so doing it asserts the students' competence to make the judgments involved. Following the semicolon is the injunction which empowers every student to attempt to impose his standards of conduct on his fellows.

The entire statement of the Campus Code is ambiguous, and, like the Honor Code, it is self-defeating. There is no pat definition of "lady" or "gentleman," and no operational definition is supplied in the Code.

It would also seem evident that if one is to be bound on one's responsibility as a lady (gentleman), one is presupposed to be, in fact, a lady or gentleman and thus legitimately able to accept such responsibility; and , if this is true, then one is unable to act in any other way. In short, only ladies and gentlemen can accept the responsibility as ladies and gentlemen to act as ladies and gentlemen; and as they are ladies and gentlemen in the first place, the rest is strictly excess verbiage.

But there is something more seriously wrong with the Campus Code than its formulation, and it is strange that its essential error should not be more generally perceived in a section of the country which stands on the principle that it is impossible to legislate mores.

Despite this principle, the Campus Code makes it possible for any student to at least threaten the moral integrity of any of his fellows, and possibly to impose his moral standards on others.

Even if a student is never brought into official conflict with the Campus Code, its very existence fosters in him an unhealthy respect for the opinion of others on matters that should be decided by him alone. If the individual's decisions regarding his personal morality are unacceptable to others, those offended should restrict themselves to social rather than legislative correctives.

While the Honor Code is essentially valuable, then, the Campus Code is quite useless and harmful. As a legal prohibition, the Honor Code is effective only to the degree that its precepts are already part of the moral fibre of the individual; the Campus Code is effective only in punishing flagrant abuses of established standards of conduct. The same effect could probably be gained by simply putting every Carolina student on his honor.

(We are re-running this Anthony Wolff column because it is a sample of student opinion which should be heard during a time when the Honor System is coming under the close scrutiny of the student body.—The Editor.)

Frosh Top Duke 4-0 On One-Hitter

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

DURHAM — Three Tar Baby hurlers combined their talents in a masterful one-hit pitching performance to carry the frosh to a 4-0 shutout over Duke here yesterday.

The win enabled Carolina to clinch first place in the final Big Four standings with a fine 7-3 record. Overall the frosh managed 8 wins in 15 decisions, thus closing out the season with a winning slate.

Tarlow Stars

Fast balling Dick Tarlow set the Imps down on one Texas League single during his five inning stint while he and his mates were cashing in on three Duke miscues for a two inning, three-run lead.

Paul Swing started it as first batter of the game with an infield chopper. He stole second and went to third when Duke pitcher Larry Harrison threw wild into centerfield on a pick-off attempt. Jud Spainhour's bouncer up the middle brought Swing home with what turned out to be the only tally the Tar Babies needed.

With one down in the second, Ron Miller singled and took second when Whitey Wade's bouncer to the mound resulted in another throwing error on Harrison. After a force play, Tarlow came through with a hit to score Miller.

Another error, this time by shortstop Lynn Fader, sent Jerry Evans across with the second and final marker of the inning.

Lanky righthander Bob Wacker contributed three hitless innings and Lewis Holcomb added one more to complete the afternoon.

Carolina's AAU

RALEIGH, N. C. — Approximately 235 top track performers, representing 21 clubs, will compete in the annual Carolinas' AAU track meet here Saturday. This competition closes out the season for the Tar Heel track team.

In this meet, which is held mainly for individual honors, the Tar Heels will be without their two top performers, Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop. Other than these two, the Heels will compete in full force.

In the running events, Wally Graham and Ward Purrington will lead the dashmen; John Sylvester and Benjy Seagle, the quarter; and Cowles Liipfert, Bob Foxworth, Dave Peltz, and Scott Brent, the half.

Bing Somers, Tim Burnette, Larry Henry, and Liipfert and Foxworth, should they not qualify in the half, will run the mile; and Alex Coffin and Rett Everett will go the grueling three mile.

Lyndon DeBorde will be faced with the same problem that has confronted him the past three years—how to run against such world famous hurdlers as Elias Gilbert, Lee Calhoun, Fran Washington, etc. and finish in the top six. Gilbert set the world's record in the 220 yard lows here last year.

Alumni Commencement Events

165th Commencement Awards Will Be Given

By GERALD PETERSON

"Golden Anniversary" Awards to the class of 1909 and the installation of Alumni and Alumni Association officers for 1959-60 will highlight the annual alumni commencement events May 30-June 1.

Class reunions start the 165th Commencement program Saturday, May 30, according to Association Secretary Maryon "Spike" Saunders.

At least two classes will hold supper meetings at 6 p.m. Saturday followed by an 8:30 p.m. reception at Kessing Pool for alumni, seniors, their parents and faculty. The classes of 1909, 1914, 1919, 1924, 1929, 1934, 1939, 1944, 1949 and 1954 will attend.

Hostess for the event is the University Woman's Club.

The Old Students Club's Annual Luncheon is scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday. Fifty-year alumni will be inducted. At 6:30 more class reunion suppers will be held.

Alumni Luncheon

The Alumni luncheon will be Monday, June 1, at 12:30 p.m. Besides the "Golden Anniversary" Certificates presentation and the officer inductions, the results of the Alumni Annual will be announced.

Events for seniors start with the reception Saturday evening. At 10:30 a.m. Sunday degree candidates will meet at the Old Well in their caps and gowns. The Baccalaureate Sermon will be at 11 a.m.

At 12:30 Sunday there will be a Dutch Luncheon for seniors and their parents. The University Band will present a concert on the lawn at Davie Poplar at 4:30.

Music of Handel

Music continues at 8:30 in Hill Hall with the Commencement Concert. Handel's "Alexander's Feast (The Power of Music)" will be presented by the Chapel Hill choral Club and University Symphony Orchestra.

At 11 a.m. Monday, June 1, the University Reception for commencement guests will be held. From 2 to 4 p.m. the School of Dentistry's Honors Day Convocation and reception for seniors will be held in Clinic Hall.

Editor, Theologian Will Highlight Commencement

By ROBERT F. NEAL

A Yale University theologian and the editor of the Wall Street Journal will give the main addresses that will highlight the 165th commencement program that will begin on Saturday, May 30.

Dr. H. Richard Niebuhr, Sterling professor of theology and Christian ethics in the Yale Divinity School, will give the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, May 31, at 11 a.m. in Memorial Hall. He has taught at Yale Divinity School since 1931 and is the brother of the famous theologian Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary.

Vermont C. Royster, editor of the Wall Street Journal and a native of Raleigh, North Carolina, will give the commencement address at the graduation exercises scheduled for June 1 at 7 p.m. in Kenan Stadium.

Mr. Royster received his A.B. degree in 1935 from UNC and joined the Wall Street Journal the following year. In 1953 he won a Pulitzer Prize for his editorial writing.

Maryon "Spike" Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association, said that there would be an all time high of over 2,000 degrees confered this year.

Along with the usual academic degrees there will be five honorary degrees awarded at the commencement exercises on Monday night. The names of the recipiants will not be announced until that time.

The name of a candidate for an honorary degree is presented to the standing committee of the Faculty Council and then approved by the Council. After consideration by the Trustee Committee; the Board of Trustees takes the final action.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, the faculty commencement marshal, has announced that again this year the large number of degree candidates have made it necessary to present only the PhD and honorary degrees individually.

This year, for the first time, the candidates will enter four abreast and then divide into two abreast to be seated from both isles. This is being done in an effort to cut down the time that it has taken in the past for them to enter two abreast and be seated from one isle.

As a precaution against the possibility of rain, a duplicate stage is being erected in Woollen Gym. This will enable the activities to get under way without delay in case of an emergency.

Immediately following the commencement exercises the new graduates will turn in their caps and gowns on the lawn directly behind Woollen Gym. The dean of each school will have a table set up there to issue diplomas and Bibles.

John Foster Dulles Is Growing Weaker

WASHINGTON, May 16 — (AP) — John Foster Dulles is reportedly growing weaker.

The 71-year-old former Secretary of State contracted pneumonia a week ago after weeks of treatment for cancer that has spread through his body. He has been a patient at Walter Reed Army Hospital here since Feb. 12, except for a brief rest in Florida.

The State Department, which yesterday reported a further decline in his condition, said today there was no further change. The department said medical bulletins will be issued only if Dulles' condition changes.

Three members of the family who live elsewhere were reported in the city today. They are a son, John Dulles, an engineer in Mexico City; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Hinshaw, New York City; and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Edwards, Rye, N. Y.

Other members of the family in addition to Mrs. Dulles are another son, Avery, a Jesuit Priest; Dulles' brother, Allen, head of the Central Intelligence Agency; and his sister, Eleanor, a State Department specialist on Germany.

Dulles' cancer condition dates back to 1956, when he underwent surgery for a malignant growth in the colon. Last February Army doctors found the cancer had recurred when they operated on him for a hernia.

In the following weeks, the Secretary was given massive radiation treatments with a giant X-ray machine and by injections of dario-active gold.

He left the hospital early in April for Florida. But the sojourn was cut short and he returned to the hospital April 12.

Doctors then reported evidence the cancer had spread to his lower neck.

President Eisenhower announced Dulles' resignation as Secretary of State on April 15, but retained him as a personal consultant with cabinet rank. Dulles reportedly was determined to step down so that Christian A. Herter could be advanced to take over the heavy duties of the Secretary's office.

Dulles was in a wheelchair when visited last week by Eisenhower and Sir Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime Prime Minister.

Piano Teachers, Students Hold Ninth Annual Clinic

Arthur Loesser, pianist, teacher and author, will be among the guest recitalists and lecturers for the ninth annual Clinic for Piano Teachers and Students being held in Chapel Hill June 29 through July 2.

Arrangements for the Clinic under the sponsorship of the UNC Extension Division in cooperation with the UNC Music Department are being handled by Dr. William S. Newman, who has announced that registrations have already been received from seven states.

AUTHUR LOESSER

Other guests at the clinic will include Mrs. Margaret Allen, a specialist in rhythm work for young children and a teacher at Berea College, Kentucky; Miss Hazel Cobb of Dallas, Texas, composer of children's pieces; and Mrs. Dorothy Berea Silver, former member of Martha Graham's company.

According to Dr. Newman, a "once-in-a-lifetime experience" will be provided when Loesser gives a performance of the entire first volume of Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier.

"When this piece was done by Loesser in Chapel Hill several years ago, he announced that the lights could be left on so that the audience could follow the score. Almost everyone turned up with a score and many had to be turned away because of the artist and this music.

"The same plan will be followed when he performs here on Tuesday, June 30, and the concert will be open to the public," Dr. Newman commented.

Two Music Students Present Junior Recital In Hill Hall

Two UNC music students, Martha Holaday and Dana Dixon, will present a junior recital in Hill Hall today at 8 p.m.

Miss Holaday, flutist, will be accompanied by Kay Knight in a presentation of Bach's "Sonata No. 1 in B Minor;" "Night Soliloquy" by Kent Kennan, and "Poem" by Charles T. Griffes.

Dixon, a pianist, will perform Beethoven's "Sonata in E-flat, Op. 81a;" and Liszt's "Apres une lecture du Dante," usually called the "Dante Sonata."

Martha Holaday, whose parents live in Alexndria, Va., graduated from Westfield, N J., High School. Before entering the University, she attended Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., where she was a member of the orchestra.

During the summers of 1955-56, Miss Holaday played in the high school orchestra and honors band at National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich. A pupil of Prof. Earl Slocum, she has studied flute with Robert Cavally of Cincinnati and Robert Armer of Los Angeles. She is first flutist with the UNC Band, Symphony Orchestra and Wind Ensemble.

Dana Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Dixon, studied piano at UNC while still a high school student in Mebane, N. C. A pupil from the piano class of Dr. William S. Newman, he has been selected as one of there citalists to appear in the ninth Summer Piano clinic sponsored by the University's Music Department and Extension Division.

Morehead Planetarium Presents New Program

A new program demonstrating and explaining current scientific theories of how the universe originated and developed has opened at the Morehead Planetarium.

Titled "In The Beginning," the program admits that no single theory has been conclusively proven or unanimously accepted by scientists, but it shows there is some logic in all the theories of how the moon, the planets including the Earth, the constellations and the sun originated.

The school version of the new program, "In The Beginning," is recommended for students in grades seven through 12.

It is given at public performances nightly at 8:30 o'clock and at matinees on Saturday at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., and on Sundays at 3 and 4 p.m.

The programs for school children are presented Wednesdays through Fridays at 11 a.m., 1 and 4 p.m. Reservations are required for the school programs, but the public will be admitted to them after the students have been seated.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Eugenia Forbes McArver, William Henry Watkins, Johnnie Fredric Spott, Frank Wilkins Carper, Howard Grady McAllister, Charles Farris Himes, William Murchison Monroe, Franklin McGehee Jones, Robert Gray Merritt, Alphonso James Early and Douglas Stuart Gatlin.

Billions Of Neutrinos Are Bombing You Now

By ED CREAGH

WASHINGTON, May 16 (AP)—Don't squirm now, but at this very second you are being bombarded by hundreds of billions of neutrinos.

You can't do a thing about it, either. The (we hope) harmless little particles come at you from the sun. They bombard every part of you even if they have to come all the way through the earth to do it.

Report To Eisenhower

This somewhat bemusing fact is one of many contained in a scientific report to President Eisenhower. The report, dealing mainly with exploring the innards of the atom, urges federal spending of 135 million dollars a year by 1963 to help find out what matter is really made of.

Said the panel of scientists:

"We are peeling an onion layer by layer, each layer oncovering, in a sense, another universe; unexpected, complicated and—as we understand more — strangely beautiful."

Need Accelerator Devices

It takes big money to bombard atoms for study. To get at the inner secrets of the atom you need such electron accelerator devices as the cyclotron, the bevatron and the cosmitron. Hence the multi-million dollar spending proposal.

Say you're going into the problem of the protons and neutrons.

"The voltage given to a proton by such accelerators," the scientists said, "equals that from a string of flashlight batteries about a million miles long."

Reverse Space Explortion

This field of particle physics, as it is called—a sort of space exploration in reverse—has turned up many an idea which will shake your grade school arithmatic. For example: subtraction isn't subtraction any more.

"When a piece of wood is chipped from a table," the scientists said, "we have two new objects—a chipped table and a piece of wood. But occasionally some particles may be 'torn' from a proton and still leave the proton intact."

Minute Particles

To find out these things, scientists have to detect things they never expect to see—particles "which are to the thickness of a sheet of paper as that thickness is to the distance of the moon."

Getting back to those neutrinos which are peppering you right now:

They're sent out by the nucleus (the core of the atom) somewhat like light waves.

Sun Emits Neutrinos

"Our sun," the report says, "whose energy is produced by nuclear reactions, emits an enormous flux of neutrinos. Every second, hundreds of billions of these neutrinos pass through each square inch of our bodies, coming from above during the day, and from below at night, when the sun is shining on the other side of the earth."

Hmm. No wonder people scratch themselves from time to time.

Give Medical Students Time, Says Doctor

"Give medical students more free time, train them in the methods of a research worker and you will produce better physicians," Dr. Thomas H. Ham said Friday at the UNC School of Medicine.

Dr. Ham, brother of Dr. George Ham, who is head of the Department of Psychiatry at the UNC School of Medicine, was guest speaker at the third annual Adam T. Thorp III Memorial Lecture.

Dr. Ham is professor of medicine at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio .He is a graduate of Cornell and previously taught at Cornell and Harvard Universities. His topic was "A Clinical Investigator Looks at Medical Education."

East-West Are Talking Of Conference

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

GENEVA, May 16 — (AP) — East-West maneuvers tonight were authoritatively reported under way here to determine the place, size, time and tasks of a projected summit conference.

A high British source said these issues are at stake in the outcome of some Big Four talks going on inside and outside the foreign minister's conference room.

The informant disclosed that British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd suggested to a fellow delegate the possibility that the parley of government chiefs might be held aboard ship on the high seas.

"We can always take the Queen Elizabeth off the Atlantic run for the purpose," Lloyd was quoted as telling his colleague.

Whether the British statesman was joking or serious could not be learned. However an idea of this sort could conceivably become a real possibility if Russia and the West failed to agree on a more conventional meeting place.

But as things stand now, the chances are that three of the Big Four powers will favor San Francisco as the site for the summit with France still pressing for Geneva.

A U.S. spokesman said tonight the American government "has no objection to holding a summit conference in the United States if the other powers want it there."

Assistant Secretary of State Andrew H. Berding also said the United States has had "no approaches from other powers, and has made no approaches of its own" about when and where a summit conference might be held.

Copy Material

Copies of reference material that can't be taken from library can now be obtained for 10 cents and a few seconds.

This new service is the result of a Thermo-Fax duplicating machine which the Wilson Library has recently obtained from the Minnesota Mining Company.

This machine is capable of reproducing a sheet or a page in any book up to the size of a Life Magazine. It can also be used to copy microfilm.

The duplicating machine is located in the stacks. A charge of 10 cents a copy is used to pay for the reproducing paper and maintenance.

Alpha Chi Sigma Gives 8 Scholarship Awards

Bryan Roberts won the junior award, and Robert V. Fulk and Thomas L. Isenhour received sophomore awards.

Betty Juanita Love, 22-year-old senior coed, was fatally injured in a one-car accident early Saturday morning on the Durham highway at Whitehall Antique Shop.

Her fiance, Donald J. Kroe, also a senior at UNC, sustained a fractured vertebra in the accident.

Miss Love died of internal injuries at 2 a.m. Saturday in N. C. Memorial Hospital, where she was taken after the accident.

Kroe's condition was reported as satisfactory by hospital sources Saturday afternoon.

Funeral services for Miss Love will be held at 3 p.m. today in the Andrews Mortuary Chapel in Wilmington. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery in Wilmington. The body will remain at the funeral home until the services this afternoon.

Kroe and Miss Love were headin the direction of Durham on Highway 15-501 at the time of the accident just after midnight Saturday. Kroe was driving a 1955 Chevrolet. She was the only other passenger in the car.

After Kroe pulled out to pass a second vehicle, his car ran off the shoulder on the left side of the road. He pulled the car back onto the highway, but it went off again and hit a telephone pole.

The Chevrolet was described as a total loss.

Local policeman Charles W. Etheridge, who investigated the accident, did not indicate the rate of speed of the Chevrolet.

By Saturday afternoon, Etheridge had been unable to talk with Kroe, who was under sedation, except briefly after the accident.

Although formal charges have not been filed against Kroe, he will be cited for involuntary manslaughter, which is a technical charge.

Miss Love was majoring in education at UNC and would have graduated in June. She and Kroe had planned to be married May 31. Before entering the University, she attended Flora McDonald and Wilmington colleges.

The young coed lived in Alderman Dormitory on campus.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Juanita Bordeau Love of 1912 Ann St., Wilmington; one brother, William Walter Love Jr. of Wilmington; the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Juanita M. C. Bordeau of Wilmington, and the paternal grandmother, Mrs. Betty Johnson Love of Asheville.

Miss Love was born April 11, 1937, in Charlotte.

Groups Hear Talks

CHAPEL HILL — Chemistry groups in Tennessee and Alabama will hear four talks during the coming week by Dr. Charles N. Reilley of UNC, who will make a lecture tour for the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Reilley, an associate professor in the UNC Department of Chemistry, will speak Monday night in Kingsport, Tenn. to the Northeast Section of the ACS.

On succeeding nights he will address ACS gatherings in Nashville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; and Auburn, Ala. All four talks will be on "The Chelon Approach to Analysis."

Forensic President Elected

Clay Simpson has been elected president of the Forensic Council for 1959-60.

The Forensic Council consists of two representatives each from the Carolina Forum, the State Student Legislature, the UNC Debate Squad, the Dialectic and the Philanthropic Societies. The Council promotes these organizations and controls their financies.

Simpson, a rising senior from Lexington, Ky., is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity and has served as president of the UNC Debate Squad this past year. He will represent the Carolina Forum on the Council.

Honor System 1

This is the 90th issue of The Daily Tar Heel under the new editor. During that time, he has consistently called the Student Legislature down for one thing or another. He has blasted them for almost every conceivable item of business during the first few weeks of the new session. He has done this because he does not feel that it has been a particularly good group so far. He feels that the Student Legislature has continually overlooked worthy groups and individuals. It has been too conservative for our blood.

Yet, in all honesty we must also praise something which is deserving of laudatory remarks. We give a bouquet to the student solons for their sensible action in passing the Crownover bill (plus amendments) which finally opens up Honor Council trials to the public. (meaning The Daily Tar Heel) when a defendant so desires.

We are dissappointed that this bill was passed with such haste originally, i.e. written and passed on special orders a week ago Thursday. We highly commend Student Body President Charlie Gray for not signing the bill in its original form. We feel that the amendments added to it on Thursday night were both needed and reasonable.. In the future, when we are asked to cover Honor Council or Student Council trials we will attempt to present the ultimate in objectivity. It is hoped that through his method of reporting, we may be fair to all of those concerned.

Thursday night's action by the Student Legislature was one of the most progressive taken during this entire year. It does not alter Honor Council procedure or in any way detiorate the Honor System as we know it. It merely gives to the defendant a right which he should have possessed over a half a century ago.

Honor System 2

Student Body President Charlie Gray made an outstanding speech to the Student Legislature on Thursday night. Speaking on the bill to open Honor Council trials, the chief executive displayed what was probably the finest oratorical performance of his young life.

Only one thing disturbed us. He kept referring to all of the people in school who are out to destroy the Honor System. And he said that the group which is out to do this was the same one that was appearing on Thursday evening in front of the Student Council asking that group to rule that, from this point on, only unanimous verdicts would be acceptable for determining guilt. Here we must disagree. We hardly feel that the two students who did so are out to destroy the Honor System. We merely ascertain that they are out to change it. We will even go so far as to say they are out to strengthen it. For no system that does not guarantee every advantage and right to the defendant is a strong system. We also feel that a unanimous verdict should be rendered.

WE HOPE THIS DOESN'T MAKE US AN HONOR COUNCIL DESTROYER TOO.

Legislative Roundup

Dave Janes

Thursday night the Legislature and the Student Body President took action, wise action, on a difficult problem. It all began at the previous week's session of the Legislature when the body passed a hasty, emotion packed measure dealing with a real problem. They unanimously passed the bill throwing Men's, Women's and Student Council trials wide open at the request of the defendent.

The authors and the legislators who acted on this bill were thinking of the rights of Mr. Gershensen and Mr. Freidberg. They knew that their trials were coming up, and that these two defendents wanted to have the cold blue light of public opinion shining into the council chamber.

On the basis of these two trials certain and immediate cinsiderations, the bill passed.

The authors went immediately to the president, Charlie Gray, and asked him to sign it, so that the Gershenson trial could be thrown open immediately.

Gray was taken completely by surprise by this action but, refused to take hasty action and sign on the spot. He demanded a chance to study the bill and its implications. Fortunately for the Honor System at Carolina he studied, discussed and waited.

Thursday afternoon, Charlie Gray arrived at a decision. He wrote a speech, and made plans to deliver it before the legislature.

Meanwhile, Jim Crownover (SP) and several other legislators studied the problem and came up with a set of amendments which would eleminate some of the serious objections to the bill, and avert the possibility of a presidential veto.

The definition of "Public trial" had been missing from the old bill. Now a strict definition was offered.

"A public trial be defined as a trial in which only two members of The Daily Tar Heel staff be present," was the first change.

"The . . . Daily Tar Heel . . . be allowed to print and/or reveal only the names of those people who in writing so permit." was the other change.

Charlie Gray was at the legislature session. He stood in the hall waiting for final action to be taken on the proposed amendments. He conferred with legislative leaders and waited patiently for his turn to speak.

The amendments were adopted and Gray began his speech.

"I come before you tonight," he said, "after many hours of deep thought. During my years at Carolina, I have endeared my self to many of the traditions and beliefs of the school, but to none more so than to our Honor System. I live by it, strongly believe in it, and deeply respect it. It is the foundation of our . . . "Carolina Way Of Live."

He emphasized the difference between our honor system courts and criminal courts. He said that currently the honor system was facing a serious challenge, and asked for legislative support in meeting that challenge, and helping him strengthen the Honor System.

In direct reference to the bill under debate, Grays aid, "Our system survives on students who believe strongly enough in the code to report a violation or to sit for hours on a jury to determine innocence or guilt. A student (Now) can perform these duties without fearing that his name will be headlines in The Daily Tar Heel."

He also said that he felt that the action of the week before had been taken with "too little consideration." In this area he gave the legislature "A criticism, a commendation, and a plea." The criticism was for last week's hasty action, the commendation for their willingness to compromise and think and to make changes in the bill. The plea was to fight, along with him, to preserve our system.

He ended by saying that he intended to sign the bill as amended.

Gray's speech won hearty applause from the members of the body. This applause was well deserved. Gray has met his first challenge as president and has indicated that he is not a "Golf Cart" president.

He feels strongly about our Honor System. He considers it unique. He feels that it must be preserved and strenghtened. He is willing to go hat for what he believes.

Short Course-Bed Making

Dear Editor,

It has come to our attention that there are some young ladies on the campus that would like a course in bed-making.

We offer this short summary that has met with great success in the past several years.

Cautiously center the bed under the first sheet. It is necessary to have an equal hangover at both sides and at each end. Gently raise the mattress at one end while at the same time tucking the end of the sheet under evenly and firmly until it is smooth. Lower mattress. Turn the bed around or walk to the other end. Again raising the mattress, bending it slightly toward the center. Firmly pull sheet tight, tuck it under and lower the mattress. If this is done properly the mattress will sag while the sheet remains tight and not quite touching the mattress at the center. Both ends are now accounted for.

Grasp with left hand any corner of the sheet approximatly 18 inches from the end. For journalism students 108 picas may be used and for science students about 50 centimeters is sufficient. Place the right hand at the edge of the bed with the palm outward. Then fold sheet held in left hand over right hand which forms a crease. Lay sheet in left hand on bed. This forms a triangle. Tuck the portion hanging at the side of the bed under the mattress. Pick up the excess sheet lying on the bed and allow it to drop at the side. Repeat process at the other three corners.

When corners are neatly finished tuck in one side evenly and firmly. Caution should be used to assure that the sheet is tucked in evenly and lays flat between the mattress and the springs. At the other side of the bed grasp the sheet in both hands and pull it firmly up and out. When sheet is smooth and tight over the mattress, lower without relaxing grasp and tuck it under the mattress evenly and flat. It is important that the grasp is not relaxed or the sheet will sag over mattress.

With the second sheet and blanket the process is repeated but the sheet and blanket should not be evenly distributed as the first sheet unless the bed-maker desires to sleep on the floor. It is only necessary to tuck in at one end and the process at the corners is necessary only at the end where the tucking is done. This permits access at opposite end. After the end and corners are neatly tucked repeat the process described above at the sides.

If the mattress sags on the edges it may be desirable to slip narrow lengths of plywood or stiff cardboard at the edge to give the appearance of squared edges.

The acid test is now applied to bed. If made properly a quarter, $.25 (the price of an unmade bed) is flipped at the approximate center. The coin should bounce at least six (6) inches. If the coin does not bounce six inches repeat the process from the beginning.

This method has been used by millions. We have known men who were so proud of their newly made beds that they slept the rest of the night (2 hours) on the floor using their helmet liners for a pillow. Some were commended for their bed-making ability. Alas many were sent to the mess hall anyway because they forget to polish the soles of their boots.

Sincerely,
Lt. Col. Henry S. Snow

Publish Or Perish

Trygve R. Tholfson, for five years an assistant professor of history at the University of California, Los Angeles, has been fired. Next fall, Mr. Tholfson will be an associate professor at the University of Louisiana, a rise in rank that, among other things, gives him tenure. So this is not an occasion to bewail the professor's misfortunes.

It may, however, be an occasion to commiserate with the students at UCLA. On hearing of the administration's action, senior students in the history department circulated a petition attesting to Mr. Tholfson's excellence as a teacher and urging the university to reconsider. His former bosses do not question Mr. Tholfson's professional skill, but he has not published much during his stay on the Pacific and must give place to an academe who may prove handier with his pencil.

This is the rule of "publish or perish", in action, and one can understand the university's motive. All things being equal, a man who gets in print regularly draws more credit to his university than one who devotes himself to mute, inglorious instruction. But things — and particularly teachers — are never equal, and the people in a good position to know feel that Mr. Tholfson's departure is a deprivation. As one undergraduate spokesman said, "the purpose of the university is to teach students." That is such a simple statement that any administrator, sophisticated in matters of grants, alumni patronage and status, could spot it at once as the remark of an unfledged idealist.

The Nation

Letter

TO THE WOMEN OF THE UNIVERSITY:

In a referendum last week a 2/3 majority of all voting dormitory women voted that they are in agreement with the collection of social and activity fees providing they are not in excees of $5 per year. A letter has been written to Chancellor Aycock requesting that these fees be collected with the room rent each semester at a starting rate of $2.50 per semester. If this is found to be in excess of needs after one year of experience the fee will again be lowered. At the present time we do not feel that it can be lowered any more than the initial one dollar which was stated previously.

While the majority of the votes cast were for social fees we are cognizant of the possibility that this still may not represent the general wishes of the women students. We can but accept as an official voice that which was expressed by the vote however large or small. The opportunity was given; the votes have been cast. We trust that each woman student will be willing to accept her responsibility as a member of the college community.

Sincerely,
Women's Residence Council

Last Issue

We are reminding the student body that the last issue of the 1958-59 Daily Tar Heel will be on Tuesday. Any copy to be submitted for that paper must be in by 3 p.m. on Monday. There will be no exceptions. Tuesday's edition will be a 6-page jobber, so there's plenty of room for y'all.

Frankenheimer For The Forum

Frank Crowther

A giant Super-G Constellation came to a stop at 10:40 a.m. last Thursday at the Raleigh-Durham airport. Among the passengers were a 29-year-old television director and his wife who, strangely enough, would spend the next 29 hours in North Carolina. The passengers, of course, were John and Carolyn Frankenheimer who had come to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the Carolina Forum.

This was the culmination of what began with a chance phone call during the first week in April. This past year's Forum had authorized me to contact the last speaker of the year, and I was sitting next to the telephone one afternoon trying to think of someone to call at that late date who would be able to come to Chapel Hill on short notice and yet deliver an interesting and intelligent address.

Why not someone from television, I thought? Not an administrator or a news analyst, but a man who was integrally involved with the creative production and direction in the medium. As "Playhouse 90" came to mind, so did the name John Frankenheimer.

Now, how would one go about contacting this director? I tried calling CBS and was referred to "Talent Associates", the production organization headed by David Susskind. The conversation went something like this:

"Voice: "Good afternoon, Talent Associates."

Operator: "Long distance is calling Mr. John Frankenheimer."

Voice: "I'm sorry, Mr. Frankenheimer is not here right now. May I take a message?"

Operator: "Is there another number we can call to reach him?"

Voice: "Well, not that I know of. We're not allowed to give out Mr. Frankenheimer's private number."

Crowther: (Realizing that the only way I could get his number would be to put her on the defensive) "Operator, would you please tell the party that I've got to talk to John (John? I'd never talked to the man before in my life!) this afternoon about a speaking engagement and I don't have my address book with me. (Well, I didn't have my address book.) It would save me a great deal of wasted time if she would just give me the number without my having to call all over town."

That got her.

Voice: "Oh, I beg your pardon, sir. I was just being careful. You know, we never can tell who might be calling and I'm sure you understand our caution."

Crowther: "Yes, I do and that's perfectly all right."

Voice: "Mr. Frankenheimer's home number is *******."

To shorten what could be a long introduction, Frankenheimer happened to be home, listened to my proposal and said, "Sure, I'd love to. Is it all right if I bring my wife? I just love it down there and I'd like her to see Chapel Hill."

After several phone calls and some deliberation, we decided on May 14th. These things all flashed through my mind as John and Carolyn stepped off the plane last Thursday.

After visiting the Duke Chapel and gardens, we arrived at WCHL for a scheduled interview at 11:15 a.m. They were then situated in the Carolina Inn, taken on a short tour of the campus and treated to a quiet lunch at the Inn. Then the holocaust.

Between two and three o'clock, kinescope recordings of 30 and 10 minutes duration were made. A student-faculty reception at three o'clock was followed at 3:50 by a press conference which ground to an end at 4:30. Fortunately they did have a grief respite from 4:30 to 6:15, but then went on to a banquet, the formal address in Hill Hall which was broadcast by WUNC-FM, a reception in Graham Memorial and a private party wherein they had the opportunity to meet some of the established writers who live in the Chapel Hill area.

The next morning, Frankenheimer spoke to combined writing classes of the English, Drama and RTVMP departments from 10 to 11 and to the television production classes from 11 to 12.

I think we may say that the Frankenheimers' visit to UNC was a tremendous success. All of the students and faculty with whom I have spoken attest to that fact.

To those of you who did not have the opportunity to talk with him or hear his speech in Hill Hall, I can only say that you missed a very rich experience. If you missed everything, the least you might do is take time to watch the "Ideas" show Wednesday night over WUNC-TV.

ROYAL ORBIT WINS PREAKNESS

BALTIMORE, May 16 (AP) — Royal Orbit zoomed from outer space around the middle of the track on the final turn $190,300 Preakness Stakes today and drew away to a four length victory over Sword Dancer.

First Landing, the surprise slight favorite, wound up ninth in the 83rd running of the classic.

It was the second major triumph in a row for horses raced in the golden state of California in the Kentucky Derby-Preakness-Belmont triple crown.

Mural Softball

Joyner, Med Sch 2, Kap Sig and Chi Psi (W) all were victorious in winning the championship in their division. Joyner now reigns as softball king in the dormitory division, while Med Sch is tops in the Graduate division and Kap Sig and Chi Psi are champs in the Fraternity Blue and White divisions respectively.

Last year's winners were Kap Sig, PiKA, Cobb and Med Sch. Only Joyner and Chi Psi were victorious in toppling the old kings from their thrones.

These teams emerged winners out of a field of 64 teams, which will illustrate the teamwork that went into their playing.

For the finals in the All-Campus event, it will be between Med Sch and Kap Sig. Med Sch was the All-Campus winner last year and hopes to repeat the performance again this year.

The All-campus championship will be played Monday, May 18 at 5:00 p.m.

CHICAGO BEATS NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP) — Del Ennis' 11th inning single gave the Chicago White Sox their eighth straight victory, 4-3 over the New York Yankees Saturday after a costly three-base error by Mickey Mantle in the ninth cost Bob Turley the triumph.

Nellie Fox walked and moved to second on Jim Landis' sacrifice to open the 11th against Art Dittmar, third Yankee pitcher. After Sherm Lollar was walked intentionally, Ennis singled, scoring Fox.

Turley was within one out of a 3-2 victory in the ninth when Mantle misjudged Fox's fly ball and dropped it for a three-base error.

Keys Named Captain

Ben Keys, a rising senior from Greenville, was elected last week to be the captain of next year's Carolina tennis team. Keys played number three on this season's Tar Heel team which wound up the campaign with a 12-3 record. In the ACC tournament Keys hooked up with captain Geoff Black to win the doubles title from Duke's Joe Gaston and Dick Katz.

WILHELM WINS FIFTH

BALTIMORE (AP) — Unbeaten knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm won his fifth game as Baltimore scored four times in the sixth inning Saturday to whip Detroit 6-1.

The Orioles had only two hits in the inning off loser Frank Lary, but a costly error by Lary contributed to the rally that sent the Tiger right-hander down to his third loss in six starts.

Scurlock Third

George Kerr of Illinois won the 880 yard run in Friday night's Coliseum Relays held in Los Angeles. The winners time was 1:49.4. Tom Murphy of the New York Athletic Club finished second with the same time as the victor. Carolina's Dave Scurlock, who won the race last year, was third with a time of 1:50.2.

CHICAGO (AP) — An unearned run in the ninth inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday in a game which otherwise was a battle of homers.

Let Your Texts Pay for your Summer Reading!

Wherever you go this summer, you may find taller mountains, or better sailing, or more French Filles — But there's one thing you won't find . . .

Big, friendly bookshops with all-round stocks are few and far between. Even the dozen or so shops that are the equals of the immodest joint named below won't have books tailored to your taste.

Don't let your mind get rusty this summer, pal. As soon as exams are over, trot in with your texts and stock up with delectable mental fodder for vacation reading.

Yes, we've done it! The Instant Sport Shirt is a reality. With the new Van Heusen Vantage Sport Shirts, all you do is add water . . . and presto . . . a fresh, handsome sport shirt springs to life before your very eyes. And a sport shirt that's all cotton! Is it a miracle? Is it a powder? Is it a pill? A grind? Read on.

You see, the new Van Heusen Vantage Sport Shirts work this way. First, you buy one (this is terribly important), then you wear it for a while. Then you remove it from your pampered body, drop it into the sink, and ADD WATER. In moments, a new sport shirt begins to appear, a sport shirt as fresh and new-looking as the one you bought in the store. Amazed, you remove it from the water, hang it up for a bit, and it's ready to wear. Friends will ask, "How do you manage to afford a new shirt every day?" You will answer, "I was left a huge sum of money by an aunt in Texas." And we will not divulge your secret!

The all cotton Van Heusen Vantage Sport Shirts that drip-dry so quickly (tumble-dry automatically, too) and wear so wonderfully are available in a wide range of checks, stripes and solids. All have sewn-in stays that can't get lost and keep your collar always neat. They cost a mere $5.00. (It's time you wrote home, anyhow.) And remember, all you need do is ADD WATER. If you haven't any water, we'll send some FREE. Write Phillips-Van Heusen Corp., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y.

LIGHT UP AND LIVE IT UP! 3 great cigarettes offer you 627 chances to win! So pick your pack—save the six wrappers—and get going! It's crossword puzzle fun and real smoking pleasure all the way!

ENTER OFTEN—HAVE FUN—AND WIN! But think carefully! This puzzle is not as easy as it looks. At first the DOWN and ACROSS clues may appear simple. There may appear to be more than one "right" answer. For example, the clue might read: "Many a coed will be given her best date's P--N." Either "I" (PIN) or "E" (PEN) would seem to fit. But only one answer is apt and logical as decided by the judging staff, and therefore correct. Read the rules carefully. ENTER AS OFTEN AS YOU WISH. Good luck!

RULES—PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

1. The College Puzzle Contest is open to college students and college faculty members except employees and their immediate families of Liggett & Myers and its advertising agencies.

2. Fill in all missing letters . . . print clearly. Use of obsolete, archaic, variant or foreign words prohibited. After you have completed the puzzle, send it along with six empty package wrappers of the same brand from L&M, Chesterfield or Oasis cigarettes (or one reasonable hand-drawn facsimile of a complete package wrapper of any one of the three brands) to: Liggett & Myers, P. O. Box 271, New York 46, N. Y. Enter as often as you wish, but be sure to enclose six package wrappers (or a facsimile) with each entry. Illegible entries will not be considered.

3. Entries must be postmarked by midnight, Friday, May 29, 1959 and received by midnight, Friday, June 5, 1959.

4. Entries will be judged by the Bruce-Richards Corporation, an independent judging organization, on the basis of logic and aptness of thought of solutions. In the event of ties, contestants will be required to complete in 25 words or less the following statement: "My favorite cigarette is (Chesterfield), (L&M) or (Oasis) because . . . . . ". Entries will be judged on originality, aptness of thought and interest by the Bruce-Richards Corporation. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in event of final ties. Illegible entries will not be considered. By entering all entrants agree that the decision of the judges shall be final and binding.

5. Solutions must be the original work of the contestants submitting them. All entries become the property of Liggett & Myers and none will be returned.

6. Winners will be notified by mail as soon as possible after completion of the contest.

7. This contest is subject to all Federal, State and local laws and regulations.

New Forum Chairman

The Carolina Forum for the academic year 1959-60 held its first official meeting yesterday and elected new officers for the coming year.

The chairman is Frank Crowther, a rising senior from Chevy Chase, Maryland who is also associate editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Vice-Chairman is Taylor McMillan, rising senior from Parkton, N. C., who is also the Vice-President of the Forensic Council. Clay Simpson, rising senior from Lexington, Ky. and President of the Forensic Council, was elected Treasurer.

Nancy Baker, also a rising senior, from Oak Hill, W. Va. was selected to be the Forum secretary.

Crowther and Simpson will remain in Chapel Hill for the summer and plan to begin work immediately in contacting prospective speakers for the fall. McMillan will work in Washington, D. C. in the office of Representative Ken Hechler, a member of congress from West Virginia. Miss Baker is uncertain as to her plans for the summer.

Those speakers to be contacted first by the new Forum committee include Dr. Robert Goheen, President of Princeton University, Sen. John Kennedy, Vice President Richard Nixon, Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, Jack Kerouac, author of "On The Road" and "The Dharma Bums," and Vladimir Nabokov, author of "Pnin" and "Lolita."

The Carolina Forum is financed by funds from the Student Legislature and seeks to bring to the campus significant speakers from all fields of endeavor.

Recently, the Forum for 1958-59 brought to the campus John Frankenheimer, noted television director. A television show made during the director's stay will be shown over WUNC-TV this Wednesday evening at 9 p.m.

Any student wishing to suggest a name to the Forum for consideration may do so by sending a letter to the Carolina Forum, c/o Graham Memorial.

Big Meeting!

All persons connected with Summer School student government have been asked to meet Tuesday, June 9, at 2 p.m. in Roland Parker I.

This includes all members of the summer school government board, the summer school student council, the Women's and Men's honor councils.

Auto Accident Victim Has Broken Vertebra

Donald J. Kroe, who sustained a fractured vertebra in the automobile accident which claimed the life of his fiance early Saturday, had a fair day Monday, according to Memorial Hospital sources.

Charles Etheridge, local policeman who investigated the accident, said Kroe was "naturally very broken up."

"Kroe said he and his fiance, Betty Juanita Love, and another couple had been to the Patio. They returned to Chapel Hill where they left the other couple and decided to drive back toward Durham. That's when the wreck occurred," said Etheridge.

He added, "The boy will be charged with manslaughter and a preliminary hearing will be held as soon as he is physically able to attend."

Miss Love died at 2 a.m. Saturday about two hours after the accident occurred. Their car left the highway at Whitehall's Antique shop as Kroe tried to pass another car and lost control.

Chi Psi Fraternity Elects New Officers

Members of Chi Psi social fraternity last week elected Larry Craver president for 1959-60. Craver is a Morehead scholar from Winston-Salem and is a member of the varsity baseball team.

2,000 Students To Graduate

Approximately 2,000 diplomas will be awarded Carolina students in commencement exercises less than two weeks from today.

The commencement gets underway formally with the Baccalaureate Sermon at 11 a.m. Sunday, May 31, in Memorial Hall. The sermon will be delivered by noted theologian, Dr. H. Richard Niebuhr of the Yale Divinity School.

On Monday, June 1, the traditional graduation exercises will be held in Kenan Stadium at 7 p.m. The commencement address Monday will be given by Vermont C. Royster, editor of the Wall Street Journal.

Alumni and other visitors will begin coming to the campus on Saturday, May 30, when at least two reunion classes will hold supper meetings. An outdoor reception will again be held on Saturday evening for the seniors, their parents, alumni and faculty. The University Women's Club acts as hostess for the event at Kessing Pool.

Reunion classes which will hold formal gatherings this year are those of the years 1909, 1914, 1919, 1924, 1929, 1934, 1939, 1944, 1949 and 1954. The Old Students Club will hold its annual meeting and induct the 50-year alumni.

Concerts, Carolina Playmakers productions, receptions, special honors convocations and the many alumni meetings are other traditional commencement events.

The annual Alumni Luncheon is set for June 1 at 12:30 p.m. in Lenoir Hall. Installation of new Alumni Association officers, announcement of Alumni Annual Giving results, and induction of alumni officers for the class of 1959 are some of the scheduled events of the luncheon.

Dr. Niebuhr, who has taught at Yale Divinity School since 1931, has a famous theologian brother, Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary.

Vermont Royster is a native of Raleigh and received his A.B. degree in 1935 from UNC. He joined the Wall Street Journal the following year, and in 1953 won a Pulitzer Prize for his editorial writing.

Dialectic Senate & Philanthropic Society Merge After 164 Years Of Separate Meetings

By HOBART STEELE

The Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Literary Society have merged to form the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Society.

Action came Tuesday night when Di President Gary Greer made a fervent appeal to the Phi for incorporation of the Di into it. Phi President John Brooks followed the appeal with a bill for incorporation which would clarify the merger.

Greer's appeal was made with a realization that the membership of the two societies might dwindle to complete uselessness. At the time of his presentation, the Di had 12 members and the Phi, 20.

After a series of story debates last week the new society was formed by an unanimous vote, and the Phi Constitution was amended as prevailing basis for the organization.

The first president of the new society is David Matthews from the Phi; the first president protem is Gary Greer of the Di. Other officers of Di-Phi are Recording Clerk Hobart Steele, Critic Glenn Johnson, Sergeant-at-Arms Fred Parker and Parliamentarian Ron Pruitt.

Di Hall and its offices are to be used by the Di-Phi, and the Phi pin and cuts have been adopted.

The Forensic Council, which approved the merger, and its member organizations (including the Carolina Forum, State Student Legislature and Debate Squad) will use the Phi offices.

The Di-Phi will retain complete jurisdiction of the hanging of portraits and retain the ownership of the portraits and other furnishings. Any changes or additions to the merger will be jointly approved by the Di-Phi.

The Dialectic Senate and Philanthropic Literary Society were both organized in 1795, the year when the doors of the University were open for students. About 1813 the two societies merged into the Concord Society which met in a room in the Library.

The societies later occupied separate halls when New East and New West were built in 1858. At this time the walls were adorned by portraits of their members who had obtained honors in the world. The life-size oil portraits are the largest and most important collection in North Carolina of eminent men.

In 1925 the old halls were renovated, and the old chairs and lights removed. The Di was furnished desks and chairs while the Phi was furnished with folding chairs which are still in use.

Years ago membership in one or other of the societies was compulsory. Today membership in them is voluntary, but limited to 50.

Sound & Fury Music

Al Salley, producer of this year's Sound and Fury show, "Oh Hellas," announced this week that plans are being made to have the music from the production reproduced on 33 1/3 rpm, long playing records for sale to interested persons.

Salley said the price of the records had not been definitely determined, but it would probably not exceed $4. Persons ordering the record will be billed before the end of the year. The record will be mailed to the buyer sometime during the early part of the summer.

All interested persons are asked to contact the GMAB office in Graham Memorial as soon as possible.

Joel Chadabe Wins Weeks Music Award

Joel Avon Chadabe is the recipient of the Percy Craven Weeks Award given by Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity to the year's outstanding piano major.

The engraved cup and $25 check were presented to Chadabe Monday night by Sig Ep President Bill Stepp at a supper for Chadabe and Dr. Wilton Mason of the Music Department.

A graduating senior from New York City, Chadabe's major in the Music Department is piano.

While at Carolina he has composed the music for the Carolina Playmakers production of "Peer Gynt" and has conducted Peter Ford's music for a petite musicale. He has also studied during the summer at the Aspen Music colony in Colorado.

The Percy Craven Weeks Award has been given each year by the local Sig Ep chapter since 1950 in memory of a brother who died in an airplane crash in 1949.

Freshmen Cabinet And Deferred Rush, Study Halls, Orientation

By JOHN FRYE

Several months ago, the officers of the freshman class organized the Freshman Cabinet, a committee to act as an advisory board to the officers. A group of 25 representative students were selected to meet weekly for the past three months to discuss problems and projects of the class.

Since the cabinet was organized relatively late in the semester, it has been limited in carrying out its proposed projects. The cabinet was prevented, for example, from having a Freshman WC-UNC Day, on which the WC freshmen would visit Chapel Hill and would be entertained at a picnic, talent show and combo party.

The cabinet did not have time to hold a program promoting attendance at freshman athletic events and a program promoting participating in minor sports.

The cabinet, however, recently gave support to the scholarship program sponsored by the classes of '60, '61 and '62. Since this scholarship will be in honor of one of the outstanding leaders of North Carolina, the cabinet members decided to help with that effort.

Realizing that the student support was needed to fight for increased University budget appropriations, the cabinet wrote personal letters to state legislators.

When the controversy over deferred rush was brought up this spring, the cabinet immediately began to investigate all aspects of a program which would pertain mainly to freshmen. A questionnaire on rush was distributed to a cross section of the freshmen. The results showed 91 per cent of the students were opposed to deferred rush of any kind. Only 42 per cent indicated they had had enough time during last fall's rush to make a wise decision.

However, 19 per cent said they wish they had waited until a later time to pledge. Fifty-three per cent noted that they didn't have sufficient knowledge about fraternities when rush began, but 98 per cent said they had suffered no disappointments which affected their academic work during the first semester.

Luck?

It is with great disappointment that the staff of the Daily Tar Heel announce that this is the last issue of the paper. The editor and managing editors wish to extend their cordial invitations to attend all exams without your usual crossword puzzle and cup of coffee. We are as sorry as can be but we have enjoyed trying to serve you and hope you all the success in the world.

Thanks

Elsie Prevatte, graduate student in recreation curriculum, said Monday she appreciated the cooperation of 400 undergraduate students for filling out questionnaires in her Survey of Leisure Interests and Leisure Pursuits.

She also thanks members and presidents of the Women's Residence Council, Panhellenic Council, IDC and IFC, who administered the questionnaires.

Tigers Claw Heels Again; Capture Title

By ELLIOTT COOPER

GASTONIA—Last night for the second time in less than a week the brass ring representing the ACC basketball championship evaded Carolina as Clemson walked off with the coveted title by defeating the Tar Heels 9-7.

For the Tar Heels it was an evening of frustration as to a great degree they defeated themselves by yielding four unearned runs and committing five errors.

What hurt even worse was the fact that Carolina had overcome a 4-0 Clemson lead in the fifth inning with a four-run rally to capture the lead in the game at 7-5. This two-run margin stood up until the Tiger eighth, when Bill Wilhelm's crew put together two hits and three walks to tally three times and take the lead.

The Tar Heel defeat marked the second time in two years that they have lost the conference crown to Clemson in a playoff here at Sims Legion Park.

Phi Delta Kappa Elects Officers

The newly elected officers of Phi Delta Kappa are: James W. Batten, president; John H. Best, vice president; and David J. Irvine, secretary and treasurer; Luther R. Taff and John B. Chase, faculty sponsors.

Phil Delta Kappa, an international professional fraternity in education, conducts an active program of research, leadership and service. Its commissions deal with school desegration problems, international education, and selective recruitment of teachers.

The official journal of the fraternity, the Phi Delta Kappan, is considered one of the nation's leading magazines of educational opinion.

Bulletin

Bill Davis, chairman of the Publications Board, announced Monday that Nancy Combes and Arthur Lessing have been appointed co-editors of next years Carolina Quarterly.

They were appointed by the English department and approved by the Publications Board. Their duties will begin with the first edition to be printed next September.

Yackety-Yack Is Ready For Distribution

The appearance of the Carolina blue and white bound Yackety-Yack is another clue to the fact that the year is quickly drawing to a close.

Editor Cameron Cooke has announced that students may pick up their Yacks at the windows outside the Rendezvous Room today beginning at 2 p.m. and Wednesday morning.

The 59 Yackety-Yack is, as in past years, largely a picture book.

There are pictures of pretty girls, fraternities, Chapel Hill, "big Wheels, (and little wheels), sororities, sports and the million and one things that make up this complexity known as the University of North Carolina.

No one but students at UNC would have anything but remote interest in the book, but, for students, it represents a year of work and play which the Yack will help them remember in years to come.

Membership Drive Termed Big Success

The membership drive among seniors for the General Alumni Association included 582 students by Monday afternoon. The class of 1959 has approximately 1,100 members.

Hamp Lefler, chairman of the senior class Alumni Committee, said Monday, he considered the drive had been successful so far. He predicted that the number of seniors who became members of the association will exceed 600, which would be a 20 per cent increase over last year.

Lefler announced that seniors may still join for $1 by writing to the General Alumni Association or by going to the Alumni office in the Carolina Inn.

He also expressed his thanks to members of his committee and solicitors for their work and to the seniors for their support.

INFIRMARY

Students in the Infirmary yesterday included:

Eugenia Forbes McArver, Katherina Templeton, Johnny Stott, Frank Carper, Howard McAllister, Charles Hines, William Monroe, Douglas Gatlin, Alfred Marley, Franklin Jones, Robert Merritt and James Earley.

UNC Gets New Education Professor

Raleigh's assistant schools superintendent, Dr. Neill A. Rosser, has been appointed as an associate professor in the UNC School of Education.

His appointment, which is effective Sept. 1, was announced by Chancellor William B. Aycock following approval by President William C. Friday and the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Rosser taught at the University of Illinois for four years before going to Raleigh in 1955 as principal of Hugh Morson Junior High School. He was named assistant superintendent of Raleigh Public Schools in 1957.

A native of Broadway in Lee County, Rosser received his A. B. degree from Maryville, Tenn., College in 1939. He also holds a master's degree from Harvard University and a doctorate in education from Denver University.

He began his teaching career at Bolivia High School, and later was teacher and principal at Fort Lupton, Colo.

Now writing a textbook in educational psychology and guidance, Dr. Rosser is a member of the American Psychological Assn. the National Education Assn. and the N. C. Education Assn.

The Last Tar Heel Today

Summer Vacation

After nine days of deliberation and careful thought; after numerous hours of consultation with everybody from the President of the Student Body to our roommates; and after a prolonged pensive contemplation into the wee small hours of the morning, the Editor of this rag has decided that it is more than safe to endorse summer vacations.

This is in complete keeping with the policy of this paper to avoid no issues of importance. We realize that this is going against the sworn promise of the Editor not to endorse anything for anybody at any time. Yet, summer vacation is such an outstanding idea that we feel compelled to go back on our word.

So, whatever you're doing and wherever you are, know that you have our best wishes for the next four months. And once in awhile take a swim or drink a brew for us too.

Y'all have a ball!

A Final Good Bye

We doubt that there was ever a college paper that didn't have something to say to the graduating seniors. And today, we will be no exception. We do not wish to be nostalgic, nor do we desire to do the usual bit, i.e. tell the seniors they didn't get all they could have out of four years of Carolina. They already know this.

Rather we wish to look to the future, not the future of the individual members of the class of 1959, but rather to the future of a great University and the part that they can play in helping it to achieve bigger and better goals during the coming years.

Wherever each and every member of the graduating class will find himself tomorrow, next year or in 1984, he can be of great service to Carolina, the entire Consolidated University of North Carolina and the cause of higher education in general. He can use his power to pressure lawmakers to give state supported universities the funds that they must have to operate and to grow great. He can use his vocal chords to take the message of education to every corner of this state and further. He can use his pocketbook to give of himself. And he can use all three of these—pressure, vocal chords and pocketbook—to great advantage if he only will. We hope that no senior will ever forget the importance of educating other generations. Now that the students who are graduating have been here for four years, we are sure that they have at least a general concept of a large university and how it functions. We hope they will pass this knowledge on to others, so this University can pass its secrets on also.

There are many other things we would like to say to the seniors, but this seemed the most important. For those who do well, we will rejoice, and for those who suffer ill-luck, we sympathize. To one and all, we wish the best of luck.

Last Word Of Praise

In this the 180th and final issue of the year, the Editor would like to take this opportunity to single out for praise three graduating seniors for their outstanding contributions to publications and a better Daily Tar Heel.

Curtis B. Gans, immediate past editor of this paper, gave his time and best efforts throughout four years to your morning reading. We are proud to have worked with him, and thank God that there are at least a few students on this campus with enough gumption to stand up for what they believe. Gans was one of these. It will be a long time before this campus has an editor of equal talent and high principles.

Miss Anne Frye, recent winner of the Abernathy Award, has perhaps been the most unselfish of all. We can safely say that without her vital contributions in the past five weeks as News Editor, there would have been many times when this paper would have had glaring weaknesses and poor quality. It is no exaggeration to say that Miss Frye has lived and breathed The Daily Tar Heel during her two years at Carolina. No amount of words are sufficient to express our sincere gratitude to her.

Fred Katzin has been a most outstanding Advertising Manager during the past two years. He has performed these duties in a capable fashion. He has also been a person of superior integrity and an individual on whom each Editor could always count. His faithfulness is most certainly appreciated by those with whom he has worked.

And lastly, the Editor would like to single out a junior named Ronnie Shumate. It wasn't too long ago that the Editor and Shumate were pitted against each other in a political campaign. Since the day Shumate withdrew from the editorship race, he has been the most important single force behind the present Editor. It is safe to say that without his support and aid we might not have had a paper on several occasions during the recent weeks.

And so, in the name of present and past editors, The Daily Tar Heel says that it will miss the first three and is glad the fourth will be back.

An Allegory

Harold Stessel

This past year, a Messiah enrolled at the university, in accordance with an increased exchange student program. This was not the Messiah everyone talks about; it was one of his cousins. He stood in the long registration lines, perhaps next to you, and joined both the Republican and Democratic Clubs, which had been claiming him as a member for many years. He had the devil of a time getting a parking permit for the Beast of Revelations, and was finally allowed to keep him in the Bell Tower Parking Lot, on condition that he only blew the quieter of the Beast's five horns. The Beast fed happily on couples in Kenan Woods. (Probably you do not believe me; you think it is impossible for a Messiah to come to Carolina. That is proof you have little genuine religion. It is people like you who cannot accept practical applications to your religion, who barbecued Joan of Arc and would have eaten her, if you thought that meant your salvation.)

He roomed in the lower quad, with a boy named Sam Priapus, from Wilson. Although they were moderately antithetical, they were inserperable. They both wanted the same thing: "We just want everything to be nice."

First the Messiah tried love, with a coed named Clodia Pulcher. But he found that in Carolina, the male students hate the coeds nearly as much as they hate fraternity boys. The coeds despise both. The intellectuals hated, and were hated. The same was true of the Bohemians. And when one night Sam Priapus, who always was with him, seduced a willing Clodia, the Messiah gave up on love. "Why did you do that?" he asked Sam, threatening to turn the Beast loose on him.

"Why not?" asked Sam.

Then the Messiah tried religion. Gradually he became addicted to Communion. He began to take it every day, and then to say, "A little Communion before lunch and dinner never hurt anyone." He began to treat his friends to Communions, then to take one to brace him when he got up in the morning, then discovered he couldn't get through the day without it. His pastor pointed to him as a modern saint, but he knew there was nothing left but Acolytes Anonymous. He began to suspect Sam's lust was only a substitute for religion, and so was the religion of his friends. It had, he noticed, narrow-mindedness and a knowledge of superiority. So despite the claims of his religious friends that they were all good existentialists, he said, "This is the faith that launched a thousand slips," and left them saying, "Work out your own salvation with diligence."

The Messiah went to South Wing. There he was told to go out and enjoy himself, and he learned of the progress in medicine, which would soon make hysterectomy available to every man, woman and child. Men approve of it, women like it, children enjoy its orange flavor. He was told it would soon be available in a home do-it-yourself kit.

In order to enjoy himself, he went to the intellectual center of the campus, Harry's, and he and Sam heard such talk as: "What can we do when we get tired of Mozart?" "Doesn't the Spanish Cival War mean anything to you anymore?" "Eight out of ten politicians agree, the U. N. is the only cure for fallout."

As a last hope of satisfaction, he joined a band of Seminol Indians who lived off campus, and played their games, like Change Partners, Fantasm, and Drive the Scapegoat Into the Wilderness.

The Messiah decided to die the Roman Way, by cutting his veins in a hot bath. So he went to Sutton's, and was dismayed that you cannot buy a single razor blade. He returned home with a Gillette traveling case, ten blades, and the World Series Record Book.

The Messiah cut his wrists. He did not bleed fast enough, and had to leave his bath and exercise strenuously in order to die, but he managed it. He had chosen his epitaph, "Vanitas vanitatum," but it was misinterpreted.

SORRY

We regret that we were unable to publish all of the material submitted for this last editorial page of the 1958-59 Daily Tar Heel. We thank those who worked to get it to us and hope they understand that we were rushed for space at the final moment. The Editor.

"Ha Ha—We're Still Ahead Of Them"

Mostly Shades Of Gray

Norman B. Smith

Two nuns sat on a stained seat in the dusty, stuffy coach sweating in the pre-shower mugginess of the early evening when this far north one could usually expect it to be cooler now that the sun had reached the extremity of the western sky, sat there perspiring profusely beneath their heavy black garb, and cursing (if nuns really do that sort of thing) under their breath. Beneath the battered, antiquated spectacle rims, framed by a head of matted, shapeless hair of the woman across the aisle was a still-gleaming—in contrast to the rest of her appearance—white bandage over one eye that had been operated on in Green Bay. The tired little girl, not more than seven, whose dress may or may not have been starched that morning now slept, stirring fitfully every so often, and the shadows of the spruce and balsams beside the track filtering in the remaining lances of sunlight made crisscrosses on her too brightly red cheeks with the stains that had been left by a compound of tears and dust. And a leathern faced old woodsman sat at the end of the car, puffing silently on a pipe which he had actually filled with shavings off a blackish plug of tobacco drawn from the bulging pocket of his checkered woolen shirt.

This scene shattered the first illusion the young man had retained of the country left ten years before, half a lifetime ago for him. To him this streaking (He couldn't understand the bumpy slowness when he tried to reconcile it with his memory.) silvery train had been one of the most exciting spectacles the northern peninsula town of his birth had offered. Memories flashed back of helping the conductor help his mother down from the high steps of the coach when she had returned from Chicago, catching a glimpse for the first time of a Negro as he grinned through the shining plate glass of the dining car, putting his ear near the tracks the night time and again that Santa was to arrive for the parade until he finally heard the buzzing of wheels a long way off.

He concluded that even though some of the newness had worn off the train (That must been the cause, he thought.), the town would be the same. There was a prickly sensation and then a slight chill, in spite of the heat, in anticipation as the wheels squalled on the tracks and the train ground to a halt.

He got out quickly because he knew exactly what he would look for, the one marvelous thing about the town that would give him that same sense of fascination and awe that he used to get, that would truly bring him home again. That was the Commercial Bank Building, the skyscraper that dominated the business district and cast its mid-morning shadow nearly half way across town. His grandfather who had had an office way up in the building that could only be reached after a delightfully long elevator ride told him how a circus performer had once scaled one side of the bank building, going clear up to the top. This was something almost beyond belief when he was young, and he had further reason to suspect it was a tale more entertaining than true when on two different occasions of its telling his grandfather had managed to extract a tooth before he quite realized what was happening. The young man scanned the town three or four times in the fading dusk (Twilight is long near the solstice in those parts, not like his adopted North Carolina where darkness draws around quickly.) from the depot steps before he realized that the only building that could possibly be the Commercial Bank was a most unimpressive, five story sandstone structure. And even Peuabic Bluff that he had known previously to loom in back of the town, its craggy peaks nearly touching the clouds, now was found to be but a medium-sized, not-too-steep hill.

He tried again the next morning. He walked from the hotel, across the narrow main street that he had at one time approached with fear and indecision and had spent long periods watching for traffic from both directions before daring to cross, and up the hill on A Street toward the Immanual Baptist Church. His mind was occupied with recollections of the revival which he had faithfully attended every day, proudly displaying his completely punched out attendance card afterwards. There was the Scotchman who began his sermon with an introduction, "I was born when I was very young," which everyone had thought was very clever, and scenes came back, too, from that frightening movie in which it was conclusively proven that included among the most direct means to eternal damnation were playing cards, smoking, drinking, going to movies, dancing, and the possession of great amounts of money (although the actual amount that formed the border between Christian thrift and sinful avarice was not clearly stated). One Easter morning he had closed his eyes so tightly that it almost hurt and clenched the pew as hard as he could during the prayer so that he could feel the Spirit of God calling him that the preacher said was there that day; he was sure enough after that to go to the railing in front of the pulpit and say that he wanted to be saved. But the strongest memory of all was of the Sunday in mid-August during a searing drought when he had prayed in front of the entire congregation for rain to save the crops, and the next day and for several days more it had rained.

This morning it was different, just as the train and the bank building and Peuabic Bluff had been. He only noticed how poor the choir was, saw the big crack in the ceiling (in fact, concentrated on it because the sermon was redundant and meaningless to him), and walked away without feeling that he had come back home and beginning to know that there was no way he could.

Letter

(The following letter was submitted to Miss Jessie Rehder as head of the selections board for the Carolina Quarterly in application for the position of editor.)

Dear Miss Rehder,

We, Nancy Combes and Arthur Lessing, would like to apply for the position of editors of the Carolina Quarterly for the academic year of 1959-60.

These are our qualifications: Nancy Combes graduated with highest honors from Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, New York was editor of Profile, the creative writing magazine of the college was managing editor of the college newspaper, and winner of an Atlantic Monthly Essay Contest. This year she has been articles editor for the Quarterly and night editor for the Daily Tar Heel. She will begin graduate work in the English Department here this summer.

Arthur Lessing graduated from Wesleyan University in Connecticut with high honors. He is presently at work in graduate study in the department of Philosophy. He has studied with Richard Wilbur in his poetry workshop. He is presently poetry editor of the Carolina Quarterly. He was music critic for the Daily Tar Heel.

We would like to apply for the position of editors of The Carolina Quarterly because we believe each of us individually has talents and qualifications that would complement each other in the actual work envolved in running the magazine.

Our joint editorial policy will be:

A. To print the best fiction, poetry, and articles we can find both on this campus and elsewhere.

B. The criteria for judging work will be solely in terms of the quality of the material.

C. We intend to put a great deal of time and effort in soliciting this material both on campus and from outside sources.

D. We hope to increase circulation and advertising in order to put the Quarterly into a good financial position.

E. We intend to have a staff which works in close alliance with each other.

Nancy Combes and Arthur Lessing

ROMAN LITERATURE IN TRANSLATION, Edited by George Howe and Gustave Adolphus Harrer, revised by Albert Suskin. 649 pp. New York: Haper & Brothers. $7.50.

With the hope of enticing students to take Latin or at least hoping to rub a little of it on them before they "go into the world," Classicists have compiled a few anthologies such as the one recently revised by Professor A. I. Suskin. This book was originally compiled by two other U.N.C. professors, Howe and Harrer, and printed in 1924. If not the first book of its kind, it was one of only a very few; and today it is as unique as it was then, there being only one other anthology of this type in print.

Howe and Harrer also edited a similar volume, Greek Literature in Translation, which is now revised by Professor P. H. Epps of our Classics department.

Interpretations of ordinarily occult things seem to go right on existing in spite of the groups of people who insist that it is not possible to convey enough of the original to warrant the effort. When the thing to be interpreted is as extensive as Latin literature, the case becomes stronger against the possibility of a just and comprehensive exposition of it. Assuming it can be done, though, the compiler is faced with the task of selecting (1) the right authors, (2) the right works of the right authors, (3) the right translations; and then because of the philosophy of courses in translation and other practical considerations, he must (4) get the foregoing under one cover.

There is pretty general agreement on which authors ought to be included in an anthology; but there is some variation in opinion as to which of the authors' works should be included. It must be a hard job to select the proper work; and equally hard if the work is long, to determine how much of it to present. The work of selection is narrowed only slightly by the impossibility of excluding such things as the Aeneid and Cicero's Orations. Many questions of who and what to include, however, seem to be resolved by the plan of the book. That is, as a sort of survey, it ought to include the most significant literary forms and writers.

The preponderance of translations from which a modern editor has to select were made long enough ago to be archaic sounding. But many new translations have been made in recent years and are beginning to be preferred to older ones. Translations made long ago have a surprising tenacity which must attest to their adequacy for generations. John Dryden's translations are frequently seen. An American reading these old translations of poetic works begins to be more bemused by British conceits than by the Latin author. Fortunately, Roman Literature is not laden with true, vintage translations. In addition to those of Howe and Harrer, it utilizes translations by several University instructors.

New translations by professors in our Classics department are Juvenal's Satires one and nine by Professor B. L. Ullman, head of the department, and five letters of Seneca to Lucilius, by Professor P. H. Epps. The editor, Professor A. I. Suskin, has made two translations, Plautus' The Braggart Soldier, and Terence's The Brothers.

Elizabeth Sommer, also associated with U.N.C., contributes a translation of Virgil's second Eclogue.

The book contains a judicious selection of Latin writer and their works, with large enough portions to give some idea of them. The new edition deletes a few minor works originally included in order to amplify more important ones. The arrangement of the book is such that writings on related subjects are grouped whether the writers were contemporary or not, but so that the overall sequence is chronological nonetheless. This fact together with the wide array of subject matter make the book serve a lot more than a purely literary purpose.

More than ample notes are supplied, which elucidate both selections and historical circumstances. Also the book is equipped with a glossary, an index of authors and titles, and a "detailed contents" which notes exactly the source of the selection.

The Work Of Albert Camus

Frank Crowther

THE OPTIMIST, by Herbert Gold. 395 pages. Boston: Atlantic-Little, Brown. $4.50

If there is a completely up-to-date American tragic hero in our recent and current literature it is Burr Fuller, the protagonist of this the fourth novel by Herbert Gold. The Optimist is the story of both the tragedy of Burr Fuller and the tragedy of the area of American society in which he moves. Neither tragedy reaches its conclusion and neither is culminated because we last saw Burr Fuller only a few minutes ago, swinging down the street with his chin thrust forward and his eyes to the future, and his society is still thriving and progressing; and who is to predict the tragic conclusion of either, if there is to be one?

We first meet Burr Fuller as a young man entering college. We follow him briefly and breathtakingly through the years of campus life and through his career as a soldier in the Second World War. The second half of the book begins with Burr as a young lawyer, married to his coed dream, with two children, standing anxiously on the verge of a promising political career. From this point on we watch with an almost terrifying sense of immediacy and realism the impending self-destruction of a marriage between two good and conscientious people who truly love each other and the decay of a man's honorable ambitions.

The writing is a joy to read. The narrative often seems to leap across the page with vivid motion and intensity, and at other points it pauses and broods in the interior struggles of the characters. The author has an ability to find startlingly original and perceptive angles of observation and to penetrate with consciously strained and twisted metaphors which shock the reader into a different and deeper awareness. At its best the dialogue has that often-discussed but rarely attained sense of being overheard rather than read. Technically the greatest flaw is the lack of balance between the first and second halves of the book, in both intensity and significance. But there is always the question of how else it could be done.

The hero might be considered (though never a poor boy) a modern day Horatio Alger type—with his guts and heart removed and laid out across Mr. Gold's literary lab in a bright and unflattering light for himself and all to examine. Burr Fuller is typical enough to give the story sociological significance, and he is also individual enough to make the book a probing psychological study and a stimulus for philosophical consideration. Rarely has a writer translated the particular problems and dilemmas of specific individuals in the present society into questions of ultimate concern to the extent to which it is done here. The problems dealt with, while immediately critical and timely, become the modern reflections of the eternal mortal puzzle of man and the universe, who, what, why? . . . and even perhaps (with apologies to the Steve Allen Show) why not? The real inner subject matter of the book is both newsworthily up-to-date and timeless, and in this fact rests the rare and classical permanent strength of the book.

There is a paradox involved in this strength. From the standpoint of philosophical clarity and the important relationship between aesthetic quality and fictional realism, the book's greatest fault and its finest achievement are contained in the same single characteristic, its profund ambiguity. In this observation Mr. Gold is at the same time brutally accurate and compassionate. For Burr Fuller he has neither scorn nor pity nor admiration, but he seems to understand. While it is obvious that something is crucially wrong with Burr's relationship to himself and to his world, Gold does not condemn. With Burr we may find ourselves saying that the end can justify the means, and then what happens to our judgement of the means when we suddenly find the end out of reach? The questions are defined here in all aspects, but there are no answers given. At the end of this novel the door is hanging open but we cannot see through it. Burr has perhaps been brought to face himself, but when we last see him his thoughts are for "More! More! More!" We have travelled this road before.

So at the end of an entertaining and deeply satisfying reading experience, a book that is "modern" fiction in the very best and most meaningful sense of the term, we find ourselves wishing that Mr. Gold had at least suggested a few answers. (Obviously he can't know the answers, but you know, man, fake it.) And probably Mr. Gold is wishing that he could have offered a few alternatives and still have maintained the type of author's integrity which is evident in his book. And perhaps we as well as Herbert Gold should be wishing that there could in fact be some answers and alternatives to somehow, someday be known.

Brazilian Exhibit Being Shown By Anthropology Dept. Currently

By MARY ALICE ROWLETTE

Probably the most colorful interior decorating job on campus has been done in Person Hall by Katrarina Real and the anthropology department.

The "decoration" is an exhibit of articles collected by Miss Real (Mrs. Robert Cate, in private life) during her stay in Brazil.

The exhibit was organized by Dr. Joffre L. Coe, director of research laboratories of anthropology in conjunction with Folk Cultures in the Modern World, taught by John P. Gillin.

The articles in the exhibit include such things as elaborate head dresses, covered with feathers, mirrors and ribbons; canoe paddles, hand painted in pastel colors; dolls of all sizes and shapes—some with long silver pins stuck in them; and hand made musical instruments.

The musical instruments show much of the ingenuity of the Brazilians. Two types of instruments are familiar to North Americans — the drum and the banjo. The heads of the drums on display are covered with the skin of snakes and the banjo is carved from one piece of hardwood.

The beautiful canoe paddle was very difficult to obtain, according to Miss Real, since the natives only carve and paint them for their own use and guard them jealously.

Although the natives usually will refuse to buy or sell a canoe paddle, they apparently have no qualms about stealing them, according to Miss Real.

After paddling up the river to a festival or carnival, they must be very careful to hide them well while they are celebrating or they will find themselves without a paddle when it's time to return home!

Probably the most striking and unusual article in the exhibit is "Little Bull." "Little Bull" belonged to a small boy in the Amazon region where he danced in the "Boi-Bumba" during the Feast of St. John.

The usual dance is a folk drama which centers around the misfortunes of the prize bull which a wealthy cattle rancher has acquired. This dance is performed in communities outside the large cities all over the country.

The bull is constructed by a frame of branches stuffed with straw. The skull of a real bull is attached to it and both are covered with satins and velvets and decorated with sequins and paper flowers.

A long satin skirt is attached at the bottom and the man who "plays the bull" dances with the frame over his head.

The man who plays the bull is usually the strongest man in the community since the bull weighs from 80-100 pounds and the dance of the bull is quite strenuous.

In the particular dance in which Miss Real obtained "Little Bull" the story included a group of children dancing with the adults and the little boy who played "Little Bull was the son of "Big Bull."

After the dance Miss Real approached the little boy and asked to buy the little bull. After long negotiations, the "deal" was made and Miss Real had a replica of the principle figure of one of the most popular folk dances in the country.

Miss Real has spent a total of six years in Brazil. Her first visit to the country was with her parents. She went to school there and learned the language (Portuguese) when she was very young.

She graduated from Stanford University in 1949 and was hired by the state department as a secretary-translator in Brazil.

She married Robert Cotes, the vice consul and they moved to San Francisco in 1952. There, she worked as an announcer for radio station KGEI, which broadcast programs into Latin America.

In 1957 the Cotes returned to Brazil and lived there for 18 months. While there, Miss Real was elected to the State (Para) Folklore Commission which is part of UNRSCO.

Last year, however, she and her husband returned to the states, Cotes to study the agriculture problems of Brazil and she to study anthropology. They are both studying at UNC.

A Salute To The Class Of '59

It has been wonderful knowing you. It has been fun watching you roam around the old book barn, and swapping stories with you. We'll miss you no end.

Here's wishing you luck and happiness in the coming years. And — believe us, this is not a commercial wish — here's hoping that time will bring you back again for a reunion in our little world of good readers and good books!

Image Of Man

Carolina Symposium's 1960 Program Named

The Carolina Symposium program in March 1960 will depart from previous programs in the development of sub-themes of "The Image of Man: The Individual in an Accelerated Culture."

ED LEVY
. . . Symposium Chairman

Each night of the Symposium, March 27-April 1, will be devoted to a different topic and will feature a qualified speaker on the topic.

In the first section the various theories of the nature of man will be examined and compared. These theories will be discussed in terms of their cultural, social and scientific implications.

The second section will be concerned with an analysis of the large, impersonal factors which come to bear upon the individual in modern times and which have caused him to assume a new character. The second portion will include such entities as the corporation, the city and the society.

The third area of discussion will center around the scientific concept of man and man in a technological society. Such problems as automation, medicine and the science of destruction will be considered.

Students interested in the Naval Aviation Cadet Program or the Aviation Officers' Program have been asked to see LCDR J. W. Dykes, who will be in Y Court Wednesday fro 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

FACULTY CLUB

John W. Carr III, director of the Computer Center which will include the Univac 1105, will address the Faculty Club Tuesday, May 26, at 1 p.m. in the Carolina Inn ballroom.

"Computers Universities and Research" is Carr's topic.

International Exchange Is In Progress

By STAN FISHER

"Getting to know you," the famous tune from the recent musical, "The King and I" could well be the theme song of an international exchange program being carried out by the University of North Carolina Education School and a Mexican college.

On the other end of the long-distance acquaintance program is the leading teacher training school in Mexico City, Escuela Normal Superior.

The project took its first step last May with a special issue of the Daily Tar Heel, UNC student newspaper. More than 1,000 copies of the issue, which featured teacher education at Chapel Hill and included some articles in Spanish, were sent to the Latin American school.

Throughout this past school year various materials — photographs, journals, textbooks—have been dispatched to Mexico to give the students at Escuela Normal Superior a clearer idea of how their counterparts here prepare to be teachers.

The latest exchange material is series of 70 photographic slides now in shipment to Mexico City: a with a tape-recorded Spanish narration, plus both English and Spanish copies of the script. Teacher preparation and public education in North Carolina are shown in the slide series.

The U. S. Information Agency, along with the American Assn. of Colleges for Teacher Education, sponsors the program, one of 37 now underway in U. S. institutions of higher learning.

Each has a "partner" college or university abroad, but none, according to USIA, has accomplished so much during its first year of operation as has the UNC Education School's project.

The exchange is a two-way operation, also, and Escuela Normal Superior has already sent several publications which are available to UNC students to read. A photographic exhibit of Mexican teacher training is expected here soon.

An eventual outgrowth of the continuing project—if funds can be found—will be a student exchange program.

A team effort was necessary to produce and prepare the materials sent from UNC, and linguists as well as educators had a part. Heading up initial planning were Dean Arnold Perry of the Education School and Dr. Sturgis Leavitt, Kenan professor of Spanish and former director of UNC's Institute of Latin American Studies.

Other faculty members who have led are Drs. Donald G. Tarbet, Samuel M. Holton and L. R. Taff of the Education School staff. Student education leaders also had a hand: Miss Ellen Rothschild, president of the local Student National Education Assn.; and Paul B. Hounshell, president of Phi Delta Kappa fraternity.

Feast

"Alexander's Feast" by Joseph Haydn will be presented by the Chapel Hill Choral Club for the Commencement Concert in Hill Hall, May 31, at 8 p.m.

Under the direction of Dr. Joel Carter and accompanied by the UNC Symphony, the choral group will be assisted by guest soloists: Doris Yarick, soprano from New York City; Robert Melton, tenor from Durham; Otis Lambert, bass from Fayetteville.

The recitatives will be accompanied by Edgar Stryker, harpsichordist, front the UNC Music Department.

Moon's Color

Moscow, May 18 (AP) — The moon isn't solid colored as many people think, says academician Nikolai Barbachov of Kharkov University. His studies show it has red, brown, yellow, green, blue and other shades, the Soviet News Agency Tass reported today.

POLITICAL INTERNS—The U. S. Congress will be the site of the summer "internships" of these five UNC political science majors. Each student will work in the office of a lawmaker and will attend evening discussion classes as well as floor debates, committee hearings and supreme court sessions. Left to right they are: Jon B. Clark, assigned to the office of Harold Cooley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; Wilson Partin, assigned to Congressman L. H. Fountain of the 2nd N. C. District; William J. Crotty Jr., assigned to Congressman Torbert H. Macdonald (D.-Mass.); Swag Grimsley, assigned to the office of Senator B. Everett Jordan; Prof. Donald Mathews, director of the Internship Program; and Taylor McMillan, who will be working with Ken Hechler, former White House assistant, now Democratic representative from West Virginia.

Mail Order Business In Obscenity Is Bad

The American public should destroy the half billion dollar a year mail-order business in obsecenity which seems to be having disastrous effects on teen-age youngsters, Postmaster Paul Cheek stated Monday.

The judgement as to what is obscene is in the hands of the citizens of Chapel Hill and other communities throughout the nation, the postmaster emphasized; and the final judge in these matters is the duty of the citizens of their communities.

The citizen may put a stop to this unordered and unwanted mail by complaining to the Post Office Department. This is done by mailing the objectionable mail or material self, and the envelope it came in, with a signed note of protest to the local postmaster.

Postmaster Cheek emphasized that the Post Office Department is intensifying its efforts to clean up the mails. Its chief opposition in doing so comes from those who reap huge profits from unrestricted mailings, and from some misguided individuals who confuse liberty with license, and in so doing, unwittingly give aid to these dealers in obscenity.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, in discussing the effect of the distribution of obscene literature, has publicly stated that "It is my deep conviction—frequently expressed to individual members of this Congressional Committee, religious and educational leaders, newspaper editors, and citizen groups that one of the most serious moral and social problems in the United States today is the multi-million dollar mail order traffic in obscenity."

Cross Burned In Yard Of Quarterly Editor

A kerosene-soaked burning cross was found burning in John Tice's yard at 4 Barkley Road Sunday at 11:30 p.m.

The first indication of the incident was when Mrs. Tice heard a car horn, saw the flames and rushed to the window. She saw a fleeing figure and called the police.

Sgt. W. F. Hester, Officer Charles Talbert and Deputy Sheriff Paul Cook investigated.

Tice believes one of his students was responsible. He said he recently received an anonymous letter expressing views different from his own.

"I really feel this is some sort of a prank," said Tice. "If this is the work of one of my students as a result of my lectures, perhaps I really have done something in my teaching this year."

Sgt. Hester said this is not the first time a cross has been burned in the Chapel Hill area.

The cross was carefull made and set in cement blocks.

Saturday night the Tices said they spotted a prowling car which flashed a searchlight into their apartment window.

14 Students And 2 Alumni Taken Into Public Health Fraternity

Fourteen students and two alumni were formally initiated into the Theta Chapter of the Delta Omega Society, honorary public health fraternity, at a dinner meeting here Monday night.

The students, all members of the current graduating class of the UNC School of Public Health, were selected on the basis of scholastic attainment and leadership qualities evidenced during their period of academic study at the Chapel Hill institution. The alumni members were tapped on the basis of their distinguished service to public health since graduating from the UNC School of Public Health.

The alumni named were Miss Elizabeth Davis of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. Francis McConnell of Chapel Hill.

Students named were:

Dr. Henry Barnes of Elm City; Dr. John Hughes of Pittsboro; Marlene Bond of Jonesboro, La.; Joan Davis of San Anelmo, Calif.; Dr. Eva Herlinger of Dosul, Brazil; John Kilpatrick, Savannah, Ga.; Dr. Fred Lewis of Atlanta, Ga.; Melvin Lightner of Hastings, Neb.; Mrs. Merle Lichtefeld of Louisville, Ky.; Dr. Virginia Maley of Cartersville, Ga.; James C. McDonald of Jackson, Miss; Miss Betty Oberlies of Dayton, Ohio; Miss Virginia Stone of Chapel Hill and Miss Violet Williams of Riviera Beach, Fla.

Induction was by Dr. Charles Cameron Jr., associate professor of public health administration, UNC School of Public Health, president of the Theta Chapter.

Dr. John Porterfield, deputy surgeon general, U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., 1959 Delta Omega lecturer, was featured speaker of the evening program. More than 40 faculty members and guests attended the dinner at the Carolina Inn. Guests included Dr. J. W. R. Norton, N. C. state health officer and Dr. Henry Clark, administrator UNC Division of Health Affairs.

FROSH AWARDS

All freshman numeral winners in tennis, baseball and track can pick up their awards in room 109 Woollen Gym today.

Scurlock Is Winner Of Patterson Medal

The University of North Carolina's highest athletic award, the Joseph F. Patterson medal, Monday was voted by a committee to Dave Scurlock of Greensboro, All America track star.

Scurlock recently was awarded the Robert A. Fetzer trophy for being the outstanding performer in the conference meet, in which he won the 440 and 880 for the third consecutive year and anchored Carolina's winning relay team. He also was awarded the E. J. Evans trophy for being the school's top senior trackman.

A physical education major, the picture-book runner this year closes out an illustrious college track career in which he was never defeated in his specialties in conference competition. He was equally talented indoors, winning the ACC 880 three years in a row, and distinguisting himself nationally.

In 1958 he won the Sugar Bowl 440 and Los Angeles Coliseum Relays 880. In 1957 he was third in the NCAA 880. He also has wins to his credit in the Millrose Games and Boston Knights of Columbus meet, along with other national events.

The Patterson medal was established in 1924 by the late Dr. Joseph F. Patterson in memory of his brother, John Durant Patterson. It has been perpetuated by his two sons, Dr. Joseph F. Patterson Jr., and Dr. Simmons Patterson. The first winner was Morris (Monk) McDonald, star in three sports. In 1949 it went to Charlie (Choo Choo)

Golfers End Rebuilding Year

The Carolina golf squad ended a rebuilding year with a fine record. The linksmen finished the season with a 12-3 mark for team matches and made very good showings in the two tournaments in which they participated. In the Southern Intercollegiate Championships at Athens, Ga., the Heels placed seventh in a field consisting of some of the finest college golf teams in the country. In the A. C. C. tournament the young squad finished in third place firing a 578 total for 36 holes. This was only six strokes off the winner's total.

At the beginning of the season the squad had only one returning letterman. Senior John McKee of Morganton was the lone returnee. Facing a rebuilding year, Coaches Chuck Erickson and Ed Kenney had to field a young, inexperienced team. As it turned out the starting six had as its number one man sophomore Ed Justa from Rocky Mount. Ed had a fine season in his first year on the varsity and lead the team well. Hef inished the year with a 9-2-1 record in dual meets and rolled up 26 points to his opponents 10. His best round of the season was a four under par 68 against Clemson.

The prospects for next years team look bright considering that at least five lettermen will be returning. Bob Galloway, who ended with a 24½-11½ mark and played very well as number two man, will be back to accompany Justa, his playing partner. "Spook" and Ed will anchor down a more experienced Tar Heel golf squad—a squad to be contended with as is always true of Carolina teams.

Rosemond New Cage Coach

Kenneth Rosemond, who this past year was freshman and assistant basketball coach at the University of South Carolina, Monday was named freshman coach at the University of North Carolina, his alma mater.

Rosemond, as a graduate student, previously coached the Carolina freshmen in 1957-58 before joining the South Carolina staff. He is a North Carolina A. B. graduate, Class of 1957.

In the new set-up, Rosemond will be able to devote his full time to basketball except for teaching some physical education classes, head Coach Frank McGuire pointed out. "We are might happy that Ken is coming back to us," he added, "as we consider him an excellent basketball man as well as fine gentleman who will help us a lot."

McGuire said that Rosemond, in addition to coaching, would be in charge of recuruiting in North Carolina. "He knows the state, has the contacts, and will be well qualified for this work," he said.

Rosemond as a player was coached by McGuire. He was guard on North Carolina's national championship squad of 1956-57.

Rosemond, a native of Hillsboro, manages a yacht club at Wrightsville Beach during the summer months. He will report to his new duties here next fall.

Rosemond is married to the former Barbara Ballenger of Raleigh.

Alderman, Pi Phi Win Campus Cups

Pi Phi and Alderman Hall captured the All-Sports Cups for the Sorority and Dormitory Divisions at the WAA Awards Picnic. Both organizations won last year also, and need one more win to retire the cups for their trophy cases. The winner of the All-Sports Cups in each division must accumulate the most points for the year, based on their participation and the events won. Alderman ended the year with a total of 667 points, and Pi Phi won with 578.

Student Body
Univ. of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dear Friends:

Once again graduation time approaches and with it comes the realization that many of our fine customers and friends will be leaving Chapel Hill. Of course, some of you will return in the fall, but for many graduation is the finale of what we hope has been a fruitful pursuit of education.

To those who are graduating, may we extend the very best wishes for success in whatever field of endeavor you have chosen.

To those who are returning next fall, go our hopes that this summer will prove to be an enjoyable and lucrative experience.

To one and all our sincerest thanks for patronizing our establishment and giving us the opportunity of getting to know you. Whether a student or an alumnus, we trust that you will frequent Stevens-Shepherd whenever you are at "The Hill".

Sincerely,

Windham, Collins Top Golf Event

Phil Windham, representing the faculty, and Keith Collins, representing the students, combined forces to win the Faculty-Student Golf Tournament with a combined score of 144 over the 18-hole Finley Golf Course.

Second place went to faculty member Roddey Lingon and student Charlie Schrader who posted a combined 146, two strokes off the winning pace.

Windham also captured single match honors with a one-under par 71. Curtis Hathaway topped students in the single match division with another 71.

Other events in which awards were given were: Eagles-Harold Langenderfer of the faculty turned in one. Most birdies - Windham of the faculty with three. Least putts - Barton Tuck of the students with 25. Joe McLeod and Charlie Schrader, both students, tied for the most number of pars at nine. Highest score one a hole - Don Gray, a student, with 13 strokes.

Freshman Baseball Team Produces Some Men With Definite Potential

By C. J. UNDERWOOD

(Editors Note: This is a feature article and includes opinions that are solely those of the writer concerning the abilities and potentials of the freshman baseball players. He does not wish to imply that he is a capable baseball scout; the object is to present you with some idea of the prospective material for next year's varsity.)

The 1959 edition of freshman baseball produced a season of brilliant performances and, inevitable as they are, a few erratic showings that led to a final record of 8 wins and 7 losses.

The more important record, that in the heated rivalry of the Big Four, showed 7 victories in 10 contests, good enough to give the Tar Babies top spot in the final standings.

Batting Leader

Leading the frosh at bat for almost the entire season was their 6-1, 200 pound shortstop, Len Dellolio, who undoubtedly is headed for a first string varsity position in 1960. Len's potent bat carried a better than .400 average until the last two games saw him shut out to end the year at .365.

A third baseman in high school up north, Dellolio handled the shortstop duties almost flawlessly for the frosh. His quick hands and almost monotonously accurate throw should make next year's Tar Heel infield something to watch.

Larry Neal held down third for the Tar Babies and with a little more luck in the hitting department could easily become a future varsity star. Neal's deadly throw to first from the hot corner made the team virtually invulnerable on the left side of the infield.

Larry's batting mark of .158 was unbelievably deciving as he was frequently robbed of what appeared to be certain base blows. He did, however, get on base enough to lead the team in runs scored with 13.

Swing At Second

Swing, a slender lefthanded sticker, slapped out a .290 average at the plate to finish second to Dellolio. His good batting eye will make him a strong contender for a varsity spot.

Farrior is a strong, well-built prospect who started slowly but finished well to compile a .250 mark. Only a slight tendency to strike out could keep Pete from landing a varsity berth.

Whitey Wade perhaps made more of his size that anyone on the team by turning in a beautiful catching performance for the entire season. Wade, who stands only 5-7 and weighs about 145, is a smart handler of pitchers who can dig 'em out of the dirt with frequency of a seasoned veteran.

Wade's .233 hitting was adequate as eighth batter in the lineup. His small stature and comparatively weak throw to second could easily be overlooked by varsity mentor Walter Rabb, especially since Whitey's keen baseball sense excells that of many varsity hopefuls.

Outfield Potential

The outfielder with the greatest potential is difficult to determine since the Tar Babies got good work from a number of players.

Jud Spainhour came through with some tremendous late season hitting to lift what had been a .000 figure after 10 times at bat all the way to .290. After appearing in brief pinch-hitting roles during his first few games, Jud got his chance when E. C. Haithcock decided to quit, leaving his outfield post open.

A tall, muscular righthand swinger Spainhour began spraying prodigious clouts all over the park in such fashion that makes this writer feel that he just might be Carolina's next big power hitter.

Another slugging prospect is James Helton. Jim showed on several occasions that he is capable of the big hit chiefly due to a murderous swing and fine follow-through. By cutting down his strikeouts he would be a definte asset next year in the slugging department.

Ron Miller was used in every game this season and slapped out a respectable .264 figure during which time he also showed the ability to hit the long ball. His only real weakness comes in the fielding department where, though rarely erring, he seems still a bit uncertain.

Ron will bring to the varsity its biggest and strongest lefthanded hitting prospect.

It is conceivable that Roland Noblin, Don Hayes, Pug Hall, Cronin Byrd, Jerry Evans, Rick Moser, Wayne Foushee, Bob Sherrod, or Pete Wilday could break in next year also.

The mound chore was led this season by Jerry Carpenter, Nick Warren, Dave Murr, and Dick Tarlow.

Carpenter is a junk-pitching righthander from Shelby who finished the season with a fine 1.86 ERA and 2 wins in 4 decisions. His ability to stay ahead of the hitter and keep the ball low should enable him to secure a spot on the varsity staff.

Warren was the workhorse of the chore, hurling 39 innings to compile an earned-run-average of 2.99. A good fast ball coupled with a neat curve could make him an effective Tar Heel performer in the future.

Dave Murr is a tall lefty who managed the lowest ERA of the pitching corps with a mark of 1.57. His 2-1 record tied him with Warren for the best won-lost record. His unusually good control makes him a definite candidate for an already-loaded varsity pitching staff.

If Dick Tarlow can solve his control problems, the Tar Heels will almost certainly have to make room for this rangy lefthander who possesses an uncommonly swift fast ball. If he can learn how to mix his curve with the fast one and find the plate just a little more often, he could possible secure a starting job within the next two seasons.

Lewis Holcomb and Bob Wacker are the two remaining freshmen capable of crashing the varsity barrier.

Freshman Coach Pat Earey is to be praised for his adept handling of the team during the '59 season. His shrewd judgment and constant awareness of the game's problems and fundamentals are a great reason why Carolina excels in the national pasttime.

THIS AND THAT

UNC All-America end Al Goldstein, who had to give up spring practice because of a knee injury and quick operation, is off his crutches. . . . Al looks back over last season and says his biggest thrill was stealing a Maryland pass and romping 46 yards for a touchdown. . . . Other highlight for him was calling his mother and dad and telling them he made the All America . . . Al's dad, incidentally, is a high school teacher in New York City.
